The possibilities of Mother's Day having been fully explored, the Warnermen in Nat Wolf's division, among others, are turning to the next family event—Father's Day, on June 16th. In "Ohio Mouthpiece", divisional house organ, are suggested ways and means for tieins, especially the newspaper contest as put on last year at Warners' Hipp, Cleveland, with the Plain Dealer. Here, the city's young fathers were honored, with cash prize for the youngest and boxes of cigars for the next four. The five winners and their wives were also guests at the theatre. Paper ran coupon asking entrants to fill in age, birth date, 'phone number and number of children. Winners were requested to furnish birth certificates and also those of children.

Variations of the idea can honor fathers of largest families, oldest grandfathers, families of four living generations, etc. Letter contests suggested include entries from children written to their fathers, letters from fathers on their fondest memories. Co-op pages is another slant in keeping.

Original Costumes Borrowed For Staff on "Command" Date

The Northwest Texas premiere of "Dark Command" at the Wichita, Wichita, Texas, was deemed sufficiently important to rate a front-page story, a "first-time" for theatre publicity, according to Manager A. D. Deason. Top news angle of the break had to do with invitations to the opening extended to the mayors of six biggest towns in the area. Other outstanding publicity included the pressbook full page feature story. Another break was secured with photo of Deason, Lew Bray, city manager, and Governor O'Donnell, at the state capitol, where the theatremen had gone to invite the chief executive to the opening. Fulsome reviews and mentions in popular columns were other items.

Lapel ribbons were worn by the personnel in all the circuit's local houses, by soda clerks in leading drug stores. At the theatre, original costumes from the picture, promoted from Republic, were worn by the cashiers and doormen. Papers carried this in a four column layout. Through arrangements with county superintendent of schools, top students in history classes were brought to town as guests of the theatre in a bannered bus carrying theatre copy. For street attention, a 24-sheet mounted on rolling trailer made the business section and neighborhoods.

High School Students Learn Pressagentry on "Lincoln"

Impressive publicity for "Abe Lincoln" at Keith's, Providence, R. I., was obtained by Manager George French and Bill Morton, publicist, on a high school tiein which allowed 12 selected students to act as press agents for the date. After listening to a lecture on exploitation by Morton, the students were given complete advertising kit on picture to try their wings. Stunt rated a two-column Sunday break, and other top publicity included a full-page Sunday fashion layout on Ruth Gordon, visiting in town and interviewed by fashion editor.

Chain telephone calls to all members were made by Federation of Women's Clubs and theatremen promoted showing of stills from picture in exhibit of Lincolniana at Brown University. All locals named Lincoln were invited to the show and playdate herald with Lincoln penny pasted in center was mailed to radio stations, Junior League, newspapers and hotels.

Pressbook "Edison" Idea Sells Lots of Apple Pies

In the pressbook story that Tom Edison's favorite eating was apple pie and milk, Duke Prince found inspiration for a tieup with local restaurant to feature this in the daily menus and in all co-op advertising for the date at the Ohio and Strand, Marietta Ohio. According to Duke, the restaurant sold much more pie than usual in addition to the benefits received by the theatre. Other novelties from the pressbook used by Prince and his assistant, Lew Friend, included the Morse code telegraph blanks.

For street attention, the theatreman dug up and bannered an old bicycle over 80 years old. Window displays were topped with an exhibit in power company's downtown location, of old and new Edison electrical equipment and cameras. Same idea was carried out by Western Union.

Public Recording Features "Rancho Grande" Premiere

Since it was the first showing in Kansas, the date on "Rancho Grande" at the Star, Lyons, was turned into a state premiere by Manager Ted Irwin, making it more important by tieing in with an important centennial celebration. Featured was a public recording of numbers played by a Mexican orchestra engaged for the date, including a special platter of the hit song for Gene Autry, the record containing an invitation for the star to attend the centennial.

After the premiere, Irwin had patrons record their comments on the picture, microphone of which was concealed so they could speak more freely. Record was played out front for the rest of the date and then forwarded to the Republic studios.

Guest tickets went to those submitting list containing what they considered the best sayings on the page, together with merchant's name and an original Confucius gag from entrant.

For "My Son, My Son" at Shea's, Buffalo, Charlie Taylor tied the Courier-Express to a "perfect-son" contest for main prize of round trip to New York and cash. Paper gave the hookup a raft of publicity and in return, to quote Taylor, "the contest obtained an avalanche of entries." Additional cash and passes were also given.

Contest was open to boys between 13 and 18 residing in the seven counties in the drawing area. Entrants were required to submit photos plus statement setting forth why they voted themselves the perfect son. Winner chosen by judging committee of high school principals was given opportunity of competing for the national perfect son award.

Faced with the competition of a newspaper cooking school and a church minstrel on "Northwest Passage," at the Revere, Revere, Mass. Manager Harold Leand tied into the daily's advance publicity on the school with an offer of two copies of the book as prizes. For street attention, Leand built a giant reproduction of the book upon the theatre's delivery truck used extensively around the city.

The Round Tabler notes a "first-time" for direct cooperation from the schools on the date wherein the superintendent of schools agreed to allow the children to leave classes in time for the matinee, providing the rest of the program was satisfactory. Harold made the contact sufficiently in advance so that his booking office could select a number of worthy shorts.

Clubs and Stores Tied To Dates on "Bluebird"

For "Bluebird" at the Eckel, Syracuse, N. Y., Manager Bill Burke arranged with the local Campfire Girls, known as the "Bluebirds," to have a personally autographed photo of Shirley Temple, a member of the organization, presented to the troops at a dinner celebration. In conjunction with this, Burke promoted a theatre party of 500 members on the afternoon of the dinner.

Blue color scheme in theatre display predominated at the Bonham, Fairbury, Neb., on the date. All doors were covered with blue metal for backing of stills, special bluebird cutouts used for lobby hangers. Stores plugged Bluebird styles and decorated windows in the same color scheme. Streets were stencilled with bluebirds against which theatre credits were lettered.

Bell Lands 64 Breaks On Stage Attractions

For the date on Ed Sullivan's "Stardust Cavalcade" at Loew's Capitol, Washington, Ray Bell sends along a campaign of some 64 newspaper breaks, headed by a full-page department store ad showing members of the cast viewing some sale merchandise. Bell arranged for Sullivan to present a valuable player award at the Washington ball park, to have Marjorie Weaver inducted into one of the sororities at local university. In company with Kentucky's Senator Chandler, the star also appeared on the radio the night before, singing a duet with the State's ex-governor.

Breaks on the sport pages were included, Ray fixing it to have members of the cast posing with golfers, boxers, etc. Since Sullivan was a former sports writer, Bell promoted sports columnist to devote full column to the star's progress as as writer and actor. This was followed by a guest column written by the headliner; and built up further with a contest inviting students who wished to meet the cast to write a column imitating Sullivan's style. Winner was photographed with the stars.

For Horace Heidt and band, Bell concentrated on radio, promoting a popular morning program of recordings to devote two hours to the Heidt records. He also had the bandsman in guest interviews over four leading stations. Having a dance patented was another idea dug up by the Round Tablers for Vilma and Buddy Ebsen. Dancers performing before group of government officials and newspaper folk, were awarded honorary patent, which was carried on the wires and over all local stations.

Georgians Count Diamonds for "Adventure" Prizes

Leading Athens, Ga., bank and city's largest jewelry store were tied in by Moon Corker, for a campaign on "Adventure in Diamonds," at the L. & J. Palace, the store coming in on a diamond guessing contest wherein the public was invited to guess the number of mounted and loose stones displayed in a window. Winner was awarded a diamond ring, presented from the stage by the university football coach which was duly pictured in the local press. Co-op ads, news stores, radio plugs and counter displays in the store were used extensively to encourage competition.

At the bank, a tray of expensive diamonds was on display guarded by special police detail. The showing here was featured by an animation on a revolving belt showing figures of bride and groom entering marriage license bureau and then leaving church as man and wife followed by showers of rice. Extra insurance on the diamonds was stressed in the publicity.

Wally's "Edison" Kid Party

Gag Street Ballys Used By Lampe for "Virginia"

Seated at a large table in street near theatre, was a cowboy with several guns and large sign advising patrons to check their weapons before entering the Keith Theatre, Syracuse, to see Gus Lampe's showing of "Virginia City." Also in front of five and ten was lad in cap and gown poring over giant dictionary planted on a table, sign read: "I'm looking for a word big enough to describe," etc., etc. Newspaper contest was planted, with prizes for those sending complete list of films in which Errol Flynn appeared since first appearing in pictures.

For "Pinocchio" a coloring contest was held week ahead, using a different cut daily which was to be kept until the complete set was intact and colored and then sent to the management. Lads wearing "Pinocchio" masks paraded streets, original Disney prints were on display in lobby and through tieup with leading dairy, a mystery song contest was held over their radio program. Harry Unterfort aided on both campaigns.

Grott Details "Baby" Story With Elaborate Lobby Display

Since the lobby of the Met, Baltimore, is sufficiently expansive to feature large displays, Manager Harold Grott makes much of this art work, and recently to tell about "Brother Rat and a Baby." At top, left of a long white board, eight feet by 12, was lettered "Brother Rat before married" above figures of the "rat" in military costume, squiring the girl. Next came a large painted ring under which was lettered, "then came the fatal day." Then alongside was cutout of the baby, with caption, "followed by a blessed event, and next to baby, "whose name was Peter B. Good, but he wasn't a good baby because—"

Below and running across the board were placed five panels, each with a reason why the baby wasn't behaving. The reasons were the ring he swallowed, the lighter which burned down the house, the violin he wrecked, the coin he swallowed, and finally, the pawn ticket. All these, having to do with the story, were explained by captions and illustrated by actual articles so explained.

In addition to the current period, two Fortnights remain before the next Quarter-Master judging. It is again stressed that entrants represented most often in the Fortnight periods will be given greater consideration in the judging.

Window Contest Arranged By Pollock for "My Son"

Contest angle was arranged by Les Pollock at Loew's, Rochester, in advance of "My Son, My Son," by planting a 40 by 50 in prominent store window on which were mounted 63 photos of mothers' heads. Much smaller and scattered among the mothers' photos were 27 heads of sons. Copy read: "These mothers are searching for their sons. How many sons do you find in this display?" To the first 25 persons guessing the correct answer, guest tickets were awarded.

Song record was used over WHEC and WSAY in advance, and orchestrations were planted with local bands. Numerous book stores devoted window space to the book with appropriate tiein copy and baby carriage shop turned window over to display of perambulators with copy "When I get a baby carriage 'My Son,' of course I will get it at," etc., etc.

Coach Presents Boxing Gloves On "Dempsey-Willard" Picture

On the Dempsey-Willard fight picture, H. L. Friedman at the Harris, in Aetna, Pa., enlisted the support of boxing coach of local boys club in connection with the giveaway of a pair of boxing gloves on a lucky number arrangement. Coach presented the prize from stage and told of his past experiences in the ring. Lobby stunt which created plenty of comment for two weeks ahead was the use of life-size cutout of Jack Dempsey with hand extended in greeting. Patrons, young and old alike, stopped to shake hands with the champ.

While for "Four Wives," Friedman arranged a parade of new cars through cooperation of local agency. Autos appropriately bannered carried four girls dressed in bridal attire to the theatre opening night, where they attracted considerable attention en route.

Senior High School Class Handles "Edison" Opening

Much was made locally over the school tiein arranged by E. L. Carter at the Playhouse, Statesville, N. C., for "Tom Edison" with the local senior high school class taking over and arranging for advance advertising, publicity, etc. Through votes taken in class, associate manager, cashier, doormen, ushers, etc., were selected and trained for duty by the theatreman.

Poster committee was formed, with students in the art department preparing displays and handling all outdoor advertising. Publicity committee made up newspaper copy for readers in three local papers, editors gladly taking the stories in view of the local enthusiasm and interest over the stunt. Senior class was guested at the theatre opening night and business was sprightly throughout run, since friends and parents of the youngsters were on hand to pay tribute.

Round Tablers Tie Civic Projects to Theatre Activities

Institutional and other campaigns directed at other points than the screen entertainment are reported by members on tieins that take in social, civic and commercial projects. In most every instance, the Round Tablers lent their personal efforts to the success of the event, serving in various executive capacities.

In Athens, Ga., for instance, Moon Corker at the Palace assumed the post of publicity director for the annual "Follies" staged at the theatre and sponsored by the local Junior Assembly. On the campaign, Corker started his newspaper publicity a month ahead, made radio tieins, followed through on a year book, sponsored by merchants. Window and counter cards were promoted, banners hung across the main street. On opening day, Moon staged a parade for the members with city officials, fire and police department trucks, local bands, etc.

Legion Cooperates with Wheeler

Americanism programs for the city's high and grade schools sponsored by J. R. Wheeler, Roxy, Laporte, Ind., in conjunction with various groups brought the theatre a lot of valued publicity and the praises of the community as represented by the American Legion, schools administration body, lunch clubs and the civic organization which cooperated.

Free morning shows were given before the regular opening, the program being of special patriotic short subjects contributed by the film exchanges. Show ran about an hour and a quarter, preceded by singing of national anthem, pledge of allegiance, short addresses by local prominents. The papers carried photos and stories of the showings, with extra attention called to the event by parades of students to the theatre, preceded by the 75-piece high school band.

Arranged with one of the dailies and local dealers in electric cooking ranges, was the exhibition of new models in the lobby of Warners, Erie, Pa. For a two-week period ahead, Manager Ken Grimes received over 150 inches of free display advertising, the paper also cooperating with multi-column cuts and stories in which the theatre and attraction were credited. The merchants concerned also plugged the exhibition in advertising and windows with proper spotlighting for the house and screen program. In addition, reports Grimes, his generous cooperation has placed the house in a good spot with paper and merchants.

Pappas Holds School Benefit

Another benefit tiein, a cooperation with the junior class of his high school, proved successful for Manager George Pappas, at the Point, Powhatan Point, Ohio. Operation of the theatre was turned over to the students for one day, the boys and girls also aiding in the promotion for the picture. Students were allowed a percentage of all tickets sold by the school away from the theatre, the event helped along by the wide word-of-mouth and the extra newspaper and school publicity.

HOOKS SQUARE DANCE TO "ABE LINCOLN"

Exhibition of square dancing popular in the days of the picture was planted at city park ballroom by Ed Fitzpatrick for "Abe Lincoln" at Loew's Poli, Waterbury, Conn. Local dancers who knew the old-time steps were secured through cooperation of leading dance studios. Posters and scene stills with theatre credits were posted around the ballroom. Record crowd attended the exhibition publicized over park's p.a. system and in papers 10 days ahead.

April Fool Midnite Show Clicks for Campbell

The highly enjoyable April Fool midnight show arranged by Manager Leslie V. Campbell, at the Empress, Kelowna, B. C., was indicated in the advance campaign, featuring a colored herald with a large cut of Boris Karloff, in character. Copy read, "April Fool. I'm not going to be there but Charlie McCarthy is in," etc., etc. Front displays plugged the show with Mortimer Snerd and Charlie selling the event in balloon copy.

Campbell advertised that free cocktails would be on the house, and as patrons entered they were given large feathers. In support of the feature, an old Audioscopic reel and Keystone comedy were run and found ideal for that kind of a show, Campbell writes.

Since "His Girl Friday" was taken from the stage play, "The Front Page," R. C. Shaw, newly arrived in Wallace, Idaho, in charge of the Grand and Liberty theatres, put out a special four-page paper to plug the picture, naming the sheet after the title of the play. Complete coverage of the town and surrounding territory was accomplished, with enough outside advertising to pay the printing costs. To insure thorough reading, Shaw used the number gag in the merchants' ads to good results.

"Cost of the advertising to the theatre would have been prohibitive in our regular newspaper, and the novelty of the opus was worth as much as the display space," writes the Round Tabler, in crediting the idea as an effective business getter.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Sharp's "Geronimo" Tiein

Reported by Eddie Sharp, manager of the Rialto, in Missoula, Mont., was the "Geronimo" campaign, in which the entire staff had a hand. Tying in with the local Chamber of Commerce Easter unveiling, Indian Chief with his maidens were sent to the ceremonies to distribute handbills among the assembled throngs. Rigging up a tent in a commanding spot in the downtown area, Sharp stationed same chief out front beating a drum to attract. Tent itself was decorated with sign cloth carrying appropriate tiein copy.

Classified Ideas Bring Extra Space For Picture Dates

The virtues of hooking motion picture art to classified ad promotion are evidenced by the cooperation between papers and theatres around the country, particularly in Cleveland, where much along this line is being done. Reported by Manny Pearlstein, Warner zone ad head, are illustrations of these tieins put across with David Bachner.

Procedure follows selection of some outstanding scene still with heading, the copy tieing in with the head and the picture. On "Grapes of Wrath," at the Hipp, Cleveland, the paper ran a three column, 10-inch layout, headed "Grim Determination" and illustrated by an appropriate scene cut from the attraction. The copy stressed the determination of the folks in the picture in fighting for their homes and the fact that Clevelanders were not confronted with the problem in their choice of residences. Theatre and title were included, with the same general procedure followed on other dates, the Warnermen obtaining in exchange layouts as large as six column, 15 inches on "Bluebird." Similar tieups are reported by Milt Harris, for the Loew Cleveland houses, recently on "Rebecca" at the State.

Cooperate for Ad Week

During National Want Ad Week, especial efforts were made by papers for outside tieins, such as effected with Bob Fulton, for the Paramount, in Waterloo, Iowa. Local paper was tied in to furnish six gratis ads in advance of "Dr. Cyclops," running to a total approximating $200. In exchange, the theatreman contributed passes to be given as prizes to readers using the paper's classified service during the Week.

Similar tiein was made by Morris Rosenthal, for the classified Week on the Week, with one of the Bridgeport papers during the same period. Newspaper ads, running to a full page plugging the event, also plugged the attraction at Loew's Poli, the theatre and attraction being spotlighted through the entire campaign.

Paper Runs Jaffee Plug

In Kansas City, a letter from Barney Jaffee, at the Tower, was used by the Star to emphasize the paper's classified effectiveness. Jaffee had advertised for a couple to be married on the stage and in a communication to the paper, credited the want ad for finding the boy-and-girl. The daily reproduced the ad with Jaffee's letter, tieing the two to copy in keeping.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Chamales Theatre Plugs

Distributed at regular intervals to the rural trade in the drawing area by Manager Chris Chamales, Roxy, Delphi, Ind., are small cards containing institutional information on the theatre's highlights. No pictures are mentioned, the copy devoted to the consistently high standard of entertainment, comforts and furnishings, low admission prices, etc.

Kid Ideas Plugged to Aid Campaigns For "Pinocchio"

Numerous exploitation angles found profitable by Great States city manager E. E. Crabtree and publicist Don Knapp for "Pinocchio" at the Fischer, in Danville, Ill., include arrangements with leading daily to invite underprivileged children to the show. Publicity items included photos and stories on the picture in addition to picture of the kids meeting theatre "Pinocchio." Parade of children marching to theatre was featured, plus tieup with chain drugstore whereby all attending the show were later taken to the store for sundaes served in "Pinocchio" glasses which the children were permitted to keep.

On opening day everyone entering the downtown area was greeted by sidewalk stencils of the character pointing to the theatre with copy that he was appearing there. Principal of each school in the neighborhood was contacted by letter in an effort to arrange special theatre parties. Two weeks ahead, hit tunes from the picture were featured on non-sync equipment during intermission and hotel dining rooms offered a "Pinocchio" dinner, menus spotted with figures of the various characters in the picture.

Contests and Street Stunts Click

In Erie, Penna., Round Tabler Ken Grimes at the Erie, promoted merchants for a full co-op page in connection with which guest tickets were awarded eight persons identifying their names taken from telephone directory which were scattered throughout ads. Second contest directed at children ran for a couple of days and offered tickets to those best coloring scene stills run in paper. Numerous window displays were promoted, fountains featured special drinks and stickers were used profusely.

Street stopper in Philadelphia proved to be Ev Callow's bannered mule ridden about town by "Pinocchio" to advertise the date at the Stanley Theatre. At intervals, ballyman dismounted and distributed cards with picture copy to assembled crowds. Tieup with Uncle WIP of that broadcasting station brought a contest for kids with guest tickets going to those writing best four line limericks about one of the characters in the picture.

Lobby easel in front of theatre contained blowup rave reviews of newspaper critics, cooperating news agency bannered its trucks and newsstands with appropriate copy, drug chain displayed windows of "Pinocchio" books and all libraries in the neighborhood cooperated.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Haney's Spook Show

Spook copy highlighted campaign put over for "The Invisible Man" by Leo Haney at the Bucklen Theatre in Elkhart, Ind., with such lines as "If you feel breath on the back of your neck, it's The Invisible Man," etc. Teaser strips were planted in numerous windows and teaser copy used conspicuously throughout the theatre.

COMMERCE CHAMBER FOR "OUR TOWN"

Unusual eye-catcher to engage the attention of motion picture editors in Loew's Theatres situations, on behalf of "Our Town", is a membership certificate issued by the "Chamber of Commerce of Our Town", with the editor's name inscribed and the appointment signed by Oscar A. Doob, "Mayor Pro Tem".

Appointed as "Special Members of the Editorial Board of Boosters", the newspaper folk are expected to "encourage, entice, inveigle and otherwise induce as many of our citizens, as possible" to see the picture.

Radio Station Plugs Fitz's War Newsreels

Tying his newsreel news shots to bulletins over Station WATR, Round Tabler Ed Fitzpatrick at Loew's Poli, in Waterbury, Conn., has arranged for the station after each news broadcast daily, to plug the fact that the latest war scenes are being shown at his theatre.

For the benefit of others who want to keep informed of the latest war developments, Fitzpatrick has a bulletin board out front posted with newspaper headlines, pictures, reading matter, etc., right from the front pages of local dailies with the caption that his newsreel contains picturization of the conflict. Permission has also been granted from editors of papers to have copies of the dailies that are two or three days old, imprinted with theatre plug and theatre attendants circulate among crowds distributing them.

Niles Uses Radio Flashes

Tiein with Station KROC, in Rochester, Minn., has been arranged by Ray Niles for war news at the Chateau, whereby the theatre receives the teletype tape bulletins from the station immediately after they are read over the air. The tape is pasted on a large board out front which attracts quick attention, according to Niles, and stirs up plenty of attention, since the tapes are changed constantly through the day.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Members Report On Mother's Day

Running for a week in cooperating newspaper was Round Tabler Francis Deering's Mother's Day contest at Loew's, in Houston, Texas. The mother of the person who, in the opinion of the judges, wrote the best letter on "What my mother means to me," was invited to take her whole family out to dinner on Mother's Day at a cooperating restaurant and then attend a theatre party in their honor at Loew's.

While Walter Davis, at the Randolph, in Randolph, N. Y., introduced a "Mother's Day Gift Ticket" with envelope to match. Sales on these were plugged and tickets were honored at any time.

Dominick Lucente at the Alhambra, Philadelphia, had author of a poem dedicated to Mothers, stationed in lobby autographing copies of it for patrons. Expense was met by cooperating newspaper.

Tri-Staters Find Added Profits In "Benefit" Sales

Among the more definite methods of underwriting grosses on worthy attractions that need building up, recommended in "Broadcaster," Tri-States' circuit organ, and found profitable by various of the managers, is a tieup with a livewire organization for benefit ticket sales on a percentage arrangement for all tickets they actually sell.

Recently, Jimmy Schlatter, Capitol, Sioux City, conducted a successful ticket drive with the Junior Hadassah. In Davenport, Iowa, Dale McFarland, at the Capitol, and in Cedar Rapids, Hal Sheridan, at the Paramount, put on drives for "Young Tom Edison," McFarland working with the YMCA Mothers Club to sell tickets two weeks ahead for 25 percent of all sales made by the organization. The tieup allowed the manager to place window cards in all classrooms and to distribute heralds in the schools. Tieup also made it possible to set up ticket booths in department stores and banks.

Hal Sheridan's tiein was made with the local Young Men's Club for the benefit of the organization's charity funds. Here, too, a 25 percent deal was made, the drive starting with a dinner of the club to give the project an enthusiastic sendoff which included generous mentions in the local press.

Other of the Tri-States theatres are reported as putting on successful drives with YMCA members. The plan is guided so that each boy selling a certain number of tickets wins a trip to the summer camp conducted by that organization.

Sportsmen Praise Preview

Shown to a selected list of local amateur and professional trainers of hunting dogs, a recent preview of "Biscuit Eater" is announced by Broadcaster as having produced a lot of boxoffice enthusiasm in this direction. Through the aid of popular newspaper hunting and fishing editor, many new boosters for the attraction were found which will be capitalized upon for future attractions at the local Tri-States houses in any feature, short or newsreel insert where hunting dogs are conspicuous.

Secure High School Cooperation

To get across the grown-up quality of "It's a Date" and the absence of any juvenile note previously established in other Deanna Durbin roles, the Des Moines Tri-Staters contacted the teacher-advisors of five local high-school publications asking them to attend an advance preview accompanied by one boy and one girl from the editorial staff of each paper. The idea then was to have the representatives of the schools write straight critical reviews for their publications, published simultaneously with the picture's opening.

The purpose of the promotion was carried out, thusly, to dismiss any resentment among patrons of high school age against the so-called "juvenile pictures." In the Tri-States' advertising, the adult slant was sold generally with the line "She's Grown Up Now."

EXPLOITATION BRIEFS FROM A-FIELD

Before leaving the Mission Theatre, in Mission, Texas, for a post as city manager in Raymondville, Texas, J. S. Thomason for "Destry Rides Again" converted entire front of his theatre into western scene. Entire staff was dressed in cowboy attire with ten gallon hats, etc. Saddles, chaps, lariats, cedar logs and other paraphernalia were planted out front.

Reported as going along successfully is W. A. Popham's "Lone Ranger" club at the Roxy theatre, in Saskatoon, Saskatchewan. Each week the management posts 10 numbers on a card in front of boxoffice and to those kids holding membership cards with corresponding numbers, free admissions were given. In addition promoted soft drinks are given to the kids each week.

Riding along on the publicity given to the annual selection of "Miss Jackson" and her maids, Manager J. R. MacEachron of the Paramount Theatre in Jackson, Tenn., arranged for the finals to be held at his theatre. Much is made over this beauty contest each year, since the winner is selected to represent the city in the various West Tennessee events held during the year, including the Cotton Carnival, Strawberry Festival, etc.

Since Gene Autry is very popular with his patrons, Sidney Hecht, at the Palace, in Passaic, N. J., for a lobby stunt on "South of the Border" planted a large cowboy doll next to giant record which concealed portable victrola. As machine played hit tunes from the picture, doll's mouth was made to move as though the music was issuing from him.

Reported by Gay Hower at the State and Grand Theatres, in Worthington, Minn., was the popularity contest held recently for "Seventeen." Coupons for 50 votes each were run in daily and to be deposited in ballot boxes provided in both theatres. Cooperating merchants came through with prizes which were awarded on stage by local prominent, night winner was declared.

Neat tieup was arranged with local jeweler on "Adventure in Diamonds" by Bill Burke at the Brant Theatre in Brantford, Ont. Store took 16 spot announcements in advance and during run, plugging the picture, theatre and playdates plus running a four column ad in newspaper using special mat furnished by Burke. Jeweler also furnished special six-sheet window display in store adjacent to theatre. Tieup which was entirely costless brought excellent advance advertising.

Local branch of the Western Union cooperated with Francis Gillon, manager of the Garden Theatre, in Davenport, Ia., by permitting the placing of bicycle banners on all vehicles used by their boys, to sell opening of "Call a Messenger." These were used a week in advance, boys being admitted to see the picture on the cuff in exchange for courtesy.

BUT SHE DID LEAVE HER CALLING CARD

For a giggle on "Road to Singapore," Marlowe Conner planted a peep-hole box in the lobby of Warner Avalon, Chicago. Copy read: "Look here and see gorgeous Dorothy Lamour in person." Inside box on back wall, Conner tacked a bit of cloth, labeled Dorothy's Sarong, and copy: "Well, darn it, she was here but got away. But you can see her," etc., etc.

As an advance teaser for "Brother Rat and a Baby," Henry Sutton of the Regent, in Pittsburgh sent one of his staff out on streets pushing a perambulator which was appropriately bannered with title, cast and playdates. While, for "The Light That Failed," Sutton had large candles burning in various parts of his lobby, guest tickets going to those guessing correctly time candle would extinguish itself.

Effective was the trailer street bally devised by Tom Thompson of the Martin and Thompson Theatres in Hawkinsville, Georgia for advance on "Child Is Born." Circulating throughout towns where the circuit has units, truck was appropriately bannered on sides with cutouts of the stars. Mounted atop the bally was a compo board stork.

To acquaint "foreigners" and natives alike that the Chinese New Year's holiday fare at the Nanking Theatre, in Shanghai, China would be "Hunchback of Notre Dame," Jacob Vidumsky planted on side of theatre a 15 foot cutout of the grotesque figure holding a girl. Electric title letters below illuminated the display at night.

Perambulating book bally proved effective for Seymour Morris' date on "Grapes of Wrath" at Schine's Palace, in Lockport, N. Y. For his lobby 12 foot display outlined the trek of the Joad family across country, special mailing list was circularized, bookmarks were distributed in school libraries and book stores featured window displays of the novel. Blowup of critics' review was used in empty store window, as was display of the Joad family.

THEATRE AD USED FOR PROMOTION

For "Dr. Cyclops" at Loew's Stillman, Cleveland, Jack Lykes ran a classified ad seeking a five-foot girl, from 18 to 22, to be reduced to 14 inches in size. Title was mentioned. Paper blew it up for a house ad, running it in a two-column spread headed by "What Next?"—with follow-up copy calling attention to the daily's classified page effectiveness.

Since Dr. Parker, authority on Indian lore and director of the Rochester Museum of Arts and Science, figured in the research work necessary for "Northwest Passage," Les Pollock at Loew's, Rochester, when playing that picture, secured the cooperation of the director, who loaned material which was featured in a lobby display ahead and during run.

Merchants in Springfield, Ohio, cooperated with George Sutermaster at the Majestic Theatre on his "Child Is Born" date, by taking a full co-op ad page and offering merchandise gifts to the first baby born after opening. Streamer across top and bottom of page plugged the stunt. In addition each store got behind the contest, devoting window and counter displays to the tiein.

Entirely costless was the full page of co-op ads promoted by Don Johnson at the Gayety in Chicago for date on "Raffles." Contest angle was brought in through offer of guest tickets to those submitting correct list of misspelled words appearing in merchant's ads.

In a thickly populated Polish neighborhood, abundant publicity was garnered by Don Johnson at the Gayety, in Chicago, through the personal appearance at his house of Jadwiga Smorsarska, noted Polish film actress and star of his current attraction. Stories and art were run in all Polish papers, theatremen further appearing at leading civic functions with the star.

Circularizing his patrons, Dale White at the Morin Theatre, in Brookville, Ind., mailed postcards recommending "Road to Singapore." Window cards were planted all over the county and through tieup with local grocery, truck was bannered with title, playdates and cast as it covered surrounding area.

Much was made locally over the parade to theatre of the Junior Legion drum corps carrying banners heralding opening of Nat Silver's date on "Fighting 69th" at the M&P Strand in Lowell, Mass. Additional publicity was received through the publishing in paper of laudatory letters received from patrons who had seen the film. Local veterans organizations with guests were invited to opening which also rated mention in papers.

Gaining permission from local police to park a wrecked car on street in front of his house, Douglas Mellott of the Blair Theatre, in Hollidaysburg, Pa., bannered it appropriately with "Drunk Driving" copy. Car was also shown throughout surrounding territory where it created plenty of attention.

Another showman to go in for giant cutouts is W. O. James, manager of the Paramount Theatre, in Fremont, Ohio, who for his date on "Gulliver's Travels" planted a 19 foot Gulliver ply-wood cutout in front of his house, ahead and during run.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger (†) symbol indicates picture is of the 1939-40 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

ORGY SELLING

MUCH has been recorded of cycles in motion picture production, but nothing of cycles in the closely related matter of promotion. The fashions and foibles and passions have been many, beginning somewhere about the time that the late Lewis J. Selznick staged an ornate function for some screen opus of "The Mad Monk Iliodor" at the Crystal room of the Ritz Carlton in New York.

The current but now possibly waning fancy is for the expeditionary hometown preview, sometimes ungratefully spoken of by persons of a travel worn lay press, off the record, as the "junket preview."

That fashion will be abandoned as soon as some one invents another device with new allure to the real customer for the hurrah, that same being Hollywood.

The junket preview took its inspiration and origin from the super-ornate openings of Hollywood, and represents the process of applying the technique to the quaint lands of Elsewhere, with naturally some evolutionary modifications. When Production decided to call the tune, leaving Distribution and Exhibition only the statistical chore of collecting to pay the fiddler, the press agents got called to Hollywood and showmanship with a big "S" took to the road in a Big Way.

THE first time out, complete with special trains, stars, extras, supernumeraries and a full guest attendance of press associations, picture critics, trade and lay, reporters and Influential Persons, the device had impact. It perhaps may have been considered to have paid off its cost with increased bookings and rentals, although as to ultimate box office admissions the evidence is not so clear.

The rage was started. Agents provocateur forthwith began to search scripts and study maps. All manner of Uprisings of an enthusiastic populace were superinduced in remote places and parts, to the joy of community patriots, flattered into delirium under the limelight of blandishing Hollywood attention. Any place would do, star's hometown or the locale of the big scene in the third reel.

The principal national consequence was that a considerable number of picture column writers for the daily press, including some who had previously never been farther out of town than the Woodmen's picnic, began to enjoy trans-continental travel deluxe with bar cars and service unlimited. Some found they could render "expense accounts" to the hosts, and now and then a selected few had "cash for incidentals" pressed into their moist hands. They wrote some pieces for the paper which were very nice, even if the lineage cost was higher than could have been arranged at the business office.

"The press" was supposed to be full of Scotch and Goodwill. It was full of Scotch, and Alka Seltzer. They had, to paraphrase our blithe contemporary, Time, "a nose for whiskey and a stomach for movies." Anyway they never bit the hand that passed the bottle.

A not-so-pretty sequel to all this approach to the press, with no indictment of the press involved, was a project offered in Hollywood, by a local trade paper, for an ornate special number at ornate prices, 60 per cent of which were to be devoted to the financing of a national convention of picture editors and reviewers from the newspapers. Hollywood turned it down. All of "the why" does not appear, but it can be noted that some of the refusals were on principle, enough to decide the issue. It would be a pessimist who guessed that there were doubts about delivery. Meanwhile, decidedly, in the circumstances, to their everlasting credit, the New York Critics decided to go it alone, without "national" affiliations.

OUR news pages this week present a study of the judgments of the critics of the lay press of New York City. Judicially examining reviews and box office figures, Mr. James D. Ivers finds that the critics like the pictures in general better than the customers do. There might be several reasons. One of them might be that a much more competent job of selling the critic is done than for the exhibitor who retails the product. Production is "critic conscious." The loudest that the exhibitor hears is "terms." The critics never hear that. They have no problems of clearance and zoning, no issues of availability and playdate. It is their natural assumption that a picture is as good as it looks. That is rather far from the facts. For the exhibitor the picture is as good as it looks "when and as," that being circumscribed by a great many facts for him that do not and cannot appear in the reviews. When and how he gets it is quite as important as what it is—oftentimes more important.

The fact is, with the usual margin for error, the pictures are probably as good as they look to the critics, or maybe better, but what happens between preview and exhibition to the customers, through their retailers, may have a depreciative influence. Certainly something happens.

Pictures should be as good as they look. None are ever any better. Many, by the cash register vote, are not as good. The selling does not get to the end of the line.

SO, the other day when a hard-headed friend from Hollywood, with a deal to do with disbursements, came in to pay his periodic disrespects to the editor, the junket technique became a topic.

"It is necessary to continue those parties," he argued, "because we have producers whose pride would be humbled in the face of their friends and rivals if their picture, too, failed of a public pyrotechnics. The appearance of a spasm of appreciation must be had, and by what artifice does not matter. The glory is their's, the cost is not.

"Further," he continued, "they are smart. Their payroll and budgetary positions require the support of 'setting,' and there can be, you understand, a perfect consistency even in disproportion. A cock-eyed position has to have cock-eyed support."

There was a long pause.

"And do you know there's a certain famous director out there who is the strangest fellow in Hollywood. He lives in the same little house he built now nearly twenty years ago, and he has saved five million dollars. Every year he has been sure it wouldn't last."

This Week in the News

Cooperative, New Style

TERMS of the Warner settlement, two weeks ago, of the Vineland, N. J., independent Landis theatre trust suit revealed this week disclosed an adjustment of a local controversy between an independent and circuit operator that is rare, if not unprecedented in exhibition: The circuit and the independent agreed to work together in their competitive situations, "on a mutual basis," sharing product and profits.

Judge William H. Kirkpatrick, in United States District Court in Philadelphia, dismissed the bill of complaint, Tuesday, in the anti-trust litigation filed, June 12, 1939, against Warner theatres in Philadelphia and 13 major distributors by the community-owned Landis theatre.

The settlement provides for operation of the Landis and the two Warner theatres in Vineland, the Globe and the Grand, on a co-operative basis. Warner will do the buying of pictures for the Landis as well as its own two houses, splitting the product as it meets the needs of the respective houses regardless of affiliation, and with Warner sharing in the Landis profits on a 50-50 basis at the end of each fiscal year.

In the litigation, the Landis charged that it was placed at a disadvantage through the policy of the distributors of giving the two Warner theatres in Vineland preference of first run features.

The settlement, reached between Pennsylvania State Senator Harry Shapiro, representing the Landis, and Morris Wolf, of Philadelphia, for Warners, also calls for the theatre circuit to defray all the Landis' counsel fees, said to be about $20,000.

War Meeting

SOMETIME next week there's to be a gathering of New York motion picture executives for conference on what's to be done to aid the national defense program and the movement for recruiting the U. S. Army to its peacetime quota of 280,000 men. The function is being organized under the direction of Sidney Kent.

This is in sequel to a slightly secret session—with lunch sent in—held at the Paramount Studio offices last Tuesday, when Major Richard Schlosberg, U. S. Signal Corps, and Major Mason Wright, Jr., adjutant general's staff, consulted some fifteen Hollywood executives on screen cooperation for the national defense.

The Hollywood session resulted in the suggestion that the newsreels—which headquarter in New York—would be the best screen medium.

This is reminiscent of the fact that in 1936 the newsreels were under heavy fire from the Left on the charge that they were militaristic and inciting to war by the showing of soldiers and battleships. The pressure was so heavy that one reel changed its name, at the instance of the distributor.

Hollywood, with a practical eye, asked if it could expect cooperative availability of army equipment, etc., to which the answer was that Regulation No. 600-700 providing such cooperation was unchanged.

Attending the Hollywood meeting were: Walter Wanger, president of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences; Sidney R. Kent, Twentieth Century-Fox president; Frank Capra, president of the Screen Directors Guild and former president of the Academy; Harry Warner and Major Nathan Levinson of Warners; Fred Beetson, executive vice-president of the Association of Motion Picture Producers; Cliff Work, vice-president and production head of Universal; Henry Ginsberg and T. Keith Glennan of Paramount; B. B. Kahane of Columbia; E. H. Goldstein, Republic studio manager; John Aalberg, RKO studio sound department head, appearing for J. R. McDonough; and Gordon Mitchell, director of Academy Research Council. Major Levinson, former army signal corps officer, is the past chairman of the Academy Research Council.

Darryl F. Zanuck, Chairman of the Academy Research Council, called a conference, Wednesday, in Hollywood, of 50 leading studio technicians to consider numerous new problems arising within the industry as a result of the war situation.

Mr. Zanuck said that, "because of current conditions throughout the world, the industry more than ever is faced with the necessity for every possible economy and that the Academy Research Council, recognizing this necessity, is immediately taking steps to do its part to assist the industry in this crisis."

Duplicating in a general way the attitude displayed at the outbreak of World War II, last September, Hollywood studio executives this week were studying ways and means of effecting operating economies, "without sacrificing quality." Word of minor curtailments trickled through the film community. Again, first definite evidence of personnel reduction became visible in publicity departments.

Only nine per cent of the film markets in Europe are active, with "more than 90 per cent either frozen, eliminated or threatened," Herman Wobber, head of Twentieth Century-Fox distribution declared this week in New York in a message to the home office and field sales forces.

New "Nazi Spy"

WARNER Brothers on Wednesday screened to the press in Hollywood a revision of its revival of "Confessions of a Nazi Spy." Thursday, the company placed the picture in the Warner Hollywood and Downtown theatres, Los Angeles.

In the refabrication of "Nazi Spy" there were inserted midway in the picture sequences showing the Nazi occupation of Austria, Czechoslovakia, and toward the end, headlines and clips are included depicting invasions of Finland, Denmark, Norway, Holland and Belgium while the voice of Henry O'Neil, portraying the prosecuting attorney in the picture, denounces Nazism.

Bank Night, Again

A "SPONSORED" version of Bank Night, to bring national advertisers before motion picture theatre audiences is now under promotion in New York by Mitchell May, Jr., insurance broker with many motion picture accounts, and George Fecke, variously associated with pictures and distribution in New England.

Conversations this week were addressed at seeking a tryout in a big Massachusetts circuit, and another in Pennsylvania.

The scheme contemplates that a national advertiser shall furnish the cash prizes and pay exhibitors a per seat royalty for commanding attention to his wares from the theatre audience.

One circuit operator described the plan as "screen advertising without the screen."

ASCAP Accuses

ASCAP Wednesday charged the National Association of Broadcasters with "prompting" the Government's investigation of the Composers' Society.

Judge Henry W. Goddard, presiding in New York federal court, heard arguments for an application by Louis Frohlich, ASCAP attorney, to quash a federal grand jury subpoena served on ASCAP by the Government to investigate its records.

Mr. Frohlich said the Department of Justice was "using a threatened criminal action for alleged violation of the anti-trust laws to compel the signing of a consent decree by ASCAP" in the Government's civil suit which was dropped five years ago.

Judge Goddard after eliminating dozens of requests for certain records ordered ASCAP to produce the balance for Government inspection within 30 days, his decision specifically providing that the records be kept confidential by the Government.

More Taxes

A TEN PER CENT increase in theatre admission taxes may be one of the steps taken by the Administration to finance its multi-billion-dollar national defense program.

The imposition of an "over all" increase of 10 per cent on all existing taxes and the raising of the permissible national debt limit from $45,000,000,000 to $48,000,000,000 was suggested this week by President Roosevelt and is under consideration by Congress.

If the plan is adopted it is calculated that something over $2,000,000 a year additional would come from theatre admission taxes, on the basis of collections for the first 10 months of the current fiscal year of more than $18,000,0000.

The House Ways and Means Committee has recommended reduction of the present admission tax exemption from 40 cent tickets to 30 cents.

Besides the numerous local and state levies on movie tickets, the Federal Government is now taxing box offices ten per cent on admissions of 40 cents and over. The Hays organization estimates the industry now pays the Federal Government $100,000,000 a year in taxes and state and local governments, $250,000,000 a year.

Louisiana Wins

REFUSING to review a decision of the Louisiana Supreme Court, the United States Supreme Court on May 27th in effect affirmed the validity of the Louisiana 'use tax' as applied to motion picture rentals. As a result, exhibitors are liable to new taxes approximating $25,000 annually.

Holding that no substantial Federal question had been presented, the U. S. court rejected a petition of the Saenger (Circuit) Realty Corporation for review of the Louisiana decision that the one per cent levy on the "rental of tangible personal property" was applicable to motion pictures.

The Saenger company, assessed under the state law, brought a test case to determine whether the copyright phase of motion picture distribution was sufficient to exempt films from the levy. The Louisiana district court agreed that the exhibitor leased the right to show a copyrighted work rather than the physical film itself, but the higher court reversed the decision on the ground that the right to exhibit was not of greater value than the use of the film.

As a result of the refusal of the Washington tribunal to take jurisdiction, distributors would be liable to a tax of one per cent on all amounts received from the rental of films in Louisiana, which tax, in turn would be passed on to the exhibitor.

Edison Studio

THE OLD Edison studios at 2826 Decatur Avenue in the Bronx of New York, opened in 1905, have been taken over for operation on rental to producers by the Croydon Operating Company, according to announcement by Jacob Levy of Levy Brothers, real estate, 1440 Broadway. The plant is to be equipped for short subject production. The Edison studios were built at the dawn of the nickelodeon era, after the Edison picture, "The Great Train Robbery," had pioneered the separate career of the films which had been until then an adjunct of vaudeville. Edwin S. Porter, who made that first story picture, was first in charge of the studio, later operated for Edison by Horace Plympton, who took over when Mr. Porter became an independent. It was at that studio, in 1907, that D. W. Griffith, then Lawrence Griffith, played his first screen part in "The Eagles Nest." The studio has in subsequent years passed through many hands and promotion.

LL.D. for Quigley

THE PRESIDENT and trustees of Niagara University, at Niagara Falls, N. Y., have announced that an honorary degree of doctor of laws will be conferred on Martin Quigley at the commencement day exercises on June 10.

The commencement address to the graduates will be delivered by Mr. Quigley.

Honorary degrees of doctor of laws also will be awarded to John S. McCarrens, vice-president and general manager of the Cleveland Plain Dealer and president of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, and Bernard E. Finucane, civic and business leader of Rochester, N. Y.

Italian Deal Cold

EVEN if Italy does not enter World War II, it is unlikely that the American distributors would resume operations in the near future in that country. F. W. Allport, European representative of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, has been conferring in Rome with Vezio Orazi, head of the Italian film monopoly and other Government officials, and, despite many proposals and counter proposals the fundamental difference still remains.

The larger American companies require as an absolute minimum, it was said in New York Wednesday the right to operate their own offices in Italy, but the Fascists want to keep control of distribution. The American companies are said to realize that little foreign exchange is available and would make a compromise money agreement.

THIS WEEK IN PICTURES

THE WEEK'S crop of on-the-spot premieres brought one from Paramount, one from United Artists, both having garnered much lay press publicity. The round dozen pretty maidens all in a row above were gathered as college queens by Paramount's indefatigable publicity staff and brought to Galesburg, Ill., for the premiere of "Those Were the Days."

SOMEWHERE in the Pacific: William Perlberg, director, and Ken Englund, author of Columbia's "The Doctor Takes a Wife," vacationing with their wives and chatting with Mrs. Sargent Kahanamoku, sister-in-law of Duke Kahanamoku. The "somewhere" is Hawaii, whispers N. W. Ayer & Son who, being interested in pineapple juice, submitted the picture.

PARAMOUNT convened in Los Angeles last week end to hear production executives, on their home grounds, outline plans for 44 to 50 features for next season and the sales executives expound policies and requirements. Above, Y. Frank Freeman, vice-president in charge of studio operations, welcomes Barney Balaban, president. At right, the opening session in the Fiesta Room of the Ambassador hotel. INDIANS in Brooklyn, unregenerated holdouts no doubt in the sale of Manhattan, are discovered by Paramount exploitation men. Among reporters and photographers and chiefs are Tom Waller and Herb Berg, the intrepid explorers, urged on by the imminence of DeMille's "Northwest Mounted Police."

STUDIOS PROMISE 502, DELIVERIES ON SCHEDULE

Product Schedules from Eight of Ten Companies Indicate Only Slight Reduction in Spite of War Conditions

War or no war, Hollywood product promised for the new season of 1940-41 in volume or number of productions will be almost the same as that of the 1939-40 season, now nearing a close.

Exhibitors now have in hand the product commitments of eight of the ten large distributors for the year starting September 1st, for a total of 396 features, only ten less than this year's 406 promised by the eight. Columbia's and Warners' product announcements still are to be announced.

Deliveries Near Quota

On actual deliveries, Hollywood, on Monday, June 1st, goes into the final quarter of 1939-40 with releases checked off for 369 features (72 per cent), of the 512 features promised, and 74 of the 143 films (28 percent) of the balance due on pre-season commitments are finished and "in the can" in Hollywood.

The 1940-41 short subject supply will be greater than this year's schedule, promises of the eight for next year running to 367, 45 more than this year's 322.

There will be no change in the number of serials, Columbia, Republic and Universal again promising four each.

Assuming that there will be no great change in Columbia's commitment of 58 for this season, or in Warners' present year total of 48, the grand total from Hollywood for 1940-41 would approximate 502, against the maximum 512 which the ten companies set down at this sales season period a year ago for 1939-40.

And this in spite of all of the talk of the great effects the spreading World War II would have on the source of supply in Hollywood. While some of the companies are going in for marked numerical curtailment —Paramount, for one, cutting from 58 to 44-50—others are acting quickly to take up the slack, notably Republic, increasing its schedule by eight, to 58; Monogram, up four, to 50. Metro will stay at about the same, 52, likewise Twentieth Century-Fox, at 52, Universal raising its total by one, to 59. RKO will go down five, to 53, and United Artists, six, to 22.

The large distributors are making new season product commitments for a virtual retention of the status quo, numerically, even in the face of swift moving developments in Europe, with its thinning markets—all announcements coming within the period of Adolph Hitler's "britzkriegs"—although all schedules, of course, are subject to change.

No Reduction Seen

The disclosure that Hollywood's grand totals of product promised for the new year differ so slightly from the passing year, out of which twelvemonth came economic reactions on foreign revenue greater than at any time since the World War I of 20-odd years ago, is especially interesting in view of the recent many-sided warnings of production and distribution chiefs that the lost revenues demanded attention in product formulation. Except for Paramount, RKO and United Artists, it would seem from the promises made on paper in the past six weeks by five of the ten large companies, that there is no intention at this time to reduce by numbers.

Turning to the source of short subject supply, exhibitors in 1940-41 might expect an increase of 16 from Metro-Goldwyn, over its 62 promised in 1939-40; about the same number—85 or 86—from Paramount; 16 more from RKO, raising to 86; 52, again, from Twentieth Century-Fox and 14 more from Universal, which will have 57, against 43. United Artists had a few shorts this season, will have none next, but the slack here will be taken up by Monogram, which, for the first time, will have "featurettes," streamlined word for shorts, listing eight for 1940-41. Columbia and Warners still are to be heard from, the former, this year, listing 96 single and 26 two-reelers, and Warners listing 68 single reels and 18 twos.

British Imports Down

Apparently overlooked in open trade discussion of the potential effects of World War II on Hollywood's product supply is the cutoff of imports from Europe, particularly England, which, it would seem, is having its influence on the decision of several companies in keeping new Hollywood producing totals on the same levels as the old —bearing in mind that, until Hitler's Norway-Holland-Belgium-France expeditions, some companies definitely announced production in England, for quota purposes or otherwise. Most of these are changing their minds with the daily changes of warfronts.

Virtually all of the foreign-language and "art" theatres in the new season will probably be turning away from foreign-language talkers, to domestic product.

promises of approximately 500 compare with the 512 of 1939-40 and the 480 promised for 1938-39.

Exhibitors to date have in hand the product promises for 1940-41 of eighty per cent of the new season's programs and the Columbia and Warner announcements will be made June 4th and June 10th, respectively. Production programs promised for the new season by the other eight were published in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, including titles, sources of material, talent assignments, as follows:

Monogram Pictures, April 20th, page 29.

Universal, May 18th, page 35.

United Artists, May 18th, page 37.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, May 25th, page 29.

Paramount, May 25th, page 35.

Republic, this issue, page 37.

Related to the buying positions and buying intentions of exhibitors who now are being approached by film salesmen arriving from sales conventions in the hotel-halls of New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, Atlantic City, San Francisco, Pittsburgh, and wherever else the 1940 product policies and procedure were set down by distribution chiefs, is the status of distributors on actual deliveries to date of present season's commitments. Bookings on old product have a relation to new season's buyings.

On deliveries of this year's programs, the ten distributors are running but three per cent behind schedule, as of June 1st, with 369 of the 512 features promised for 1939-40 actually delivered—and another 74 features completed and "in the can," ready for delivery. Only 13 per cent of the commitments made last year for 1939-40 are to be accounted for, as to completion, and most Hollywood studios today are moving rapidly toward a windup.

Scarcity of Budget Figures

Noticeable this year at product announcement time is the scarcity of formal announcement of actual new-budget figures. To date, only two of the eight companies making product announcements have accompanied them with budgets-on-paper: United Artists, on a $30,000,000 basis, and Paramount, with $25,000,000, plus a $2,000,000 advertising-promotion expenditure — both being "releases" to the trade press. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer said it had in mind some $2,750,000 for advertising-promotion of its 1940-41 productions. Monogram hopes for a $9,225,000 sales quota, no expenditures disclosed.

Some typical budget estimations of last year: Warners, $30,000,000; Twentieth Century-Fox, $28,000,000 to $30,000,000; Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, $42,500,000 — all "paper budgets" before production, at sales convention time.

The year before, Hollywood budget estimates, made in advance of actual production, estimated Columbia's at $9,000,000, Metro's at $42,500,000, Paramount's at $26,000,000, Republic's at $5,000,000, RKO's at $16,000,000, Twentieth Century's at $24,000,000, Warners' at $27,000.000.

Pre-selling sales conventions this year were a full month later getting started, due to anticipated changes in new sales policy

THEATRE IN LONDON

—from Pictures, Inc.

ON the bitter morning that the radio was pouring its bulletins of catastrophe in Flanders, trans-Atlantic Clipper planes were delivering pictorial documentation of debacle.

In the flow of camera reports was this picture of theatre and war and refugee children seeking rest and respite. Only a little while ago these opera chairs were filled with people and there was a make-believe life and world before them on stage and screen. There is grim drama, but no make-believe, there now.

There are ten million theatre seats in the United States of America—that far we are prepared for war.

Conventions one year ago started March 13th, with Warner Brothers, against the April 12th start this year, by Twentieth Century-Fox. Regardless, the distributors this year moved them along swiftly to bring in the last of the year at the same time as the end of last year's convention season, on June 13th, several companies this year bunching in the same week.

In the interests of economy, seven held regionals only three holding one "big" national meeting: Paramount, RKO and Twentieth Century-Fox, against seven nationals last year, the idea being that with revenue conditions as they are this year, savings could be effected in smaller, regional, less pretentious gatherings.

With only two more conventions coming up to close the season, those of Columbia and Warner Brothers, the meetings compare as follows:

Opposition to the transcription of 35 mm. pictures into 16 mm. "All producers and distributors are strongly urged to give serious consideration to the above resolutions, for the good of the motion picture industry," the directors added.

ANTI-TRUST DEFENSE COSTS UP TO $2,500,000 AT TRIAL DATE

Fees for Thirty-four Lawyers so far Estimated at a Million with Expenses of $2,000,000 a Year in Court Anticipated

by WALTER SELDEN

"One million."

That, in the opinion of industry leaders, based on actual salaries and fees paid out, has been the cost to date in legal fees alone of "No. 87-273," the anti-trust suit in equity filed by the U. S. Government against the eight major motion picture companies.

Added to this, in costs both direct and indirect, has been another $1,500,000 of expense borne by the majors during the 23 months from filing of the suit in U. S. District Court, New York, in July, 1938, to start of trial scheduled for Monday, June 3.

Included in this latter category are costs stemming from the executive time consumed by the Department of Commerce meetings, held with an eye to a settlement decree; by pre-trial examinations, by accounting and financial analysis necessary to the answer of Government interrogatories and preparation of the majors' own questionnaires, by depositions, and by examination of witnesses.

The "key" New York anti-trust suit, of course, is but one of more than 50 brought by the Government or individuals and now pending, against the eight majors and various of their affiliates.

Distinguished Legal Array

Preparing the case of the majors for trial in the New York suit have been 34 attorneys, both within and without the legal staffs or the regular counsel for the companies, and including two former solicitor generals of the U. S. and past presidents of the American Bar Association, one of whom, additionally, was a former Ambassador to Great Britain and Democratic presidential candidate in 1924; and a former Republican candidate for Governor of New York.

The largest share of the direct costs resulting from attorneys' fees has been taken by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Loew's. Like Warner Brothers, Paramount and RKO Radio, MGM has hired counsel for the case to supplement its own home office legal staff. Representing the company have been John W. Davis and Edward McLean, of Davis, Polk, Wardwell, Gardiner and Reed, as well as J. Robert Rubin, Loew-MGM vice-president and general counsel, and Tyree Dillard, of the Loew's legal staff.

Mr. Rubin, in 1937, was the second highest salaried man in America, receiving compensation of $754,254 for his services. As the result of a "technicality," 1938 salaries of Loew, Universal and RKO executives were not disclosed by the Treasury Department.

Was Solicitor General

Mr. Davis, who has received the degree of Doctor of Laws from nine universities, resigned from the 63d Congress to become solicitor general of the U. S. from 1913 to 1918, at which time President Wilson appointed him Ambassador to Great Britain, where he remained until 1921. In 1924, he was Democratic presidential candidate, and from May 1931 to May 1933, president of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York, as well as president of the American Bar Association in 1932. One of the early directors of the Liberty League in 1934, Mr. Davis has received compensation of approximately $70,000 for his work to date in the suit.

The total payments made by Loew-MGM for legal work in the case, including the salary paid Mr. Rubin proportionate to time spent on the suit, and the money spent on other legal aid, is estimated at over $500,000.

For RKO Radio, legal services have been rendered by Colonel William Joseph Donovan, John Howley and J. E. Lumbard, Jr., of Donovan, Leisure, Newton and Lumbard; and William Mallard, RKO vice-president, Gordon Youngman, William Zimmerman and O. C. Doering, Jr., all of the company's own legal staff. Mr. Mallard, in 1935, received $19,999 salary, according to Government figures reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD of January 23, 1937.

$70,000 to Donovan

Colonel Donovan, whose World War I record won him the Congressional Medal of Honor, the Distinguished Service Medal, the Distinguished Service Cross, the Legion of Honor award, the Croix de Guerre with palm and silver star (France) and the Croci di Guerra (Italy), as well as celluloid immortality in Warners' recent "Fighting 69th," has received some $70,000 for his services to RKO in the New York case.

Donovan, Leisure, Newton and Lumbard has also represented the Irving Trust Company and Pathe News in the case, the total legal bill for the group of three defendants amounting to approximately $100,000. This is exclusive of the work done by Monroe Goldwater of Goldwater and Flynn for Keith-Albee-Orpheum, also a defendant.

Twentieth Century-Fox and its affiliated defendants have been represented by Felix Jenkins, secretary and general attorney for the corporation, whose 1935 salary, the last reported, was $20,500; E. M. Bull, Frederick Pride, John F. Caskey and Ralph Scott Harris, all of Dwight, Harris, Koegel and Caskey.

The Chase National Bank, which owned approximately 221,157 shares of Twentieth Century-Fox common and 671,915 shares of preferred as of March 1st, and National Theatres have both been represented by Bertram F. Shipman of New York's "downtown" law firm of Mudge, Stern, Williams and Tucker. The Twentieth-Fox defendant group has had a legal bill of approximately $100,000, also.

Legal expenses in direct fees and salaries for the top men in their own legal departments corresponding to time spent on the suit have fallen slightly below the RKO and Twentieth-Fox groups in the cases of Warner Brothers and Paramount, amounting to some $80,000 in each instance.

Proskauer for Warners

Warners, at the end of March, retained Joseph Proskauer of Proskauer, Rose and Paskus. Until then, work on the case had been in the hands of Robert W. Perkins, general counsel, secretary and board member, and I. Howard Levinson, of the company's home office legal staff. Mr. Perkins received $52,000 for his services in 1937, according to the figures released by the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives and printed in MOTION PICTURE HERALD of April 15th, 1939. In 1935, he received $31,800, as reported in the HERALD of January 23d, 1937. Salaries for 1938 were listed by the Treasury Department only for those receiving more than $75,000.

Paramount's legal representation has come from Thomas Day Thacher and A. C. Bickford of Simpson, Thacher and Bartlett; Austin Keough, vice-president, secretary, general counsel and a member of the company's board, and Louis Phillips, company attorney.

Like Mr. Davis a former solicitor general of the U. S., president of the American Bar Association and the Association of the Bar of the City of New York, Mr. Thacher has also been a special U. S. attorney and a judge in the U. S. District Court for the Southern District of New York.

Gave Anti-Trust Decision

In the latter capacity, one of the larger cases decided by Judge Thacher dealt with alleged violation of the Sherman anti-trust laws by motion picture companies. He held, in 1930, that while the credit rules adopted by First National, Paramount-Famous-Lasky Corporation, MGM Distributing Corporation Universal, Fox and others did not violate the Sherman Act, the companies were nonetheless guilty of conspiracy to violate the Act. His opinion declared that "it was impossible for any motion picture theatre to secure sufficient motion picture films for regular operation without dealing with the film boards of trade."

The former Judge's services for Paramount in the New York anti-trust suit have been estimated as calling for reimbursement in the neighborhood of at least $60,000.

Mr. Keough, according to testimony given at a meeting of Paramount creditors before Referee Henry K. Davis in 1933, received $700 a week from 1929 to May 1st. 1931, at which time his salary was cut to $570 a week, remaining there until the beginning of 1932. At that time his salary was set at $526 a week. By 1935, it had

THACHER WILL OPEN DEFENSE SUIT CASE

Judge Thomas D. Thacher, head counsel for Paramount, has been designated by defense attorneys on trial procedure to make the opening address for the defense when the trial of the Government's "key" New York anti-trust suit opens before Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard in the U. S. District Court Monday. The closing address will be made by Judge Joseph Proskauer, head of the Warner counsel.

John W. Davis, chief counsel for Loew's, has been allotted the Number 2 position; Ralph H. Harris, chief counsel for 20th Cenutry-Fox, is third on the list; Col. William J. Donovan, chief counsel for RKO, is fourth; Louis D. Frohlich and Herman Finkelstein, counsel for Columbia, will appear fifth, and Edward C. Raftery, trial counsel for United Artists and Universal, will be sixth, followed by Judge Proskauer.

The Government will open the trial, with indications still pointing to the opening address being made by U. S. Attorney General Robert Jackson. He would be followed by Thurman W. Arnold, head of the anti-trust division of the Department of Justice, with Paul Williams, Arnold's first assistant in the industry suit, appearing third.

'INCIDENTAL' EXPENSES $1,500,000

gone to $600 a week, as reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD of January 23d, 1937. That same report gave Mr. Phillips' salary as $20,450 in 1935.

Three Spent $150,000

Approximately $50,000 apiece has been spent by Columbia, United Artists and Universal in legal costs growing out of the suit.

For Columbia, work on the case has been prepared by both partners in the law firm of Schwartz and Frohlich, regular Columbia New York counsel, and by Herman Finklestein of that firm and Irving Moross of the Columbia legal staff.

United Artists, represented by the law firm of O'Brien, Driscoll and Raftery, the company's counsel, has been using the services of Paul O'Brien, Edward Raftery and Benjamin Pepper of that firm.

Universal has been represented by Charles Prutzman, vice-president, general counsel and board member, and Adolph Schimel, company attorney, as well as by J. Doig of Chadbourne, Hunt, Jaeckel and Brown.

The same sum for direct legal fees which the Government suit has already cost the majors—$1,000,000—was seen as the price of the Government St. Louis criminal anti-trust suit against Paramount, Warners and RKO and Harry Warner, Gradwell Sears, George Schaefer, Ned Depinet and others in 1935.

In the issue of October 12th, 1935, the HERALD reported, "One million dollars is the estimated legal bill of the defense in the St. Louis anti-trust trial. Warners is bearing the heaviest expense, with RKO second and the cost to Paramount the least of the three.

"Reports from St. Louis are that the retainer of former Senator James A. Reed, chief of the defense legal battery, is $100,000, and that of Frederick H. Wood and Bruce Bromley, of the New York law firm of Cravath, de Gersdorff, Swaine and Wood is the same.

"Warners is represented by 11 attorneys, RKO by seven and Paramount by five."

$450,000 for Reorganization

At the close of the Paramount reorganization proceedings, also in 1935, the law firm of Root, Clark, Buckner and Ballantine received a fee of $200,000 in addition to earlier allowances granted in the sum of $250,000. The firm had asked for a total of $950,000.

In that same reorganization the law firm of Cook, Nathan and Lehman, which served as counsel to the Paramount stockholders' committee and to Paramount as a debtor corporation, asked for $250,000, received $135,000 less. Davis, Polk, Wardwell, Gardiner and Reed asked for fees totaling $150,000, and received half that amount.

As Davis, Polk, Wardwell, Gardiner and Reed were represented among counsel in the Paramount reorganization as well as in the current New York anti-trust suit, so Colonel William Donovan and Simpson, Thacher and Bartlett, representing respectively RKO and Paramount in the current suit, were also active in the recently completed RKO reorganization.

Mr. Donovan has already received $360,000 as attorney for the trustee and $160,000 while representing the receiver in the nearly 10 year RKO reorganization period. Additionally, his was the second largest claim filed in the final application for allowances, at which time he asked for an additional $188,659 compensation.

The largest claim was filed by the Atlas Corporation, which, in its list of expenditures, set forth payment of $300,000 to its attorneys, Simpson, Thacher and Bartlett.

Proskauer Represented Loew's

Proskauer, Rose and Paskus, from which firm Joseph Proskauer has been retained to represent Warners in the Government suit, received $75,000 for legal services in a recent minority stockholders' suit against Loew-MGM, in which the firm represented the defendant.

One of the largest of all recent legal fees was paid David Podell, who has been also advising the Government in its New York case. Mr. Podell, taking the case on a contingency basis of 25 per cent, represented Loft's, Incorporated in a suit to recover Pepsi-Cola properties for the company, and was awarded a judgment of $40,000,000. It is said that the objections to the sum of 25 per cent of this, or $10,000,000, were such that Mr. Podell accepted some $7,000,000 as his fee for the case.

The recent death of Samuel Untermyer recalled to the industry, always interested in its legal expenses, Mr. Untermyer's fee of $1,000,000 for three months of advice in the Fox case in 1929.

Directly attributable to the Government suit is another $1,500,000 spent in addition to direct legal outlays. As in other anti-trust actions now pending against the majors, a great proportion of executive time, primarily the most highly paid in the industry, has been consumed by such suits.

Indicative of this was the recent statement made by William F. Rodgers, MGM general sales manager, while addressing the meeting of the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners in Los Angeles. In his address, Mr. Rodgers said 50 per cent of his time was spent on the suits pending against his company.

Similarly, speaking at the Harry Brandt testimonial dinner in New York, George Schaefer, RKO president, said he didn't know "who was going to make the pictures or sell them," referring to the time consumed by anti-trust actions.

Examinations Cost $50,000

The Government's pre-trial examinations alone have accounted for some $50,000 worth of executive time, as based on executive income. While United Artists officials appeared last spring, recent examinations have been held of virtually every company head, sales manager and theatre department head, including Harry Cohn, Abe Montague, Nate Blumberg, George Schaefer, Barney Balaban, Neil Agnew, Harry Warner, Joseph Bernhard, Sidney Kent, Spyros Skouras, Nicholas Schenck, William F. Rodgers and Charles Moscowitz.

In no case is the salary of any of these men under $50,000 a year, and typically it is far greater. Typically, too, a minimum of a week's time was required by the examination and preparation for examination in each instance.

Additionally, 34 witnesses have been subpoenaed by the Government to appear on the stand during the course of the trial itself. Again representing the heads of operations, sales, production and theatre departments in the eight defendant companies, the time consumed by this, once trial is under way, can easily be estimated at $250,000.

Conservative estimates place the length of the trial itself as between two and three years, with appeal being taken ultimately to the U. S. Supreme Court, no matter which side wins earlier decisions. With the costs what they have been, this would account for yearly expenditures in the neighborhood of $2,000,000 on the part of the majors, trial work representing one of the most expensive forms of legal service.

Answers Cost $800,000

To date, the compiling of data for answers to Government interrogatories, and for the defendants' questionnaires to the Government, have amounted to some $100,000 for each company.

Other attorneys' fees have resulted from the fact that lawyers have been retained in 30 cities to question Government witnesses.

Conferences with the Department of Commerce, in line with a possible consent decree, were inaugurated a year ago, when, on June 6th, Nicholas Schenck, Will Hays, Harry Warner, George Schaefer and others met with Harry Hopkins, secretary of the Department. Since then, conferences and exchange of information have gone on intermittently, accounting for another $50,000 in expense to the majors.

Then, too, there have been such expenses as those for the accounting and auditing done for purposes of the suit by Price, Waterhouse and Company, accounting for approximately $150,000 to date, a cost split among the defendants.

GOVERNMENT TO CALL FRANK R. WILSON

Department of Justice officials said the Government would call Frank R. Wilson, assistant director of public relations for the Department of Commerce, as a witness in connection with the anti-trust suit against the eight majors.

Mr. Wilson was formerly in charge of publicity for the NRA through the use of motion pictures. Prior to his work with the NRA, he was vice-president of Principal Distributing Corp., and president of both the Motion Picture Capital Corp., and North American Theatres, Inc.

Allied Protests Coast Clearance

Allied of Southern California, Arizona and Nevada is protesting the practice of delivering pictures to the Fox Academy theatre, Inglewood, seven days after Los Angeles first run closing at 40 cents. The organization in a letter last Fall to Fox West Coast Theatres and film exchanges in Los Angeles contended that while the theatre is politically and technically in Inglewood, "it unquestionably is actually and economically within the city of Los Angeles and surrounded by a tremendous Los Angeles city population."

In the letter, signed by Seth Perkins, president of the organization, Fox West Coast was asked to book the Fox Academy 21 days after Los Angeles first run at 40 cents "the same as any other 40-cent house in Los Angeles."

The organization this week said that the letter had been ignored and that another letter had been sent the 25th of April in which the circuit and exchanges were charged with violation of "consent decree."

Peskay with Roach

Edward J. Peskay, former Skouras Theatres and Grand National Pictures executive, has been appointed eastern representative for Hal Roach, United Artists producer. Mr. Peskay succeeds Tom Walker, general representative for Mr. Roach for the last year and a half. Mr. Walker has resigned.

NEELY COMMITTEE TURNS FIRE ON INDUSTRY: BLIND SELLING ATTACKED

Members Appear Less Opposed to Bill as Distribution, Production Heads Testify; Synopsis Clause of Bill Is Stressed

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

The House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee gave indications, in its third week of hearings on the Neely block-booking bill, that it was much less strongly opposed to the legislation than had been reported and that, in fact, if the highly indefinite synopsis provision could be put into workable language the measure might get a favorable report.

While observations of committee members during hearings are often window dressing and not indicative of the way they will vote, there has been apparent throughout the hearings a marked skepticism of the inability of the distributors to operate under what might be called a "labeling" system whereby the exhibitor would know what he is buying.

The block booking issue appears to have been subordinated to that of blind selling, the committee apparently having come to the conviction that, no matter what sort of law is enacted, exhibitors will continue to buy in blocks.

Industry Witnesses Testify

Highlights of the third week of the hearings included the examination of Charles C. Pettijohn, general counsel of the MPPDA on the financing of the organization; testimony of industry witnesses, including William F. Rodgers, general sales manager of MGM, who discussed the ill-fated industry code and explained percentage books; Herman Wobber, general sales manager of Twentieth Century-Fox, who said that if the bill were passed distribution costs would rise 25 per cent and admissions from 15 to 20 per cent, and Harry Brandt, independent exhibitor and head of the Independent Theatre Owners' Association of New York, who attacked organizations favoring the bill, called for industry arbitration and denied that any moral issue was involved in the question of block booking.

The final witness last week was Judge Roy L. Walker, president of the Theatre Owners Protective Association, who described the fight of his organization with Allied. When the hearings resumed on Monday the Hollywood section of the industry appeared with Col. Jason S. Joy, Twentieth Century-Fox, illustrating the changes made in a film during production; Don Ameche speaking for the Screen Actors Guild and Albert E. Sutherland and George Stevens for the Directors Guild. On questioning by committee members, Mr. Ameche appeared to have only slight knowledge of organized protests against the bill.

"Observers" in Audience

Other witnesses included R. H. Poole, executive secretary of the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners; Henry Reeve, a Texas exhibitor, and Y. Frank Freeman, Paramount vice-president in charge of production, who warned that passage of the Neely bill would mean that less pictures would be made. During the examination of Mr. Freeman members of the committee engaged in a sharp exchange over the activities of the Production Code Administration, headed by Joseph I. Breen.

During the hearings this week it was bruited about that the Department of Justice has had two "observers" sitting in the audience, but they were not identified. More openly, the Temporary National Economic Committee has been keeping in touch with the situation, with Daniel Bertrand attending the meetings daily.

At its final sessions last week, the committee put C. C. Pettijohn, general counsel for the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, through a stiff course of questioning in which the financing of the association was brought up for study.

Pettijohn Denies "Campaign"

Mr. Pettijohn explained he had no information regarding finances, but that the association was supported by dues based on the gross business of each member. The percentage was cut two or three years ago, he said, and the total income of the organization now is about $450,000 a year. He denied that the MPPDA had undertaken any campaign to defeat the bill and testified that he had spent less than $2,000 in opposing the measure.

Both sides have adopted the time-worn tactics of previous hearings, the proponents making use of the Payne Fund studies and the mistakes of the producers in giving erotic titles to their pictures and the opponents questioning claims that great public good would come from selectivity.

Along this line, Mr. Pettijohn laid before the committee the ill-fated Allied franchise with Tiffany-Stahl Productions in 1929, which he said not only block-booked and blind-sold the exhibitors, but did so for a period of five years, with no mention of the prices to be paid for the pictures and a forcing requirement that signatory theatres not only take but play all the features put out under the contract, as well as 52 shorts a year.

Rogers Charges "Bad Faith"

Charging the Department of Justice with bad faith in that, at the outset of negotiations on the trade practice code last year, it had refused to say what its attitude would be, only to warn against its adoption months later when, after three drafts of the agreement had been submitted, the distributors announced they would put it into effect. William F. Rodgers, general sales manager for MGM, told the committee that many attempts to reach an amicable agreement on controversies had failed, due largely to the vacillating attitude of Allied.

"The principal proponents of the bill have little if any investment in this business and have contributed nothing to its development and are seeking merely a trade advantage," he continued.

Questioned about percentage pictures, Mr. Rodgers told members that the rates charged here average considerably below the 50 per cent which is the rule in England, where single selling is enforced. He admitted that "Gone with the Wind" was getting 70 per cent, but explained it would not play more than 5,000 theatres and that distribution is proving more costly than ever experienced before; the company has already spent between $80,000 and $90,000 in checking, he said.

Wobber Sees Chaos

Declaring that he would give up his job if the measure became law, Herman Wobber, general sales manager for Twentieth Century-Fox, testified that under the measure the producers' inventories would increase 50 to 100 per cent, necessitating the raising of $100,000,000 to $200,000,000 in new capital, and distribution costs would advance 25 per cent.

If the increase in cost was passed along to the public, he told Representative Luther Patrick (Dem., Ala.), it would mean an increase of 15 to 20 per cent in admission prices.

In a smashing attack against the proponents' claims that the public groups would dictate the pictures to be shown, Harry Brandt, president of the Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York, told the assembled reformers that they would never have a chance at his business.

Block booking, he said, is not a problem, and there has been no compulsory block booking for several years. The cancellation privileges are adequate and, in fact, many exhibitors cannot take full advantage of them without endangering their supply of product. He explained that the number of pictures required is far greater than contended by Allied witnesses, that some houses change programs five times a week and offer double features, which would require 520 pictures a year, and that the average requirement in his organization is 312 films annually.

Asks "Honest Arbitration"

The whole situation, Mr. Brandt contended, could be cured by "honest arbitration." He said the companies in recent years have been more susceptable to pressure from the organized exhibitors and are evincing a disposition to cooperate in working out all controversies.

Mr. Brandt also tore into the moral issue, denying it existed. We asserted flatly the only reason an exhibitor canceled a picture was that it would not attract trade, and said that, while he worked closely with PTA and other organizations, he hadn't had a single complaint based on moral grounds for at least three or four years.

The New York independent paid his respects also to double features, which he said were giving the public "movie indigestion." They would be impossible, under the bill, he admitted, because there just wouldn't be enough pictures.

Final witness of the week was Judge Roy L. Walker, Pampasas, Tex., president of the Theatre Owners Protective Association, who spent most of his time relating his fight with Allied over the bill and the support of Texas exhibitors.

The two associations fought bitterly for exhibitor support on the Neely question, he testified, and, while Allied claimed to have a majority of the state showmen, Mr. Walker contended 90 per cent of them were against the

WOMEN'S CLUBS HIT BLOCK-BOOKING BILL

The Neely bill was opposed in the report of Mrs. Arretus Franklyn Burt, chairman of the committee on motion pictures of the General Federation of Women's Clubs delivered last week at the annual convention in Milwaukee. She said the organization has voted against federal control of films and had made no change in that position.

"The Neely block-booking bill involves no moral issues and it is highly controversial even in the industry. It is a step in the direction of federal control," Mrs. Burt said. Club women were also urged to oppose double features and support theatres that have a single-feature policy.

NEELY SYNOPSIS CLAUSE ATTACKED

bill. On the other hand, Abram F. Myers, after the hearing, claimed that Mr. Walker was not the independent he claimed to be but was affiliated to the extent that the Griffith circuit booked all his houses.

Testifying to the impossibility of producing pictures on the basis of a synopsis used for selling purposes, Col. Jason S. Joy of Twentieth Century-Fox, laid before the committee on Monday a dozen books representing the initial drafts, continuities and final script for the making of "Maryland."

At no time until the picture was finally completed could an accurate synopsis have been provided, he declared.

Ameche Questioned

Making his appearance in a role for which he quite evidently had not studied, Don Ameche, star of screen and radio, demonstrated his ability "to take it" as members of the committee queried him about the authorship of a letter opposing the bill which he signed.

Testifying that the Screen Actors Guild was against the synopsis provision, but admitting that he knew little or nothing about other parts of the bill, Mr. Ameche found himself on the receiving end of a barrage of questions, first about the Guild itself and then about Hollywood propaganda.

Under questioning by Representative James P. McGranery (Dem., Pa.), who has been investigating the background of most of the witnesses, he admitted that he was not an officer of the Guild and that no general meeting of the membership had been called to consider the attitude to be taken by the organization.

"Some time ago I received a letter over your signature, about the bill," Representative Clarence J. Brown (Rep., Ohio) broke in. "Did you write that letter?"

"I can't remember," the actor said.

"Who gave you my name," the Congressman persisted. "I have heard of you, but you never heard of me."

"I still don't know," the witness smiled back.

Letters bearing the signature of Mickey Rooney and Shirley Temple, among others, also were received, the Congressman continued, asking "How did it happen all these letters came in at the same time?"

"I noticed in these letters a number of you movie stars had exactly the same thought and expressed it many times in exactly the same words," he observed.

Albert E. Sutherland and George Stevens also presented the opposition of the Screen Directors Guild to the synopsis provision and when questioned by Representative Lyle Boren (Dem., Okla.) were able to testify that the full membership of the organization met to discuss the bill.

Fears "Carpet-Baggers"

Southern members of the committee were wafted back to post-Civil War days when R. H. Poole of Los Angeles, executive secretary of the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners, said the bill would bring a horde of "carpet-baggers" into the industry, explaining that he meant new houses would spring up to take advantage of a situation where the distributors were selling pictures one or two at a time, and that "runs," now so important to exhibitors, would be wiped out.

Increasing tension among committee members as a result of the long hearings was manifested Tuesday when Representatives Lyle Boren (Dem., Okla.) and James P. McGranery (Dem., Pa.) engaged in a sharp exchange over the activities of the Breen office.

The incident was precipitated by Representative Boren, who has frequently slighted Mr. Breen's work, with a remark that the Production Code enforcement did not appear very effective. He took for illustration, "Waterloo Bridge," in which one of the characters became a prostitute (the Congressman used a more old-fashioned term), and attacked the Breen office for letting such a thing be shown.

Coming to the defense of Mr. Breen, as he has frequently, Mr. McGranery called attention to the fact that every witness, including those of the public groups, had paid tribute to Mr. Breen's work.

The interchange came while Y. Frank Freeman, Paramount vice-president in charge of production, was undergoing a two-hour interrogation over the possibilities of providing a synopsis after a picture is completed.

Traversing the same ground over and over, members of the committee at times appeared to have lost all sight of the objectives of the bill and during Mr. Freeman's testimony sought more to pin him down as to why a synopsis could not be written than to learn whether the industry could continue to operate.

Cites Star Problem

Seeking painstakingly to show what the producers face in making pictures and why they could not provide synopses, Mr. Freeman explained how in some cases a picture is halted, abandoned or changed because some particular actor cannot be secured.

Paramount, he said, has commitments with artists, producers, directors, cameramen, etc., in excess of $7,000,000 in the form of contracts of employment running from one to three years and an investment of more than $7,000,000 in its plant, where approximately 1,200 persons are employed.

If, under the bill, he would have the responsibility of furnishing a true synopsis of every picture to each exhibitor buying Paramount films, Mr. Freeman said he could not "take the risk of having innumerable suits" and would be compelled to advise the company to attempt the reduction of its plant investment and the elimination of its contracts with artists so that it might produce pictures one at a time.

Gravely discussing the foreign situation, Mr. Freeman told the committee that "our business today faces the most serious crisis ever before it and I very seriously doubt that some of us will come through that crisis."

"Our foreign revenue up to a year ago," he said, "represented on an average approximately 30 per cent of the total revenue of the motion picture industry. We have already lost through currency restrictions and restriction from doing business in certain countries a portion of that 30 per cent and daily we are expecting to lose more."

Under questioning, Mr. Freeman told Representative Martin J. Kennedy (Dem., N. Y.) that no one man could define the moral code of America and that in the making of pictures, no matter under what system, there would also be questions raised as to the moral things. "If we fail in a small percentage of pictures, we should not be condemned," he contended.

Kuykendall Reads Statement

On Wednesday Edward L. Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, read a 12,000-word statement which consumed one hour and 25 minutes, blasting out at the bill and the groups supporting the measure. He charged the public groups with seeking a censorship.

Mr. Kuykendall told the committee that the title and wording of the bill were very attractive, and that all exhibitors would like to have the conditions promised, but that in actual operation the effects would be far different.

Conditions in the industry are not particularly desirable, he said, but that the bill would cure none of the evils of which the exhibitors complain and for the elimination of which his organization is working, on the theory that the only effective machinery for improvement is a selective form of contract with an adequate cancellation clause.

Jersey Opposed Committee Hears

Contesting Sidney Samuelson's claims that New Jersey exhibitors were supporting Allied's stand on the bill, William B. Stein, Hackettstown, declared the majority of theatre owners in the state do not want the measure.

Mr. Stein also "deflated" the belief of the community organizations supporting the bill that they would have any voice in selection, asserting that the various associations would be unable to agree on what should be shown.

If the bill is passed, he told the committee, "enough pictures could not or would not be made to enable us to conduct our business as we do now." The situation could be taken care of, he said, so far as the "average exhibitor who doesn't look to have it all his own way" is concerned through a minimum 20 per cent cancellation.

Bringing a new viewpoint before the committee, Miss Alice Keliher of the Progressive Education Association, New York, declared the industry was to be commended for tackling social and human problems.

She explained that her organization, supported by Rockefeller money, is engaged in studies of human relations problems and that the industry has turned over, without charge, the negatives of "socially useful" films, such as "Dr. Erlich's Magic Bullet," "Alice Adams" and many others, which are digested into shorts and used for study purposes.

PETTIJOHN ANSWERED BY MYERS AND COLE

Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors has claimed inaccuracies in the assertion by C. C. Pettijohn, during the Neely block-booking bill hearings, that Abram F. Myers and H. A. Cole in 1929 engaged in production and distribution and employed block booking and blind selling. To support his statement, Mr. Pettijohn handed committee members copies of the old Tiffany-Stahl Productions franchise. Mr. Pettijohn said Mr. Myers was referred to in the franchise as "a representative of the distributor".

The wording of the franchise was quoted by Allied to show that on the National Appeal Board, mentioned in the franchise, Mr. Myers was a representative of exhibitors and not of distributors.

The Neely bill is said to be unconstitutional and not capable of insuring the advantages claimed for it, in a study by Benjamin Werne, editor of the Annual Survey of Economic Legislation which has been published by New York University Law School in its series of Contemporary Law Pamphlets.

COMMERCIAL TELEVISION BARRED; FCC SAYS MEDIUM IS NOT READY

Industry Must Wait Until Agreement on Uniform System Is Reached; Theatre Use Seen Forbidden

The prospect of a television "boom" which some in films considered a threat to motion pictures and others in broadcasting a valuable "added attraction" for theatres was put off indefinitely Monday by the Federal Communications Commission which ruled that television was not ready for any kind of commercial operation and said permssion for such operation would not be given until the television industry adopted one uniform telecasting system.

The FCC's order restored some order to the television situation which had been chaotic following contradictory FCC orders. However the action of the Government body was not entirely satisfactory to any television group and apppeared especially unpleasant news for the Radio Corporation of America and its National Broadcasting System which have paid the principal part of the television laboratory bill to date.

A year of the FCC's television activities:

May 22, 1939—First report of the television subcommittee of the FCC dealing principally with transmission standards for television stations.

Nov. 15, 1939—Second report of the television subcommittee which made recommendations for policies and changes in regulations.

Jan., 1940—Television hearings.

Feb. 29, 1940—FCC order grants limited commercial status to begin September 1st. Refuses to set standards.

Mar. 23, 1940—Rescinds order granting limited commercialization.

Apr., 1940—New television hearings and briefs filed.

May 27, 1940—FCC postpones indefinitely commercial operation of television.

At present there are no indications that television will be used in the near future in theatres. Such public showings would certainly be considered a form of commercial operations which are forbidden by the Commission. RCA has announced that a 9 by 12 foot television system suitable for theatres will be demonstrated within a few months. Other companies have also been working on television for theatres.

Precipitated by Campaign

The eagerness of RCA to lead the way in the commercial development of television bounced back on the whole industry when the Commission announced its intention of deferring commercial operation until such time as the industry could agree upon some one system as standard.

As a result of RCA's promotional campaign of last March, which consisted chiefly of one advertisement in a few papers, the Commission scrapped entirely its order of February 29th, making provision for semi-commercial operation beginning next September 1st and authorizing the establishment of a special class of stations (Class II) which could handle sponsored programs.

Furthermore, the row between RCA, Allen B. DuMont Laboratories, a Paramount affiliate, and others over flexibility led the Commission to order that no consideration be given the fixing of standards of operation until the industry agrees upon a single system.

Charge Freeze Out

At the hearings before the Commission last month, and at a hearing before a Senate committee, Dumont charged RCA with attempting to freeze out competing systems in favor of its own and demanded that provision be made in Commission regulations for receivers that could pick up the programs sent under any of several systems under experimentation.

Discussing the position of the several antagonistic interests, the Commission, in its report, declared:

"It is essential to the program of television that there be not a mere semblance of competition, but that there be a genuine and healthy competition within an unfettered industry.

"Now, if ever, television is at the crossroad of monopoly or a healthy progressive competition. There can be no doubt as to the direction in which the Commission should, within its powers, attempt to guide it."

Hits Promotional Activities

Further, said the Commission, "contrary to the experience of other industries which have found that technical improvements were stimulated by large public use, in the television field a major portion of the industry takes the view that successful promotional activities at this time can act only as an anchor on experimental efforts to go forward."

Holding that, in order to assure to the public a television system "which is the product of comparative research on known possibilities," standards of transmission should not be set and that "there should be no commercial broadcasting with its deterring effects upon experimentation until such time as the probabilities of basic research have been fairly explored."

To aid the industry in developing basic standards which will "give definite assurance of satisfactory performance and of continuity of service for the public comparable to the continuity of service displayed in the past history of the radio industry" and which will afford within their limits reasonable flexibility for future advances in the science, the Commission is prepared to authorize broader experimental operations by existing stations and by a number of additional stations.

From applications now pending, it was said, a certain number of new stations will be authorized, apportioned among various parts of the country with a view to forestalling any concentration of facilities in particular centers of population and to provide a comparative basis for further experimentation by different systems. Among the cities in which such facilities may be licensed, it was said, are San Francisco, Los Angeles, Chicago, Washington, Albany, Cincinnati and Boston.

To Avoid "Monopoly", "Pre-emption"

However, it was warned, each of these stations must undertake a "substantial job of research," because the channels available are severely limited and must be utilized in the public interest.

"There is no room for squatters and there can be no pre-emption in this field," it was declared. "Monopoly must be avoided. Free competition is to be promoted and preserved. . . .

"It is obvious that the industry as a whole does not share the RCA view of forging ahead regardless of the untested possibilities of improvement on the horizon," the Commission commented in discussing the controversy over flexibility. "It further appears that the industry was not prepared to accept Mr. Sarnoff's premise of 'we live on obsolescence' as a basis for justifying a heavy public investment at current levels of efficiency."

To Probe FCC Procedure

The Attorney General's Committee on Administrative Procedure will hold hearings during June and July at which procedure policies of the FCC are scheduled to be studied. For a year the committee has been studying Government agencies, including the FCC, for the purpose of working out reforms held necessary to curb the growing power exercised by the so-called independent agencies.

In the report on the FCC the committee appointed by the Attorney General commended the Commission's efforts to withstand Congressional lobbying but criticized many of the practices followed in the handling of applications for broadcasting facilities.

COLOR TELEVISION PATENTS OBTAINED

A patent on what is said to be a greatly simplified system for the transmission and reception of television images in natural colors using only a single cathode ray tube in the receiver has been issued to Robert Lorenzen. Most systems demonstrated up to now have used three tubes. In the Lorenzen system the transmitter has a photo-electric screen which is divided into three sections, sensitive to red, green and blue.

A patent has also been allowed to Mr. Lorenzen for a simple cathode ray tube system for use in television which is said to provide for increased intensity of the scanning beam resulting in a more brilliant picture.

George H. Callaghan, who with Mr. Lorenzen is interested in marketing these patents, said the two systems were readily adaptable for use in the present receivers.

RECORD ADVERTISING BUDGET SET

J. H. MacIntyre. Mr. Depinet announced increases in sales, billings and shipments for this season over last. In the number of contracts Los Angeles, N. P. Jacobs; the northwestern district, Herb MacIntyre and the western division, Cresson E. Smith, sales manager, led. In billings top honors went to Milwaukee, A. N. Schmitz, manager; midwestern division, Walter Branson and the Canada division. In film shipments Calgary and the northeastern district had the greatest increases.

Monday afternoon after Mr. Depinet outlined the new product studio representatives, J. J. Nolan and Perry Lieber spoke. Other speakers were S. Barret McCormick, director of advertising and publicity and exploitation and Roy Disney, Hal Horne and Kay Kamen, of Disney; Frank Donovan and Walter Ament of Pathe and John Wood, Louis DeRochemont and Al Sindlinger of the March of Time.

S. Barret McCormick announced that the RKO advertising budget for the new season would be the greatest in the company's history, with all big productions presold to the public. "Advertising is an essential part of the show business, as vital and important as actors, directors and stories."

He pointed out that the present world situation makes it necessary that domestic grosses be raised. "There must be a rebirth of showmanship and salesmanship in theatre operation and all of us must help bring that about."

Sales Policy Explained

On Tuesday the new sales policy was explained by Ned E. Depinet and H. J. Michalson. Phil Reisman spoke on the foreign distribution problems and Mr. Schaefer gave his address. Effects of the war on the film industry received special attention. In his opening speech Mr. Schaefer had drawn attention to the work of the men in the countries at war, Reginald Armour, European general sales manager and Ralph Hanbury, managing director for the United Kingdom and their staffs.

Phil Reisman, vice-president in charge of foreign distribution, said, "even in non-belligerent countries the film industry will find it hard going. The expense of rearmaments which most of them are undergoing will cut off a great deal of foreign exchange formerly available to the film industry."

The opening of a RKO office in Puerto Rico, with Ned Seckler as manager, was also announced. Medal Film Exchange formerly distributed RKO product in that territory.

RKO TO HAVE ITS OWN GALLUP POLL

George J. Schaefer, president of RKO, announced Monday that arrangements have been made for the exclusive services in the motion picture field of Audience Research Institute, a new unit of the Dr. George Gallup organization, under the direction of David Ogilvy. A scientific study of the motion picture public and tastes, habits and interests of patrons will be made with the purpose of assisting and guiding the studio in its selection of stories, casts and titles. Headquarters for the organization will be at Princeton, N. J.

Audience Research Institute is entirely separate from the American Institute of Public Opinion which conducts the "Gallup Polls" which appear in newspapers that subscribe to the service. The Institute, at the suggestion of Samuel Goldwyn, is currently engaged in preparing a survey on the double feature problem.

SEC Challenges Claims on RKO

A "drastic reduction" in allowances petitioned in the RKO reorganization proceedings, was sought from Federal Judge William Bondy in New York on Tuesday by the Securities and Exchange Commission, proceeding under the Chandler Act. The requested reduction in claims would bring the total from $2,025,214, to a maximum of $600,000. The Chandler Act provides for SEC recommendations to the court in all hearings on allowances in reorganizations.

Atlas Stock Not Included

The $600,000 maximum does not include the Atlas Corporation's request for 100,000 shares of RKO common stock, it was said by Marland Gale, attorney for the SEC. The Atlas Corporation is the reorganization plan's proponent.

Judge Bondy will again consider allowances on June 18th when a study by Thomas Finletter, RKO attorney, of petitions and expense vouchers will be submitted.

In asking the reductions, Mr. Gale stressed RKO's present finances, and said the SEC's study of the petitions and of court and financial records had convinced him the firm could not pay more than $600,000 in claims.

The SEC report was preceded by listing of services rendered by each of 28 petitioners. The Atlas Corporation asked for approximately $850,000, for expenditures. This petition was particularly assailed by Mr. Gale, who said Atlas was not privileged to ask for reimbursement for payments to Leo Spitz, W. J. Merrill, and Rathvon and Company, because they were made solely to better Atlas' investment in RKO.

NEWSPAPER CRITICS 69 PER CENT WRONG ON FILMS, SURVEY SHOWS

by JAMES D. IVERS

Critical opinion of motion pictures as expressed in metropolitan newspapers corresponds with the vote of the public as expressed at the box office only 16 per cent of the time; the critics are approximately right another 15 per cent, and they are very wrong 69 per cent of the time. Also, their cumulative errors are on the side of overstatement, their average rating of a picture being 72 per cent while the box office evaluation measured by the same scale is only 51 per cent.

The percentages here are evolved from the accompanying table showing the comparative ratings by the critics and by the public on 61 pictures.

It may be parenthetically observed that no matter what rates now show in this table, Hollywood at some time in the history of each production project considered it, and intended it, to be a hundred percent enterment prospect.

Four "Best" Are Low

The ratings of critics and public coincide exactly in ten instances and in nine others they are close enough to be within a margin for error, but for the remaining 42 the differences range all the way to the extremes of the scale.

When the reviewers were wrong, the chart shows, they were very wrong and when they were right they were only approximately so. Four pictures on which they opened full throttle, using the best-picture-of-this-or-any-year technique, appear among the 12 lowest in the box office ratings. They are "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," "Grapes of Wrath," "Of Mice and Men" and "Pinocchio." These also were four of the nine which received a 100 per cent rating from the critics. Of the remaining five, "Goodbye Mr. Chips" and "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" were rated at 100 per cent at the box office as well, "Pygmalion" and "Wuthering Heights" 75 per cent, and "Dark Victory" 70 per cent.

Also favorites of the critics were "Intermezzo," "The Lion Has Wings," "Rulers of the Sea," "Nurse Edith Cavell" and "We Are Not Alone." These five are among the next lowest group of six in the public's percentages.

"Pictures with a Message"

Four of these critics' darlings are among the six pictures classified under Note d in the list as "pictures with a message." They are "Grapes of Wrath," "Of Mice and Men," "The Lion Has Wings" and "Nurse Edith Cavell." The other two, "Golden Boy" and "The Rains Came" require special note.

"Golden Boy," as written for the stage by Clifford Odets was an expression of that writer's theme of futility and carried much of his philosophy in its lines. When the motion picture version was made it was decided to soften this considerably, chiefly by radically changing the ending. The critics rose in a solid front of protest against what they implied was a desecration of a powerful stage drama. As for instance:

Howard Barnes, Herald-Tribune: "A happy ending which does much to negate the whole theme. . . ."

Eileen Creelman, Sun: " . . . weakened by the prettified ending."

Frank Nugent, Times: "Interesting . . . but scarcely a first rate motion picture."

William Boehnel, Telegram: "The happy

Press Critics' Opinions Compared With Box Office Performances

The ratings given for reviews and for box-office performances are based on a percentage scale, applied with equal weights to both subjects. In computing the critics' ratings each reviewer's opinion of each picture was given a value and a mean taken for the final rating for the chart. They were compiled from reviews appearing in the New York Times, Herald-Tribune, Daily News, Sun, World-Telegram, Post and Journal-American. The box-office performance ratings were computed on a comparative basis from actual receipts in a large circuit operating houses in important population centers and in smaller towns and rural situations.

ending takes most of the bitterness and futility out of Mr. Odets' fine drama."

Even Kate Cameron of the Daily News who adheres to a star rating and a reportorial review said, "Accurately transferred to the screen except for the changed ending." Miss Cameron's paper sponsors annually the "Golden Gloves" tournament.

With the changed and happy ending the film received a box office rating of 95 to the 50 accorded it by the critics.

Nugent Objection Cited

In the case of "The Rains Came" Mr. Nugent of the Times objected vigorously to the romantic extract which he said the studio had made of Louis Bromfield's novel of social progress in India, although some literary critics might quarrel with what Mr. Nugent read into the novel. He said, "The film is the merest skeleton of the Bromfield work and that not too well reassembled. . . . It is completely a romance, not the composite biography-romance-social treatise which became a best seller."

On the positive side the critics' score is slightly better. Of the 12 highest grossing pictures in the list they called the turn on six, "Goodbye Mr. Chips," "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," "Drums Along the Mohawk," "The Old Maid," "The Real Glory" and "That's Right, You're Wrong." On four, in the words of Mr. Chamberlain, they missed the bus. These were "Babes in Arms," "Golden Boy," "The Great Victor Herbert" and "Hunchback of Notre Dame." The reviewers quarrelled with all of them on esoteric grounds which the public entirely failed to discover. On the remaining two, "Fighting 69th" and "His Girl Friday" they were lukewarm but reasonably close.

Review's Influence Shown

In considering the results the not inconsiderable influence of the reviews themselves on theatre attendance, especially in the New York area, must not be ignored. This is especially true in the case of foreign pictures, many of which are hailed enthusiastically in the press. When they are so received they are consistently successful at the box office but, since no basis of comparison is possible between the receipts of such pictures at the few theatres which play them in New York and the grosses totalled by the releases of a major distributor, they were not included in the study.

Recent examples have been "The Baker's Wife," "Harvest," "The Human Beast," and "Port of Shadows." These were mentioned by all the critics as outstanding and by several of them on numerous occasions as among the best of the year, American or foreign. All four subsequently made record runs at independent "art" theatres in New York and other metropolitan centers.

More remote are "Grand Illusion" and "Mayerling," both of which received high critical acclaim and both of which were booked by major circuits where they made substantial showings.

That the critics are seldom in complete agreement on condemning a picture is reflected in the chart by the scarcity of low ratings in the reviewers' column. For the most part they are in substantial agreement when their opinions are favorable. When they differ there is a sharp division usually between the writers for the Times and the Herald-Tribune, supported in some cases by the Sun and World-Telegram, and the reviews appearing in the Daily News and the Journal-American.

Because of the special circumstances of exploitation and selling methods surrounding "Gone With the Wind" it was not included in the study. It was accepted unanimously by the critics as one of Hollywood's greatest and it set new and unusual box office records.

Pettey Successor Shortly

The appointment of a successor to Tom Pettey, former press agent for the Association of Motion Picture Producers, Hollywood, is expected to be made when Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, arrives on the Coast June 15th for his annual summer visit. Mr. Pettey resigned last week to become Hollywood correspondent for the forthcoming PM.

Compares Appeal of Motion Pictures

Mrs. J. Marion Reece, chairman of the division of motion pictures of the Pennsylvania Federation of Women's Clubs in a talk last week before the Bloomsburg, Pa., chapter of the American Association of University Women, said that for every person who reads a book, 100 go to the motion pictures; for every person who goes to a concert, 10,000 go to the motion pictures, and for every person who goes to an art gallery, 100,000 go to the motion pictures.

GROSSES FALL IN EASTERN CANADA AS FEAR OF AIR RAIDS SPREADS

Theatres Study War Insurance While Audiences Listen to Radio News; Plans Set for National Clearance Board

The gravity of the war situation in Europe has reduced attendance at motion picture theatres in the eastern provinces of Canada where people, realizing their relative proximity and vulnerability to German attack follow the radio news with intense interest and growing alarm. Serious consideration is being given to air raid insurance for theatres, partcularly those in the seaports of St. John, Halifax, Sydney, North Sydney, Pictou, Yarmouth, St. Andrews, Lunenburg, Liverpool, Dartmouth and Digby. Some exhibitors have been cutting off their screen programs to insert radio news as a means of competing with radio in the home.

Clearance Board Supported

Also of much import in the week's trade news in Canada was the unanimous support all branches of the Canadian film industry gave to a resolution calling for the establishment of a national clearance board in the Dominion "for the purpose of establishing a fair deal for all parties in the matter of priority and clearance." The decision was taken at a meeting in Toronto of the Motion Picture Section of the Toronto Board of Trade.

Louis Rosenfeld of Columbia moved the resolution, and J. J. Fitzgibbons, vice-president of Famous Players Canadian, seconded the motion.

As planned, the board will consist of two representatives of the circuits, two of the distributors and four of unaffiliated theatres. The groups are expected to name their representatives before the end of next week. The decision also provides for district boards in exchange centers to deal with priority and clearance under the rules framed by the national board, with headquarters in Toronto. Any district board decision is binding on the parties concerned, subject to appeal to the national board for which a $25 fee is to be charged.

Organization of the local boards will follow immediately after the appointment of the national board personnel. Annual meetings will be held in June of each year.

Local Nuisance Taxes Dropped

In the plan for reorganization of the public financing system of Canada, proposed in the report of the Royal Commission on Dominion-Provincial Relations and now before the House of Commons, nuisance taxes, such as the gasoline, amusement and sales levies, are to be eliminated by provincial and municipal governments which will, however, continue to impose license fees and real estate imposts.

The Dominion proposes to establish a definite system of corporation tax which would replace the many levies from Federal, provincial and civic governments on incorporated companies, income, gross profit, dividends, business turnover, branch establishments, chains, payment to foreign offices and other details of operation. The government proposes to have the exclusive right of taxation on private incomes in a move to simplify the whole tax situation. Because of the loss of revenue to provinces and cities, the unemployment relief, social services and other heavy charges will be assumed by the Federal authority.

The proposal for concentration of all forms of corporation tax under Federal control and the elimination of nuisance taxation has met with enthusiastic response among film distributors, theatre circuit executives and exhibitors generally because of the prospect of financial economy for all parties concerned, including the government.

WALKER ASKS FOR SELF-GOVERNMENT

"The Government cannot legislate for showmanship," former New York Mayor James J. Walker declared, in an address, Thursday, May 23rd, at the regular bi-weekly luncheon of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, New York, in which he repeatedly assailed Governmental "interference" in the film industry, said that a reorganization of the industry was necessary, and appealed for self-government and conciliation in the industry.

"The industry is not as flexible as it could be, for its own good," he remarked.

Famous Players Officers Visit Maritime Provinces

by VICTOR SERVICE

in St. John, N. B.

Three problems were given attention by N. L. Nathanson, president; J. J. Fitzgibbons, vice-president and general manager, and B. Geldsaler, program manager, of Famous Players Canadian Corporation, in their first joint tour of the maritime provinces, and first visit of Mr. Nathanson.

The problems were Bill 92, aimed at drastic control of picture distribution in Nova Scotia, and which has remained on the books despite an exhibitor-distributor campaign for repeal; the fact that Capitol, St. John, and Capitol, Halifax, the biggest houses in the maritime end of the circuit of about 200 theatres have continued to operate at a loss, and expansion of theatre operations by the company on the Atlantic. They also inspected a site for a new theatre in Moncton.

The vital problem is that involved in the legislation, passed at the 1939 session and giving arbitrary powers to the provincial censor board in the distribution of pictures and providing heavy fines for infractions as well as license fees. A conciliation board is now funtioning, pending enforcement of the law, and all distributors insert a clause in each contract with exhibitors, nullifying the contract if and when the law is enforced.

Select Location for Canadian Production

by E. S. ROBERTS

in Vancouver, B. C.

Michael Powell, producer from Denham studios, England, was a recent visitor to British Columbia, selecting locations for a Canadian production to be made this Summer. Emeric Pressburger, who wrote the screen stories for "U-Boat 29" and "Contraband," will prepare the scenario for the forthcoming production. Alfred Seabourne, film editor, is remaining in Canada to complete arrangements while the rest of the party, including Roland Gillett, associate producer, returns to England.

Scenes will be taken in a number of locations across Canada, using at least 12 English actors and actresses, with shooting scheduled to start in July. Interiors will be made in the English studios.

Following close on this visit came that of a Canadian production unit, working on one of the "Canada at War" series of short subjects for theatrical distribution, produced by the National Film Board. Cameraman Ross Beesley and Director Gordon Sparling of Associated Screen News, Montreal, made a number of British Columbia scenes for "Peoples of Canada," which will be an impressionistic historical record of the pioneering immigrant groups who now make up the peoples of the Canadian nation.

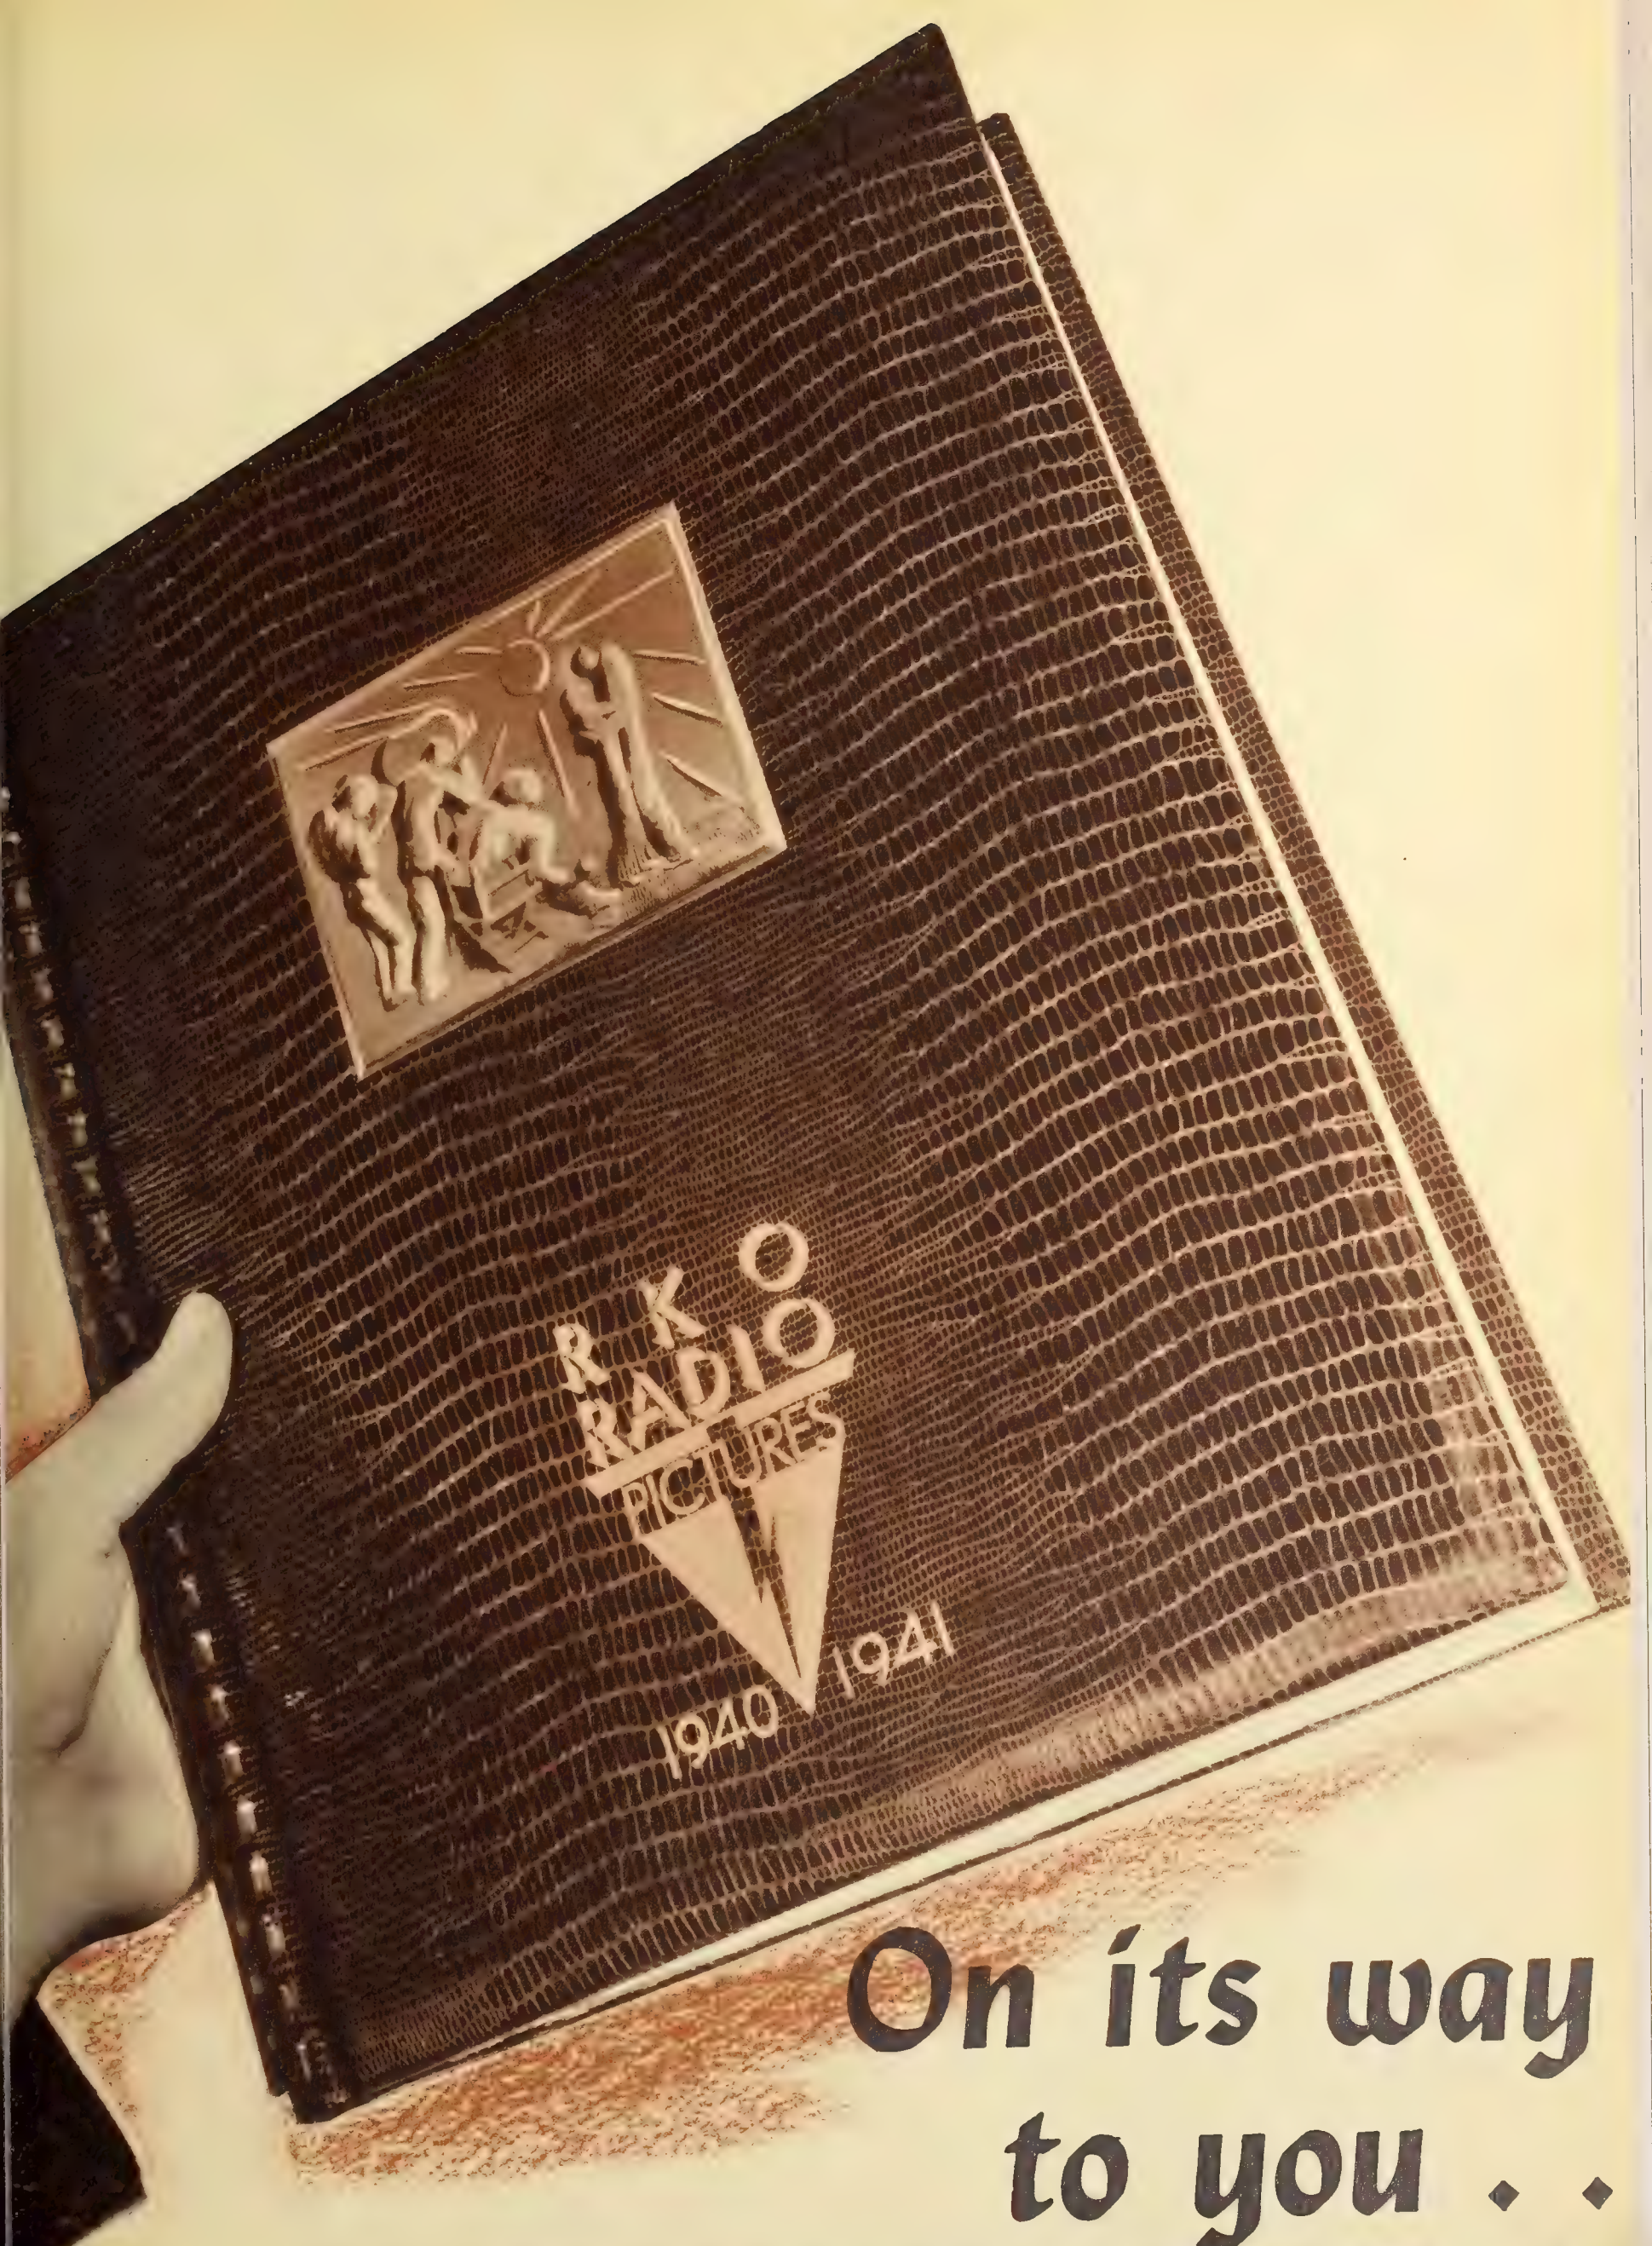
Gasoline Strike Settled

Theatre owners and managers breathed a sigh of relief when the gasoline "strike" in British Columbia was settled. Gasoline distributors and refiners went on strike for seven days against price regulation orders of the British Columbia government, cutting off all supplies to retail service stations, thus curtailing movement of cars.

Effect of the "strike" was to reduce theatre attendance, particularly for the larger downtown houses, an estimated 10 to 15 percent. An armistice was reached at the end of the seven days, and supplies were immediately made available. The provincial government won the argument, secured a three-cent reduction in retail prices for gas.

The last stand of stock companies and legitimate performances in Vancouver is doomed. The Empress Theatre, one of the oldest theatre properties in the city has been sold to a food market chain and will be razed later in the year to make way for new market premises.

Lew Maren, recently appointed as representative for RKO to the Pacific Northwest, paid his first official visit to Vancouver and Victoria last week. He reported generally fair business throughout the Northwest.



Ontario Theatre Openings

A report issued by the Provincial Government shows that 21 theatres have been built in Ontario in the 12 months ending May 31st, the net increase being 19 with a total of 391 theatres in operation. The totals for preceding years were: 1939, 372; 1938, 354; and 1937, 329.

The number of public halls in which entertainment and transient film shows are presented has shown a steady decline. The licensed halls in 1937 totalled 3,344 but the total has dropped to 2,554, the decrease in the past year being 182. The total of licenses for recent years also has declined, the number now standing at 133 as compared with 234 one year ago and 326 in 1937.

The lid is to be clamped down on gambling in Cornwall, Ont., Saturday, June 1st, according to police authorities, bringing to an end three years of unrestrained games of chance. An average of five public Bingo games have been held in Cornwall each week, each drawing crowds up to 2,500.

Empire-Universal Films, Ltd., will hold its annual sales convention in Toronto about June 15th when branch managers and salemen will hear talks by Universal and Republic executives from the United States and an outline of British releases for the coming season. Preparations are in the hands of Oscar Hanson, president; Paul Nathanson, vice-president, and Clair Hague, who attended the Universal convention in Atlantic city.

REPUBLIC ANNOUNCES 58 FEATURES FOR 1940-41, INCREASE OF EIGHT

Feature Schedule Changed to Include Two Autry Singing Westerns in Top Bracket; Don Barry Has Eight

Republic Pictures Corporation steps into its sixth year with an announced schedule of 58 features and four serials for the 1940-41 season, an increase of eight features over that announced for the season now closing, James R. Grainger, president, told the company's Pacific Coast sales convention in San Francisco which opened Tuesday.

Other executives attending the two day meeting were Herbert J. Yates, president ot Consolidated Film Industries, and M. J. Siegel, president of Republic Productions. Franchise holders and branch managers from the West attended.

The company this week bought up the Republic franchises and exchanges of Herman Gluckman in New York and Philadelphia. Mr. Gluckman will continue in charge of both offices.

"Productions will be generally higher throughout the entire program, with a strong effort to deliver star names in pre-sold attractions," it was announced.

With Republic releasing four "DeLuxe," six "Anniversary" and 16 "Jubilee" productions, the "regular" feature line-up will remain the same as in the past season, except for one change, which provides for the inclusion of two Gene Autry musical westerns.

Western Program Changed

However, the western program will be changed to include eight Don (Red) Barry westerns, in addition to six Gene Autry productions, eight Roy Rogers westerns, and eight Three Mesquiteers westerns.

Republic's serial set-up will again feature two "Super" and two "Stream-line" serials.

Heading the new season's "DeLuxe" productions are "Lady From New Orleans," a Beth Brown story, of the gayest city in the world; "Hit Parade of 1941," a musical; "Soldiers Of Fortune," a Richard Harding Davis story, and "Thunder Over Alaska," a story of Alaska by Rex Beach.

Kyne story, and "Roaring Forties," by Nat Ferber, are announced as the six "Anniversary" productions.

Two Autry Specials

The two Gene Autry "Special Premiere" productions picked for top release are to be "Melody Ranch," the title from Autry's radio show, and "Down Mexico Way," a story by Jack Moffitt, with radio and screen stars.

The 16 "Jubilee" productions announced are "The Imposter"; "Barnyard Follies," a rural musical; "The Girl From Frisco," by Medora Field; "Black Beauty," the Ann Sewell novel; "Doctors Don't Tell," a Liberty magazine story; "Meet The Missus," a Higgins Family film; "Friendly Neighbors," starring Weaver Brothers and Elviry; "Moon Over Mulberry Street," from the stage play; "Ten Nights in a Barroom," a modernized version by William W. Pratt; "Bowery Boy," "Arkansas Judge," starring Weaver Brothers and Elviry; "Petticoat Politics," a Higgins Family film; "Notorious Lady," from the headlines; "Honeymoon Isle," about the much publicized isle, and "Old Gray Mare," starring Weaver Brothers and Elviry.

"Old Mill Stream," "Ride Tenderfoot Ride," "Valley of the Moon," "Song at Twilight," "Under Fiesta Stars," and "Old Faithful" are the 'hit-tune' titles of the six Gene Autry "Supreme" productions.

The eight westerns in the Roy Rogers group, featuring stories of the west, will be "Colorado," "Border Legion," "Young Bill Hickock," "Robin Hood of the Pecos," "Custer's Last Stand," "In Old Cheyenne," "Sheriff of Tombstone," and "Nevada City."

Bob Livingston, Raymond Hatton and Duncan Renaldo, the "Three Mesquiteers," will be seen in "Oklahoma Outlaws," "Arizona Skies," "Texas Trail Blazers," "Phantom Raiders," "Gaucho of Eldorado," "Raiders of the Alamo," "The Old Spanish Trail," and "Code of the Desert."

Barry in Eight

The new Don (Red) Barry series of eight westerns are to be "Tulsa Kid," "Frontier Vengeance," "Two Gun Sheriff," "Texas Terror," "Wyoming Wildcat," "Desert Bandit," "Kansas Cyclone," and "Bad Man From Rio."

"Superman" and "Dick Tracy Strikes Again," to follow the previous Dick Tracy's releases, are the two serials in the 15-episode "Super Serial" group, with "Jungle Girl," and the comic strip, "King of the Royal Mounted," in the "Streamline" grouping of 12 episodes each.

FILMS HALTED FOR "FIRESIDE CHAT"

A. H. Blank, president of Tri-States and Central States Theatres Corporation, according to word from Des Moines, issued an order to the managers of more than 100 theatres in the circuit in Iowa and Nebraska to stop the projection machines when President Franklin D. Roosevelt delivered his "Fireside Chat" Sunday night and tune in on the address over the theatres' loud speakers.

Oklahoma Variety Opens; Dallas Budget, $75,000

John H. Harris, chief barker for the Variety clubs, will go to Oklahoma City for the opening of the local club. He will be accompanied by James G. Balmer, national dough guy. R. J. "Bob" O'Donnell, Dallas chief barker, will be the principal speaker.

The Pittsburgh Variety Club's traveling theatre will present film shows to shut-ins in various hospitals and homes during the next five weeks.

The Dallas Variety Club has set up a $75,000 fund to further their charitable efforts. The latest activities of the club include the construction of a swimming pool in Sullivan Park for the use of underprivileged children.

Meanwhile in Cincinnati, Ohio, approximately 500 attended the seventh annual dinner-dance of the Cincinnati Variety Club in the Netherlands Plaza hotel, proceeds of which will go to the Club's charity fund.

Government Files Bill in Nashville; Two Adjournments

The Federal Government this week filed an incomplete bill of particulars in Nashville district court in its anti-trust suit against the Crescent Amusement Company and major distributors in response to motions of the defendants and in accordance with the order of the court entered February 23rd.

"Information Not Available"

The Government bill stated in several instances that it was not able "to supply the information requested at this time," and reserved the right "to serve upon the defendants such other and further particulars as may subsequently come within its knowledge."

The Government also admitted that it was unable to furnish a complete list of theatre operators whose competition was "restrained, suppressed or eliminated." However, the bill listed 19 exhibitors with 30 theatres in Tennessee, Kentucky, Albama and North Carolina and in each instance cited what is purported to be "distress methods and manners employed" in the relations of these theatres with distributors.

List Is Incomplete

Also, in what was admitted to be an incomplete list, the bill named 12 independent exhibitors in the four states who were said to have "received less favorable privileges of selection" in the buying of films, and in another list named several theatres which, it was charged, had been forced out of business as a result of the alleged treatment.

The Crescent case has not yet been placed on the court trial calendar in Nashville since no answers to the Government's bill of complaint were required of the defendants pending the filing by the Government of its bill of particulars.

Postpone Philadelphia Case

The Admiral theatre, Philadelphia, anti-trust suit against Warner Theatres there and major distributors scheduled for trial in federal court there starting this Tuesday has been postponed indefinitely.

It is rumored that an out-of-court settlement will be made, although both Morris Wolf, attorney for Warners, and Irving A. Winegrad, attorney for Reubin Shapiro and Harub Amusement Corporation, operating the Admiral, denied such a move is intended. They said the reason for delay is that many who have been subpoenaed as witnesses, have been called to New York in the Government anti-trust trial which starts Monday.

The Admiral charges monopolistic practices in cutting off the theatre's product when it tried to cut admissions to compete with circuit theatres.

Grant Time in Missouri

The federal court at St. Joseph, Mo., has granted major distributors and the Dubinsky Brothers circuit, defendants in the suit of Frank Cassil of the Rialto there for damages of $450,000 to June 11th in which to file their answer.

PARAMOUNT LOOKS TO PERCENTAGE SALES TO BALANCE FOREIGN LOSSES

Los Angeles Convention Hears Plans for 44 to 50; New Exploitation, Selling Effort Urged to Boost Revenue

Clipping its 1940-41 commitment from last year's 52 features to 44 to 50, all "A's," Paramount's management, last weekend, declared itself embarked upon an intensified policy of "sales to—and for—exhibitors." Paramount's feature and short subjects programs were detailed in MOTION PICTURE HERALD last week on pages 35-36, prior to announcements at the company's annual sales convention in Hollywood.

Revenue Increase Sought

Elimination of "B" pictures in anticipation of a predicted elimination of dual billing, contraction of foreign revenues and necessity of expanding domestic receipts were basic factors in formulation of a two-edged selling effort expected to increase the proportion of percentage deals for exhibition of the company's product and the number of potential ticket-buyers to make them profitable.

No sunkissed California blooms littered the Fiesta Room of Los Angeles' Ambassador Hotel where 125 division, district and branch managers heard the new season's news from grim lips of stern Paramount executives, and no side trips to Catalina or 'Frisco's Fair relieved the tension of closed sessions carrying steadily through the three days of the war-conscious convention.

Instead, delegates heard Paramount's president, Barney Balaban, declare:

"The largest part of my business life has been spent in exhibition, and I know just enough about that phase of our business to know that the exhibitor has had and will continue to have the long end of the stick, and that's that. But this cannot continue to be a buyer's market. The scales will have to be tilted slightly in favor of the producer, and that does not mean starting a war between distribution and exhibition. It does mean that those boys who have turned their businesses over to their general managers or bookers, who are too busy to see pictures, to apply the showmanship and desire to work which they must have had to have built their institutions, will have to go to work again, paying us just prices and giving our productions proper playing time.

New Selling Basis Seen

"I told you last year," they heard him continue, "that we were approaching the time when film would be sold on a basis different than in in the past, and that the present method of selling would be scrapped. I believe that we are just a year closer to that time.

"This is a time when a natural impulse is to reduce investments in product. Instead of running to cover, Paramount is shooting the works. Fortunately, our company at this time is in a position where it does not have to do anything panicky," he added.

From Neil F. Agnew, vice-president in charge of sales, delegates heard, in separate divisional meetings and in full session, all closed to the press, reasons why the company felt justified in expecting Mr. Balaban's demand for increased domestic receipts to be met by the sales force. They were told that the 44 to 50 pictures on the new program would cost no less to produce than the 52 offered for 1939-40, that they would average $100,000 more per picture, budget-wise, and that elimination of the B type picture, commonly sold on flat terms, would result in closing of more percentage contracts which would command longer runs and preferred playdates.

Further reasons for expecting increased revenues from domestic exhibition were supplied by Robert M. Gillham, director of advertising and publicity, who told the delegates on Saturday that this year's advertising appropriation would match last year's $2,000,000, dollar for dollar, and that a staff of field exploitation men would be added for the purpose to stimulate theatre attendance by intensified campaigning at the point of box office contact.

To Augment Field Staff

Following up successes achieved last year by sending exploitation men from home office and studio into the field to handle premieres and openings, Mr. Gillham said, he will appoint an exploiteer for permanent duty in each of the company's eight divisions, giving those in the larger divisions an assistant each. These men will be instructed to work with the division managers, cooperate with exhibitors both directly and through dissemination of exploitation information to exhibitors by salesmen, most frequent immediate contact, according to the Gillham plan. They will be under direct supervision of Alec Moss, in charge of exploitation, and will make quarterly trips to Hollywood to acquire early familiarity with product in manufacture for purposes of planning exploitation.

"We plan to concentrate our large advertising budget in newspapers," Mr. Gillham told the delegates, "which experience has shown us brings a maximum of return for each dollar of expenditure. We will go into magazines only when a picture especially lends itself to this type of national advertising."

Mr. Gillham also pointed out to delegates that Paramount's 1940-41 product would be extensively exploited by radio, Jack Benny, Fred Allen, Bing Crosby and Bob Hope, all starred in Paramount pictures, having their own programs, and several other personalities which he named going on the air at appropriate intervals.

Delegates heard Y. Frank Freeman, vice president in charge of studio operations, predict elimination of dual billing as a natural consequence of current developments.

"There must come a greater contribution in exhibitor effort," he went on. "In the past, some of them (exhibitors) have been too prone to accept pre-sold packages. They took our advance publicity, advertising and exploitation efforts and gave nothing in return. They merely advertised in the most meager way the fact that they had two top pictures at their house and waited for the audience to come in.

Greater Effort Urged

"Those days have changed. We in production, you in the field, and the exhibitors who show our product, must display greater effort. You must drive, and constantly drive, to give to production the revenue we need so that we can continue to give you the pictures you want. And the exhibitors are going to have to make an increased drive for business themselves."

Early on the first day of the convention John W. Hicks, Jr., vice-president in charge of foreign operations, had painted a grim picture of conditions overseas.

"We are still in business," he told them, "and still working" but "the war is a terrible thing. Some of our employees in belligerent lands have been killed at their posts. But we are maintaining our organization so that when peace comes again we will be ready to step in and rehabilitate our business."

Total Loss Seen

Of foreign revenues Mr. Hicks said, "From a market that brings in from $12,000,000 to $15,000,000 in normal times we cannot definitely say whether we will get one-fourth, one-tenth or any part of that—even a penny."

Other speakers included William LeBaron, chief of production; Adolph Zukor, chairman of the board; Joseph J. Unger, eastern and Canadian division sales manager; Charles M. Reagan, western division sales manager; O. A. Morgan.

Short talks on distribution problems in their territories were made by Alvaro Reyes, manager for Colombia; Frank Kennebeck, general manager for India, and Arthur L. Pratchett, general manager for Cuba, Mexico and Central America.

A. M. Botsford, executive assistant to Mr. LeBaron; Arthur Hornblow, Jr., Mark Sandrich, Anthony Veiller, William A. Wellman, Harry Sherman and Boris Morros also spoke.

The following salesmen and booking managers were elected to the "100% Club" for 1940: Eastern division—George Beattie, Philadelphia; Tom Duane, Boston; George Elmo, Pittsburgh; Edward V. Maloney, Boston; Welden A. Waters, Albany; Canada—Thomas F. Dowbiggin, Montreal; Southern division—Albert Duren, Atlanta; James C. Goodson, Jr., Atlanta; Arthur F. Larned, Dallas; Western division—Ben F. Elrod, Chicago; John R. Fritcher, Minneapolis; Glenn H. Haviland, Seattle; Chester A. Roeder, St. Louis; Hilland E. Stuckey, Detroit, and Alfred Taylor, San Francisco.

Delegates departed Los Angeles aboard a special train Sunday, May 26th at 9:30 P.M.

COLUMBIA SETS TWO REGIONALS IN JUNE

Columbia Pictures, last of the ten principal distributors to set dates for 1940 sales conventions, last Friday announced two regional meetings, one in Chicago at the Blackstone Hotel, June 4th-7th and the other in Atlantic City, June 11th-14th. Finding itself faced with the actuality of a practically non-existent foreign market, the necessity of underwriting its product on the basis of domestic returns, Hollywood, this week and for many to come, by all indications, is digging deep to unearth new selling approaches.

One of the first indications of the trend has been the revival of "sepia blue" in film prints, the process currently being used in Samuel Goldwyn's "The Westerner." Formerly used in certain sequences by Douglas Fairbanks, the process was dropped with the coming of sound, according to Gregg Toland, Goldwyn cinematographer, because it affected the sound.

Recently, however, a revised process was worked out by Mr. Toland in conjunction with the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer laboratories. Costing two-tenths of a cent extra per foot, the process calls for the development of the film to be a "shade weaker" than normally. The film then goes through an extra bath which bleaches out the silver, leaving a faint image. Another bath is then used which replaces the silver with iranium and copper, providing blue and brown tones.

Differing from conventional sepia as it appears on the screen in that the blue tone provides depth as well as tint to background, the process will also be used in "The Westerner" trailers.

"The Melody Maker," a musical feature, will be released by Hoffberg Productions, Inc., June 1. The picture will introduce six new song numbers, "The Best Thing in Life," "Love's a Racketeer," "The Minstrel Boy," "When Loves Are So Many," "I Love the Moon" and "McDougal, McNab and McKay." In addition three dance tunes will be played, "Moonlight Madonna," "Sweet Muchacha" and "Tango Town."

Negotiations with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for the re-adaptation to the screen of "Rio Rita" will be started next week by Harry Tierney, composer of the original musical score of that production and of "Irene," "Kid Boots" and several of the Ziegfeld "Follies." His plans call for the appearance in the remake of Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy. Mr. Tierney also plans a musical production of "Beau Brummel" for Broadway this Fall with Maurice Evans in the title role and with a film version to follow.

LEMONS TO HOPPER

Recently completed by Hollywood's Hedda Hopper, film columnist and actress, both in the media of pictures and radio, has been a series of radio programs for the Sunkist fruit enterprises, devoted to the exchange or barter system.

Miss Hopper's thrice-weekly 15-minute broadcasts, from April 8th to May 1st, were given over to the project as an experiment. For that period, she offered 12 gladioli bulbs in exchange for each letter received containing one dime and the wrappers of six Sunkist lemons.

The response, in Hollywood terms, was terrific. In the three weeks, 118,000 letters were received, containing 120,720 dimes, and representing, by the enclosed wrappers, the consumption of 60,350 dozen lemons. 1,207,000 bulbs were sent out.

Miss Parsons was reported ill during the period. Miss Hopper's program is continuing, sans offers.

JEANETTE MACDONALD is slated for the lead in a musical version of "Smilin' Through" at Metro-Golden-Mayer.

LOU EDELMAN has set "School for Soldiers" as his first Twentieth Century-Fox production.

GEORGE BRENT has been set to co-star with GERALDINE FITZGERALD in "You Can't Escape Forever" for Warner Brothers.

CLARK GABLE and ROBERT TAYLOR will co-star for the first time in "Osborne of Sing Sing" for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

ABEM FINKEL has started work on the screen play of "The Dealer's Name Was George" for Warner Brothers.

ALBERT DEKKER was assigned to one of the top roles with WILLIAM HOLDEN and MARIA OUSPENSKAYA in "Birth of a Hero" for Paramount.

LOUIS HAYWARD has been signed to a two-picture deal by RKO Radio, following his work in "Dance, Girl, Dance."

JANE MURFIN is working on the screen play of "Tree of Liberty" for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

KEYE LUKE has been signed by Monogram to play the male lead in a series of Hugh Wiley detective stories.

LESTER COLE and FRED NIBLO, JR., are working on the screen play of "Bad Boy" for Warner Brothers.

KAY FRANCIS has been signed to a two-picture commitment by RKO Radio. She will first appear in "Little Men."

ELSA BASSERMAN has been signed to a term contract at Warner Brothers.

OLIVIA DE HAVILLAND and JEFFREY LEE will portray the title character and Edgar Allen Poe, respectively, in Warners' "The Romance of Annabel Lee."

JAMES ELLISON is set for the male lead, opposite KAY FRANCIS, in "Debutantes, Inc.," for RKO Radio.

HERBERT MARSHALL and JAMES STEPHENSON have been assigned to the two male leads, opposite BETTE DAVIS, in "The Letter" for Warner Brothers.

UA-British National Negotiations Completed

Gerald Freeman, managing director of Anglo-American Films, distributor for British National, has announced that the deal by which United Artists will distribute two British National pictures in this country to meet the quota requrements of Samuel Goldwyn and Selznick International has been closed. "Contraband," starring Conrad Veidt, and "Gaslight," starring Diana Wynyard and Anthony Walbrook, are the two British National pictures involved in the deal.

The organization of United Artists' new pre-selling bureau, which will consist of fifteen men working from key cities under Monroe Greenthal, director of the bureau, and Lynn Farnol and who will handle exploitation of pictures from the time the stories are bought by the studio up through and including the opening at the theatres, will be completed this week ready to start work soon after June 1.

Gangster Comedy

Edward G. Robinson returns here to the gangster characterization of his screen beginnings but with emphasis on the comic side. The picture contains talk of murders and shows an attempted one, as well as some incidental sluggings, lots of rough and tumble fighting and some demonstrations of protection rackets, but laughs are more sought for than thrills.

The film may be described as falling, as to kind, about midway between "The Last Gangster" and a "Slight Case of Murder" although not precisely like either. Humphrey Bogart, likewise, has a gangster role recalling his early castings. Ann Sothern's performance as the girl is in her "Maisie" manner.

Earl Baldwin's screen play built up from Richard Connell's Colliers' magazine story introduces the gangster leader in the act of retiring to seek culture abroad, shows him bilked of his money by continental sharpers and returning in five years to resume leadership of his gang. Dethroned by his lieutenant, he seeks to recruit a new gang, and, shot for his pains, finds sanctuary in the Floracin Monastery (nondenominational). Joining this voluntary order, he learns about brotherly love and service, but returns to the outside world on vengeance bent when he reads of his sweetheart's engagement. In swift developments he achieves overthrow of his gangster enemy, then renounces romance and worldly interests to rejoin his cloistered brothers.

Manhattan Heartbeat

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

Marital Drama

Formerly called "Marriage in Transit" then "Rain or Shine," this is a film of life and love on a limited budget.

Robert Sterling appears to advantage as a young man predisposed to view matrimony as a millstone until the right girl, as interpreted by Virginia Gilmore, comes along. His philosophy then changes to the extent of providing her with some of life's nicer things at the expense of his own dreams of owning an airport.

The birth of a son and the struggle to provide the best medical care make things come out right in the end, as well as providing an opportunity for action in scenes of an airplane power dive as the young man, anxious to earn money, takes the ship up under false pretenses.

Comedy relief is provided by nimble-jointed Joan Davis, whose young man is portrayed by Edmund MacDonald.

Sol Wurtzel was executive producer and David Burton directed. The story was the work of six collaborators, the screen play having been written by Harold Buchman, Clark Andrews, Jack Jungmeyer, Jr., and Edith Skouras, from a play by Vina Delmar and Brian Marlow, based on a novel by Miss Delmar.

Four Sons

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

Hitler Takes Czecho-Slovakia

This remake of a 1928 release of identical title differs from the original in dating and point of view but follows the same story outline. Whereas the 1928 film presented a Bavarian mother of four sons losing three of them in World War I, the 1940 version presents a Czecho-Slovakian mother of four sons losing two of them in events pertaining to the German occupation of their country and another in the Nazi conquest of Poland. In both films the fourth son goes to New York, supplying an ending for the prevent version by sending for his mother.

Although the phrases "fifth column" and "trojan horse" are not employed in the picture, "German Social Clubs," as they are termed in dialogue, are dealt with as a story factor. "Heil Hitler" is shouted by Nazi troopers in uniform shown rounding up citizens who have opposed annexation or taken up arms. A burgomaster is murdered for his display of loyalty and arrests of other village leaders sharing his attitude are shown. Dialogue and incident combine to represent national defense as glorious, aggression as reprehensible, treason as unpardonable and the fate of Czecho-Slovakia as tragic.

The story opens perhaps a year before the first German-Czech crisis with Don Ameche and Alan Curtis the eldest of four sons living with their mother, played by Eugenie Leontovich. One brother, against the other's counsel, belongs to a "German Social Club" and participates in its under-cover activities.

When mobilization is ordered this son deserts the Czech army and returns to his home town at the head of Nazi troopers sent to corral nonsympathizers. He tells the loyal son that he has saved him by getting his name removed from the condemned list.

The loyal son tries to notify others he knows would be on the list and is wounded while fleeing Nazi troopers, wounding one in return. This turns out to be his brother, who is brought home to die. Nazi troopers shoot down the loyal brothers, trying to escape, as Hitler (named but not impersonated) makes his triumphal entry. The third son is enlisted in the Nazi army and killed at Warsaw. The film ends with the mother, her daughter-in-law and infant grandson, enroute to America.

Exhibitor exploitation of the picture may follow lines, with choice dependent upon local public opinion. Where anti-Hitler feeling runs high it can be offered as an indictment of German aggression. Where pro-German sentiment prevails the showman is confronted with something of a problem.

21 Days Together

(Columbia)

Romance and Melodrama

The original title of "21 Days Together" when it was shown in England in 1938 was "The First-the Last," based on the John Galsworthy novel "The First and the Last." The story tells of the romance between a girl, who had married, in lieu of starving, a few years before but who had lived with her husband only a short time when he left her, and the wastrel brother of an ambitious barrister. The errant husband returns and is strangled to death by the lover, accidently but permanently, following an attempted blackmail.

Overshadowing all else in the picture is the fact that it stars two personalities very much in the news today in both their professional and personal lives, Vivien Leigh, the "Scarlett O'Hara" of "Gone with the Wind," and Laurence Olivier, the "Max de Winter" of "Rebecca." Currently they are "Romeo" and "Juliet" in New York in the revival of the Shakespearean play.

The film, made before either star reached their present popularity, is typically British with the clipped speech, static tempo and all the rest.

The 21 days are from the murder to when a jury decides whether a derelict clergyman, who has been accused of the crime, is convicted. The real murderer, and co-star of the film, had planned to confess in the event of a conviction and he is on his way to do so when the evening newspapers tell him the convicted man has died of a heart attack. Thus is the so-called happy ending accomplished.

Phantom Raiders

(MGM)

Melodrama

"Phantom Raiders" is the second of the MGM series dealing with the adventures of the fictitious, fabulous detective, "Nick Carter," and his unwanted stooge, "Bartholomew, the bee man." With Walter Pidgeon again playing the "Carter" role and Donald Meek, as "Bartholomew," the film induced very favorable reaction from the preview audience, which had a good time.

The William R. Lipman screen play, from the original story by Jonathan Latimer, places the events in 1940, and deals with the mysterious disappearances at sea of insured ships carrying cargoes destined for England. The audience is let in almost immediately on the identities of the criminals and suspense is created by "Carter's" methods of exposing them.

The Way of All Flesh

Character Study

This is a 1940 version of "The Way of All Flesh," made by Paramount in 1927 with Emil Jannings in the title role, and for which he won the first Acadamy actor's award statuette. In its new form the motivation has been altered, long montage sequences used and tension, according to preview audience reaction, relaxed.

Supporting Akim Tamiroff in the role of small town banker are Gladys George, William Henry, Muriel Angelus and others. Louis King directed from a screen play by Lenore Coffee, based on a story by Lajos Biro and Jules Furthman. Eugene Zukor is down as associate producer.

"Paul Kriza," the banker, is "rolled" while drunk in New York and relieved of $100,000 in securities with which he was entrusted. In the fight that follows, one of the thieves, with "Kriza's" identification, is killed, and "Kriza" becomes a wanderer. His family, believing him dead, prospers, but he denies himself their company.

The Phantom Wagon

(Columbia-Foreign)

Phantasy

France's realist director, Julien Duvivier, has taken the fantasy of the Nobel prize-winning novel by the late Selma Lagerlof to produce a picture that deals with the regeneration of vagrants and the belief in a life-after-death.

The picture was produced in France by Transcontinental Films and has been imported for distribution in this country by Columbia. Ample English titles preserve the continuity.

Based on an ancient Brittany legend, "La Charrette Fantome," translated "The Phantom Wagon," depicts the story of man's fight against the odds of poverty and lack of ambition. In this unusual theme it is a legendary cart that carries men's souls into the hereafter.

The Salvation Army and the untiring efforts of its workers play an important part in the regeneration of some of these vagrants. One of three men dies in a saloon brawl and is fated to drive the cart. He is able partly to atone for his sins by bringing a blasphemous wife-beater to repentance.

Romance is woven through the plot, but it is only secondary to the legendary theme of the picture. A Salvation Army girl grieves for her wayward husband.

Topical Melodrama

It would seem from this maritime melodrama of wartime rivalries that the camera crews of England declared war on Germany before their appointed government personnel did. Made in 1935, under optimistic tagline, "Born for Glory," this British produced film is concerned with the briny battles waged between the Britannic flotilla and the Nordic squadrons. The war is unspecified in time, although its location is set in South American waters. However, the recent course of European history and applied montage and newsreel sequences have fashioned the film with opportunism possibilities saleable at the moment.

Story and character are secondary in interest and importance to the staging of the sea sequences. In fact, the audience may become so engrossed in battle arrangements that the father and son story, hinted at in the film's opening scenes, may be overlooked during the reeling of the main portions of the story. When the finale reveals that able seaman "Brown," who has died in his attempts to delay the sailing of the German ship "Zeithen" so that the boat may be captured by H.M.S. "Leopard," is the long forsaken son of the "Leopard's" skipper, "Lieut. Somerville," this bit of revelation may come as something of a surprise, not so much from suspense as from sidetracked material.

Swing Social

(MGM)

Cartoons

"Swing Social" is one of the liveliest, funniest and most completely entertaining color cartoons to appear this season. It is all about black bass and the swing social they put on, on Sundays. The cartoon opens with a Negro, in his week day clothes, sitting on a wooden bridge, fishing. Along comes another Negro in his Sunday going-to-meeting clothes to tell the fisherman that the black bass never bite on Sundays because of the social. The scene shifts below the water where the black bass are gathered. Well known characters, such as Old Black Joe, have their counterpart in the gathering. The animation is superbly done and the humor very human. Running time, 8 minutes.

Suva, Pride of Fiji

(FitzPatrick-MGM)

Travelogue in Color

The Fijian Islands were discovered in 1643 by an English explorer and in 1874 became a British colony. At that time the natives were distinguished for their bushy black hair and cannibalism. Today cannibalism has disappeared but the natives have retained their hirsute characteristic. They live in peace with the Sikhs from India, the Solomon Islanders and many other races. The capital, Suva, is a thriving modern community with paved streets and automobiles. Outside the city and its thriving port, in the small villages are the picturesque grass houses of the natives. Seen also are firewalking and ceremonial dances. Running time, 9 minutes.

All About Hash

(MGM)

Our Gang

The "Our Gang" kids have turned to social welfare work it seems. Here, Spanky, Alfalfa, Darla and Buckwheat come to the aid of Mickey, who is having family trouble. Every Monday Mickey's mother has hash and Mickey's father, detesting hash, starts a quarrel and Mickey goes to bed crying. The gang hit upon the scheme of being invited to Mickey's house for dinner Sunday and eating everything in the house so there won't be the makings of hash for Monday. Alfalfa, following the meal, invites Mickey's parents to his house for Monday where much to the dismay of Mickey's father hash is served but everything turns out well for the gang put on skit, all about hash, on an amateur radio broadcast and Mickey's parents see the light. Running time, 11 minutes.

Spots Before Your Eyes

(MGM)

Pete Smith Specialty

Comedy and helpful household hints continue to be the combination that Pete Smith is concerned with for his Specialty subjects. Here the comedy comes first and has to do with a family of four moving into auntie's house while that prim lady is off on a trip. Of course the family of four includes two small and impish boys who soon turn the house into a shambles, staining all of auntie's best linen. A telegram announces auntie's imminent arrival so a spot expert, Ernest P. Jones, is called in. The rest of the subject, with the exception of flashbacks to the children performing a balancing act, has to do with the removal of spots from tablecloths and other linen and silks. Running time, 10 minutes.

(Disney-RKO)

Donald Plays a Cop

In this Walt Disney cartoon Donald Duck is a member of the police force. Asleep in his squad car, he is awakened by an order over the radio from headquarters to pick up a criminal by the name of Tiny Tom. Donald sets out very confident, but when Tiny turns out to be an immense fellow the Duck changes his tactics. Masquerading as a baby, Donald tricks Tiny into parting with his gun. Tiny, handcuffed and carrying ball and chain, sets out after Donald, but the Duck gets the upper hand when they run into a police parade. Running time, 8 minutes.

Catnip Capers

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

Crazy Colored Cartoon

A cat and mouse game with the tables turned on the feline is the cartoon cutup presented in this colored contribution from the Terry-Toon drawing boards. The rodent gang dose their catty persecutor with catnip. The cat is wafted away into the realm of drugged imagination where he is plagued by an overstuffed chair, which turns into a bright pink elephant, mirages of disappearing saucers of milk and exaggerated personification of his mousey rivals. The coloring and the cockeyed cartooning blend nicely to form the phantasmagoric background for the fantastic dream sequences.—Running time, seven minutes.

Sanctuary of Seals

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

Mr. and Mrs. Seal at Home

A screen visit to the habitat of the seal family on the Pribiloff Islands off the Alaskan coast serves as camera material for the latest issue of the Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman. The introductory experience becomes valuable in entertainment results and educational aspects. The migratory habits of the seals, together with some informative slants on their family history and mode of conduct are briefly but concisely offered the spectator-auditor. There are some exciting sequences showing rambunctious males in argument and some cunning and comic shots of young seals to make any average audience alternatively perk up with interest or coo with enjoyment. The miniature, which was made with the cooperation of the U. S. Coast Guard and the Bureau of Fisheries, becomes ideal material for juvenile school groups.—Running time, nine minutes.

Professor Offkeysky

Terry-Toon Jitterbug

The leonine maestro of titular designation in this black and white Terry-Toon offering is a director of the old fashioned, cultural school of musical tradition. Pity the poor "Prof." when his very ritzy but boring recital is turned into a hot jam session with the stuffy, "soup and fish" audience resurrected from their polite lethargy into energetic and enthusiastic jitterbugs. The transition is caused by the monkey drummer. The simian "Gene Krupa" is entrusted with the beating of one note but, when some cartoon hijinks multiply the scales on his barren page, the monk drummer goes to town with the downbeat. The concert cutups are animatedly projected both in drawing and entertainment results. Particularly amusing is the conduct of the monkey drummer and his vast pride in his one note task.—Running time, seven minutes.

ACTORS' UNION MERGER PLAN UP FOR APPROVAL

Four A Members Study Project for Elimination of Duplicate Work Cards

That "one big union plan" long bruited among the actors' unions comprising the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, and more than four months ago assigned, for detailed formation, to a New York accountant, Bernard J. Reis, has been completed, and this week was being studied by officers of the parent organization, and officers and members of the component unions.

Frank Gillmore, president of the Four A's, said on Tuesday in New York that the member unions would have to study the plan carefully and indicate their approval before the international board, which meets on June 7th, could act.

To Eliminate Duplications

The plan as conceived when submitted to Mr. Reis, who was given access to financial records of various unions, calls for elimination of duplicate membership cards, of many officers, and of offices. It is reported that the plan as submitted, would effect economies in overhead of over $100,000, and that 25,000 actors would become members of one union.

Strongest member unions in the Four A's, financially and in membership, are the Screen Actors Guild, the Actors Equity, and the American Federation of Radio Artists.

It is reported that the parent unit has been seeking additional funds from the member units.

Lytell Reelected Equity President

Members of Actors Equity, at their annual membership meeting, in New York, Friday, May 24th, reelected Bert Lytell president. Also elected were: Walter Huston, first vice-president; Florence Reed, second vice-president; Augustin Duncan, third vice-president; Peggy Wood, fourth vice-president; John Beal, recording secretary; and Paul Dullzell, treasurer.

Equity members recommended a $50 weekly minimum salary, and rebuked their council for voting, recently, to retain the $40 weekly minimum.

A motion to record the organization in opposition to this country's participation in the European War, was defeated.

Elected to the Equity Council, for five years, were Walter Abel, Leon Ames, Nat Briggs, Audrey Christie, William David, John Emery, Ruth Hammond, Sam Levene, Kent Smith, and Sam Jaffe; for two years, as replacements, Edith Gresham and Leona Powers.

Tallulah Bankhead, running independently for a Council seat, was defeated.

Philadelphia Musicians To Ask National Help

The attempted arbitration of their six months' old strike against the Warner theatres in Philadelphia having failed, Musicians' local 77 is expected to ask the American Federation of Musicians' national convention, in Indianapolis, June 10th, to legislate so that all labor disputes with distributor-owned theatres will be a concern of the distributing company. Thus the national union could threaten a Hollywood walkout.

It is understood that the Philadelphia union will also strive to have theatre employment voted a function of the national Federation; so that the latter may handle all musicians' contracts with the picture companies in Hollywood.

O'SHEA CELEBRATES 20 YEARS AT METRO

Edward K. O'Shea, eastern district manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, is celebrating his 20th anniversary with the company. He joined the sales force in Buffalo after World War I and was named to his present post in 1937.

Also observing anniversaries at MGM are Ralph W. Maw, Buffalo branch manager, 10 years; Walter E. Banford, Chicago branch manager, 14 years; Clayton T. Lynch, Los Angeles branch manager, 18 years, and Ben Abner, New Jersey branch manager, 12 years.

TMAT in Several New York Disputes

The New York State Labor Relations Board Tuesday postponed hearing on the petition of the motion picture division of the Theatrical Managers, Agents, and Treasurers Union, for recognition as the collective bargaining agent for the managers and assistants of the Prudential circuit, Long Island.

On Friday, May 24th, New York Supreme Court Justice Lloyd Church dismissed the suit by Max G. Felder and Ben Braudie, seeking a receiver for the TMAT motion picture division. Judge Church also refused an injunction to the two plaintiffs, which would have restrained the union from hearing charges against them. The union's governing board has expelled the two men.

New Detroit Managers Union

Roy Miller, president and business agent of a new Detroit theatre managers' union, Local 22,312, organized for affiliation with the American Federation of Labor, stated this week that 100 managers had joined; that cashiers and ushers would be included in the union; and that it had rejected an affiliation with the CIO.

Local 306, Empire Renew New York Battle

Negotiations for a merger having broken, Local 306, New York projectionists' union, affiliated with the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and the American Federation of Labor, and the Empire State Motion Picture Operators Union, an independent union, have started picketing several neighborhood theatres.

The merger plan has been discussed for several years. Local 306 is understood to have offered to absorb Empire employed members, but only some of its unemployed. Empire rejected the plan.

The suit by Local 306, New York projectionists' union, for $597,000 it claims is owed in back pay by Warner Theatres, Loew's, Inc., the Paramount circuit in New York, and RKO, is being opposed by the circuits on the grounds that they "don't owe the money," according to C. C. Moskowitz, operating head of Loew's metropolitan New York theatres. Mr. Moskowitz denied that he or Major Leslie Thompson, of RKO, would discuss a settlement with the Local 306 executive board.

The suit arises from a voluntary slash of 10 per cent in wages, taken by the projectionists in 1932 which, it is claimed, was not restored the following year as the agreement provided.

Over $150,000 Pledged for Drive

More than $150,000 was pledged to the United Jewish Appeal at the annual luncheon in the Hotel Astor, Thursday, May 23rd, which was attended by 500 leading figures of the screen, radio and stage. (Picture on page 11.)

Bernstein Chairman

David Bernstein, who presided, and who with Major Albert Warner, is co-chairman of the division, described the luncheon as one of the best attended and most successful ever held.

W. S. Paley, Columbia Broadcasting Company head, gave $20,000 it was announced. Other contributions announced were Joseph Bernhard and Charles C. Moskowitz, $1,500 each; Barney Balaban, $11,800; David Bernstein, $12,500; Major Albert Warner, $12,500; Maurice Silverstone, $4,000; William Klein, $4,000; Max Cohen, $1,000; Frisch & Rinzler, $1,500; Howard Dietz, $300; the Picker family, $1,000; Joe Vogel, $1,000; Joseph Hazen, $1,000; Joseph Seidelman, $750, and Nate Blumberg, $1,500.

Mr. Bernstein pointed out that the appeal was raising funds for the greatly enlarged emergency programs of the Joint Distribution Committee, the United Palestine Appeal and the National Refugee Service, the three major American-Jewish agencies for war relief, refugee aid and resettlement.

A plea for "unstinting" support of the 1940 campaign was made by the principal speaker, Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver, of Cleveland, who pointed out that the occupation of Belgium and Holland has increased the needs.

Urges One Charity Group

A movement to create a single non-sectarian charitable organization in the motion picture industry of New York with the Motion Picture Associates as the founding unit was urged by Jack Cohn, vice-president of Columbia, at the group's luncheon Wednesday, May 22nd, at the Hotel Astor. Jack Ellis, president, presided.

Emil K. Ellis, brother of Jack and a film attorney, and Leo Brecher, exhibitor, were special guests and addressed the gathering as did Moe Streimer of United Artists and Joe J. Lee of Twentieth Century-Fox.

All speakers lauded the charitable work of the organization and urged the fullest cooperation in making the club's annual dinner and dance on Thanksgiving Day a success.

Urban "Boys' Town" Aided By Pittsburgh Theatre Man

Exhibitor Donates Funds and Space for Slum Project

by MORT FRANK in Pittsburgh

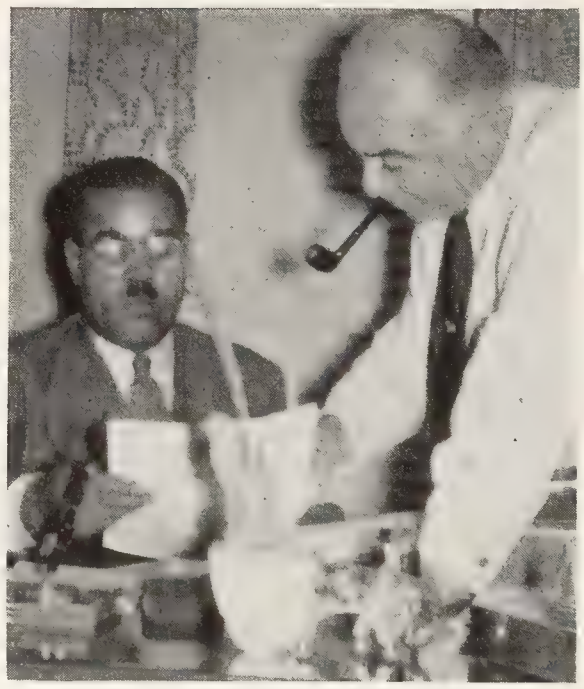
On Wednesday, June 5th, thousands of Pittsburghers will gratefully observe the first anniversary of Hill City, the "Boystown" of Pittsburgh, which Harry Hendel, owner of the New Granada theatre, and other Pittsburgh exhibitors and film men helped to make possible.

Started in Slum District

Some 21 months ago a Negro YMCA secretary named Howard McKinney thought he had discovered a way to cut crime and juvenile delinquency in Pittsburgh's Third and Fifth wards, center of the city's slums known as the "hill district." One day he met Mr. Hendel, whose theatre is in the heart of the hill district. From that meeting and from their subsequent joint efforts has been developed Hill City, a project so colorful and dramatic in origin and execution, that already Mr. McKinney has been invited to Hollywood to tell one studio's officials about his unique experiment in saving property and rehabilitating lives. To date the offer has been refused, because "we haven't accomplished enough yet, we're not sure of our ground. We're still feeling our way."

Yet in less than a year, Hill City has cut crime 37 per cent in the hill district. It has saved more than $10,000 for Pittsburgh's municipal treasury. It has recovered stolen goods for its original owners, launched campaigns against tuberculosis and syphilis and fire hazards. Because of Hill City, "Dead End Kids" in Pittsburgh are becoming law-protectors instead of law-breakers.

Governed by Members



Hill City is a community within a community, governed by departments common to most city governments. It differs from the usual city administrations, however, in one basic respect: it is manned by boys and girls.

It differs also in being financed not by taxes, but by contributions. Many of its gifts are in the form of equipment. For example, William Finkel, owner of Pittsburgh's Arcade theatre offered a piano. Bennett Amdur of the Garden theatre gave a Speedo-print machine. Other contributions are in the form of bond purchases. Issued a few months ago in denominations of $1 to $100, many of them have been bought by exchange men on Film Row, located on the Boulevard of the Allies about a mile from Hill City.

Theft from Theatre

Hill City was conceived by the 33-year-old bespectacled, stockily-built YMCA secretary who despaired for his people when he realized that although only 31 per cent of the hill district's population was of his color, more than 62 per cent of the district's arrests were Negroes. Realizing the problem, Col. George E. Fairley, Pittsburgh's Director of Public Safety, appointed Mr. McKinney a detective to give him official status and power to execute his plans. Proceeding with energy and confidence but with no funds, Mr. McKinney soon had established 20 play centers in the district, using abandoned stores.

One night three model airplanes on display for exploitation of a future booking were stolen from the lobby of the New Granada theatre.

Harry Hendel (standing) and Howard McKinney.

Mr. Hendel wanted them back. He knew of Mr. McKinney's experiment in trying to convert hoodlums into orderly young citizens and he had heard of his vast acquaintanceship among hill district boys. He phoned the social worker-detective about the theft. Within an hour Mr. McKinney discovered who had taken the planes. It was a lad of fifteen. Next day the social worker returned the models to Mr. Hendel, and asked the exhibitor to come with him to the home of the young delinquent.

Started with Donation

There he saw a home of three rooms for eleven people. Mr. McKinney explained his plan to alleviate delinquency and crime. Instead of punishing the culprit, Mr. Hendel gave Mr. McKinney money to carry on his work.

The meetings continued in their 20 different locations. But although youngsters cooperated with the assembly idea, and although delinquency decreased, Mr. McKinney was dissatisfied. After eight months of work, the project didn't seem permanent enough. Then he had an idea and approached his friend, Mr. Hendel, for help.

Free Show Staged

On March 29, 1939, the New Granada staged a free movie show for the 1,000 play center members. Appropriately, the films were "The Life of Abraham Lincoln," a crime prevention short, and "Aladdin's Lamp." Admission was secured by ballots, filled in for electing a mayor, district attorney, and other officers of a new municipality. While the show was on, the votes were being counted in the office at the back of the house. Lights went up. Results of the balloting were announced. The acting mayor of Pittsburgh and other city officials, on hand by previous arrangement, took center stage to swear in the new Hill City dignitaries. The ceremony was impressive, dramatic. Hill City was officially launched . . . almost.

The idea was there, the manpower was ready, the citizenry was ready. But there was no city hall, no home.

Again Mr. Hendel became benefactor. Above his theatre were three floors of empty rooms that had once been used as a Pythian Temple, more than 25,000 square feet of floor space, including a gymnasium and stage.

"You can have this as headquarters, free of rent, your light and heat paid, as long as you want it," the exhibitor promised, "if you keep it free of politics." Hill City began to operate.

Now, one year after its first election, nine months after the establishment of its headquarters, Hill City boasts of more than 2700 members. Ninety-three percent of them are students, in grade or high school. Five hundred are white, the balance are negroes—more than half of the negro youth on the hill. They're the nucleous of Pittsburgh's hope to eliminate petty crime and the delinquency that leads to crime.

The Motion Picture Council for Brooklyn held its Spring Luncheon at the Towers Hotel there Thursday, May 23rd. Speakers included Mrs. Lewis P. Addoms, chairman; Mrs. Charles E. Tonsor, founder of the council; Roger Albright, representing Carl E. Milliken, secretary of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America; William Slater, headmaster of Adelphi Academy, and Mrs. Robert E. Griebe, vice-chairman.

BMI Buys Rights To 2,000 Songs

Broadcast Music, Inc., the organization formed by the radio industry as a source of music independent of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, announced the purchase last week of the music house of Hinds, Hayden & Eldredge, Inc,, which has a catalogue of about 2,000 songs. A contract also was signed with Bruno Granichstaedten, Viennese composer.

None of the 2,000 songs purchased is a popular current hit but the numbers can be used as theme and background music for radio programs and also provide material for arrangements for orchestras and vocalists. The music material acquired by BMI will be used as much as possible if negotiations between the radio networks, stations and ASCAP are not concluded before the present contract expires on December 31st. The broadcasters claim the charge of five per cent of the gross revenue collected by the Society is too high for the music performing rights.

A hearing on an ASCAP motion for dismissal of the Federal grand jury subpoena issued for its books and records was set by Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard for Wednesday.

Asks Bond Reduction

Milton C. Weisman, a former receiver of Fox Theatres Corporation, last week obtained a show cause order from John C. Knox, federal judge, in New York, for the reduction of his bond from $100,000 to $7,500. The application, returnable on June 7th, points out that Mr. Weisman has surrendered all but $7,500 of Fox assets to himself and Kenneth E. Steinreich as trustees under the plan of dissolution. The balance in Mr. Weisman's hands as receiver are to take care of incidental expenses, according to the papers.

Tarkington Trial in Fall

John C. Knox, federal judge, in New York this week set the trial of the injunction and damage suit of Booth Tarkington against Warner Brothers for the October term. The plaintiff charges Warners with appropriating his literary rights in the film, "Penrod and His Twin Brother." Defendant has counterclaimed that it had a deal with the author to purchase a large number of his stories and that the plaintiff had sold some which were in the public domain.

Files Appeal Action

Notice of appeal to the New York court of appeals from a decision of the appellate division of the supreme court denying an injunction against the American Federation of Musicians and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees was filed Monday by Opera on Tour, Inc. The plaintiff seeks to restrain a strike called by the IATSE at the claimed instigation of AFM to compel the plaintiff to employ musicians instead of using recorded music for opera presentations.

Increases Capital

An increase in capital of $198,000 has been filed in Albany, N. Y., by Film Alliance of the United States, Inc., a distributing organization. The original incorporators were Freda Jarrett, Ruth Kaplan and Lillian Gershon.

April Collections Off $57,385 for Broadway

The Internal Revenue Bureau reports that of the $390,000 drop in admission tax collections in April from the previous month $57,385 of that was experienced in the Third New York (Broadway) District. As compared with a year ago, however, collections were some $83,000 above the $506,685 then reported. The collection for the whole country was reported as $2,000,902, compared with $2,390,932 for March.

Considerably more than the net loss in the district was shown in taxes collected at the box office, which dropped from $581,524 in March to $509,898 the following month, the only other classification to show a decline being tickets sold by brokers, which fell from $18,831 to $18,105.

Other collections included $6,958 on free or reduced rate admissions, compared with $6,288 in March; $1,491 on tickets sold by proprietors in excess of the established price, against nothing in March, and $53,695 from admissions to roof gardens and cabarets against $40,888.

Van Beveren to Africa

W. E. Van Beveren, now in London, planned to leave for South Africa this week to take over the post there of Otto Bolle, managing director for Twentieth Century-Fox, temporarily, while Mr. Bolle comes to the United States for a vacation and conferences.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

The New York Sun observes that the Associated Press is press-agenting itself through the new book by Oliver Gramling and William A. Kinney on the 90 years of AP press association service. The Sun cites the theatrical story sent out to most of the 1,400 AP member newspapers, the only anecdote in the book about the great actress, Sarah Bernhardt.

The authors describe the incident this way, according to the AP:

"Sam Davis, a Nevada string correspondent . . . interviewed the great Sarah Bernhardt for the Carson Appeal, his own little newspaper; for the San Francisco Examiner and for the cooperative. The actress liked him so much that when the train was ready to leave she put her hands on his shoulders, kissed him on either cheek and then squarely on the mouth. Said she, 'The right cheek for the Carson Appeal, the left for the Examiner, the lips, my friend, for yourself.'

"Davis displayed no signs of bashfulness, 'Madame,' he exclaimed, 'I also represent the Associated Press, which serves 380 papers west of the Mississippi River alone.'"

The influence of Hitler's "blitzkriegings" will be seen Friday when Bob Ripley's "Believe It or Not" CBS radio program, at 10:30 in the night, will broadcast through a special, shortwave transmitter strapped to the back of a parachute jumper on his way down from a plane, telling how it feels to fly through the air, with or without the greatest of ease.

The man in the big, round Perisphere ball, looking down on Democracity, at New York World's Fair, bemoaned to New York Times-reporter Meyer Berger that he would know that Spring was late even if he had never stepped outside. Last year, he disclosed, two sparrows and three pigeons inhabitated Democracity in early May; flew in through the Helicline door. This year, with the month of May spent, there is not one bird in the place. The Perisphere man thinks maybe it's just as well. "They (the birds) don't seem to get this World of Tomorrow stuff," he told Berger. "When they hear Kaltenborn's voice off the sound film they start batting their heads on the inside of the Perisphere, dash their brains out"—if any.

Sidney Brown, her father, who is sound engineer at Universal Pictures Studio, in California, is quite adept at the game, has been playing in tournaments some 16 years. Seven months ago he took Sheila with him to a bowling equipment store in Los Angeles, and on impulse, bought his daughter a ball. In the short time since then she has become quite champish, beat 32 women bowlers the other day in a tournament at Syracuse.

"I'd whack hell out of her if she was ever a brat off screen," said Pop Brown, in passing, to the press, in New York.

Sidewalk hawkers at New York's World's Fair sell sheet-music copies of "Peace and Freedom," World's Fair theme song, at ten cents the copy. INDUSTRY MARCHES ON!

While the motion picture industry assembled its battery of 34 lawyers and armies of clerks and witnesses for the beginning of the Government's anti-trust prosecution, Monday morning in the "key" case in New York, there to fight in the Federal Courtroom of Judge Henry W. Goddard over trade practices, "big business" in other quarters moved forward in a more peaceful fashion to adjust its trade practices under Government eye. The Federal Trade Commission, only the other day, held a trade practice conference for the resistance welder manufacturing industry and, besides, effected new trade rules for the folding paper box industry, moved to amend the trade rules for the tuna fish industry and canned vegetable industry.

'Hollywood writers' versions of some stuff annoys Edwin C. Hill no end. He cites their war stuff, particularly, observing that it is most unrealistic. When the boys came back from the last war, Hill remembers, the ones who talked most about it were the ones who had been farthest from the shooting, and that if a guy actually was in on any real battle closeups, he didn't want to talk about it. "The best story teller I ever knew," said he, "was just a phoney who was a make-believe fighter. The best fighter I ever knew, with a gat or a brick or anything he could grab, couldn't have written two lines on the Battle of Gettysburg if he'd won it single handed. The people in Hollywood, where they make the pictures, have had it too soft."

Twenty-six years preceding this week's announcement from New York Pressagent Jean Dalrymple that the Forty-eighth Street Music Hall had revived the old "Tillie's Punctured Romance," after 26 years. The world saw, in that picture, its first feature comedy. It was a stupendous event, featuring Marie Dressler in the title role. She once said that in the casting, on the lot of Mack Sennett, who produced it, she went around looking for some supporting players and picked up the then unknown Charles Spencer Chaplin, from London, also one Mabel Normand. Claimants to the original discovery of Chaplin could form an association and hold a convention in the Hollywood Bowl, or in Chicago's Soldiers Field.

Miss Dalrymple now tells us that in "Tillie's Punctured Romance," John Golden, the stage producer, did his only work in films. He picked the title, wrote the sub captions.

When the picture reached Associated Press in New York, and subsequently in newspapers of a good part of the world, it showed the tanks in the roadway, and in the background, overhead, on some low buildings appeared a big 24-sheet poster with the words: "Hell's Cargo," advertising the motion picture by Metro-Goldwyn.

The Philadelphia local of the musicians' union has given notice that if Eugene Ormandy goes ahead with his announced plan to have a National Guard big anti-tank cannon fired at Robin Hood Dell when Tschaikovsky's 1812 Overture is played to open the Summer season on June 18, the firing must be done by a union musician in good standing.

The original instrumentation by Tschaikovsky provides for the sound of cannon in the score. This means, according to A. Rex Riccardi, musicians' union secretary, that the cannon will be an instrument in the orchestra, and under the contract, the musicians all are union men.

Samuel A. Rosenbaum, president of the Robin Hood Dell Concerts, Inc., has agreed that auditions will be held among members of the union "in order to select a performer who can 'play' the cannon with due regard for its musical value." He said applications for the "position of symphony bombardier" should be sent to headquarters of the Dell Concerts.

TREND TOWARD REVIVAL OF OLD SLAPSTICKS

Two New Companies Formed to Bring Back Films of Another Day

A definite trend toward the reissuance and revival of motion pictures of a few seasons ago, and slapstick comedies of the early twenties, is underway. Besides established distributors two newly-formed motion picture companies are completing arrangements to bring back movies that were enjoyed by the public of another day.

Such revivals are not new, but in recent years they have been only sporadic. Now come signs of a more extensive usage. The New Orleans Daily Item recently turned attention to the growing practice, in an editorial, referring particularly to revivals of oldtimers in schools, culture clubs and other groups. For this type of out-of-theatre showing there has been the example of the New York Museum of Modern Art with its cycles of old films, used by groups to study the progress of the art. Comment on the New Orleans Item editorial, in which was noted "a new worry for producers" with new product, was made by I. M. Gauthier, an independent exhibitor of White Case, Louisiana, and appeared in Letters from Readers, on page 62 of the May 18th issue.

Films of Oldtime Stars

Present plans for slapsticks call for early release of a group of silent comedies featuring such early screen stars as Snub Pollard, Ben Turpin, Charlie Chaplin, Roscoe Arbuckle, Al St. John, Mabel Normand and the Lee and Moran comedies. These pictures will be released by the new Motion Picture Jubilee Productions, with offices in New York.

"The birth and development of the slapstick flickers have filled a chapter in the history of the American film," according to Morton H. Miller, president of the new company.

He said that experimental showings of a number of Snub Pollard and Ben Turpin comedies in several local theatres had shown their popularity among modern day film audiences. "The older theatre-goer was able to satisfy a long sensed nostalgia for the oldtime motion pictures, while the youthful film fan was relieved of a curiosity as to what silent pictures had to offer," Mr. Miller observed.

The comedies have all been synchronized on standard 35 mm. prints each in two-reels. In addition, each comedy bears a title message to the audience, explaining in brief the purpose of the revival of the slapstick shorts.

Chaplin's Comedies

The King of Comedy Film Corporation also has been formed in New York to distribute a series of ten two-reel Charlie Chaplin comedies. Already released is "The Paper Hanger," now playing at Broadway's Globe theatre. The picture was formerly titled "Work." The old silent projection speed of 60 feet a minute has been advanced to conform to modern day equipment with a speed of 90, removing the "jerky" actions of the characters, yet holding the original pantomime of Chaplin.

The company has in preparation "The Tramp," "His Night Out," "Shanghied," "Triple Trouble," "Police," "In the Bank," "Jitney Elopement," "The Woman" and "His New Job" all synchronized with musical background.

With the trend of silent pictures for exhibition some of New York's smaller theatres have returned to old-time movie programs. The Miami theatre has for the past few months been showing complete programs of old feature pictures and shorts to the musical accompaniment of the piano-in-the-pit music. Such stars as William S. Hart, Theda Bara, Douglas Fairbanks, Sr., Charles Ray and many others of by-gone days have held, even if only short-lived, a new place on the screen.

Just recently the 48th Street Music Hall in New York held a "Movie Memory Lane" party for the benefit of the American Theatre Wing of the French and British Relief Funds. Beverly Bayne, who co-starred with Francis X. Bushman in the silent days, was chairman and was assisted by Gloria Swanson, Mary Pickford, Dorothy Mackail, Lila Lee, Viola Dana, Jacqueline Logan, Eileen Percy, Estelle Taylor, Nita Naldi and Dorothy Gish. Among stars who attended were Noel Coward, Laurence Olivier, Vivien Leigh, Helen Hayes, Fredric March, John Barrymore and Eddie Cantor.

A Poll of Readers

The magazine Cue, in conjunction with the Fifth Avenue Playhouse in New York recently conducted a poll asking readers to select old motion pictures which they believed should be included on movie programs. Some 5,000 ballots were returned and the selections from the poll, totaling 49 pictures, are being shown at the theatre and will continue through August 22nd.

Among the 49 pictures are "Of Human Bondage," an RKO picture co-starring Bette Davis and Leslie Howard; "The Life of Emil Zola," with Paul Muni in the title role; "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town"; "Wuthering Heights"; the imported French production starring Charles Boyer, "Mayerling," which led the poll in the order named.

The pictures to be shown in consecutive order in the comedy field and grouped to the type of picture are: "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," starring James Stewart and directed by Frank Capra; "I Met Him in Paris," with Claudette Colbert; "True Confession," starring John Barrymore; director Ernst Lubitsch's "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife," and "Ninotchka"; a French importation directed by Rene Claire, "A Nous La Liberte"; another French importation, "Carnival in Flanders," and "Midnight," starring Claudette Colbert and John Barrymore. These pictures were shown at the Fifth Avenue Playhouse from May 10th to May 27th.

Musical Films Chosen

In the musical film group, which started on May 28th, and continues on through June 24th, the pictures chosen were "Life and Love of Beethoven," "Unfinished Symphony," "La Boheme," "One Night of Love," "Don Quixote," "The Mikado," "Naughty Marietta," "They Shall Have Music," "Vernon and Irene Castle," "Babes In Arms," "Mad About Music," and "Alexander's Ragtime Band."

Melodramatic productions chosen by the voters were Alexander Korda's "Elephant Boy," starring Sabu, who soon will be seen in another Korda production, "The Thief of Bagdad," and on the same program a film Odyssey of Central Asia, "Yellow Cargo," as the second half of a double bill. Other pictures in this section that will follow in the June 25th to July 13th period are: "The Plainsman," "Stagecoach," a double feature horror program, "Frankenstein" and "Dracula," three Alfred Hitchcock productions, "The 39 Steps," "The Lady Vanishes" and "The Woman Alone." The series will end with "The Adventures of Chico" and "Dark Rapture."

In the dramatic field the RKO production accredited with bringing Bette Davis to the fore as a dramatic actress, "Of Human Bondage," will be the initial picture of the July 14th-August 19 period, followed by "The Citadel"; another Bette Davis picture; "Jezebel"; "Marie Antoinette," "Boy's Town" starring Mickey Rooney and Spencer Tracy, King Vidor's "Hallelujah," "The Eternal Mask," "The Informer" with Victor McLaglen, "Wuthering Heights," "Algiers," "The Scoundrel" starring Noel Coward, Leslie Howard in "Berkeley Square," and "Henry the VIII," "Pygmalion" and "David Copperfield."

The Cinema Hall of Fame program will be concluded August 22nd with the showing of two documentary productions "Man of Aran" and "The City."

Audiences will be given voting cards on leaving the theatre. The pictures which enjoy the heaviest accolade will receive the Cinema Hall of Fame Award

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

DOCTOR TAKES A WIFE, THE: Ray Milland, Loretta Young. Another two week picture. Patron comment on this was "cute," "clever," "best show in town," etc. Hundred per cent business in general business slump. You can't fail on this. Running time, 88 minutes. Played May 3-15.—B. H. Pfotenhauer, State Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

MAN THEY COULD NOT HANG, THE: Boris Karloff, Roger Pryor—We were hung instead of the man without business. Our game Hollywood helped it the first night but the next night, oh, my, the echo is still in the theatre.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

TOO MANY HUSBANDS: Fred MacMurray, Jean Arthur, Melvyn Douglas—Two week business. Exceptional comedy. Enjoyed by entire family audiences. Running time, 84 minutes.—B. H. Pfotenhauer, State Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

U-BOAT 29: Conrad Veidt, Valerie Hobson, Sebastian Shaw—Business more nearly normal; perhaps, because of the timeliness of this picture. Played May 10-11.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

First National

ANGEL FROM TEXAS, AN: Wayne Morris, Rosemary Lane, Eddie Albert, Ronald Reagan, Jane Wyman—Good picture; fair business. Has lots of comedy. Running time, 70 minutes. Played May 17-19.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

CASTLE ON THE HUDSON: Pat O'Brien, John Garfield, Ann Sheridan, Burgess Meredith—Good prison picture but they are not liked very well here and unhappy endings never click. Pat O'Brien is excellent, so is Burgess Meredith. John Garfield and Ann Sheridan are fair but altogether is too depressing to go over well. Running time, 77 minutes. Played May 11-13.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

DR. EHRLICH'S MAGIC BULLET: Edward G. Robinson, Ruth Gordon, Otto Kruger—Poor business, although picture enjoyed by those who saw it. Not the class for small town audience. Running time, 100 minutes. Played May 13-15.—Daniel Korman, Palace Theatre, Englehart, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

DUST BE MY DESTINY: John Garfield, Priscilla Lane—This picture was well taken and there were a lot of good comments. Running time, 86 minutes. Played May 3-5.—Otto W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Rural and small town patronage.

FOUR WIVES: Lane Sisters, Gale Page, Eddie Albert, Claude Rains, Jeffrey Lynn, Dick Foran, Frank McHugh, May Robson—Above average. Good performance by entire cast. Running time, 99 minutes. Played May 11-12.—H. F. Wall. Eltinge Theatre, Pleasant Hill, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

THREE CHEERS FOR THE IRISH: Priscilla Lane, Thomas Mitchell, Dennis Morgan, Alan Hale—Now here is a comedy that is a knockout. Just about tops for the season. A swell show with so many laughs that the house was a continuous uproar from start to finish. A swell picture. Running time, 100 minutes. —A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

'TIL WE MEET AGAIN: Merle Oberon, George Brent, Pat O'Brien, Geraldine Fitzgerald—Very good picture and good business. Was made before as "One Way Passage." Running time, 100 minutes. Played May 12-13.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

AND ONE WAS BEAUTIFUL: Robert Cummings, Jean Muir, Laraine Day—A problem child if there ever was one. The title, I feel, spoiled the draw. Strictly a drama that was extremely heavy. We played it Friday and Saturday to absolutely no business. Perhaps we played it the wrong days of the week. Running time, 70 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

ANDY HARDY GETS SPRING FEVER: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Cicilia Parker, Fay Holden—As good as any of the Hardy series. Mickey Rooney overacts as usual but the public goes for it, so we go for it, too. Running time, 85 minutes.—R. G. Risch, Reno Theatre, Appleton, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

ANDY HARDY GETS SPRING FEVER: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Cicilia Parker, Fay Holden—Not as good as other Hardy pictures that we have run. It seems that the Hardys are falling off in box office. Running time, 85 minutes. Played April 19-21.—Otto W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Rural and small town patronage.

ANOTHER THIN MAN: William Powell, Myrna Loy, Ruth Hussey, Virginia Grey—Very good. Not quite up to the standard of this series, as it was rather hard to follow, but "Nick" and "Nora" are tops, while Asta steals the show. Excellent supporting cast. Running time, 102 minutes. Played April 26-29.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

BALALAIKA: Nelson Eddy, Ilona Massey, Charles Ruggles, Frank Morgan—Another of our favorite stars sold down the river. Might be all right in the big spots but definitely a pain in the neck for the dust bowl. Eddy is excellent, as always. Ilona Massey is fair but not so good as Jeanette MacDonald. War pictures do not go over now and foreign locale no good here, so altogether it was too much of a handicap for Eddy. Hope they will give him a good American picture now. Running time, 102 minutes. Played April 19-21.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

CONGO MAISIE: Ann Sothern, John Carroll, Rita Johnson—Excellent production. Ann "Maisie" Sothern is a winner. J. Carroll is good. Plenty of excitement via about a million natives on the war path but from first to last it is "Maisie's" show. Hope to see her again very soon. Running time, 70 minutes. Played May 3-5.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

GHOST COMES HOME, THE: Frank Morgan, Billie Burke, Ann Rutherford—Good program class comedy that seemed to please. Business below normal. Running time, 79 minutes. Played May 13-14.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

GHOST COMES HOME, THE: Frank Morgan, Billie Burke, Ann Rutherford—Good picture; fair business. Running time, 78 minutes. Played May 14.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

GONE WITH THE WIND: Vivien Leigh, Clark Gable, Olivia de Havilland, Leslie Howard, Hattie McDaniel—Beyond a doubt the finest motion picture ever made and with a cast that was perfect in every respect. From a small town box office standpoint, however, a colossal flop. We not only lost money on it but lost the normal profit that we usually earn on these same days. We are not considering the headaches in preparing for it. Those in the smaller towns who can afford these prices did not wait for it and the remainder who would liked to have seen it could not afford it. Running time, 228 minutes. Played May 10-12.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

HENRY GOES ARIZONA: Frank Morgan, Virginia Weidler, Slim Summerville—The kind of picture they like a lot better than the super-colossal masterpieces they put out. Plenty of comedy and thrills and the kiddies ate it up. Virginia Weidler is a grand little star and we predict big things for her. The only complaint was Slim Summerville did not have a big enough part. They like him here. Running time, 67 minutes. Played May 17-19.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

ON BORROWED TIME: Lionel Barrymore, Bobs Watson, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Beulah Bondi, Una Merkel—Picture very good but not type of picture for small towns. Played May 5-8.—Daniel Korman, Palace Theatre, Englehart, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

SHINING HOUR, THE: Joan Crawford, Robert Young, Margaret Sullavan, Melvyn Douglas, Fay Bainter—We would suggest a pension fund be started for Crawford, Garbo and a few more Metro stars. We can't get film rental out of them. Our bathing beauty fashion show saved the day. The farmers really enjoyed our blondes in bathing suits.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SHOP AROUND THE CORNER: James Stewart, Margaret Sullavan, Frank Morgan—An excellent picture that did not draw. The plot is good, it is well acted, and these stars usually draw. No doubt the foreign setting kept many away. Running time, 100 minutes. Played May 8-9.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

SHOP AROUND THE CORNER: Margaret Sullavan, James Stewart, Frank Morgan—A good picture for the beginning of the week. Patrons were not raving about it as they have done about other James Stewart pictures. Running time, 98 minutes. Played April 5-6.—Mike Kieryluk, Vimy Theatre, Vegreville, Alberta, Canada. General patronage.

STRANGE CARGO: Joan Crawford, Clark Gable, Ian Hunter, Peter Lorre, Paul Lukas, Albert Dekker—An excellent picture, well played by all of the characters. Gable and Crawford excellent, as was the entire cast, Ian Hunter, Paul Lukas, Peter Lorre, Albert Dekker, et al. The jungles of South America were real jungles and the escape of several convicts very realistic. Sex is the basic theme and rough and racy and with but very little refined thoughts expressed, except by 'Cambreau' (Hunter) who read the Bible and practiced toleration. The film is a good job technically with splendid photography and is continuously interesting. The picture is too frank for children but should please grownups of all ages. Running time, 113 minutes. Played May 16-23.—William Noble, Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

THUNDER AFLOAT: Wallace Beery, Chester Morris, Virginia Grey—This picture was very well liked. Running time, 95 minutes. Played April 26-28.—Otto W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Rural and small town patronage.

YOUNG TOM EDISON: Mickey Rooney, Fay Bainter, Virginia Weidler, George Bancroft—A showman's prayer to a waning box office. An outstanding production which rates all the exploitation it so richly deserves. It will more than repay the extra effort that you can give it. Just a swell picture that does excellent business. Running time, 86 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Paramount

BEAU GESTE: Gary Cooper, Ray Milland, Robert Preston, Brian Donlevy—One swell picture. We could use more good shows like this from Paramount to help pay off the mortgage. You can't go wrong on this picture. Running time, 114 minutes.—R. G. Risch, Reno Theatre, Appleton, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

FARMER'S DAUGHTER: Martha Raye, Charles Ruggles—Paramount evidently is in need of some brains out on the Coast. Certainly pictures such as this show a woeful lack of them. It is unbelievable that they can throw something like this together and expect the public to support the theatre showing it. With war news for competition, it is going to take pictures produced with thought and care to hold the theatre patrons in the coming season. We see some recession in business at the present time and I think that critical days are ahead. Certainly we and the producers would be in better circumstances to fend off any slackening if a larger percentage of a block were better than double bill fare.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

RULERS OF THE SEA: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Margaret Lockwood, Will Fyffe—Excellent performance by Fairbanks and Fyffe. Interesting picture. Running time, 97 minutes. Played May 18-19.—H. F. Wall, Eltinge Theatre, Pleasant Hill, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

Republic

COWBOYS FROM TEXAS: Three Mesquiteers (Robert Livingston, Raymond Hatton, Duncan Renaldo), Carole Landis—A western treat for our farm lads with nice business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

DARK COMMAND, THE: John Wayne, Claire Trevor, Walter Pidgeon—This one was well advertised to the exhibitor but they forgot to tell the public about it. It's a good action production. Press book and exchange paper positively does not sell it. Make your own. Running time, 94 minutes. Played April 26-May 3.—B. H. Pfotenhauer, State Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

FLIGHT AT MIDNIGHT: Col. Roscoe Turner, Phil Regan, Jean Parker—A good action picture for small town. Republic compels us to run old ones but you can't miss on this one. Running time, 66 minutes. Played May 15-16.—H. F. Wall, Eltinge Theatre, Pleasant Hill, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

FORGED PASSPORT: Paul Kelly, June Lang, Lyle Talbot, Billy Gilbert—Nice program picture. Suitable for dual billing. Nice business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SOUTH OF THE BORDER: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—This was our first try in years to single bill a western. Before we have always lost money on single bill westerns. But we took a chance on this, after the Republic booker urged us quite a bit to single bill it on a change other than our Friday-Saturday. And, boy, did we go to town. It grossed right along with our top pictures this season. Why they go for him we cannot figure out. But why bother. He is doing it and is doing it big. Running time, 71 minutes. Played April 30-May 2.—Egon W. G. Wieselmann, Cactus Theatre, Limon, Colo. Small town patronage.

VILLAGE BARN DANCE: Richard Cromwell, Doris Day, Lulu Belle and Scotty—Did a nice business with this on Sunday. With good shorts makes an excellent show that pleased all.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

RKO Radio

ALLEGHENY UPRISING: John Wayne, Claire Trevor, Brian Donlevy, George Sanders—Snow and cold hit the box office; picture satisfactory. Played April 12-13.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

MILLIONAIRE PLAYBOY: Joe Penner, Linda Hayes—The best Joe Penner to date and one that drew an extra amount of business for us on gift night. The kind of picture that small towns seem to like. Running time, 64 minutes. Played May 7.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BARRICADE: Alice Faye, Warner Baxter—The ardent followers of Alice Faye were even disappointed in this one. Maybe our marquee misled the public to believe that the doors of our theatre were "Barricaded" but I don't think so. "Barricade" didn't spell B. O. for us. Running time, 71 minutes. Played May 7.—R. G. Risch, Reno Theatre, Appleton, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

BLUE BIRD: Shirley Temple, Eddie Collins, Spring Byington—This evidently from the press is Shirley's swan song, which is just as well. The picture brought many walkouts from the adults, who have consistently stayed away on the children's starring pictures for a long time. Jane Withers stayed on top longer than Shirley but she, too, is slipping and if the producers are smart they will use them only in supporting roles, as their chances for staying popular with the public will be much better. The kids were a wonderful asset to Fox while they lasted but the trouble of finding stories for them brought inane vehicles that the public refused to accept and that I think is the end of the cycles for the child prodigies for some time.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

BLUE BIRD: Shirley Temple, Spring Byington—Everyone though it was a kid's picture but it turned out to be far above the understanding of a child. Shirley Temple's popularity has died out so this picture didn't have half the box office appeal that her former pictures had. Running time, 83 minutes.—R. G. Risch, Reno Theatre, Appleton, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN AT TREASURE ISLAND: Sidney Toler, Cesar Romero, Pauline Moore—Just another picture. Ran it on a Bank Night and the man that won the money felt he got gypped. Allocated too high. Running time, 67 minutes. Played March 12.—R. G. Risch, Reno Theatre, Appleton, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

CISCO KID AND THE LADY, THE: Cesar Romero, Marjorie Weaver—This just an average western. Think Fox must have a spite against me, giving me this at an "A" classification. I can buy just as good Westerns for $5 per week with lots more action. Fox is evidently slipping, to put this in their upper bracket. Running time, 74 minutes.—J. N. Wells, Wells Theatre, Kingsland, Ga. General patronage.

THREE EXHIBITORS JOIN DEPARTMENT

Three exhibitors this week joined the contributors to the What the Picture Did for Me Department. They are:

Edward J. O'Connell, Playhouse Theatre, Lisbon, N. H.

R. G. Risch, Reno Theatre, Appleton, Minn.

H. F. Wall, Eltinge Theatre, Pleasant Hill, Ill.

Read what these and other exhibitors have to say about the current pictures in adjoining columns.

CITY IN DARKNESS: Sidney Toler, Lynn Bari—A few eggs were laid in the Twentieth Century and this is one of them. They must have been in the "Dark" when they made this one. As far as I am concerned, "Charlie Chan" died when Warner Oland did. Running time, 74 minutes. Played May 10.—R. G. Rich, Reno Theatre, Appleton, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

DAY-TIME WIFE: Tyrone Power, Linda Darnell, Warren William, Binnie Barnes—Good comedy. Linda nothing to write home about. Any other gal would have been as good or better. Running time, 72 minutes.—J. N. Wells, Wells Theatre, Kingsland, Ga. General patronage.

DRUMS ALONG THE MOHAWK: Claudette Colbert, Henry Fonda, Edna May Oliver—Excellent portrayal; best business in many weeks but at that not quite normal. Played April 5-6.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

EVERYTHING HAPPENS AT NIGHT: Sonja Henie, Ray Milland, Robert Cummings—This one was fair. Sonja good as usual but would have been better if not in foreign setting. Why not try Sonja in something other than a foreign setting. Running time, 77 minutes.—J. N. Wells, Wells Theatre, Kingsland, Ga. General patronage.

EVERYTHING HAPPENS AT NIGHT: Sonja Henie, Ray Milland, Robert Cummings—We are afraid this little lady is done for at the box office. Just another example of how this company can take a money star and then fail to follow through with her in successive films. We believe they have ruined her with poor pictures and support. This picture is her poorest, though the one skating scene in it is her best of all. Business was only what our program picture average is mid-week. This is too bad for Sonja, who we believe would still be good with co-starring and good pictures. Running time, 78 minutes.—Egon W. G. Wieselmann, Cactus Theatre, Limon, Colo. Small town patronage.

JOHNNY APOLLO: Tyrone Power, Dorothy Lamour, Edward Arnold, Lloyd Nolan—Good picture; good business. Running time, 95 minutes. Played May 15-16.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MR. MOTO TAKES A VACATION: Peter Lorre, Virginia Field, John King, Joseph Schildkraut—It's too bad "Mr. Moto" doesn't take a long vacation so we can be rid of his "popeyes" and his involved murders that only his master mind could solve. Running time, 68 minutes.—R. G. Risch, Reno Theatre, Appleton, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

STAR DUST: Linda Darnell, John Payne, Roland Drew, Charlotte Greenwood—Fairly good picture, none too well acted. Although the story wasn't new, it was interesting. No box office draw due to lack of well known name stars. Running time, 83 minutes. Played May 4-6.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

STAR DUST: Linda Darnell, John Payne, Roland Young, Charlotte Greenwood—Personally, I enjoyed this picture and what few who saw this show were pleased but it's no draw. Played it two days, Tuesday-Wednesday, and I will say I took in just enough at the box office to pay for the show. Played May 14-15.—Edward J. O'Connell, Playhouse Theatre, Lisbon, N. H. General patronage.

STAR DUST: Linda Darnell, John Payne, Charlotte Greenwood, Roland Young—Here is a honey of a show and what a honey this Darnell girl is. Whole cast good and old man "Topper" is his usual good role. Give it your best days. Business above average. Running time. 85 minutes. Played May 7-8.—Alex Slendak, St. Clair Theatre, St. Clair, Mich. General patronage.

STOP, LOOK AND LOVE: Jean Rogers, William Frawley, Robert Kellard—Counter-attractions may have been partly responsible for lack of pulling power. Picture okay. Played April 19-20.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

SWANEE RIVER: Don Ameche, Al Jolson, Andrea Leeds—Played this one after everyone around me had played it and did a pleasant surprise business. Everyone was pleased. Wish there were more good pictures like this one. Played April 13-15.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. General patronage.

United Artists

FOUR FEATHERS: John Clements, June Duprez, C. Aubrey Smith, Ralph Richardson—This is the best English picture I have played. Good color and mostly good sound. Would have been outstanding with American players. Running time, 115 minutes.—J. N. Wells. Wells Theatre, Kingsland, Ga. General patronage.

MY SON, MY SON: Brian Aherne, Madeleine Carroll, Louis Hayward, Laraine Day—Another two week picture. Grosses fine both weeks. Built up by itself. A very wonderful production. Running time, 115 minutes. Played April 12-25.—B. H. Pfotenhauer, State Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

OF MICE AND MEN: Lon Chaney, Jr., Burgess Meredith, Betty Field—It is our frank opinion that this is a better picture than "Grapes of Wrath." The character portrayals by the leads and everyone else in the film were superb. And the director certainly knew how to get the greatest dramatic effect out of every little incident and scene. Whether or not this type of picture should have been made—as some in the trade hold—we shall not argue. It did, to our surprise, absolute top business and we had no complaints or criticism from any patron on the subject matter of the film. Running time, 106 minutes. Played April 31-May 1.—Egon W. G. Wieselmann, Cactus Theatre, Limon, Colo. Small town patronage.

Universal

ALL QUIET ON THE WESTERN FRONT (reissue): Lew Ayres, Slim Summerville—Timely reissue from Universal. Narration good. One hour after we put feature back in can, conflict was on again. OK for midweek. Running time, 93 minutes. Played May 8-9.—H. F. Wall, Eltinge Theatre, Pleasant Hill, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

EX-CHAMP: Victor McLaglen, Tom Brown, Nan Grey, Constance Moore—The weather couldn't be blamed for this as it was fine, but the picture only satisfied some and not too many came to see if they would like it. Played April 26-27.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

LITTLE TOUGH GUYS IN SOCIETY: "Little Tough Guys," Mary Boland, Mischa Auer, Edward Everett Horton—Although old, this pleased. Box office remains much below normal. Played May 17-18.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

SPIRIT OF CULVER: Jackie Cooper, Freddie Bartholomew, Andy Devine, Henry Hull, Jackie Moran—Counter-attractions cut down on box office receipts but those who saw this picture enjoyed it immensely. Played May 3-4.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre. Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

UNDER-PUP, THE: Gloria Jean, Nan Grey, Robert Cummings, Beulah Bondi, C. Aubrey Smith, Virginia Weidler—Gloria Jean is the best child "find" in quite a few years. Her singing and pranks make this picture one the whole family can enjoy. Running time, 88 minutes.—H. G. Risch, Reno Theatre, Appleton, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

Warner Brothers

IT ALL CAME TRUE: Ann Sheridan, Jeffrey Lynn, Humphrey Bogart, Zasu Pitts—A small town natural, very much enjoyed by my patrons. Ann Sheridan is very good and takes a very smart part. Old time numbers very well received. This was put in here to replace "Virginia City" but can recommend this in any spot. Play it. Running time, 97 minutes. Played May 18.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

PRIDE OF THE BLUE GRASS: Edith Fellows, Gantry, the Blind Horse, James McCallion—If any of you fellows wonder which of the "B" pictures from this company to play and which to reject and shelve, by all means play this one. It more than pleases. It has a human, heart warming story and is all around good. Gantry, the blind horse, is a wonder horse that your people will be talking about for some time after. The picture almost is "Kentucky" without the color. Naturally the films needs selling since it does not come to you pre-sold like the big ones. Running time, 65 minutes. Played April 5-6.—Egon W. G. Wieselmann, Cactus Theatre, Limon, Colo. Small town patronage.

A trend toward indecencies in current and recent films was noted by several speakers at the annual luncheon of the Motion Picture Department of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae this week at the Hotel Roosevelt, New York. Hope was expressed that war-reduced revenues from abroad would not tempt or impel producers to insert offensive material under the false impression of increasing theatre attendance thereby.

Mrs. James F. Looram, chairman of the Department, presided. Guests of honor were: Reverend Francis X. Talbot, S. J., editor of America; Reverend Gerald Donnelly, S. J., of the staff of America; Reverend John J. "Wind" Fans Trade War in Great Britain

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

The cataclysmic explosion of total war over Europe, with the menace to life and security has not interrupted Britain's other little war, that between distributors and exhibitors over the question of film hire. This has, however, developed into a battle of tactics rather than high explosive.

Notable in this subtle maneuvering and manipulation has been the expression by the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association of a readiness to discuss the vexed question of "Gone with the Wind" with Metro, if Metro was ready to do so on their part. Meanwhile a further tactical move has been made by the CEA stalwarts in a pointed public raising of Metro's supposed agreement with the Board of Trade—along with the other majors here—not to raise film prices above levels of last November.

Exhibitors have been invoked to act as informants upon any of their fellows who may have booked the Metro super against the association's official policy and advice.

Lowered Market Has Effect

The present international situation has, of course, had a fundamentally chemical effect upon the situation. Metro's policy, with its abundant confidence in the pulling power of their film, was devised at a time when Europe and its markets, its cinemas and its filmgoers, were in a far different state than they are here and now. Markets have dwindled, over the European front, filmgoers are thinking of other things than motion pictures, houses are closed over wide areas, although not in Britain.

It is the exhibitor belief that they can and will get "Wind" and other hitherto highly priced American films for very much less than the rentals now demanded. They are confident that they hold the winning hand. While they do not intend to demand an armistice, they are not unwilling in their own phrase to concede one.

Last November Mr. Oliver Stanley, then president of the Board of Trade, the CEA pointed out in its third manifesto, declared in a communication to the Films Council that, among other things, the agreement negotiated between the Board of Trade and the majors contained an assurance "that the companies will continue to export their films freely to this market and that there will be no attempt to create an artificial shortage. They have further agreed that if there should be a substantial shortage in the number of films available to exhibitors they will not take advantage of such a situation to raise film rentals above their present levels."

Shortage Shown

Pointedly the exhibitors asked:

"Was MGM a party to that 'assurance' and that 'agreement'?

"If so, is 70 per cent not above 'present levels' as of November last?

"Or did MGM have a mental reservation that 'levels' were whatever that company was charging in America from time to time?"

Figures given by the CEA to substantiate their claim of a present product shortage are:

Films registered during the renters' quota year, April 1, 1939, to March 31, 1940, by the seven American majors understood to be parties to the agreement with the Board of Trade—248.

Films registered by the same companies in the renters' quota year of 1938-39—310.

Total American films registered in 1939-40—364; in 1938-39—499.

Available records, it is claimed, show a drop in the United States of only 15, while the drop here is 151.

Day-to-Day Plans Necessary

Much is provisional upon the direction the war takes. No member of the industry expects Britain to be exempt from Hitler's bombers and dislocation is bound to result. But the rentals battle goes on meanwhile, with the "Wind" affair but an episode in the campaign.

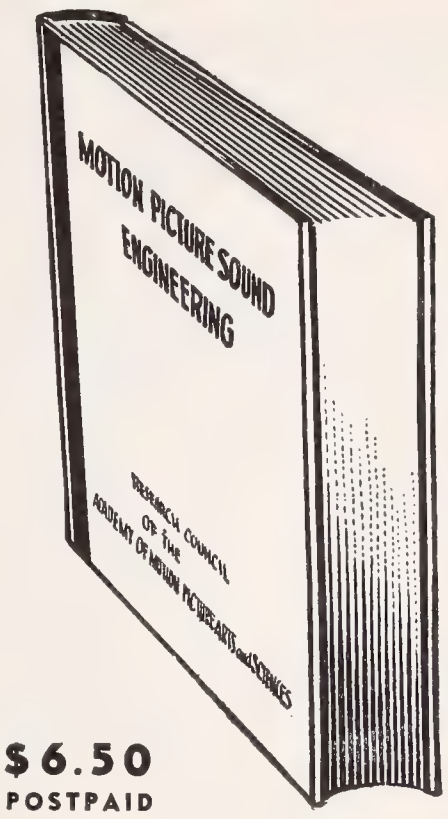
Harry Mears, president of the CEA, himself has emphasized this, his own branch ratifying the film hire fight policy and urging a continuance of the present course of action. It is stressed that the storm over the Metro film is a matter of principle, aiming at the protection of the exhibitor.

"Results," says Mr. Mears, "will go much further than the immediate question of that particular film. . . . If they gave way now it would mean films were going to be made in the future for the people who could pay big prices for them without any consideration of the others. . . . If the system proposed for 'Gone with the Wind' were to come generally into being, it would mean when a big film was produced the biggest house in each district and the one that could afford to charge big prices would get an unlimited run and the rest of the houses would only pick up the crumbs of what the smaller producers could find for them."

Odeon and GB, who have professed unwillingness to book the film under present conditions, are currently backing the film hire fight, though the more cynical independents consider circuit allegiance is inspired by a belief that it will be the circuits who will benefit first, last and most of the time. The extent and strength of the Associated British deal has yet to be made known. It is unlikely to be considerable.

"Our Town" Has Boston Opening

Preceded by an intensive publicity campaign and with special features of "world-premieres in-the-field" Sol Lesser's "Our Town," United Artists, opened Thursday, May 23rd in Boston at Loew's State and Orpheum theatres. (Picture on page 10).



The premiere was attended by Mr. Lesser and Fay Bainter, Beulah Bondi and Thomas Craven, of the cast and Thornton Wilder, the author of the play on which the film is based.

Mayor Tobin had declared "Our Town Day" for the City of Boston. Communities in all the New England states sent a "typical" high school boy and girl. Governor Francis Murphy of New Hampshire was official host, and citizens of Peterborough, N. H., the town around which Mr. Wilder wrote his play, also were special guests. Governor Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts received the whole party at the state Capitol.

At the premiere a radio broadcast over the NBC network was held at the State theatre. Following the radio programs the stars went to the Orpheum theatre where more personal appearances were made. The picture was held over for a second week.

Early Goldwyn Decision Seen

An early decision from the United States circuit court of appeals on Samuel Goldwyn's action seeking a declaratory judgment that his United Artists releasing contract has been breached is expected, it was said, following the close of arguments this week in Philadelphia on Mr. Goldwyn's appeal from the lower court decision dismissing the action.

Max D. Steuer, attorney for Mr. Goldwyn, urged an early opinion from the court on the ground that a determination of the case is of urgent economic importance to the producer. The court's decision its expected within a month, whereas ordinarily opinions are not handed down by the court for at least three months after hearings.

Mr. Steuer said that if the lower court is reversed trial of the Goldwyn action against United Artists will proceed immediately.

Columbia Stockholder List Sought in Suit

James F. Burke, a Columbia stockholder, has filed proceedings in the New York supreme court to compel Columbia to turn over a list of its stockholders for the alleged pupose of obtaining stockholders' support for an action to dissolve the company.

Mr. Burke claims six grounds of dissolution: war conditions, the anti-trust suit, television, high salaries of officers, the Neely Bill and the loss of Frank Capra.

In an answering affidavit, Abe Schneider, treasurer of Columbia, scoffed at the suit as "preposterous" and brought without "good faith." Mr. Schneider pointed out that Columbia earned $400,000 in the last quarter of 1939 and said that prospects of Columbia and the film industry in general are good.

RCA Asks Dismissal

Vincent T. Leibell, federal judge, this week in New York ordered notification be sent to Robert Jackson, U. S. Attorney General, that Radio Corporation of America had attacked the constitutionality of Federal legislation in an application to dismiss the stockholder's suit of J. Webster Manning. RCA claims that Mr. Manning, as a resident of the District of Columbia, cannot bring suit in federal court in New York. Mr. Manning attacked subscription by RCA of RKO debentures prior to the latter's reorganization.

Transfer Spaeth Suit

The suit of Sigmund Spaeth against Warners for $500,000 damages has been transferred from the New York supreme court to the U. S. district court. Mr. Spaeth claims that he was libeled by the part of "Professor Hardwick" in the Warner film, "Naughty But Nice."

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

Some Finger-Pointing at Passes

Since arguing with one's self is neither conducive to normal blood pressure nor tranquility of mind, your Chairman has decided that the time has come again to stop mumbling into his beard and speak up firmly about that old sickness—the pass evil.

It may be we have been closing weary eyes to it or, perhaps, a greater number of campaigns attached to pass tieins have lately come to this desk. Whatever the reason, the evidence to hand forces an opinion that, to effect what they hope will become profitable exploitations, too many managers appear to be leaning more heavily than is healthful upon passes for tieins.

One campaign reported as "costless" casually mentions "only 150 passes" as the entire cost of a promotion. Another member reports some 300 or 400 youngsters as guests of the theatre in return for newspaper publicity. Still another offers 25 pairs of passes per day for six days on a contest. And so forth. It would seem that pass tieins start arbitrarily at a minimum of 100 or thereabouts. This is something to consider.

As long as there is theatre business, there will be passes. It is too much to expect that a procedure born of economic expediency in the early days of showbusiness and maintained as a part of industry procedure should be dismissed with a carefully chosen handful of words. Passes do work certain magics. They often accomplish what money cannot. Granted further that passes are token money in payment for poster locations, for professional courtesies and contacts. These are limits beyond which the theatreman is not to venture unless any offer of passes promises a definite increase in grosses that might not otherwise be had.

Any attempt to eradicate pass evils must be preceded by a tracing of their sources. An immediate and most obvious source points numerously to the "goodwill and prestige" of tieins that bring less than expected returns, if even that much. These cooperations take different forms. But most work in the same direction, wherein the theatre's part is to give free admissions in exchange for publicity or organizational endorsement that may resolve into concrete expression at the box-office.

Another source, as apparent, is the miscalled "costless" campaign. Here a definite and often alarming number of free admissions is given in exchange for outside participation by merchants, newspapers, etc.

There are other "sore spots" with which theatremen are familiar. But a more realistic handling of the two here set down may go far in effecting a general cure.

By now, progressive newspapers, merchants and aspiring organizations recognize the returns to be had from motion picture tieins. In a highly competitive world, the possibilities of extra attentions through nationally publicized star names and picture titles are hardly to be ignored. Judged by the returns to be had from thoughtfully planned cooperations, why should it be necessary for the theatreman to give more than he receives?

It may be that home-office demand for promotional activity spurs the manager to such lengths in obtaining outside tieins. It may also be the manager's own short-sightedness in offering passes instead of a mutually beneficial plan. No matter what, let us face the fact that outside contacts have been educated by the theatreman to play "hard to get" when it should be the other way around.

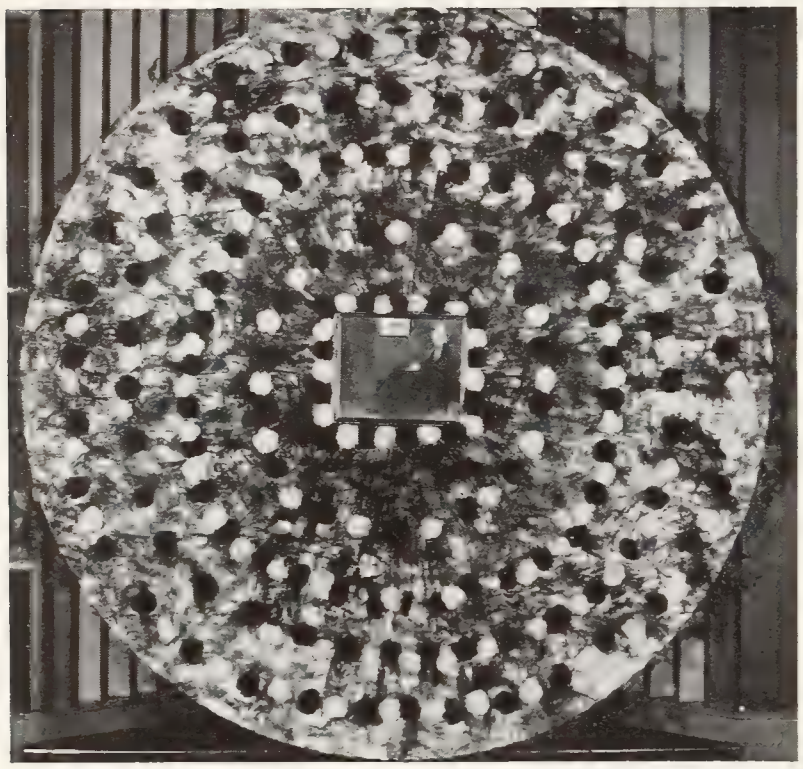
A pass represents the occupation of a theatre seat. Every occupied seat represents a part of the grosses which keeps the manager working, his theatre operating. Thus, a seat is actual money. But only when sold. So why give it away when that's the only thing we have to sell?



How long would the pass evil exist if the manager was called upon to offer in actual cash the amount represented by the number of passes he now gives so freely?

Round Table In Pictures

Credited by zone ad head, Frank LaFalce, to Manager Lawrence E. Snoots was the Mother's Day display at Warner's Sheridan, Washington, D. C. The circle was of white pleated paper with paper carnations of red and white with intermittent sprays of asparagus fern. Center of setpiece featured photo of Whistler's Mother.

Request copy in Paul Ketchum's advance ads on "Virginia City" at Schine's Strand, Seneca Falls, N. Y., brought old letters from readers in possession of mail postmarked from that western city. Letters were nucleus for lobby setpiece which attracted as did the postage stamps for philatelists.

Featured in the lobby of the Los Angeles, United Artists theatre was Tom Soriero's display for "20 Mule Team", highlight of which was mule team made entirely from crystal borax. Also featured were samples of mineral as it comes from the desert and finished products of the same. Entire display was floodlighted for effect.

Giant electric sign, 38 feet in diameter, covering back wall of the theatre was a conspicuous item in the campaign reported by Homer Harman, ad head for "Lillian Russell" at the New York Roxy. Added attractor was Neon lighting of outer circle and Faye's cane.

Caricature cutout of Jack Benny in cowboy outfit formed the basis of City Manager George Limerick's "Buck Benny" lobby display at Griffiths' Aztec, in Enid, Okla., with tiein copy alongside.

'Town' Proclaimed On Boston Opening

In honor of the picture's New England background, the Boston premiere on "Our Town" day was proclaimed by Mayor Tobin, of Boston, to signalize the premiere of the date at Loew's State and Orpheum theatres. In conjunction with the event, a concentrated drive by the United Artists and Loew's ad forces was put on to bring visitors from all New England, special trains and bus trips arranged for the event. For this purpose, posting covered a 200-mile area, with tack cards and directional arrows reading "This is the Way to Our Town."

Prominent at the premiere was the "Emily and George" group, consisting of pairs of boys most closely resembling the two juvenile leads in the picture. The winners, brought from 31 surrounding communities, were chosen in contests sponsored by newspapers and radio with the cooperation of school authorities. Chaperoned by the Mayors of their towns, the boys and girls were presented with dinner jackets and evening gowns for the opening.

The proceedings were given further prestige with the attendance of governors of the New England States and their staffs, Boston civic authorities headed by the Mayor, board of trade officials and members of the New England council. On hand also was a delegation from Petersborough, N. H., the town around which the story was written. The opening was broadcast over the Yankee network, with guest stars from Hollywood introduced from the theatre lobbies.

Child Popularity Contest Good Business for Marquis

Running for a period of six weeks was the child popularity contest arranged by Jo Marquis at the Egyptian, in Brighton, Mass., and for which cooperation of local photographer was enlisted. A little extra business was garnered by the theatreman, since free photos of contestants were offered providing the pictures were taken in the theatre by cooperating studio, appointments made on request. Pictures after development were taken to entrants' homes, at which time parents made selection of photo to be entered in the contest.

For the duration of the contest, photos were displayed in theatre lobby, interested patrons being asked to vote for their favorites. On designated night winner's name was announced from stage, with special cup award presentation. Colored photos were given to second and third place winners.

Columbus Sneak Preview Proves Top "Wife" Idea

A takeoff on Hollywood sneak previews was used on "My Favorite Wife". The picture was suddenly dropped into the regular Monday night program, without warning, three days in advance of opening. Replaced regular second feature. Surprised audience was advised picture would open regular run three days later. Although Monday night patrons knew nothing of this sneak preview, 150 preview invitations were distributed to hand-picked, cross-sectioned audience that had never seen a preview. Name of picture was kept secret until screening time. Element of surprise to patrons expecting regular second feature. Curiosity aroused among those invited by secretiveness of "sneak" cards, plus fine audience reaction following showing.

Started a splendid word-of-mouth advertising campaign. Preview card copy follows: "Sneak Preview. Present this card at the RKO Palace, Monday evening, May 20, at 9:00 P. M. for the first sneak preview ever held in Columbus in true Hollywood style. One of the greatest comedy hits of all time will be suddenly thrown on the screen. As this sneak preview will not be advertised, we ask that you please keep this information absolutely confidential until you have seen this picture. Admit two." This stunt proved to be one of the most worthwhile and profitable exploitation ideas we have ever used.

Denver Newspaper Campaign Stresses "Divorcement"

On "Bill of Divorcement" we are using an extensive campaign. However, most of it is in newspaper advertising, outdoor billing and radio, using 1,000 lines extra in newspapers. We received many extra stories. Billings were placed in 500 windows throughout the city through the use of cards and one-sheets. Radio announcements daily over three stations for one week in advance. Used stills for fashion tieups in many prominent windows.

MICKEY GROSS,
Manager, RKO Orpheum, Denver.

Nyberg Fetes June Bride

With June the month of brides, Manager Oscar Nyberg at the Fox, Spokane, Wash., prepared an elaborate campaign which included cooperation of merchants who outfitted a local "June Bride of 1940," so selected by local prominents from photos submitted by entrants. Prizes of merchandise were presented on stage opening night of "Irene," highlight of the promotion being an attractive trailer run 10 days ahead of opening of the musical production.

Poorman's "Cyclops" Reducer

The "Dr. Cyclops" reducing gag at the Avon, Utica, N. Y., was used the poorman's way, according to Manager Arnold Stoltz, who borrowed two reducing glasses and fastened them back of the cutout eyes in a giant head of the mad physician with spectacles painted on the face to carry out the illusion. When patrons, invited to look, did so they saw the usual 14-inch girl who varied the idea by modeling sport clothes on a promotion made by Stoltz with local shops.

SHOWMEN'S LOBBY LAFFS

Another incident in the tumultuous career of the fabulous Marquee Mike, as depicted here by his creator, Glenn Franke of Cheviot, Ohio.

Schultz Promotes Bank For Ad on "Jack Pot"

To sell his "Jack Pot" short, one of the Crime Doesn't Pay" series, Manager John R. Schultz of the Liberty Theatre, in Sharon, Pa., promoted bank for an ad on the front page of the second section of newspaper, which was tied directly into the picture and referred to the opening.

Contacting the Junior Chamber of Commerce, Schultz received their endorsement which was used in his newspaper publicity, organization also giving the short a very nice writeup in their publication which goes to all members and business houses in Sharon. This John reports as a first time for any theatre publicity to appear in that paper and he feels it will serve as an opening wedge for future tieins.

Nolan Stresses Humor In Benny Campaign

Gag lobby was arranged for "Buck Benny Rides Again" at Schine's Athens, in Athens, Ohio, by Manager Frank Nolan who planted an old fashioned hobby horse and hitching rack which was tied up with card bearing appropriate copy. Cake of ice was also planted in lobby, inside of which was frozen a card with Carmichael copy. Contest angle was featured through tieup with local paper, guest tickets going to those submitting most humorous sentences, assembled from words taken from different merchants' ads.

"Rebecca" coverage included teaser sidewalk stencil consisting of title name, giant foyer display featured 11 by 14 photos in shape of book on electric turntable, walking book street bally was also used and midget imprinted blotters were distributed room-to-room in fraternities, sororities and dormitories.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Eytinge's Midweek Show

What he chose to call an "After School-Twin Hit Show" is reported to have brought results for Henry Eytinge at the Grange, in Philadelphia, feature being "Charlie McCarthy Detective" and the second half consisting of Disney prize reels. To put the midweek show over, Henry made announcements from the stage to kiddies on a previous Saturday; distributed heralds, carried an extra line in his ads, set up a special 40 by 60 in his lobby and offered promoted shoes to lucky boys and girls attending opening show.

Palmer to Repeat High School Night

Put on the opening day of "Village Barn Dance" and proven popular enough for an early repeat was Harry M. Palmer's High School Night at the Majestic, Seymour, Ind., the event built around a quiz program and community sing. Showing of the picture was preceded by a singing contest based on two of Columbia's sing reels. At conclusion, stage was used for the musical quiz with high school orchestra participating. School teacher who acted as M.C. called the "class" to order announcing that new pupils would be enrolled from audience. Orchestra then played bits of songs and students identifying these were invited to sit on stage. Musical test of winning students that followed brought cash prizes. Special section was set aside for the high school with contest entrants recruited from among student leaders.

Exploitation on the picture included life-size cutouts of Lulubelle and Scotty, the stars, popular locally because of their radio program. Patrons were invited to pose for free pictures behind the cutouts, the finished photos making it appear as though the stars were present in the flesh. Front was converted into a barn effect with farm tools for props. For favors, large lollypops were promoted for the audience.

Stresses Personal Endorsement

Since the title of the picture is the same as the song hit written by Hoagy Carmichael, formerly a resident in that sector and an alumnus of the local university, Palmer tied his date on "Stardust" to the composer by a personal endorsement telegram campaign. The fact that the theatreman was formerly associated with the song writer was helpful in the tiein. To all alumni in the university Palmer forwarded personal letters on the attraction. The song was featured by the high school band during the program. The thank-you wire from Carmichael, addressed to Palmer, and plugging the date, was reproduced in the local paper and copies pasted on windows in the downtown district with theatre credits for further attention.

Barcroft Invites May Queen to "'Til We Meet Again" Opening

Ohio State University's "May Queen and her Court" were invited by Johnny Barcroft to attend the opening of "'Til We Meet Again" at the RKO Palace, in Columbus, Ohio; college newspaper was supplied with a feature story on the special invitation. Street attractor was 10-foot cut-out blowup of Merle Oberon, which was planted in front of theatre, college queen posing for pictures with the star which were later used for publicity purposes.

Theatre employees cooperated in a word-of-mouth campaign by saying "'Til We Meet Again" in all their conversations instead of the usual "goodbye," "so long," etc. Gag cards were distributed about town, one side reading "'Til We Meet Again," other with copy "We'll be seeing you at the RKO Palace."

Street Congested On "Irene" Tiein

Through the efforts of Manager George E. French and house publicist, Bill Morton, blue as a fashionable color was given much impetus locally for the date on "Irene" at the RKO Albee, Providence. Elaborate "Alice Blue Gown" windows were obtained in leading department stores, and a classified insertion, two days ahead, also pointed in the same direction. The ad read that the first 25 girls appearing at the theatre on opening night dressed in blue, would be given free admission. Gag caused congestion out front, Morton reports. Fashion publicity was topped with a page layout of star shots and co-op ads with leading dress shops were also prominent in the campaign.

Outstanding radio promotions covered a program of hit numbers from the show over WPRO and a girl named Irene on WJAR's "Where are you going?" street interview broadcast, the tiein being buildup of the picture which the girl had just seen at the theatre.

For a wider tieup on each change of program, the theatre is being plugged with leading boat line to New York, wherein on return trips to Providence, the boat's cruise director offers as prizes for various games, two pairs of tickets to the Albee. In exchange, the shows are given a direct plug before the passengers.

O'Rear Reduces Locals For "Cyclops" Opening

Smart gagging for "Dr. Cyclops," at the W&J Colonial, Harrisburg, Pa., was introduced by Manager J. D. O'Rear in a newspaper tiein that sold the date uniquely with the assistance of local prominents. O'Rear promoted the citizens, including the Mayor, to pose for photos which were reduced in size and superimposed against nominal size backgrounds. Run for a series of days, each of the gag layouts carried copy to the effect that the locals had been reduced by the fearsome doctor.

The theatreman also promoted a reducing display used by local bakery chain. Exhibit parked next to the theatre featured a "three-inch" man who invited questions from onlookers and in return advised attendance at the picture. Trailer calling attention to the unusual exhibit squared the ballyhoo for O'Rear and is credited by him for building up the extra interest.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

DiPesa's "Melody" Date

Music tieups highlighted Joe DiPesa's "Broadway Melody" date at Loew's State and Orpheum Theatres, in Boston with such coverage as music wrappers in numerous stores bearing picture imprint, window displays featured in department and leading music stores, and plugs received over stations WEEI, WBZ, WCOP and WORL. Newspaper tieins included layouts in the roto section of the Sunday Herald, beauty page breaks using Eleanor Powell art and leading beauty salon came through with a co-op ad on the star's new headdress.

GENERAL ELECTRIC TIED TO "EDISON"

On "Edison the Man" at Loew's State, Cleveland, Manager Ev Steinbuch supplied imprinted cards to the local General Electric plant, at Nela Park, for insertion in pay envelopes. Copy was an announcement of the date, with emphasis on the invention of the incandescent lamp. Cards measured three by nine inches, corresponding to envelope size.

In addition, arrangements were made with the company for the purchase of 6,000 tickets at full price for use on four weekdays and publicized in honor of the company.

Theatremen Hosts On 'Mother's Day'

The growing popularity of "Mother's Day" was tied in variously, with theatremen generally executing campaigns built around various events in honor of the parents. Attention was called to the programs on the Big Day by Chuck Shannon, at Warners' Boulevard, Pittsburgh, for instance, with the copy line in regular advertising: "Treat Mother to a Show Sunday." Followup to this was an insert calling attention to a flower giveaway, roses promoted from florist in return for lobby credit card, florist additionally supplying special bouquet for display, the tiein credited by Shannon to his assistant, Sklar. Other important publicity for the event included a special column by Chuck in the neighborhood weekly and trailer on the giveaway, headed: "A Flower for the Queen of Our Hearts."

In Laporte, Ind., at the Roxy, Manager J. R. Wheeler tied the local daily to a special party for all mothers over 70, cooperating cab company calling for the ladies and returning them to their homes after the show. Promoted roses were given to the guests who also were treated to special refreshments at a nearby confectioner's. Paper contributed advance publicity plus a two-column display ad, asking that eligible mothers write to the theatre giving names, age, address. Florist and cab company were also credited in the copy. Week ahead, imprinted lapel ribbons were worn by the house personnel.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Kalberer Promotes Paper On "Pinocchio" Opening

Scattered throughout the classified ad section of daily paper were the names of localities who were invited by A. J. Kalberer of the Indiana, in Washington, Ind., to see "Pinocchio" as his guest. Also planted in the same paper was a coloring contest for kids on which tickets were awarded, contest was played up in co-op ad page.

As an advance teaser on "The Doctor Takes a Wife," Kalberer distributed small pay envelopes with title printed on front, inside contained capsule with picture message enclosed.

Circusing Sells "Million B.C."

Concentrated circus-type exploitation makes up the most popular selling attack for "One Million B.C.," as indicated in the current campaigns reported. In Waterbury, Conn., as an instance, Ed Fitzpatrick, at Loew's Poli, made up a giant cutout of Victor Mature, the lead, the base of which was lettered with title. The figures was supported by a large shield which carried copy asking onlookers to compare their measurements with the "perfect man of One Million B.C.," the star's measurements listed below. Entrants were asked to secure comparison blanks at the theatre. Many entries were secured for the prizes of passes, since the cutout was carried about the main streets, parked at busy corners and in front of leading stores.

For laugh purposes, Fitz had a man on the streets in long woolen underwear, with sign attached. Copy read: "Amazed? Don't be. Save your amazement for," etc., etc. On the more serious side, the Round Tabler was able to receive cooperation from the local historical society where a display of dinosaur and other prehistoric animals, open to the public, was pointed up with posters and stills from the picture.

The date at the Paramount, Denver, was spotlighted by Manager Harold Rice with a giant plaster cast model of a dinosaur enclosed in a cage and wheeled about town in a large bannered truck. Man dressed in animal skins and carrying war club, acted as "keeper." The float was timed to pass the heavily populated school zones when the students were on the streets, which gave occasion for frequent traffic jams. For lobby attention, Rice promoted showing of an armadillo and alligator. Tiein copy read: "Monsters like these weighing 70 tons apiece can be seen," etc., etc.

Three-way tieup in which newspaper, Station WGAU and furniture store cooperated was arranged by City Manager Moon Corker for "It's a Date" at the L&J Palace, in Athens, Ga., with a contest angle featured. Since the store exclusively sells a brand of cedar chest used by Deanna Durbin in the picture, one of these was awarded to the winner presenting the best 50-word letter on why Deanna chose that make chest for her wardrobe, letter accompanied by theatre ticket stub. Store ran large three-colum co-op ad and devoted window display to the chests with appropriate tiein copy and life-size cutout of the star.

Some Tips On Cooling Comfort and Telling the Folks About It

Ohio Round Tabler Outlines Ideas to "Beat the Heat"

by DICK WRIGHT
District Manager, Warner Ohio Theatres

Taking the simmer out of summer once again confronts the theatre manager. In checking through our filed copies of the Round Table Pages, I find a great number of selling suggestions, which if coupled with your regular campaigns will go a long way in indelibly impressing your townspeople that "It's comfortable at your theatre tonight."

A tough spot to be in, of course, is to have a theatre where there is no cooling plant. Those who have this condition to contend with naturally want to do everything possible to keep their patrons comfortable. Of some help we would suggest that you re-arrange the hours of your cleaning staff if they are already not coming in around midnight or very early in the morning. While the theatre is being cleaned every door and window should be opened to permit new cool fresh air to come into the theatre and at a set time, they should all be closed tight until the house opens. To offset heat on the outside of the theatre, our managers have found that a good drenching on the walls, roof, etc., will cool to some extent. General appearance of your house and staff will help.

If your theatre is equipped with a plant, make sure that your house is sealed and under pressure so that the air rush can only escape through your front doors. Skylights, backstage, doors, and dressing room windows should be checked to make sure they are closed. Keep your house comfortable . . . if it's too cool, it will hurt you more than help you.

"Name-a-Drink Idea"

Having satisfied yourself that your plant is operating efficiently and properly, make sure that your community is aware that your theatre is comfortable. The following suggestions have been carried through with in previous seasons by our men and found to be effective. Twist them around to suit your own particular needs:—

Ice cream and bottled drink manufacturers are applying pressure to their business more than ever, now! How about getting one of them to name a drink after one of your theatre's permanent personalities, or bring out a special brick of ice cream each week, named after the star of the picture on your screen that week? The tieup should include:

Distribution of printed napkins; soda fountain stickers; window stickers—cards; banners on manufacturers' cars and trucks; co-op newspaper ads.

Suggests Star Tiein

Have one of the stars wire the manufacturer thanks for the compliment and have Postal blow up this wire for display in their windows. Send the stars a brick of the ice cream by air, express, packed in dry ice which the manufacturer can supply. Get the air lines to publicize this.

Front porches in residential districts are always the popular family gathering place after the evening meal. Have your boys distribute from porch to porch a neat four-page institutional folder made up with a photo of your plant and a personal message from you urging them to "C'mon Down and Relax in Cool Comfort and Enjoy a Good Show Tonight!" An appeal worded in intimate phraseology as if you yourself were personally inviting Mr. Jones to your theatre will have a tendency to create the urge to get off of that porch. Have boys begin their distribution between six thirty and seven o'clock.

'Phone Contacts Favored

Along these same personal angles have your cashiers or service staff members telephone in the early evening people in your town telling them that your cooling plant is working swell and it certainly is a pleasure to find such a cool spot to relax.

Dress attractive girl in bathing suit and place in window with camera. Tie-in your cooling plant to form background using large blowup enlargement of photo with copy "Cool as a Lake Breeze." Have girl snap pictures of persons who pause to look at window and post a number of pictures the following day for winners of tickets to your theatre. Electric fans blowing green paper tassels at background will help in carrying out breeze idea.

Tie-in with merchants on cooperative display page such as "The Ohio and These Canton Merchants Say It's Easy to Keep Cool." Suggested firms for tap ads—fountain service stores, sport shoes, laundrys, dine-out ads, household renovating companies, men's stores handling summer suits, etc. Merchants can offer morning bargains, urging women to shop during the morning hours and cool off at the Ohio, etc. Theatre plugs early shopping on the screen.

Slogan Contest Found Profitable

Have director of your town's Weather Bureau photographed at your plant with story telling how the weather man envies the theatre manager . . . the theatre's weather is made to order.

Tie-in with classified department of your paper with streamer "Let the News Want Ad Rent Your Apartment or Summer Cottage While You Keep Cool and Comfortable at the Ohio Theatre."

Run a contest for the best "cool" slogan for your theatre. Lobby displays, window displays and cooperative newspaper space for those tying in on the prizes to be awarded the winners.

As part of your slogan contest you might tie-up local refrigerator store for a prize, displaying same in lobby with coils frosted, appropriately placarded. Include gold fish, running water, sea weed, freezing pipes and multi-colored spotlights to dress display.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger (†) symbol indicates picture is of the 1939-40 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

sitting down 100,000 times

—that's what a seat upholstered in CAVALON* can stand!

IN the Du Pont laboratories at Fairfield, Conn., where CAVALON is made, there's a mechanical impact testing machine called the "Seat Tester." This machine, illustrated at the right, exerts a downward force of two hundred pounds on a stationary cushion upholstered in CAVALON over 100,000 times without a break! This, in itself, is dynamic proof of the amazing durability of CAVALON heavy-duty upholstery fabric.

CAVALON is made by a special "case-hardening" process. It resists edgewear, cracking, peeling and flexing. Its good-looking colors are washable and highly resistant to crocking, bleeding and fading. No wonder theatre owners the country over are so enthusiastic about CAVALON! It will pay you, too, when re-upholstering old seats or buying new equipment to specify CAVALON. Samples and complete information sent on request. E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. (Inc.), "Fabrikoid" Div., Fairfield, Conn.

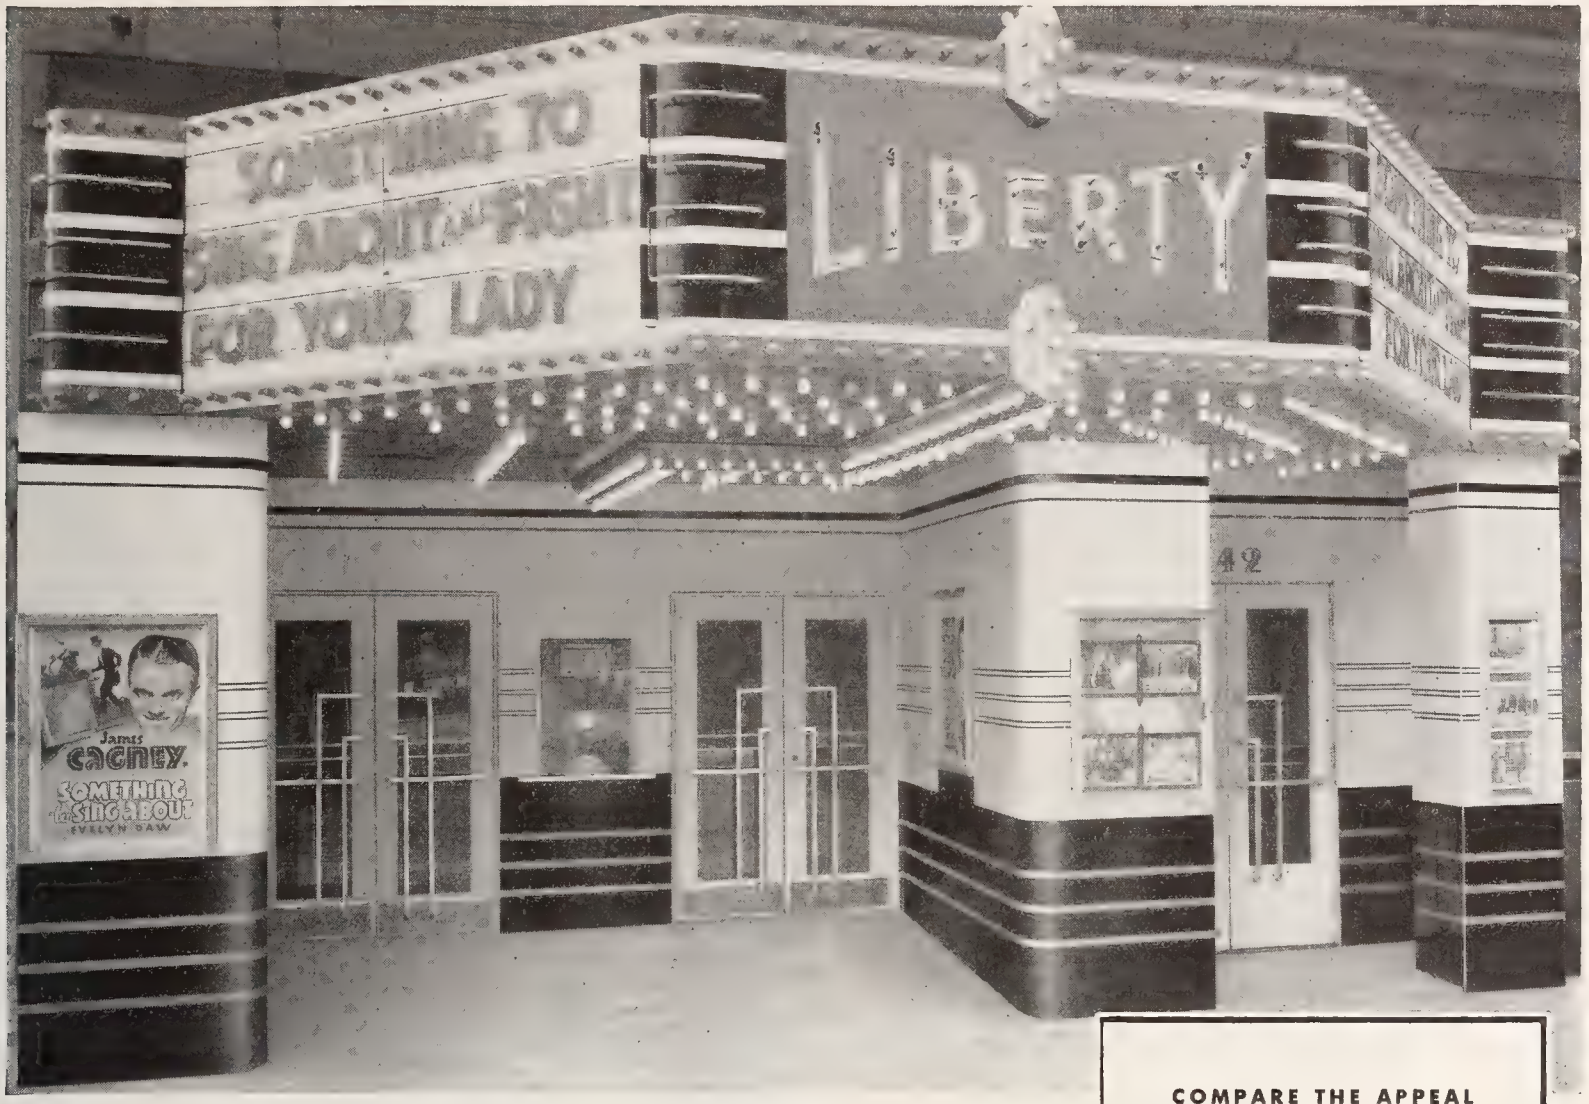
All sizes project a travelling message and are adapted to quick changes of copy.

Lamp Prices Reduced

INCLUDED AMONG almost 100 types and sizes of Mazda lamps for which prices have just been reduced, are fluorescent and projection lamps. The reduction, announced by General Electric and Westinghouse, is the twentieth major decrease in lamp prices in the last nineteen years.

Affecting the prices of blue, green, gold and red fluorescent lamps, as well as the daylight and white, the reduction for this class of light source is indicated by the following changes announced for daylight and white fluorescent lamps:



The 15-watt, 18-inch lamps, reduced from $1.15 to 95c; 20-watt, 24-inch—from $1.65 to $1.25; 30-watt, 36-inch—from $1.50 to $1.25; and 40-watt, 48-inch—from $2.30 to $1.90.

Of the Mazda projection lamps, the 750-watt T-12 has been reduced from $4.50 to $4.10, while the 1,000-watt T-20 Mogul base lamps, including the prefocus type, have been cut from $5.25 to $4.75. The 1-000-watt T-20 prefocus lamps, with medium base, formerly $5, is now $4.50.

School Days Again For Theatre Folks

SOMETHING LIKE 200 exhibitors and theatre technicians rewarded, by their attendance, the efforts of the University of Oklahoma last month to give the theatre people of its state some "higher education" in their business. The school's engineering department, under W. H. Carson, dean, and with the assistance of Prof. Ansel Challener, sound engineer, had organized a "short course" for exhibitors and projectionists, which was offered May 20 and 21 at the university in Norman, at a fee of one dollar per theatre represented. "Students" came from 46 communities in Oklahoma, and from two towns in Texas, practically all of them entitled to feel that they already knew pretty much about practical theatre operation, but still not averse to exposing themselves to some more larnin'.

The "course" consisted in lectures and demonstrations by men both in and out of showbusiness, dealing exclusively with the affairs of physical operation as distinguished from pictures and their exploitation. One of the papers is given substantially in full elsewhere in this issue (page 42).

Manager's Job One of Details

C. B. Akers, general manager of the Griffith Amusement Company, covered the broad ground of management responsibility, which he said resolved itself into close attention to details in every department of the theatre. The theatre proprietor or his manager should be prepared to deal with conditions pertaining to screen lighting, sound volume, auditorium temperature, employe contacts with the public, and similar details of operation.

►Many of the exhibitors saw for the first time actual fluorescent carpeting, in a demonstration of some of the new tricks in theatre lighting accompanying a paper by E. L. Pickens of the Oklahoma Gas & Electric Company. He discussed the use of "black light" in general as a rapidly developing medium of theatre decoration.

Show Need for Latest Equipment

Projection and sound of course occupied a dominant place on the program, with papers by Herbert Griffin, vice president of International Projector; Alan Chapman of RCA's Dallas office, Roy Boomer of Motiograph, Eldon Peek of the Oklahoma Theatre Supply Company, Roy Tyack of Altec, and F. H. Richardson. These showed how vital to effective exhibition of today's motion picture are the latest types of projection and sound equipment.

Additionally, E. R. Geib of the National Carbon Company, presented a paper on carbons suited to the successful reproduction of color films; while Gaylord Giles of Bell & Howell discussed the use of 16-mm. equipment to augment standard projection facilities, particularly for the exhiibtion of "local newsreels."

Air-conditioning was also dealt with, but with respect to fundamental principles rather than to applied theatre engineering. The latter is probably what the average theatre man wants to hear about air-conditioning, and considerable material is readily available on his specific interests.

►But there may be other "short courses" on theatre management at the University of Oklahoma at which the important subject of air-conditioning could receive due practical notice. And why not such larnin' bees for theatre folk at other engineering schools of the country?

The amount of heat given off by the human body is, of course, a matter of considerable concern in theatre operation—which fact provides all the excuse needed to submit this record of an experiment conducted by the Carrier air-conditioning folk at their 1940 New York World's Fair "igloo." Three gals tested their heat-giving proclivities—a blonde, a brunette, a red-head. Guess who gave most! . . . You're right.

Projection Room Max- and Minima

Be it known that the Projection Practice Committee of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers doesn't like BETTER THEATRES' effort, in the May issue (page 35), to provide a projection scheme meeting minimum space requirements. The article and the accompanying plans were vigorously discussed at the committee's session on May 23 in New York, at which John J. Sefing, who prepared the specifications given in the article, and who is a member of the committee, was accused of something like treachery to the SMPE in its endeavors to raise theatre standards.

Following the meeting a letter was dispatched to the editor of BETTER THEATRES by Harry Rubin, chairman of the committee, enumerating the committee's objections to the article.

Not Recommendations, But a Warning

The committee fears that because Mr. Sefing is a member, the specifications he gives in the article may be considered recommendations of the committee.

They are not. In fact, they are not the recommendations of BETTER THEATRES. The opening sentence of the article amounts to a warning:

►"In advising on the planning of the projection room, one familiar with the needs of theatres today, with the regulations of governmental authorities, and with the standards that the motion picture industry properly endeavors to enforce, is wary of suggesting anything short of the ideal."

►The purpose of the article?—"This discussion is concerned wholly with the practical situation confronting a specific group of theatre operators who find themselves interested in properties which can be adapted to modern motion picture exhibition only by an acceptance of minimum facilities."

The article was the ultimate result of several years' of dealing with inquiries from readers concerning the planning of theatres. A large proportion of the inquiries, relating to theatres of only two or three hundred seats, often in small store buildings, showed clearly that some pretty horrible projection layouts were being contemplated in the absence of guidance.

B-T Plans "Non-Standard"? Right!

Mr. Rubin's letter states that the "recommendations" in BETTER THEATRES are "unofficial, non-standard and in some case impossible of application." As the article painstakingly points out at its beginning, the specifications given are not to be taken as "recommendations." As for their being unofficial and non-standard, so are all specifications not required under law, and nowhere has the SMPE projection room plan, calling for a room 16x12x8 feet, been made legally compulsory.

▶It is true that in some cases some of Mr. Sefing's specifications would be "impossible of application." They are minimum specifications, below which not even a tiny storeroom theatre should go, and naturally they are subject to modification to meet local regulations. Said the fourth paragraph:

"Every theatre, whether it has a small or a large projection room, should have projection plans approved by its local city or state authorities before any remodeling or new construction. The following data are intended to help the theatre owner familiarize himself with the absolute-minimum requirements of the small theatre projection room. . . "

The Matter of Insurance Rates

Mr. Rubin further writes that Mr. Sefing's scheme might lead to higher insurance rates. Fire insurance, we assume. The National Fire Protection Association recommends a projection room 14x10x8 feet; it also recommends two exits, whereas Mr. Sefing allowed one. These are matters pertinent to the convenience and efficiency of the projectionist, and to his personal safety, not to fire hazard. (Incidentally, a bill submitted at the last session of the New York State Legislature sought to establish a minimum of 72 square feet for projection room floors; Mr. Sefing's dimensions amount to 70 square feet.)

▶Mr. Rubin's only other criticism concerns the space between the projectors. The SMPE recommends 5 feet from center line to center line; Mr. Sefing said, on the basis of actual measurements of Simplex SRI projectors, that 4 feet would do if available space permitted no more.

The whole scheme, of course, represented an intensely practical attempt to deal with a specific situation, and in that sense, it expresses an interest in bringing about acceptable standards where otherwise conditions might be wholly inadequate.

▶And here it may not be amiss to point out that John J. Sefing has been handling theatre equipment installation specifications for many years, for both architects and equipment distributors.

Come Close as Possible to SMPE Scheme!

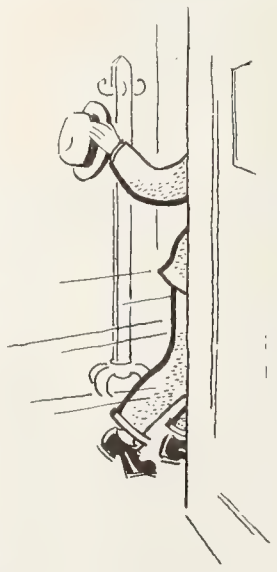
▶The projection room plans and layouts developed by the Projection Practice Committee of the SMPE do, of course, give the specifications to shoot at. All theatres today should have projection facilities better than those indicated in Mr. Sefing's scheme—they should come as close as possible to the SMPE recommendations.

▶The first publication of the SMPE plans, outside of the society's Journal, was in BETTER THEATRES (December 1935). They were slightly revised a year or so ago, and the modifications were noted in BETTER THEATRES of January, 1939.

A large supply of the SMPE booklets containing the revised specifications were obtained by BETTER THEATRES and have been mailed out with replies to inquiries on planning problems, making BETTER THEATRES the principal medium, other than the society itself, for the distribution of the SMPE projection room recommendations.

A few copies are still available from BETTER THEATRES, or they may be obtained by writing the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, Pennsylvania Hotel, New York City.

APOLOGY FOR MR. LEE



Many readers will recall a letter published in the April issue from Mr. S. Charles Lee, the eminent Los Angeles theatre architect. It discussed balconies, what to do with them, if at all. But inasmuch as Mr. Lee does not specialize exclusively in balconies, we expected to have a letter shortly on some other matter concerning the theatre—the planning of seating so that patrons may share the arms rests equitably and amicably, or something of equal importance. We even wrote him, asking questions calculated to disturb him into making a lively, instructive reply. And this space was duly reserved for it. Now the following letter is submitted without further comment. It speaks, we believe, for itself.—THE EDITOR.

Dear Editor:

This ought to be a letter apologizing for my boss, Mr. S. Charles Lee, but I can tell you truthfully that my heart isn't in it. I have brought to his attention all those matters that you have been expecting to hear from him about almost every day—I mean, I have brought them to his attention almost every day (I was very good in English when I was in school, but somehow this job—oh, well, skip it). However, just when he gets started dictating a letter, the telephone rings and Mr. Lee says into the transmitter, "I'll be there in ten minutes." Then he grabs his hat and yells at me, "Back in ten minutes." Then two hours later he shows up and explains. "Another job, dammit, I had to go out to look at the site." It is none of my business what Mr. Lee does with his time, of course. I am only his secretary. Still, I am conscientious about having him answering his mail on time. I think any secretary should be conscientious, don't you?

Of course, Mr. Lee is a very busy man. One must always take such things into consideration. He designs more than just theatres, you know. Someone called up one time and asked, "Your office does only theatres, doesn't it?" It made me so mad I said something like, "We design everything from fish houses to million dollar piers." I don't know how million dollar piers came into my mind, because I don't think Mr. Lee was ever the architect of even a cheap pier, but I suppose fish houses suggested itself or rather themselves, because Mr. Lee once told me that the houses in which people smoke fish were among the first jobs he had had. I wouldn't mention that outside the office if it were not for the fact that he has gone so far in his profession since then.

It isn't only his running out right in the middle of things which is so annoying. It is his attitude toward flying. When he has to go to some other city quite a long distance away, he goes in his plane, and being a licensed pilot, he insists on running it himself. He says this not only get him there quicker, but that flying is his relaxation. I can tell you it is not any relaxation to me. If anything ever happened I wouldn't know how to handle half the things he leaves me with unfinished.

Of course, I am not trying to unload my troubles on anyone. I am just writing to explain why Mr. Lee has not written that letter yet. I hope I haven't put him in a bad light. After all, Mr. Lee is not a bad person to work for. He has so much vim and enthusiasm he keeps the rest of us in the office stepping to keep pace with him. In fact, I guess I had better stop right now and dig up a fresh supply of vim and enthusiasm for myself. You never know when he'll get back.

Yours very truly,

MILDRED S. MERRILL,
Secretary to Mr. S. Charles Lee.

P.S.—He just came in the door, but it's too late to do that letter today.

Interior Materials Today

FOUR THEATRE DESIGNERS DISCUSS TRENDS, METHODS AND COSTS

MANY are the materials, old and new, which are well suited to the making of attractive theatre interiors; and many are the different approaches to the whole matter of theatre interior design. Space and time, however, call a halt somewhere—not all of those prominently concerned with theatre design could be included in this symposium; nor can they exhaust the list of eligible materials in their comment. But here are four such representatives of theatre architecture, with observations, out of their own experience, on at least a goodly number of materials. They offer authoritative guidance, each according to his point of view, within the limitations that are herewith acknowledged.

Standee area of the Lakewood theatre in Dallas, Tex., designed by Pettigrew & Worley, in which a lighting feature (as referred to by Mr. Worley) is the dominant element in an otherwise simple interior pattern.

MODERN STYLING AND MATERIALS THAT MEET ITS PECULIAR NEEDS

Dallas, Tex.

TODAY'S THEATRE builder is blessed with a multitude of newer materials for interior use. The purpose of this article is to discuss, within the limitations of available space, some of these newer interior finishing materials, and some of the recent trends of thought in design.

The Foyer

First let us consider the foyer. One essential purpose of the foyer is to impress, to dazzle, to begin to transform the thinking of the patron from his everyday sense of things, into the spirit of imagination, in order that he may better enter the illusion of the illusory world of the show. With this in mind, we must "shoot the works."

Example of the use of modern murals for "spot" decoration in a simple scheme, in the River Oaks theatre, Dallas, Tex., designed by Pettigrew & Worley.

The trend of modern architecture is toward the use of beautiful materials in a simple straightforward way, rather toward the use of "gingerbread" surfaces. We therefore select our materials in such a way as to create a pleasing general effect, by the combination of beautiful but simple materials, leaving the star role to one dominant feature, which is quite often the lighting treatment of the space.

Let us follow the process by "working from the bottom up," and begin with the carpet. For practical reasons a certain limited amount of pattern is necessary in a carpet to conceal footprints, cigarette burns, flaws, etc.; however, this pattern should be kept very simple so as to give the appearance of one solid tone, if it is to fit into the scheme of the simple "streamlined" theatre.

The uses of linoleum, asphalt tile, rubber tile, and sheet rubber for floor covering are already well known, therefore little need be said in their regard. It is recommended that much care be exercised in choosing colors and patterns so as not to give too much dominance to the floor in the composition of the whole room.

For the covering of the walls we may chose any of a number of fresh new materials. Fab-rik-o-na is a recently developed and very handsome cloth wall covering, available in various textures and colors, which is applied to the walls over smooth plaster very much in the manner of wall paper. Flexwood is a beautiful veneering available in a wide range of woods mounted on canvas and applied essentially like wallpaper. It is possible to increase the apparent length of a room by running the long graining of the wood parallel to the floor, or perpendicular to the floor for increasing the height effect. Mouldings are sometimes used to cover the joints of the Flexwood, but more often than not the plain veneering is sufficient.

Linoleum and Sheet Rubber have been recently perfected for application on walls. Leatherette also provides an interesting wall finish. Such materials give a very beautiful streamlined effect along with ruggedness. They may be applied over smooth plaster by the use of a specially prepared adhesive. As with Flexwood, the use of mouldings for covering the joints is a matter of personal choice.

Marlite is another of the newer materials, being what appears to be a baked enamel finish over Masonite. This material is washable and fairly rugged. Marlite, however, should be applied with mouldings at the joints for the best effect.

Architectural Glass is available for use at walls to make spots of interest. This material is cast-moulded glass, which when combined with colored lights, gives very beautiful effects. In glass we also have sculptured glass, a very beautiful, but rather expensive type of cast glass. Glass blocks are appropriate to interior use, particularly for partitions and standee rails;

The Acoustical Development

By C. C. POTWIN

● In dealing with the auditorium of the motion picture theatre, interior treatment, even decoratively, must let function play a bigger role than elsewhere. Here Mr. Potwin, long a leading figure in theatre acoustics, states the case of the auditorium as a unit of the sound transmission system—and in the following four pages provides a graphic outline of the forms best suited to the acoustic function.

ARCHITECTURE, as it relates to the modern motion picture theatre, means fundamentally the co-ordination of basic engineering requirements, plus a blending of these requirements to gain distinction and beauty in design.

To begin with, the design must have a purpose. That purpose may at first thought seem comparatively simple in the case of the motion picture theatre. We require a projection room and a screen for showing the picture, a seating area from which patrons can view the picture with some degree of comfort, and four walls and a ceiling to enclose the space. To complete the design along the lines of past practice, the interior walls may be finished with a few artistic murals, ornamental details, or decorative lighting fixtures, and perhaps some acoustical material may be included inasmuch as sound accompanies the picture.

If, on the other hand, we consider the theatre design problem from the functional or purposeful viewpoint, it is not simply one of building a structure to house a medium of entertainment—it is rather one of integration of all the engineering requirements of such a structure into a unit which will harmoniously support the entertainment. This cannot involve a design which is in itself so completely unrelated to the fundamental purpose of the auditorium that the patron is more conscious of his surroundings than of the picture.

Acoustics as a Basis

Sound without distortion, and vision without obstruction, are certainly basic engineering requirements in the design of the auditorium. Only through the proper coordination of these two factors can the utmost appreciation of the sound motion picture be achieved. It is very important that the complete picture be seen from every seat. It is equally important that the sound be heard with clarity and naturalness at every seat.

Efficient acoustical design operates to support the sound and to maintain its natural qualities. Sound of this character blends with effective vision to give the theatre patron the feeling that he is living the scene.

Obviously, the requirements for correct vision establish a basis for the outline form of the seating area and for height as it relates to projection of the picture to the screen. The outline form is also affected by acoustical requirements, in that there are desirable ratios of length to width which permit fundamentally the most efficient control of sound reflections and distribution of sound over the seating area.

The "Decorative" Influence

The most significant point with respect to design, however, is that the architectural treatment of the walls and ceiling is influenced largely, if not entirely, by acoustical considerations. Absorbing materials have a definite pattern or texture which must form the basis for the decorative treatment. Acoustical shaping, additionally, can be used to give the interior an individualistic architectural expression, without limitations on surface texture or finish.

Interior shaping, or form, as distinguished from basic shaping, relates to the inner furred walls of the auditorium. Basic form refers to the outer structural walls of the building.

The interior acoustical shaping demonstrated by the accompanying figures [beginning on the opposite page] is used to control the destination and dispersion of sound reflections. For this reason these shapes are functional—a definite need is fulfilled by their use.

Acoustical Form Effects

Architecture strives to create beauty of shape or form, along with the other elements of planning. From this standpoint alone, it may sometimes be difficult to decide upon a type of interior treatment for the walls and ceiling which will lend beauty and distinction to a design. In attempting to be modern it may even be necessary to go so far as to grope for some intangible form that may in the final analysis be directly comparable in purpose to the traditional ornamentation of the past.

Acoustical shaping of the interior gives an architect something tangible to work with in developing an expressive design. When correctly studied and expanded in relation both to acoustics and architecture, these acoustical forms afford decoration, in themselves—a purposeful decoration which has beauty and character without artificiality.

The writer feels that architects can find a new source of inspiration and expression by adopting such forms in the development of modern auditorium designs. It is with this thought in mind that the accompanying sketches have been prepared, so that they might serve as a guide in the functional approach to auditorium planning.

they give an impression of weight, however, and should be used structurally rather than as ornament.

Recently developed and highly suited to theatre designs are the several plastics, available for use in conjunction with lighting. Plastics may be used for displays, for partitions, for stair railings, for lighting fixtures, directional signs, etc., Undoubtedly the use of plastics will increase immediately because of the many merits of the product.

Another new material worthy of mention is the wainscot door, and floor material developed by the theatre decorator, Mr. Buck Winn, Jr., of Dallas. Mr. Winn has used cross-sectional portions of mountain heart cedar to excellent effect. The cedar is installed in place, then sanded and polished, offering a very beautiful and "different" finish.

Mirrors definitely have a place on the walls of foyers because of their ability to increase the apparent size of the area and because of their decorative value.

On the ceiling of the foyer we have a multitude of lighting effects to select from. Indirect light almost always seems to flatter the room most. Coves, plaques, domes, etc., may be employed in conjunction with air-conditioning outlets, such as Anemostats, very effectively and beautifully. Plastics may be used for light fixtures on the ceiling in conjunction with the lights. Mirrors may be used also on ceilings to good advantage, especially where height is limited.

Most of the materials discussed in the foyer may be used in the standee space,

In presenting these forms Better Theatres calls special attention to the fact that they are graphic expressions of principles. With respect to interior shaping for sound control, the guidance of an acoustical design expert is strongly advised so that the specific problems of the particular structure involved may be successfully dealt with.

SOME RECENT INTERIOR TREATMENTS

PHOTOGRAPHY BY WILLIAM WARD, NEW YORK

■ Three views of the Pix theatre on 42nd Street, New York, off Times Square. The auditorium, which seats 850 on two floors, is splayed at both walls and ceiling. In general form, the design is sectional, with walls in stepped panels, the ceiling formed by a series of shallow "saucers." Walls are of sand-finished plaster, tinted rust, and ornamented with white composition masks and striping. The ceiling is of hard plaster; acoustic plaster is used at the rear of side walls, and across rear wall. Illumination is by sources above plaques incorporating Anemostat air outlets and suspended from two ceiling domes. . . . The foyer has walls of stenciled plaster with tan stripes and silver and gold pointing on a rust-mulberry ground. The sand-finish plaster ceiling is beige. Carpeting is a modern Crestwood pattern in red, black and tan. A blonde plywood candy stand occupies a focal point, which is illuminated by box lights. Other foyer illumination is by white metal louvered wall luminaires concealing lumiline lamps. . . . The principal design effect of the lobby is provided by a pattern arrangement of fluorescent lamps along the ceiling, which provide illumination at so high a level that the display cases, while wired, are not lighted. End walls are gray-blue, elsewhere tan.

■ Auditorium and lobby treatments which were part of the complete transformation of Charles Martina's Empire theatre in Syracuse, N. Y. Michael J. DeAngelis of New York and Rochester, N. Y., was the architect. . . . Above, and the middle view at right, show the new theatre, views of which may be contrasted with those showing the auditorium and lobby before remodeling at the upper right corner of the page. In revising the lobby, a lower ceiling was built of Masonite, and a light blue textured veneer was laid over the Masonite. The side walls are paneled in birch plywood, with display frames combining birch and walnut. The display cases are lighted by fluorescent tubes all around, and they provide all of the lobby illumination. The lobby floor is of mastic tile in a pattern with rose field and grey stripes. . . . In the retreatment of the auditorium, the boxes were eliminated and all ornamental plaster removed. Mouldings provide a grille effect at the box areas, with the opening lighted by sources concealed at the edges. Because of shortness of time, the proscenium arch finish was not removed, but covered with fabric on a steel frame, while the side walls were covered with velour and damask with division moulds of wood painted gold. The Empire seats 1,600.

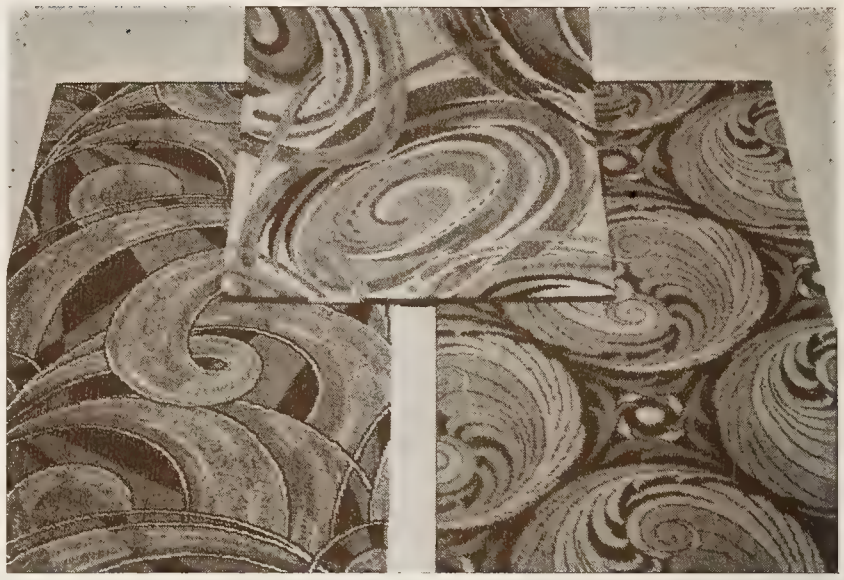
LEATHERETTE



■ For over-all finishing, above wainscoting, or for more limited use in panels, leatherette in the lighter weights must be included among modern materials for theatre wall treatment. Graining or antique finishes provide an interesting surface in even the pale colors, and with cutouts the lighter shades can be used as a ground for a distinctive ornamentation. The method is illustrated in the reproductions above and below. In both cases the figures were cut from Naugalite (a lighter form of the U. S. Rubber Company's seating fabric, Naugahyde), and cemented to pieces of the same material. Such devices lend themselves to local symbols (as the Lincoln head below might be), or to abstract designs as indicated in the marine scheme above. These reproductions fall far short of indicating the beauty of such decoration.

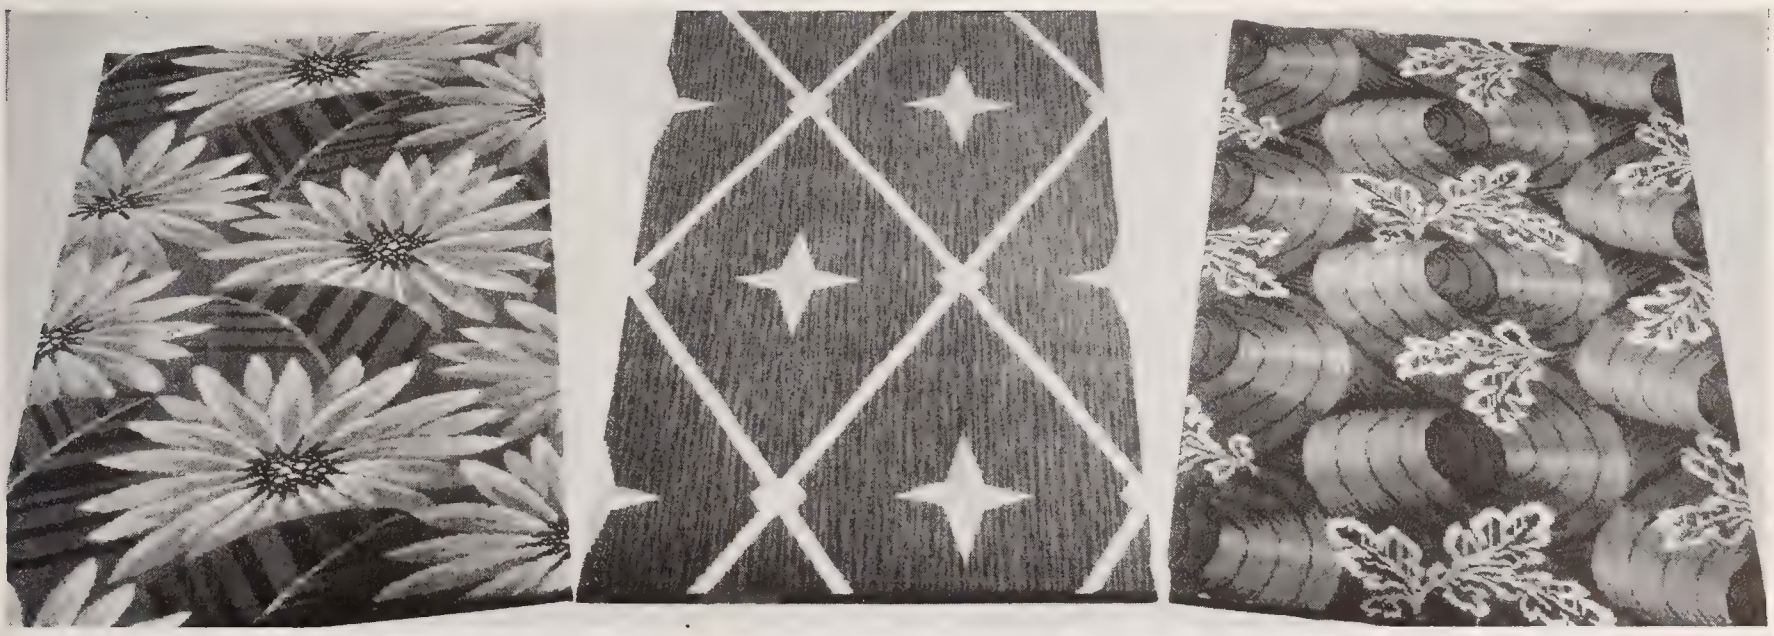
Modern Twists Extend Choice in Theatre Carpeting

THERE ARE carpet patterns galore for the theatre—yet the designer comes up every now and then with a scheme that wasn't exactly there before. Sometimes it is a re-accenting of motifs in existing designs, sometimes it is a completely new interpretation of long established pattern devices. A good deal of the later efforts in modern styling has been of the latter class, to which the new patterns shown on the opposite page and below largely belong.

The upper group on the opposite page, and that below, are Alexander Smith Crestwood velvets. To take patterns on page 18 first: The whirling oval figure design at the top is a blend of tan, red, green and blue; that at left has rust and tan figures on a ruby ground; the righthand is in light tans and dark reds. All are modern abstractions with plenty of movement.



Essentially modern as well, in manner of execution, are the two end designs shown below. The left one is a brilliant floral piece placing tans against a red ground, while the other mingles scrolls and floral abstractions in bright shades on a brown base. The middle pattern is conservative and somewhat formal, presenting a diamond and star repeat in ivory and gold on a blue jasper ground.

The lower three patterns on the opposite page are additions to the Bigelow-Sanford theatre line. Recasting traditional floral and scroll devices, the upper left design has figures in beige and red on a green ground. The right upper pattern is frankly classical in feeling, using the Greek fret, but with modernized rosettes. The coloring is red with black outlines on a mauve ground.

The other Bigelow-Sanford pattern employs a modern block scheme in tones of blue, gold, cedar and black, giving an interesting texture effect.

This foyer, that of the Shore theatre in Wildwood,N. J., operated by the Hunt circuit, depends largely on its floor for its invitation to the show. This recent installation shows one of the newer Bigelow-Sanford patterns—a sparkling modern abstraction of floral devices in brilliant red, green and yellow contrasted vividly with a black ground.

the essential difference between the standee area and the foyer being the lower intensity of light in the standee. The reason for stepping the intensity of light down toward the auditorium is obvious. One thing that might be remembered here and in the auditorium is to place the lighting so that the light source is not within the substantial range of vision when looking at the screen.

The auditorium is quite a different matter; here all should be subordinated to the business of seeing and hearing. Too often auditoriums are designed with a multitude of distracting elements placed promiscuously around the auditorium by the architect, the decorator, or the owner. True it is nice to have some features of secondary importance in the auditorium that may be thrown into prominence at times by an increased intensity of light, but such times are relatively few.

After the shape and the lighting treatment of the auditorium have been established in order to give each patron the proper sight and sound conditions, there is really very little that need be done to this area, as far as design is concerned. There remains principally the selection of curtains, carpets, drapes, and seats that harmonize with the simple theme already established. A certain amount of pattern may be got into the auditorium by means of murals carved into acoustic plaster, by sculptured murals, or by the lighting. The use of integral designs has outmoded the stencils of earlier years. The essential light sources are the most logical points of secondary interest. These light sources may be run-plaster plaques, sheet metal plaques, plaster coves, or moulded plastics.

Lounge and Toilet Area

The lounges may well be treated with newer materials as listed for the foyer. Mirrors can work wonders for lounges. By sand-blasting the back and outer 6 or 8 inches of a mirror over a dressing table, then placing lights behind this sand-blasted portion, it is possible to get a very attractive arrangement, and one that is efficient as well. Acoustical treatment on the ceilings of the lounges is beneficial, not only to keep noise out of the auditorium, but to provide quiet for patrons in them.

Toilet rooms should always look clean; they can be made attractive. For example, one can have the floor and wainscots of the same tile and patterns. Into this solid field appropriate designs may then be worked to give snap to the design of the room. (Incidentally, it is advisable always to slope toilet room floors to either a floor drain or a urinal.)

Porcelain enamel or structural glass may be used for wainscots and toilet stalls. A toilet stall has recently been developed by the Henry Weis Company that goes no higher than 5½ feet, having no top rail over the stall doors. Excellent effects may be obtained by lining the top of the wainscot with these low "streamlined" toilet stalls. Acoustical treatment above the wainscot and on the ceiling of the toilet room is exceedingly helpful.

Wall linoleum comes in rolls 36-inch to 50-inch wide, in practically any color or combination of colors from pastel to dark wood finishes, and is also available in jaspe and marbleized effects. It offers great possibilities for use of special or standard inlay designs, and is attractive when used with bright metal bandings or mouldings to accentuate desired features. The pattern goes through to the back, insuring long wearing qualities. Wall linoleum comes in dull or glossy finish, is washable, and is easily renewed by occasional application of self-polishing wax. Costs run approximately 35c per square foot, applied.

Adapted to moderate-priced theatres, or modernization programs in older houses, it is especially useful for lobby and foyer walls and ceilings, as well as toilet rooms. (The Congoleum-Nairn Company is now giving demonstrations of this material in various cities throughout the country.)

In rooms finished with this material, linoleum or asphalt title floors are peculiarly appropriate. Baseboards of these materials are easily fitted on curves and angles, erection being much easier and quicker than where rigid materials such as wood or marble are used, as considerable difficulty in fitting is eliminated.

Enameled Hardboard

Hardboards of this type have been given a hard, synthetic, glazed surface on a tempered hardboard base, sealed against penetration by moisture or dirt. Acids, alkalis, and non-abrasive cleaning compounds do not affect this stainproof, easy-to-clean material. It is offered in practically all colors and is $\frac{5}{32}$-inch thick. Wood veneer finishes on the same base come $\frac{1}{4}$-inch thick. Either can be worked into neat lobby designs.

Sheets run 4x8 feet in size, supplemented by a special type of flexible board for use in following curves and angles. This material can be applied by carpenters; it is attached to walls with brads or adhesive, and it can be installed on any type of wall surface at a cost averaging 20c per square foot up, according to the designs used. It is thus within the reach of the exhibitor of moderate means.

A similar material is available on a plaster board base.

Metal Wall Tile

This is a hard-surfaced, soil-repelling material available in a half-dozen pastel shades and black, and suitable for use in lobbies and in rest rooms. It may be installed by carpenters on special hardboard base furnished by the tile manufacturer; the base is grooved in multiples of $1\frac{1}{2}$ inches. Tiles are attached to hardboard after the latter is nailed or stuck to wall surface with adhesive. Tiles, coming in various sizes from 3 feet by 3 inches to 6 feet by 12 inches, are coated on the back with a special glue and are shoved into the grooves in hardboard backing. Joints are finished with a special cement. This material comes complete with caps, base and casing moulds to match wall tile.

Widely used in rest rooms at present, these tiles will also provide a durable and attractive lobby finish in moderate-priced theatres. Neat and clean in appearance, they are easy to clean with soap and water, all soiled spots wiping off easily. In most localities, cost is approximately 85c per square foot, installed.

Porcelain Enamel

Porcelain enamel is one of the comparatively new materials which appears to be gaining in popularity for both exteriors and interiors. Considerable freedom in design is possible, as it is manufactured in lengths up to 10 feet or 12 feet, and may fluted, reeded or formed into zig-zag notched effects—in fact, it may be designed in any way in which standard metals can be bent, as the panels are cut and shaped to suit before the porcelain enamel is baked on.

Pilasters and coves to receive concealed lighting are easily arranged with porcelain enamel. Edges of the panels are bent back to form structural angles. Panels are mounted either on wood strips or on metal tracks—and they should be designed in continuous strips where possible, to avoid unnecessary joints.

terial repels dirt, stains and scratches, and is washable. Porcelain enamel is obtainable in a wide range of colors, comes in glossy, stippled or textured finishes, and gives brilliant, striking effects. It may be installed at a cost as low as $1 per square foot, according to locality and detail of design. Its use is recommended for Class-A, upper bracket showhouses. Adapted to remodeled as well as new theatres, it is good material for lobbies and toilet rooms (as well as fronts).

Structural Glass

Structural glass makes an attractive lobby finish. It comes in solid colors ranging from pastels to black, also in agate designs in varying shades. It is cut to fit special requirements in lengths up to 10 feet, and is mounted on plastered walls with a special cement.

Structural glass; such as Pittsburgh Carrara and Vitrolite, offers unlimited possibilities to the architect, as this material may be etched with bronzed or silvered designs, combined with white metal or bronze mouldings, colored mirrors, or cloth-backed flexible mirror units, or it may be combined with opaque glass lighted from behind for unusual effects.

The flexible mirror units mentioned are made up of sheets of small mirrors, offered in a wide variety of colors, in ½-inch to 2-inch widths, mounted on a canvas backing which allows the application of the material to curved or bent surfaces, such as columns and offsets.

Structural glass is cleaned with a damp cloth. In rare cases of breakage, blocks can easily be replaced. It costs $1 per square foot and up, according to type used. Widely used for theatre fronts, it is also recommend for interiors of Class-A houses.

Terra Cotta

Since the introduction of modern design, the use of exterior terra cotta has been neglected by builders, but the manufacturers of this time-tested material have during this period made great strides in the production of a machine-extruded terra cotta wall ashlar for interiors.

This fire-resistant clay product has great ornamental merit, as modeled and sculptured designs are possible which cannot be obtained in many other materials. Newer sizes make pieces available up to 36 inches square. Backing up is now unnecessary for interior partitions, as interior terra cotta may be laid up like tile, with the back side plastered to form a solid partition.

Terra cotta is available in practically any color or color combination in plain and mottled effects, as well as in the metallic finishes. Silver and gold finishes are fused on to the clay base at extremely high temperatures to form a surface harder than metal. It resists scratches, is very durable, and easily cleaned with soap and water. It is recommended for lobbies and foyers as well as for exterior treatments. Installed by masons, the cost compares favorably with other materials of equal refinement. This is an ancient material which has kept step with modern times, both in design and practicability.

Cloth-Backed Wood Veneers

One of the most beautiful interior finishes on the present-day market is flexible veneer offered in forty common and rare woods. The unfinished wood product comes in rolls, 18-inch and 24-inch in width, and from 8 feet to 10 feet in length. It can be hung by the average decorator on a wall surface that must be smooth and free from moisture. After application it may be finished with shellac and wax, or may be varnished. Because of the great flexibility of the material, the possibilities of design are even greater than where solid woods are used.

The cost varies from 50c to 80c per square foot for native woods, with rarer varieties commanding higher prices. This material is especially recommended for lobby and foyer finishes in all classes of theatres.

Spanish Leather

Spanish or antique-finish leather is an old material gaining a new popularity for use on walls and doors. If studded with nails and rosettes, banded with metal or gimp, the innumerable patterns possible are limited only by the skill of the designer. On walls it is applied smoothly like wallpaper with an adhesive, while doors are slightly padded with canton flannel before the leather is applied.

This makes a nice finishing touch for special details when combined with rich wood veneer finishes, mentioned above, or it may be used exclusively for the treatment of both walls and doors. It comes in a wide range of colors to suit individual requirements, and costs about 35c per square foot. It will give an air of refinement and luxury to any theatre at a moderate cost.

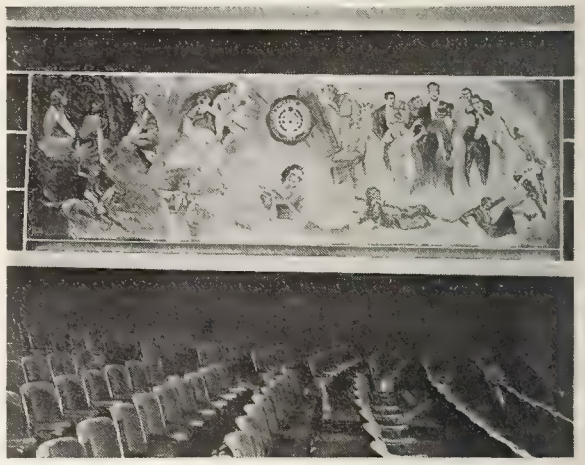
SHOWMANSHIP IN THE CHOICE AND USE OF INTERIOR MATERIALS



By LEO YASSENOFF
F & Y Building Service
Columbus, Ohio

FUNCTIONALLY AND emotionally, interior treatments of the theatre are the visible agents of pleasure, entertainment, restful relaxation of the patron which every exhibitor is obligated to supply to his clientele. To do this, he must give the matter proper thought and planning, and provide a budget suitable to his specific problem.

Mr. and Mrs. America, and Young America, "go to the movies" to see the play, but almost equally to have some place to go which gives them an emotional stimulus. They seek more color, more glamour, and more elegance than they ordinarily encounter. Even though it be colorful and glamorous, the interior of course must never go beyond the limits of good taste, and should be soothing rather than "loud."

Local Appeal

At the Broad theatre in Lancaster, Ohio, to complete the interior and appeal to community pride, the local high school colors, purple and gold, were used. Purple repp cloth, with gold mouldings in a "streamline" effect, supplies the color scheme. The main walls of the auditorium were broken up with two murals painted in oil on canvas. One depicts a bit of Indian lore related to the early founding of Lancaster a century or more ago. The other mural depicts General Sherman's march from Atlanta to the sea and was used because General Sherman was born in Lancaster, across the street from the theatre.

Similarly, to make use of local interests, in the Miami Western theatre at Oxford, Ohio, two large murals depict college life at the local institutions, Miami University and Western College for Women. In Bluefield, W. Va., where the writer's firm is completing the Colonial theatre, three large lobby murals in oil on canvas treat of coal mining and railroading, the two principal business interests of Bluefield, while a third symbolizes The Theatre. The lighting in all these cases is centered on the murals.

"Black Light" decoration is a notable development of the past year which is beginning to "catch on." It has received serious attention thus far especially on the West Coast. The first major attempt to light an entire theatre with the glow of luminescent lacquers, at least in the Central States, is now in process of completion at the Sunset theatre in the Price Hill district of Cincinnati. We have employed six large panels, each approximately 3½ feet wide and 16 feet high, and illuminated from concealed "black light" sources in a ceiling projection.

Costs and Flexibility

Any attempt to establish unit costs for interior treatments would be valueless on account of the difference in labor rates, working conditions and freight rates in various localities. The availability of mechanics familiar with the installation of the materials to be used offers another variable factor.

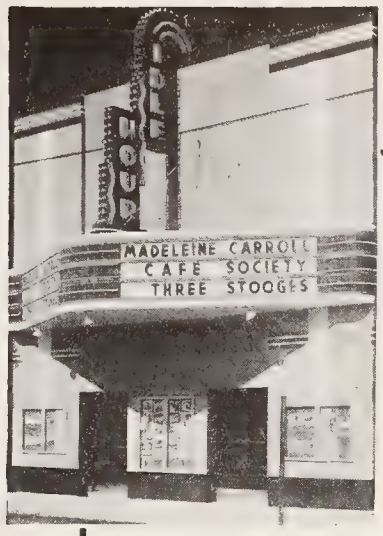
Generally speaking, however, the plastered ceiling surfaces are, in the long run, the most successful ceiling treatment. Because the installation of a suspended metal lath and plaster ceiling on channels includes and takes the place of ceiling joists, it is obviously comparatively little more costly than any other type of ceiling, and it is overwhelmingly the most acceptable ceiling structurally.

For wall treatments, plaster is probably the most expensive because it usually should have some ornamental values, therefore must be painted and decorated.

Next in cost are the wall or composition board or tile installations. The board itself appears to be cheaper than any other material. However, until this material is worked up into a colorful design, with some tooled work, and painted, and until an elaborate set of grounds are applied, this material, in the opinion of the writer, exceeds in cost the installation of cloth fabrics, while it does not present as colorful a final result.

Veneers and Fabrics



Composition boards have the virtue of being available at local lumber yards in both large and small town situations, and can usually be erected by local labor. Acoustical values are of course a factor here, also. We have used both rock wool and Kimsul, a vermin-proof, flame-proof exploded balsam wool blanket, behind fabrics with good result.

The use of fabrics is a very colorful, yet economical procedure, taking a minimum of grounds and having a maximum of flexibility. The cost range will suit almost any pocketbook and can produce almost any amount of "glamour." Cloth can be used in geometrical designs or be padded out to give an upholstered appearance.

While fabric, despite other advice to the contrary, does not lend itself easily to cleaning after it has been up for several years, the cost of replacement, after all of the furring and mouldings have been furnished, cut and mitered, is very little more than a first-class repair job would be.

Oil-painted murals on canvas depends for success on the artist; however, very creditable work can frequently be done on a comparatively reasonable basis. Murals unquestionably do give the public a feeling that the exhibitor "has spent money with reckless abandon," which is an important element in showmanship.

"Black light" decoration is, at the present time, somewhat expensive. Luminous paints now cost a minimum of $8.75 per pint, and lighting units from thirty to seventy-five dollars per average unit. This medium should be handled by those familiar with its peculiarities. Despite its cost, it has so many marvelous show-selling features, that it is at the present time a smart turn for an exhibitor to make.

What the Theatre Man Needs To Know About "Black Light"

• As interest in luminescent decoration grows, its methods develop, with better understanding of possibilities and limitations. This is the first of a group of articles written from the broad point of view of the practical lighting engineer

By C. M. CUTLER and H. J. CHANON

ACTUAL APPLICATION of "black light" to the interior decoration of theatres, proceeding slowly yet steadily, is naturally extending the serious interest of theatre operators and designers in this innovation. As might be expected, application has had to be more or less experimental, employing equipment as available or as could be immediately devised, while development work still continued. The possibilities, of course, make all this effort and interest worthwhile; to appreciate them, however, particularly in the light of continuing developments, it is necessary to understand the relationship between this and other mediums of illumination, and the factors determining its practical, effective use in the theatre.

"Black light" is the popular term applied to the phenomenon of changing invisible ultraviolet energy to visible radiation by means of fluorescent or phosphorescent materials. A pictorial explanation of how this change in energy takes place is given in Figure 1 (opposite page). True, the more technical phases are of no importance to the theatre man. However, an understanding of the basic principles of "black light" aids materially in its most successful application to the theatre.

Just a word, first, as to "angstroms" as applied to the scale of Figure 1A. All radiant energy is expressed in terms of wavelength. An angstrom is a unit of length equal to one ten-millionths of a millimeter, or approximately four-billionths of an inch. The theatre man need only know that an angstrom has the same significance to the radiant spectrum as do degree markings to the thermometer, or inch markings to a ruler.

"Black Light" Energy

Now, lamps are simply sources of radiant energy. They produce energy which is visible as light to the eye, as well as energy which is invisible, such as ultraviolet and infra-red. The eye responds differently to the various colors in the visible spectrum. The eye is most sensitive to the shades in the green, yellow and orange bands, as indicated by the eye response curve in Figure 1A.

The difference between tungsten filament lamps and mercury sources is of interest here. For a given wattage, the mercury lamps generate considerably more energy in the ultraviolet region. It is this energy in the band between 3,000 and 4,000 angstroms, and particularly at 3,650, which is so effective in producing "black light."

A mercury lamp equipped with a certain type of filter (Corning No. 587) does not pass ultraviolet energy shorter than 3,000 angstroms. The transmitted near-ultraviolet causes no injurious effects. However, it can produce an unpleasant haze by causing the eyeballs to fluoresce. Some individuals seem to be more affected than others in this respect. Some tinted lenses of eye glasses also fluoresce. The theatre manager may therefore want to avoid installations where direct radiation from the source can reach the eyes within normal viewing angles.

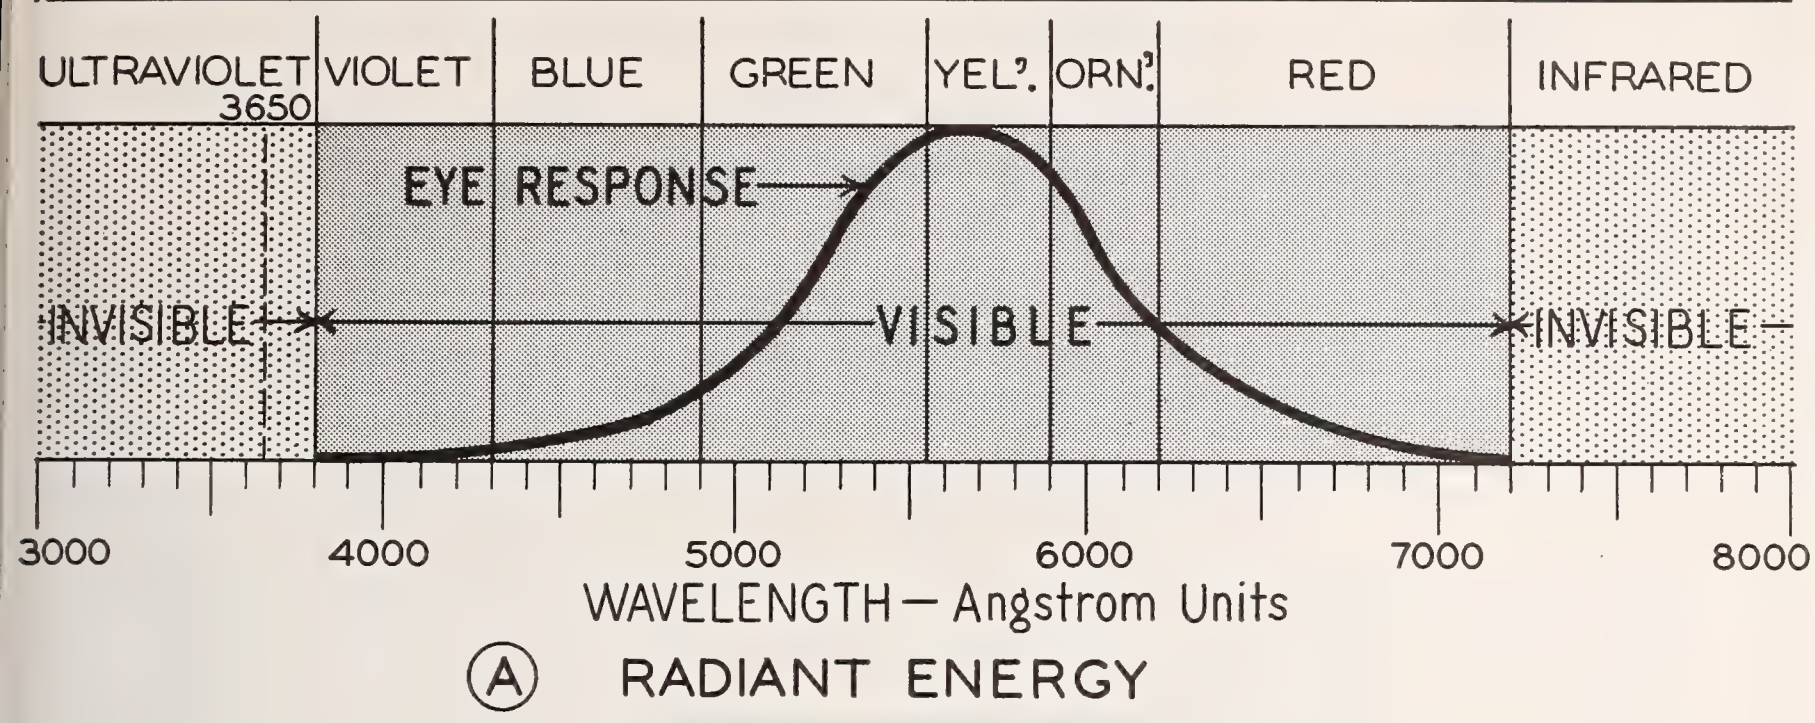
Producing "Black Light"

Figure 1B shows a new type of mercury lamp and the energy produced by it. Without filters of any kind, the lamp produces invisible near-ultraviolet energy, visible light in the 4,000 to 7,000 angstroms band, and infra-red energy above 7,000 angstroms. This lamp, without a red-purple filter, causes fluorescent materials to glow, but the predominance of visible light washes out or masks the effect. Now, the relation of "masking light," to the fluorescent effect, is of major importance in the theatre, it will therefore be dealt with fully in a subsequent article.

In Figure 1C, a Corning "black light" filter (No. 587) has been placed in front of the mercury lamp. It will be seen that the near-ultraviolet and the infra-red, which are invisible, are transmitted, along with a very little of the visible in the violet. The percentage of visible light here is so small that it can be considered negligible for all practical purposes.

Filter Selection

Selection of a filter is an important consideration, since some filters transmit more blue, violet and red than others do. This radiation, alone, is not the most effective for seeing at the low levels in the auditorium. It is better to supply visible light, essentially white in character, in order to provide desirable "seeing illumination" with least impairment of the "black light" decorative patterns.



Filters are available which pass no visible light, but these do not seem to be entirely practical for theatre applications because of high absorption of heat and lower output of "black light."

In Figure 1, a piece of material which has been treated with luminescent paint, is so placed as to receive the energy passed by the Corning filter. The energy distribution (Figure 1D) represents the final step in the production of "black light." Most of the near-ultraviolet energy has been transformed into yellow visible light which the eye is most sensitive to (Figure 1E). The rest, together with the transmitted infra-red, has been absorbed or reflected. The reflected ultraviolet is of no practical importance in most theatre applications, but it might become a factor if very large quantities of "black light" energy were employed.

Eye Color-Efficiency

There is one more important factor in the ultimate effect—the response of the eye to the various colors (as indicated in Figure 1A). From the curve shown it can be predicted that relatively high brightnesses by fluorescence would be difficult to obtain in the violet and red colors. Measurements taken on about 50 different samples of lacquer enamels indicate that average efficiency of producing color by fluorescence is, according to tests, as shown in the following table:

Color	Percent Relative Brightness
White	100
Red	38
Orange	55
Yellow	88
Green	42
Violet	18

The above colors were classified according to hues, as each of them was made up in various shades and tints. With the exception of the white, the yellow, as expected, is the brightest color. Orange and green are next highest in efficiency, and violet, blue and red are lowest.

Controlling the Light

The light emitted by the fluorescent material is in no way different from daylight or artificial light from regular lamps. The near-ultraviolet energy, which is invisible to the naked eye before it strikes the fluorescent material, is made visible and follows the same laws as ordinary light. The near-ultraviolet energy can be directed, reflected from properly selected materials, and shielded in the same way as the energy of any incandescent light source.

In addition to lacquer enamels, many other fluorescent materials are now available. Plastics, papers, inks, dyes and water colors have made their appearance and each have specific applications. The choice of material depends on the use to which the material is to be put. It should be remembered that the brightness of the material depends on three factors.

1. The amount of near-ultraviolet energy falling on the material. (This is affected by the light-energy characteristics of the light source, and by the transmission power of the filter.)

2. The efficiency with which the material converts the near-ultraviolet into visible light.

3. The response of the eye to the color.

New Type Lamps

Lamp types employed for "black light" effects have appeared in previous articles in these pages (BETTER THEATRES for April, 1939, and March and April, 1940). Mercury lamps of the type illustrated in Figure 1 have just recently been made available. These are known as the Mazda 100-watt Projector Spotlight (CH-4), and the Mazda 100-watt Projector Floodlight (EH-4). The reflecting surface is hermetically sealed within the lamp and the light source is accurately located in the reflector. The center illustration in Figure 1 shows an assembled unit with transformer, lamp holder, lamp, and filter. The following table gives general information on the lamps and auxiliary equipment.

Lamps:

Designation	CH-4	EH-4
Service	Spot	Flood
Lamp Watts	100	100
Bulb	PAR-38 with opaque black coating on outside of reflector section.
Base	Admedium Skirted (slightly larger than the base used on standard filament lamps)	Admedium Skirted
Rated Average Life	1000 hours	1000 hours
Burning Position	Any	Any
Approx. time required to reach full brilliancy	3 minutes	3 minutes

Auxiliary Equipment:

All mercury lamps require transformers. The transformers for the above lamps operate on 115 volts and consume approximately 20 watts.

The control of "black light," though similar in major respects to ordinary light, introduces a few new factors in application to the theatre. One of the most interesting applications is in the lighting of fluorescent carpet. The next article in this series will cover a method for doing this.

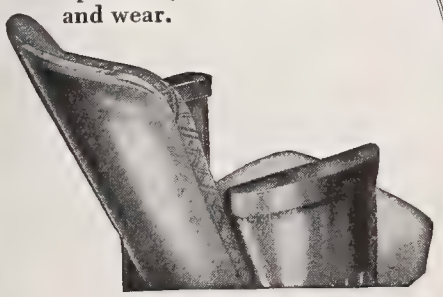
Non-Technical Handbook On Lighting Practice

PRACTICAL GUIDANCE in the use of modern lighting equipment is offered by Westinghouse in a book, or compendium, just issued under the title "Artificial Light and Its Application." Unpretentious physically (the text is reproduced from typewritten sheets), it is nevertheless comprehensive in scope and instructively illustrated, with fully half of the 21 chapters of interest to theatre operators, designers and engineers.

The chapters include one of sixteen pages devoted to theatre lighting. This deals with illumination needs peculiar to the theatre, from front to stage. But also directly bearing upon interests of the theatre are discussions of architectural lighting, electrical advertising, floodlighting, display lighting, interior lighting design, and outdoor field lighting (the latter having considerable interest relative to the illumination of theatre parking lots).



The method of presentation throughout the book is as non-technical as possible, which makes the several chapters on basic matters of modern lighting technology of practical interest to theatre executives and staffs. These chapters deal with light sources, lighting terms, color response, and control equipment.

The book contains 296 pages measuring 8¼x10¾ inches, and is wire-bound.

SEATING the auditorium

". . . no theatre can be better than its seating."

Ending Your Seating Worries With the Installation

• Auditorium is too important an item to skimp on—and here's why apparent savings can turn to waste and plenty of headaches

By JOHN J. SEFING

MANY DAYS ARE spent on the planning of new theatres and the remodeling of old ones, especially in determining the size, shape and treatment of the auditorium. However, it seems that nearly always the selection of the equipment is put off till the last despite the fact that on choice of equipment, such as chairs, carpets, screen, projectors, sound, etc., depends the ultimate success of the whole project.

It seems that when the selection of chairs comes up, there is always a question as to price, especially when most of the money has been spent on other items. Then the tendency is all too often to shop around in the used chair market.

It's hard to realize the bad effect of such practices beforehand. But faulty chairs can ruin an otherwise good picture performance, so far as the patron is concerned—and he is very much concerned. The picture may be the best, but if the patron must sit in a chair for two or three hours, uncomfortable and uneasy, he is irritated rather than satisfied.

Cheap to Buy, Then—

An old and used chair may be cheap at first, but it costs the theatre owner a lot in up-keep and dissatisfied patronage. In the first place, it is almost impossible to fit old chair standards to new auditorium floors because the floor grades are different from the pitch cut on these standards. To help level off the seats, shims are inserted under the standards, which is bad practice, since it is impossible to fasten the chair firmly to the floor.

These shims come in standard thicknesses, which in most cases, will not fit the floor properly. To make special shims, the cost would be enormous, in some cases more than if new chairs were installed. Moreover, the inserting of any shims under any chair standard will cause the chair to loosen in time, regardless of how good the floors, shims, or chairs may be.

Another practice, too common in theatre remodeling jobs, is to install a predetermined amount of new chairs, with the balance of the seating old chairs. In some cases, the old chairs are installed in the front portion of the auditorium and the new chairs in the rear, or part way around. On a blueprint this layout looks good and economical, but when put into practice in the theatre, many faults will be seen, and complications arise.

In most cases, the aisle standards will not match because, naturally, the old standards will be of different design, height and pitch. Due to this difference, and the fact that the old chairs must be installed in a definite alloted space, the chair installation man must either "squeeze" or "stretch" the center chairs in order to make the old aisle standards as nearly as possible in a straight line with the new aisle standards. In doing this, the backs of the row of chairs are not on a true radius, and the seats' hinges either work too freely or too hard.

And as for Appearance!—

In an installation of this type it is almost impossible to have a first-class job. By standing at the standee rail and looking over the rows of chairs, it can be easily seen where the old rows of chairs start. The backs of these rows will be several inches above the new chairs, and in some instances, a number of chair backs will stick out like a "sore thumb" above all others. Looking down the aisle, it will be apparent at once that the aisle standards do not match and that the aisle is ragged and uneven. No amount of arguing or criticizing of the architect, engineer or chair installation man will remedy the condition, as they did their best under the circumstances. The only thing left is to spend more money or put up with the evil indefinitely.

There is no doubt that a chair installation of this sort will give constant trouble. The old used chairs are quite naturally worn even if they look good to the eye. The standards may be cracked or broken in usage, the hinges may be badly worn or creaky, and the arm rests split or splintered. To get parts for these chairs is difficult, for there are just so many of the old chairs available.

The Vicious Circle

Then in a short time, after or even at the time of installation, the seats or backs will need new covering, and if springed seats, new springs and padding. This work will require the service of experts, since the covering must be tacked on carefully around the edges and the springs be installed in their proper relation, otherwise in a couple of months this work will have to be done all over again. As can be readily seen, a combination old-and-new-chair installation will never look right and provide uniform comfort conditions. About the time the old chairs are replaced, the new chairs show wear, and these conditions will alternate. Begun wrong, the seating installation stays wrong.

Cleanliness as a Part of the Business of Theatre Operation

Throughout the series of articles in these columns by S. Braverman, dealing with the cleaning and maintenance of the public areas of the theatre (the last appeared in the preceding issue), reference was made to various types of brushes. These (some of them in different sizes) are pictured above. From top to bottom, left-hand row: A lamb wool duster for smooth surfaces, ceilings, etc.; curved-handled toilet bowl brush; and an orchestra whisk broom. Center row: Scrub brush for toilet bowls, urinals, etc.; hand scrub brush; deck brush for long handle to scrub tile, concrete, rubber mats, etc.; horsehair counter brush for picking up small piles of dirt in dust pan; goat hair brush for dusting screen (soft and washable); and (to bottom of row) a group of push brooms ranging from 12 to 36 inches, of horsehair (for smooth surfaces such as terrazzo) or tampico (for concrete, etc.). Right-hand row: Wool duster for walls and floors, also to apply oil to composition flooring after waxing; radiator brush; rotary whisk broom for pile upholstery, drapes, etc.; and a lamb wool wax applicator on a block (wool can be washed and reused).

by J.T. KNIGHT, JR

"CLEANLINESS is next to godliness." Well, it may not go that far in the theatre business, but it is very important. In these days of holding down operating costs, it seems that the very first thing that is cut is the staff of cleaners. The psychology back of this is really hard to understand. The next move is to reduce the wattage in all the lights in the house. And so overnight, what was a bright cheerful theatre, becomes a dark dingy theatre —and in a very few weeks, a dirty theatre.

There is nothing which contributes so greatly to deterioration of equipment, fabrics, carpets and all kinds of surfaces as dirt, dirt. Dirt is not sanitary. To remove dirt requires knowledge, materials and labor.

Please note that I have placed labor last. Labor alone will not do it. Knowledge and materials are most important of these factors.

Cleaning is rather tedious, and to many it is sheer drudgery. But, cleanliness in a theatre, or the lack of it, is very likely to affect the box office.

Capitalizing on Cleanliness

I heard today of a colored-patronage theatre in one of our large cities, in perhaps the toughest section of that city. The man who told me about it and showed me pictures of it said that it was so spotlessly clean, so brilliant in effect that the entire neighborhood took pride in it. People went to that theatre in large part because it made them feel good to go into such a place. The theatre really was doing business, capitalizing on cleanliness and brilliance.

Cheapest Way to Clean

I have often had theatre managers ask for an economical way to keep a theatre clean. What they wanted to ask was for a cheap way to clean a theatre. There is a right way and a wrong way to keep a theatre clean. The wrong way is much the most expensive; the right way is the cheapest and in the long run the most economical.

If you, personally, as a manager, know how to clean your theatre and are willing to instruct your porters or cleaners exactly how, and then set up a system of inspection and regulation of the use and quantity of cleaning materials to be used, you will be doing it the right way and the cheapest way. Permit me for emphasis to tabulate this:

FIRST, you must know how.
SECOND, you must teach others how.
THIRD, you must inspect.
FOURTH, you must regulate.

So it comes back primarily to you—the Boss—and you have at your finger tip the source of knowledge necessary in your file of BETTER THEATRES. The subject has been dealt with by a number of people who are seriously interested in the subject. Their knowledge is your knowledge—if you have intelligently read what they have had to say.

Cleaning Schedules

I still feel that in a theatre there are so many different things and areas and surfaces to be cleaned that the beginning (assuming that you already know how to clean them) is to list them in detail and decide from your locality and experience just how often each item must be taken care of. Some must be cleaned daily, others bi-weekly, others weekly, others bi-monthly, and others monthly. Some even will not have to be cleaned more often than seasonally.

Then, break this down into schedues for each cleaner. Take your best all-around cleaner and make him the extra cleaner to take over the schedule of an absentee, or to do the special work that comes up from time to time. Briefly, schedule your work for one less cleaner than you actually have, because if you don't do this, you can never keep up with your schedule.

Instruction and Inspection

You must teach, educate those cleaners in their particular assignments. When they have been trained and during training, you must inspect their work. The inspection is part of the training as well as part of the regulation. If you work on this plan within a very few months you will have a clean theatre and a trained cleaning staff which will be able to keep the plan working.

To have a sanitary theatre, disinfectants, germicides and deodorants must be used in the process of cleaning. To mask a bad odor with a sickening sweet odor of one kind or another is calling attention in the most definite way to the fact that your theatre is not really clean. Select deodorants which neutralize odors, not those which mask one odor with another. Of course, salesmen will tell you that the particular odor is a "clean odor," but the fact that you never smell it except in toilets leads people to associate it with public toilets, and public toilets are not generally clean places. Therefore, the odor, instead of being pleasing, is remindful of things quite the contrary.

Appearance of Staff

If a place looks clean (and to look clean one must have enough light to see), and it has no odor, we accept the place as being clean. Added to this, when we see porters or maids or other attendants who look clean and neat, we are sure the place must be clean. When one goes into a rest room that is acceptably clean-looking, and at that moment in comes a porter in shabby trousers, broken-down shoes, an ill-fitting and dirty cap, and as he passes you by you get a whiff of body odor—then the scales go in the other direction and you are convinced that the place can't be clean.

THE APPEARANCE OF CLEANLINESS AND SANITATION IN YOUR PERSONNEL ADDS TO OR DETRACTS FROM THE ACTUAL CONDITION OF YOUR THEATRE.

Influence on Patrons

Many theatre managers have told me that their patrons are dirty and they can't keep the place clean. The public generally has just a little less respect than you have for the theatre. If you keep plugging to raise your own respect for your theatre, and not get discouraged, you will discover that the public will respond by showing greater respect for it, your employes will strive harder to raise the operating level, and in the long run the box office will benefit.

Cleaning Non-Public Areas

In the May issue appeared the last of a series of articles by S. Braverman on the cleaning and maintenance of public areas of the theatre. In the June 29th issue he will begin discussion of the care of non-public areas.

The latter part of June Mr. Braverman will start on a trip taking him from New York to San Francisco. He will travel by automobile, going by way of Chicago and Salt Lake City, returning to New York through the South. By arrangement with Better Theatres, Mr. Braverman will call at theatres not too far off his route, to advise, without charge, on such problems of maintenance, vermin eradication, etc., as may be submitted.

Exhibitors wishing Mr. Braverman to call on them should write Better Theatres to that effect during the next three weeks.

The Plant Maintenance Schedule

Beginning a discussion of Servicing Routine

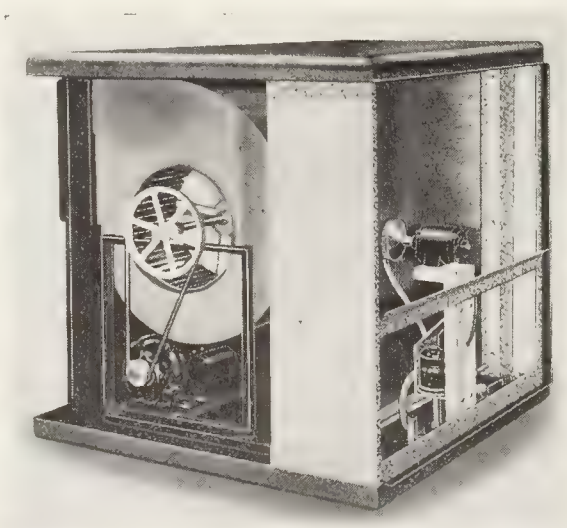
By J. T. KNIGHT, JR.

THE DESIGN and installation of air-conditioning are only the first two phases of the job. The third and most important is operation and service of maintenance. The twin responsibilities, maintenance and operation, rest directly on the theatre operator, or his manager. The following thoughts may be of direct help to those managers who want economical operation and trouble-free performance from their equipment—and who doesn't?

¶ Evaporative Condensers

If you have evaporative condensers, be sure to clean the nozzles at regular intervals—say, at least once each month, and preferably every two weeks. This applies also to the strainer on the suction of the pump.

▶At least every month drain the condenser and clean out the pan thoroughly and refill with water.



▶In between these periodic cleanings, inspect the operation of the condenser to see that all spray nozzles are really functioning.

▶One of the possible indications that the evaporative condensers need cleaning is afforded by the gauge on the high pressure side of the system. If sufficient water is not being handled, the heavy vapor Freon gas is not entirely condensing and this would evidence itself by rising head pressure on the system. The water level of the evaporative condenser is maintained by a float valve, the same as we used to have on the old air washers. Just ahead of this float valve is usually a hand valve. This hand valve should always be open, except when intentionally closed during the cleaning process.

Guarding Against Deterioration

Check the condensers carefully for rust. Most generally, evaporative condensers require careful scraping and painting once each year. This can best be done just before the cooling season or just after the plant has been shut down for the season. The cleaning and removal of all rust, dirt and scale is of great importance before painting, and to have it done properly usually requires real supervision on the part of the manager or some other responsible person designated by the manager.

If condensers are not thoroughly cleaned, most of the value of the subsequent painting is lost. Good paint should always be used. Remember: The price of paint is its least important qualification. A paint that has really stood up under severe trial is Mirasol as a first coat, followed by the aluminum paint made by the same paint manufacturing concern. (Feroleum Products, Inc.).

The new evaporative cooling equipment being marketed by the S. O. S. Cinema Supply Corporation of New York. Here shown in conjunction with blower equipment, the air washer unit may be obtained separately for use with existing fan. At lower right will be noted a pipe, which ejects the water against a revolving fan, or atomizer, which in turn sprays the water against a slightly convex evaporative mat through which the air is drawn. The latter, of vegetable fibre porous material, also acts as a filter and is chemically treated to eradicate odors. For auditorium ventilation, installation is in any of the usual areas at the stage end. Lobby, office, projection room, etc., could be supplied through ducts leading from units installed on the front roof.

¶ Water Pumps

Water pumps are an important part of air-conditioning. Perhaps it is because they give us so little trouble that they are so frequently neglected. At least annually, the bonnet of all water pumps should be lifted and the empellor examined, the bearings checked and the packing looked over. Packing for the average pump costs from five to ten dollars, and the time comes about every two or three years when it is necessary to replace it, since by then all that can be taken up has been taken up on the cap screws.

Don't do what I saw done in one theatre—construct a shield so as to divert the leakage from the packing gland into the sewer. New packing is the only correct answer. With good packing, bearings lubricated, and the motor cleaned and oiled, plus a clean strainer, your pump will give you minimum trouble.

¶ Duct Fire Dampers

Many air-conditioning systems have one or more fire dampers in the duct system. Frequently the fusible link holding this damper open has been removed. Such dampers may save your theatre from being a total loss and save lives; therefore, lines of proper rating should be installed so that the damper is held open by adequate protective means and not by a wood prop or wedge. This is important enough for the theatre head to check personally.

¶ Freon Leakage

This year particularly, many leaks of Freon have been found at the expansion valve. These valves, connected into the system by bolted flange joints, indicate a loosening of bolts. This may be due to faulty gasket material, in which case, we must look to the gasket manufacturer to correct it. It has occurred with sufficient frequency to justify this suspicion.

►However, there is another possible cause —the valve was checked over and repaired and re-installed with the old gasket. Gaskets cost so little that it is penny wise and pound foolish not to use a new gasket every time an expansion valve is installed or re-installed in the system.

►The leakage of one pound of Freon at, say, 40c per pound, would many times have paid for a pair of gaskets. This same thought applies to every other gasketed joint in the system.

Assuring Tight Expansion Valves

An expansion valve operates by a thermal bulb which is strapped to the discharge line of the coil fed by the valve. These bulbs are subject to a certain amount of vibration, not in any case violent. For some unknown reason, they have a mysterious way of coming loose. They should be checked frequently.

► They should be strapped with two pieces galvanized pipe strapping very firmly to the pipe so that they make close contact with the pipe throughout their entire length. The use of friction tape, rubber tape or cotton tape is definitely not the way to fasten these bulbs to the piping. Loose expansion valve bulbs will result in erratic performance of the valve and consequently erratic performance of the coil, which, in turn, means erratic air-conditioning.

¶ Damper Motor Linkage

The linkage of all damper motors to the dampers should be checked carefully, especially on the fresh air, return air and by-pass dampers. Many times, this linkage has been found rusted through, or rusted tight in one position. Also, frequently after checking and repair, the linkage has not been replaced as it was previously, which has brought about unsatisfactory conditions, because when a certain control called for a damper to be closed, the linkage was adjusted too short, so the damper was actually 25% open when the motor was in the closed position.

►It is interesting to know that all of these little things contribute very largely to economical and efficient plant operation. For example: The failure or maladjustment of one damper may throw an addition load on the plant so that a 20-horsepower compressor might be kept running in order to overcome the wrong effect of the damper. A 20-horsepower motor does not have to run many hours to make negligence or carelessness cost a substantial sum.

But this is not all. Most of these details of bad adjustment hit us hardest at a period of peak operation, because when conditions are such that the full capacity of the plant is required, then at that moment there is no extra horsepower to turn on to offset that faulty damper setting—and we condemn an otherwise good plant!

¶ Check the Motors

There are instruments available (most air-conditioning service men carry them, some electricians have them, and almost always the power companies have them), known as "meggers," which are used to check the resistance in megohms of motor windings. The motor manufacturer can tell you what your motors should "meg." ▶Megger check up of the motors on your air-conditioning compressors is very important. Such readings will indicate loose terminals or other conditions in the motor which can be corrected before you have a burnout that would make you spend a couple of hundred dollars to replace all or part of a motor. The compressor won't run without the motor, so it is an excellent idea to be sure that the motor is in good condition.

¶ Valve Caps

Valves in practically all Freon systems have valve caps. These caps serve two functions: First, when removed and reversed they serve as a hand wheel to operate the valve; then secondly, when screwed back on the valve, they provide an extra guard against leaks of Freon along the valve stem and the packing gland, if the packing nut has not been pulled up tightly. Watch your plant and insist that all valve caps be screwed in place tightly at all times.

There are double seated valves available today. Most line valves on a system (Freon) are either full open or full shut; therefore, the double seated valve is especially valuable on Freon jobs as an additional protection against valve stem leaks when the valve is in the open position. ▶Most all small fittings used on Freon systems such as loading valves, oil pressure line valves, all have caps to screw into place on all outlets. These caps should always be in place, except when uncovered for certain specific purposes. These caps, to screw on all possible external connections to the system, are another precaution against leaks.

The loss of Freon is one of the principal items of seasonal operating costs—and Freon really costs! It takes only a very small leak to cause the loss of a drum of Freon a month, and a drum of Freon costs about $60. The manager, on his periodic inspection of the air-conditioning plant, can check this point without even soiling his hands. It will pay dividends to do so.

¶ Saving on Filters

Filters are a very important seasonal operating charge. Ranging from 60c upwards for a 20 x 20-inch cell, usually means anywhere from $15 to $30 total cost per change of filters. If you change filters too frequently your money will be wasted; if you wait too long you will impair the satisfactory performance of the plant.

Periodic Cleaning of Filters

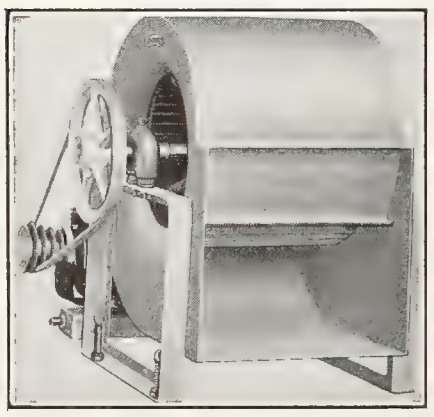
The manager cannot control the amount of dirt carried in the air in his particular locality, but there are several things he can do about it. There are types of throw-away filters that can be partially cleaned by taking them out of the filter rack and knocking the dirt from them. To get long life out of filters, this should be done at least once each week. It should be scheduled as one of the routine jobs to be done by the porter or handy man.

▶The second thing that might be beneficial is a different type of filter. All filters of the throw-away type are made in certain standard sizes and thicknesses, and it is unusual to find non-standard filter racks. There are glass wool filters, spun glass filters, paper filters, jute and vegetable fibre filters, hogs hair filters, etc. All of these various types have good points and some disadvantages. They all, however, do a satisfactory job of cleaning air. Some manufacturers claim a higher percentage of dirt removal than others, but we in the theatres cannot argue the point because we have no way of establishing the facts. They all do an acceptable job, so it resolves itself into the question of which is the cheapest for the exact conditions that exist at a given theatre.

¶ Finding the Filter for the Job

That can only be decided after careful, controlled observation of their performance. Number of hours in operation, number of times the dirt had been knocked out of them, contribute their part in leading to a correct decision.

The final step that can be taken by the manager is to install a pilot tube type of draft gauge in order to measure the resistance across the filter bank. As the filter fills up with dirt, the resistance to air flow will increase. When this resistance has reached a certain point, then the dirt should be knocked out of the filters. A reading taken after this will show you how much benefit you have derived by knocking out the dirt. After repeating such operations for a period of time, you will discover that the filter continues to fill up with dirt; consequently, the resistance increases on the draft gauge. When the resistance has reached the point where you are handling only 60% of the air the system was designed to handle, then the filters should be thrown away and a new set installed.



This draft gauge assures you of getting full use out of the particular filter that is being used. I contend that it will save its cost in one season of operation on a fair-sized job, and certainly in two seasons.

These columns are regular features of Better Theatres dealing with methods by which the theatre may be planned as efficiently as possible for the exhibition of motion pictures. Both Mr. Schlanger and Mr. Potwin are consultants to Better Theatres. All inquiries concerning planning should be addressed to Better Theatres Service Department.

HANDLING CONSTRUCTION

THERE ARE various methods by which the exhibitor may contract for the erection of a theatre building. The advantage of one method over the other would probably differ in each instance, but the fundamental principle embodied in each should be understood by the exhibitor before he makes the choice. The different methods are commonly referred to as follows:

1. General Contract—in which one contractor agrees to do all of the construction and finishing of the building according to plans made by an architect, the architect being employed by the exhibitor.
2. Separate Contracts—in which many contractors, usually divided according to the various trades, individually agree to do their part of the work according to the architect's plans.
3. Work by the Exhibitor—in which the exhibitor buys all the materials and employs all the labor to execute the work.
4. Plans and Construction—in which a single individual or company agrees to furnish plans and specifications and construct the entire work in accordance with these plans.

Locating Responsibility

In commenting on all these methods it is assumed that the exhibitor will, by investigation in all cases, choose responsible and capable contractors, but it should be emphasized that Method 1, and especially Method 4, require very careful investigation of contractors.

In methods 2 and 3, it is important for the exhibitor to have had some experience in co-ordinating construction work, as well as having actual building experience. This is epecially so in the case of Method 3.

Architect Supervision

Method 1 is by far the most advisable choice when the owner has obtained from a reputable architect a complete set of plans and specifications which will bind the contractor to deliver a satisfactory job. The exhibitor is also assured in the beginning that the work will not run over the budgeted cost. The architect's supervision in this case is the check on the contractor's work. Cost is always kept down in this method because a reputable contractor has better buying power than the average exhibitor.

Selecting a Site For a Small Theatre

IN proposed theatre construction where capacities are to be limited to 400 seats or less, and where the cost must be kept very low, there are a few methods of construction which would aid in controlling costs. Also there are a few precautions to be taken in the selection of the plot to be used for the construction of the theatre.

Care should be taken to make sure that the soil is firm and unyielding to the normal weight of the construction. The opinion of an engineer or architect in this matter before a land purchase is made is advisable.

Flat Floor Possibilities

What may seem to be inexpensive land may prove to be costly in the end due to expensive foundation construction which may become necessary. The land preferably should be comparatively flat, because small-capacity theatres can be built with relatively flat floors.

Where the depth of seating is limited to approximately 22 rows or less, it is possible to design a fairly flat floor and yet obtain unobstructed vision lines when the stagger system of seating is employed. To achieve this it may be necessary to increase the back-to-back row dimensions in the rear half of the auditorium over and above that of the remainder of the rows. A slight amount of rise may also be necessary in the last few rows near the standee rail; otherwise it is possible to use a completely flat floor.

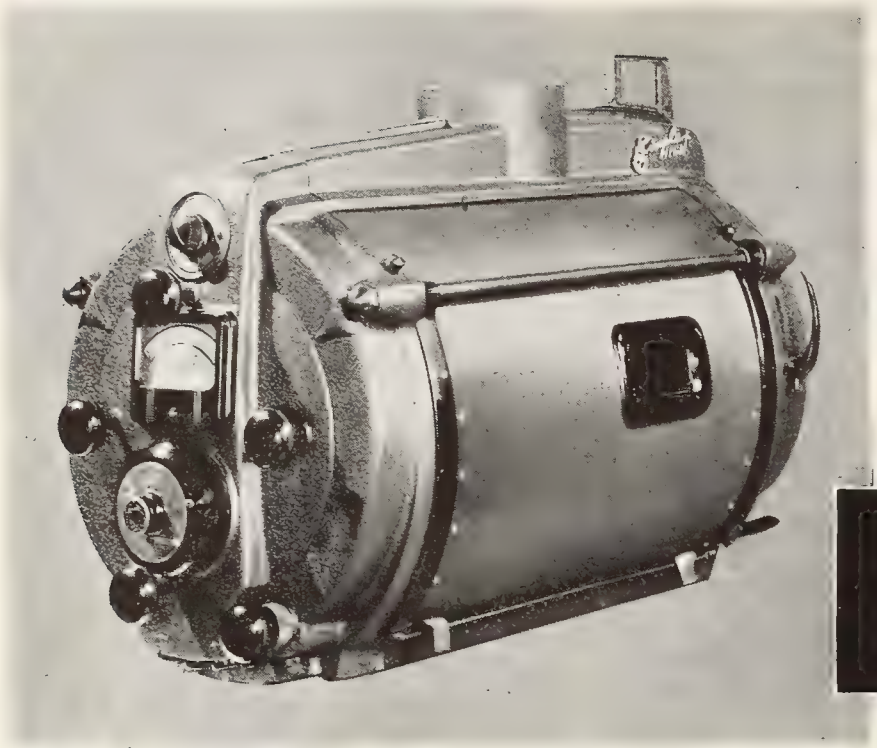
Assurance of Savings

It is understood that in using such a system, an experienced person should check the design. In this way you not only avoid excavation and fill of ground, also steps and stairways for means of exit at the screen end, but you also can create savings by laying level concrete instead of shaped, curved concrete finish, which is more costly. From a real estate viewpoint, the convertible feature of a building having a flat floor about level with the street, as against a sloped floor is also important.— B. S.

MATERIAL PLACEMENT

THE TWO MOST important acoustical considerations in the selection and use of a material for theatre treatment are its coefficient of sound absorption, and its distribution for maximum efficiency.

The use of the slow-burning materials, such as wood or canefibre boards and tiles, is often permissible in suburban areas and small communities. The boards frequently offer a rather inexpensive type of wall covering and have a natural sound absorption value that is enhanced by mounting the material with an air space behind it. However, these boards absorb, on an average, only about 30% of the sound striking their surfaces, so that actually about 70% is reflected.



Rear Wall Absorption

If the problem were considered purely from the standpoint of decoration it might appear desirable, if the acoustical board is used along the side walls, to continue this same form of treatment across the rear wall. However, in most cases an average sound absorption value of 30% is not nearly sufficient for the rear wall, because that surface is directly in the path of sound from the loudspeakers and will naturally reflect the 70% back into the audience area at amost equal intensity. While the acoustical boards may provide enough sound absorption along the side walls, in theatres of small seating capacity, a more efficient material than these boards will almost always be required for the rear wall.

Ceiling Least Critical

With the possible exception of the rear wall, there is so much variation in the requirements for sound absorption and the distribution of material in different theatres that it would be difficult to set a fixed rule to be followed in planning acoustical treatment for all theatres. It may be stated generally, however, that unless the rear wall is especially shaped for sound control, it should receive a high-coefficient material.

Furthermore, it is more practical to place treatment on the side walls than on the ceiling in most cases, because with the seats and carpet in place, the absorption of sound is already rapid in the vertical plane. If a high-coefficient material is needed for the side walls it will usually prove most efficient if installed in a panel arrangement, non-uniformly distributed.

Simplex HIGH

ARC LAMP

SUFFICIENT LIGHT VOLUME

The SIMPLEX HIGH intermediate capacity arc projects twice as much light as the low intensity. It has been designed especially for theatres of up to 800 seats and using screens as large as 18 feet in width.

LIGHT OF PROPER CHARACTERISTICS

The SIMPLEX HIGH is a high intensity, direct current arc which projects the snow white light which is so necessary to the projection of colored pictures.

LOW COST

The SIMPLEX HIGH has been designed and priced for theatres heretofore restricted to the use of low intensity lamps because the operating, if not the original cost, of the earlier high intensities has been prohibitive. The over-all operating costs are only slightly higher than with the low intensity, because this arc operates at only 27 volts as compared to 55 volts in the low intensity, and each 14-inch 7-mm. suprex positive carbon burns for at least two hours.

DEPENDABILITY OF MANUFACTURE

The SIMPLEX HIGH is another example of SIMPLEX engineering excellence. The name SIMPLEX, on any product, for years has been your guarantee of quality.

PROJECTION SOUND REPRODUCTION THE SCREEN

LAMENT OF A 1925 PROJECTOR

SO now they've got crying rooms for babies, have they? Maybe pretty soon they'll get one for me, too. I've been cryin' for relief for years but nobody listens to me.

Of course, I'm not really so old as years go (look at Shirley Temple, a "has-been" at eleven), but think of what I have gone through!—or maybe I ought to say, "Look what's gone through me."

Oh, I was a mighty good projector back there in '25, if I do say it myself. Fresh, chipper, and as bright as a new nickel. And smooth! Yes, sir! Top o' my class. That was the year I handled, among lots of others, "The Big Parade"; "Ben Hur"; and "What Price Glory." Remember? Yep, I took 'em all in them years. There wasn't none of them too tough for me—or too big—or too hard to handle.

Cockey? Sure, I was cockey. Why shouldn't I been? I was all of a year old, wasn't I?

Umm, let's see now—where was I? Oh yes, back in '25. Well, sir, the next year they released some 740 features and I guess I took on the most of them. Remember "Seventh Heaven," with Charles Farrell and Janet Gaynor? (Cute, wasn't she?) And "Underworld," with George Bancroft poppin' them tommy guns—and "Beau Geste" (I mean the first one with Ronald Colman and Noah Beery)—and Pola Negri, too?

Those were the days!

Well, not long afterwards they wired me for sound. No, it didn't hurt a bit. I came through it fine, and right after that they pushed through 834 features—some I ran and some I didn't, but the big smashes I remember were hits like the "Cockeyed World" and the "Broadway Melody." It sure sounds like ancient history now, doesn't it?

Right through '29 and '30 and '31, I was rolling along swell. Pictures like "All Quiet on the Western Front," "Hell's Angels"—remember Jean Harlow in that? "Anna Christie," with Garbo talking! "Cimmarron," "City Lights," "Min and Bill," "Grand Hotel," "Emma"—with Marie Dressler—and Paul Muni in "Scarface"—they were all making history.

And me—by that time I'd more than paid my way. So they decided that I could do with a face lifting, or an operation—or something. Told me I'd be as good as new. And I was, too—for a while I kept a-movin' those pictures through, giving as good as I got. The competition was fierce, creeping up on me and my boss all the time. Other houses were opening up and they didn't try to run with 1925 projectors. They were getting the business and we were losing it. But would anybody listen to me? You bet they wouldn't.

More years kept slipping by and I kept slipping the pictures through. I remember 1933 for "Little Women" and "It Happened One Night" (did I get a kick out of that one, old as I was!). And the hits of '34, like Astaire and Rogers in "Top Hat," Charles Laughton in "Ruggles of Red Gap." Then "Mutiny on the Bounty," "Mr. Deeds" and "Anthony Adverse" in '35. Mister, I ran them all.

In '36 they were back to 700 features, but it might just as well have been 7,000, the way my old insides felt. Oh, I didn't quit—no, sir! But it was tough on me to see what was happening to the picture on the screen, and nothing I could do about it.

Well, somehow, I pulled through '37 and '38 and '39 (maybe Hedy Lamarr had something to do with that!)—but here I am in '40, still workin' and the end not yet in sight.

Ain't there no social security for guys like me? Fifteen years of it should oughta be enough. I'd like to retire someday, too. How's about it, boss?

Your Sound System Outdated? Here's What It's Doing to You!

By F. H. RICHARDSON

SO THEY BOUGHT the rare Tiffany diamond, they allowed it to become chipped while standing on their shelf, they displayed it in an old box rescued from the junk heap which soiled it and dimmed its lustre—and they said, "See what smart merchants we are—we know how to keep down the expense of doing business."

When a 1940 sound track goes through out-of-date sound equipment, from one-third to one-half of its sound is very literally chipped off and thrown away. Whatever sparkle or beauty may be left is dimmed by distortion not present in modern apparatus. Yet some theatre merchants daily take sound tracks which cost more to record than most rare stones sell for, and subject them to such mishandling. They are clever merchants; they have found the simplest of all formulas for keeping down expense. They destroy the value of their merchandise.

Now, gentlemen, no diamond expert is needed to understand that if a carefully polished stone is chipped its value is impaired—similarly, no engineer is needed to understand so simple a matter as sound volume. There are loud sounds and weak sounds, but their loudness is relative—that which would be a shout in a quiet living room would be a whisper in a boiler factory.

A sound impresses us as being loud or otherwise according to the general "noise level" of the place in which we find ourselves. There is an unavoidable noise background in every theatre, produced by the audience itself. A whisper from the screen must be loud enough to be barely heard above that background. The volume of sounds meant to give the impression of loudness must be increased proportionately.

It's on the Track Today

Modern sound tracks approach this ideal closely, both in speech and music—they have, in engineering language, a wide volume range. But older-type sound systems have a more restricted volume range; they cannot reproduce the range of volume which the print delivers to them. They deprive the show of the dramatic contrast in volume which makes an enormous part of the difference between sound that is exciting and sound that is "blah". They reduce a crashingly loud recording to a mere suggestion of loudness, yet raise a whisper to a husky shout. Their limited volume range is a bottle neck in which the more dramatic volume range of the modern track is trapped—and kept from reaching the audience.

Distortion Checked

Distorted sound is another handicap of systems only a few years old, by comparison with the quality of today's sound track and today's theatre apparatus. All sound amplification involves the defect known as harmonic distortion—all amplifiers produce it. A good amplifier produces less, that is all. Until recently, the amplifiers used in the recording studio added noticeable harmonic distortion to the sound recorded on the track, and theatre amplifiers added a further quantity when the film was played. The best that could be done was to use oversized amplifiers which could hold harmonic distortion to a minimum.

Today's amplifying equipment is deliberately made light, small and inexpensive—the engineers calmly allow it to produce harmonic distortion, then they introduce a reverse feedback circuit or other compensator, which takes the distortion out again before the amplified sound reaches the recording valve or the theatre speakers.

The sound tracks carry the benefit of this improvement, which is very noticeable in the naturalness of voices and instruments, and the quality of tone; even more noticeable is the harshness heard when an amplifier of the type of five years ago is used in reproducing modern tracks. There is only small value in removing harmonic distortion from the film record, if old-style theatre amplifiers are allowed to put it back in the reproduced sound.

The sound systems of some few years ago not only are unable to reproduce the volume range or the tonal quality of modern tracks—they lose, throw away, choke back, up to one-half the sound tones on a track of today. All sounds have tone or pitch, expressed in engineering language as frequencies, ranging from 16 double vibrations (or cycles) per second to about 16,000 double vibrations per second. The earliest sound systems were limited to a range from about 60 to about 4,500 cycles per second. So were the earliest tracks. Today's tracks —and theatre apparatus—can reproduce from 40 to 9,000 cycles per second—slightly more than twice as much actual sound, not in terms of volume, but of separate tones that can be individually heard.

Paying but Not Using

If today's tracks are played on a system of obsolete design, that system (depending on the year in which it was made) will throw away from one-third to one-half of all the tones on the film. The difference as actually heard is very great.

With modern equipment, a piano no longer sounds like a harp; water splashing actually sounds like water, not like someone walking on a tin roof. The gain in mere ease of hearing is enormous.

But there is no advantage in having 40-9,000 cycles on the track if the system in the projection room can pick off only, say, 55-6,000. The rest might as well not be in the track.

When the exhibitor pays for his product, he helps pay the cost of putting the best possible sound on the film. The enormous sums that have been spent on research and development for the improvement of film records ultimately come from the theatre; they cannot come from any place else. If the theatre does not equip itself to take full advantage of the benefit of those expenditures, it has paid heavily for a very valuable commodity and then refused to accept delivery!

Better Sound Costs Less

The seeming cost of new sound apparatus is a factor which deludes some exhibitors into keeping obsolete apparatus in use. All the new systems cost less to operate, on every possible basis of comparison. To take one point: New speakers tend to be of the permanent magnet type which do not need current to excite their fields, do not need a rectifier to supply such current, do not need replacement tubes for such a rectifier.

Modern "power" tubes tend to require about one-fifth as much filament, or heater, power to deliver the same sound output as their earlier counterparts. Moreover, the amplifier carrying the modern tubes needs a power transformer only one-fifth the rating of its predecessor, and therefore one which is correspondingly cheaper to replace in case of burn-out.

Cost contrasts are even more drastic in the case of other replacement or emergency stock parts—filter condensers, for one example. Tubes, for another. True, it costs money to buy a new system, but it wastes money (altogether aside from the effect on the box office) to keep an old one operating.

Providing for Tomorrow

Still further, today's equipments contain provisions for their own modernization. The next important improvement, already here to some extent, is push-pull recording. Sound systems sold today are built with means for changing over their soundheads to push-pull operation, either at trifling cost or merely by pushing a lever at no cost at all. The old equipment that continues to plague the ears of the audience will have to be replaced tomorrow in any event, to permit use of push-pull tracks. It would seem sense to replace it today, giving patrons today's superior sound and the theatre lower operating costs, as well as the further benefit of ability to use push-pull tracks whenever offered by the exchanges.

"That must run up your power bill."

"No, it doesn't, Mr. Harrison. These new lamps actually cost less to operate than the old, low intensity lamps we threw out."

"I notice the color features are better, too. They're perfectly natural now. Why is that?"

"That is because the light from these high intensity arcs is snow white. It's like daylight, so the colors all look natural. Many of our patrons have complimented us, as you have, on our improved projection and our increased business will soon pay for the new lamps."

Today's Motion Picture Requires Today's Projection Equipment

• You don't wait until tomorrow to sell today's picture, nor do you use yesterday's outmoded methods. The same policy is demanded by projection, which provides what you are selling

By HERBERT GRIFFIN

[The timely and authoritatively supported counsel offered in the following paragraphs, was originally given, under the title, "Problems in Modern Projection," to theatre owners, managers and projectionists attending a so-called "short course" in theatre operation at the University of Oklahoma, May 20 and 21. Mr. Griffin, who is vice president of the International Projector Corporation, has kindly given permission for publication of the paper here, and the only changes have been a few bringing about a desirable reduction in length.—THE EDITOR.]

HOLLYWOOD and the making of pictures have monopolized public interest in the motion picture field and it is easy to understand why so little is generally known about putting the picture on the screen. But those connected with the motion picture industry have less excuse for this lack of knowledge, and it seems to me should be better informed regarding the men, methods and materials which enter into the manufacture of projection equipment. The better theatres throughout the country, and these frequently include the small houses as well as the deluxe theatres, now recognize the importance of good projection and spare neither time nor money to make it as fine as possible. Many theatres—too many—are still indifferent to the money-making possibilities of good projection and do not give their projection equipment the care it deserves. Even a good projectionist striving in every possible way to secure excellent screen results can do little with inferior equipment, and when it is kept in a poor state of repair there is little inducement for the projectionist to take real pride in his work. Successful exhibitors now realize that a poorly lighted, unsteady picture is objectionable to an audience, even though not actually objected to, and are much more ready to support projectionists in their requests for good equipment kept in proper repair.

There is nothing new in the suggestion that "good projection and a clear steady picture on the screen are vital links in the studio-to-public chain." There is, however, something new in its application. It hasn't been through failure on the part of those engaged in the manufacture of projection equipment to emphasize its importance to the industry. The fact that there is not one hundred per cent good projection is because those using such equipment have been unwilling to appreciate its value. The exhibitor of motion pictures operating the larger or the smaller theatre in the largest or smallest city has only one thing to sell, and that is projection.

From the point of view of the exhibitor, projection and the elements which bring it about should be elevated, placed on a plane commensurate with the part it plays in the presentation of motion pictures. Projection is of vital importance. It is an indisputable fact that imperfect projection reduces the attractiveness of the finest production. And it must be admitted that while perfect projection does not raise the tone of a poor production, nevertheless, a poor production properly presented has its good points enhanced and its poor ones glossed over. The finest production in the world can be utterly ruined on the screen through poor projection, while the mediocre production can be tremendously raised through good projection. Projection should be considered on the basis of its results, the bearing it has on the success of the theatre, the satisfaction of patronage.

Good Projection Costs Less

Good projection actually costs less in the long run. If you have faulty projection, you also have expensive repairs of machines and reels, less box office receipts; while the good will value of your theatre is nil. But if you have perfect projection, you have larger box office returns and a high investment value in your machines, while the reputation of your theatre extends more and more every day.

The theatre that continually features good projection becomes known as a reliable source of good entertainment. Casual visitors become steady patrons. And steady patronage is the secret of success for the majority of motion picture theatres.

It is agreed that screen presentation is an important part of good showmanship and that if the projection is to be satisfactory the right kind of equipment must be used. It is also understood that the equipment must be kept in proper condition, and this of course will be to a considerable extent in the hands of the projectionist. But every mechanism is subject to wear and even under the most favorable conditions machinery may develop defects. The control of these things is frequently beyond the ability of either the manufacturer or the projectionist, and we must therefore carefully consider the importance of service in connection with motion picture equipment.

Dependable Servicing

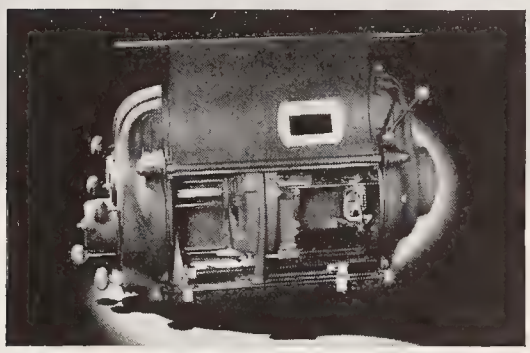
Someone has said that "service is an important consideration in the purchase of any mechanical product and is the practical substitute for unattainable perfection in manufacture." We therefore should understand how very important service is. We know that auto manufacturers have put service on a carefully systematized and almost scientific basis. Their vast operations, their great engineering staffs and sales organizations enable them to secure facts and figures as to what constitutes adequate and practical servicing. In the motion picture industry we have not had the opportunity to do this, but all things considered, we have managed to develop an excellent standard of service for this field.

The efficiency and promptness of the service rendered by dealers is often really remarkable and they deserve great credit for the effort and sacrifices they make. The dealer knows that the reputation of a house may be seriously affected by a single shutdown and result in serious financial loss. It is, therefore, up to the supply dealer to render service with the least possible delay and this is often done under very difficult conditions. Great experience and good judgment are essential in competent dealer servicing as excessive liberality may prove costly, and too little service is sometimes a "penny wise, pound foolish" policy.

The exhibitor who is fortunate enough to require little service should not imagine that he is paying for the attention given to others, for ordinarily this is not so. The experienced dealer knows how to strike a fair average, but in an emergency does not consider cost or his own convenience. The failure of the theatre to open is so serious a matter to the owner that the conscientious dealer knows that it is up to him to do a lot of worrying and working until matters are properly straightened out. The exhibitor should, therefore, realize that although he may seldom or never require emergency service, it is there waiting for him should he need it. This constitutes a form of "trouble insurance" and it should be a real comfort to the exhibitor to know that he has someone upon whom he can depend should anything go wrong with his equipment.

The manufacturer may designate what he considers good service but it is the local

Let Strong Light Your Way to Low Cost High Intensity Projection



MODERATE sized theatres have long realized the hopelessness of getting a good picture on the screen with prevailing dense black and white films when using the dim low intensity lamp. Furthermore, satisfactory projection of colored films with the muddy yellow light of the low intensity was just as impossible. And the required brilliancy and sparkling snow-white light of the high intensity arc were denied them by prohibitive operating costs.

It remained for Strong, through the development of the new Utility, a perfectly balanced and coordinated lamp and rectifier unit of intermediate capacity, to solve their problem, to produce a high intensity lamp which exactly filled the needs of the medium sized theatres with screens up to 18 feet in width.

This new Strong lamp projects twice as much light as is possible with any low intensity lamp and at an increased combined current and carbon cost of less than 2c an hour.

Your leading Independent Theatre Supply Dealer will gladly demonstrate this new marvel of efficiency in your theatre without obligation . . . Call him today.

man, the man on the ground, who must do the work, who must render the actual service. The manufacturer can only do his part by designating and supervising, and certainly he has tried to do this; the repair man is doing his part; it is then up to the exhibitor to do his share in maintaining service. The exhibitor, as a good business man, will wish of course to buy equipment as cheaply as possible, but price should not always be the chief consideration. In many instances price cutting is a two-edged sword which injures the buyer as well as the seller. Exhibitors should purchase equipment through a reliable supply dealer selling genuine parts—and pay a fair price for them.

Design Standards

The difficulty does not lay so much in making careful inspection, but in maintaining the necessary high manufacturing standards at all times. There are very good reasons for maintaining very close working tolerances in the production of motion picture projectors and sound reproducing equipment and these should be more thoroughly understood. A professional motion picture film, when projected to the screen, is magnified many hundreds of times. To begin with, the picture on the film itself has an area of less than one-half of one square inch, and it is projected to screens as large as 30 feet high and 40 feet wide. The picture must be absolutely steady in the projector both vertically and laterally in order that this requirement may be maintained. After all, the so-called motion picture is nothing more than an optical illusion and this illusion can be sustained only through the use of accurately made apparatus. The projection of a feature picture of, say, 10,000 feet in length, means that every time the picture is projected, 160,000 rock-steady still photographs are projected to the screen in rapid succession, each picture being so slightly different from the preceding one that the illusion of motion is obtained.

In standard projection exactly 24 of these separate pictures are projected to the screen in every second of time, and each separate picture is moved into the light beam in one ninety-sixth of a second. The picture remains stationary at the aperture for one thirty-second of a second, during which period it is projected to the screen twice, each time for one ninety-sixth of a second, making a total projecting period per frame of one forty-eighth of a second. During the period in which each picture is moved down into position in front of the aperture plate it is necessary to cut the light from the screen. If this were not done only long streaks in black and white would be perceptible to the audience. It is necessary, therefore, that the shutter be very accurately timed with the intermittent movement. If only this single shutter blade were used during the projection cycle a very objectionable flicker would be apparent and it is necessary therefore to introduce a balance blade of equal proportions to the cut-off shutter and thus in modern equipment flicker is practically completely eliminated.

If the projector mechanism is not accurately manufactured, or if the parts thereof are worn to any extent, the accuracy of the timing between the intermittent movement and the revolving shutter is destroyed and we have what is known as "travel ghost." Travel ghost is simply a streaking of the highlights in the projected picture due to the fact that the cut-off shutter does not exactly coordinate with the film motion, and this is due to wear in the gear train. It follows, therefore, that it is necessary at all times to maintain projection equipment in first-class operating condition if patrons of the motion picture theatre are to get the fullest enjoyment for the money they pay at the box office.

The production of an intermittent movement to function properly requires extreme manufacturing skill, first-class materials and highly specialized manufacturing equipment. The parts of this unit must be produced with tolerances not exceeding plus or minus one-ten-thousandth part of an inch. The intermittent movement comprises what is known as a star and cam. Attached to the cam is a small pin, one-tenth of an inch in diameter, manufactured with practically no tolerance at all, and it is this little pin which must in the course of a year, under average projection conditions, accurately place before the aperture plate of the projector mechanism almost two hundred million separate pictures, each one projected to the screen with rock-steadiness!

It naturally follows that if the intermittent movement, which has been so well named "The heart of the projector," properly performs its function, all of the driving mechanism—gears, spindles, shafts, bearings, etc.—must be made with equal precision because in no other industry is a piece of equipment called upon to operate continually without breakdown. If projection and sound reproducing equipment fails, the entertainment value which the customer has purchased is lost, and this may result in refund of box office receipts and may lead to patrons going elsewhere for their entertainment.

I shall not dwell at any length on the problems of sound reproduction, but it is obvious that high quality reproduction of sound in the theatre depends equally on the high quality of the sound heads, the amplifier, the speakers, and other associated apparatus which forms a part of the whole projection system and depends also to a very great extent upon the proper functioning of the projector mechanism.

Meeting Today's Needs

One of the most serious problems of modern motion picture projection is how to serve the needs of theatres of today and at the same time anticipate their requirements tomorrow. We cannot wait until we see the "whites of the eye" of a situation. We must have long-range vision which enables us to view conditions which are out of our sight. A particular instance of this is stereophonic recording, which may be perfected in a few years or may take much longer. This is not the time to discuss the merits of stereophonic recording, but in the design and manufacture of our sound systems we have anticipated such changes as these and our equipment is adaptable to dual channel stereophonic recording when and if it comes.

With the great improvement in film producing technique, more particularly in connection with the faithful rendition of color and the increasing size of theatre screens, has come the necessity for better illumination. With increase of illumination has come an increase in the amount of heat in the light beam and the necessity for protecting the film in transit through the equipment from the strains which cause "buckling," which in turn destroys the definition of the projected picture. With the proper placing of the revolving shutters and with the provision for quickly moving hot air from the aperture plate and film handling surfaces, any injury which might be done has been reduced to an absolute minimum.

It is a far cry in the motion picture industry, although not so long as time is reckoned, to the days when a moving picture machine, so-called, consisted of a very flimsy projecting equipment in which all the parts were entirely exposed to dirt and dust. The reel of film to be projected was supported on a reel hanger without any thought of guarding it against injury or fire. The film after leaving the intermittent movement was run into a bag without any take-up apparatus of any kind and the picture projected by means of an oxy-acetylene tank and a lime stick. The whole equipment weighed less than 100 pounds. That was only thirty-five years ago! Compare this with the modern Simplex projection and sound reproducing equipment made available by International Projector Corporation today. The Super-Simplex and E-7 projectors are notable examples of research and development. Cleanliness and ease of operation are a paramount consideration in the highly specialized art of projection as it exists today. The modern Simplex projector is so designed that the many assemblies, more particularly the film trap, the gate, the intermittent movement, etc., may be readily removed for repair, replacement and cleaning, and a little attention on the part of the projectionist is all that is required to see that deposits from the film are removed from the sprocket teeth, tension shoes and film trap runners. Lubrication of the entire mechanism is possible through the simple pressure of the finger on a lever which forces well filtered oil under high pressure to all bearings.

Our modern projection problems are to supply equipment that gives audiences the best possible entertainment—the problem of theatre owners, managers and projectionists, is to keep it maintained in such condition that patrons will enjoy each performance to its fullest.

F. H. RICHARDSON'S COMMENT

More Sleuthing on Intermittent Flicker

GUY COWAN, projectionist at the State Theatre in Worthington, Ind., has a case of intermittent flicker which he describes thus:

"I'm having some trouble that has got me down. It's a case of intermittent flicker, concerning which there have been two articles in your colums recently, which I read carefully, but no soap.

"Starting at the beginning: We have two Motiograph projectors, not new, but they have been kept in good condition. They have two-blade front shutters. Low-intensity light sources pull about 23 amperes through two Garver rectifiers. Projection distance is 72 feet, screen image 12 feet, 8 inches by 9 feet, 6 inches. Both projectors are equipped exactly alike. Good screen illumination.

"Recently one projector developed a bad case of flicker; at least it shows up bad on light scenes. It happens, by actual count, 25 times a minute. Other projector light is clear as crystal. I have tried five different shutters, including a three-blader; also, the shutter from the other projector. I have exchanged complete shutter movements, also the gear train, and have exchanged rectifiers. I have tested speed and found it to be exactly 90 feet per minute. The flicker cannot be caused by the intermittent movement, since it is the same with the projector running empty. I have been projecting since 1926, but have never encountered anything like this. To a considerable extent it resembles the flicker we used to get with a.c. arcs.

"There are many things outside my own trouble that I would like to talk over with you, but guess I had better save them. One thing, though—may I suggest that it does not require a million dollar house and a hundred-dollar-a-week projectionist to place a decent screen image and good sound before audiences. Taking it up one side and down the other, I believe most of us chaps in towns of around 2,000 population try just as hard as the Big Boys do, and if we have the co-operation of friend manager, as I really have, we do a pretty good job, too."

Commenting on your last first, there is an excellent reason why very many small-town men might be able to show up "Big Boys" considerably. When troubles, big or little, come to one of the big city rooms, the projectionist well knows that nearbv are engineers ready to respond to a mere phone call. But with the small-town man it's very different. Expert help is perhaps a hundred miles away, so it's up to him! And, by golly, unless it is something very serious he had better be able, not only to

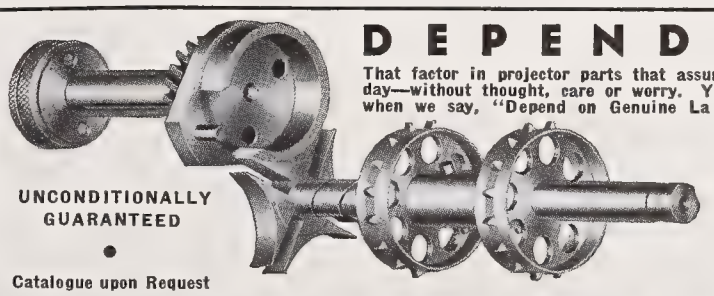
WITH 25% MORE LIGHT TRANSMISSION

Bausch & Lomb now offers the f:2 Super Cinephor which actually delivers 25% more light on the screen. Light lost in previous lenses by surface reflection (4-6% at each air to glass surface) is made to do useful work. A new process of treating lens surfaces minimizes reflections and makes this f:2 lens have a light efficiency that hitherto would have been possible only at f:1.79.



Not only is there 25% more light on the screen, but also a gain in contrast and crispness. Shadow detail is not diluted by distributed light. Color films, too, have greater purity and brilliance.

And now as to friend Cowan's trouble. This intermittent flicker matter is being reported quite often lately, so I have been discussing it with several projection engineers, including Herbert Griffin, executive vice-president of the International Projection Corporation. Mr. Griffin's diagnosis sounds particularly logical. It goes like this:

The only thing that suggests itself to me is that there is something wrong with the projector's wiring. Looks like either a loose connection somewhere or an intermittent ground.

The rectifiers are okay, since he has tried both in the offending circuit. Normally it would be presumed that the trouble was caused by a defective rectifier tube. Mr. Griffin suggests that a temporary direct line be run from the panel board and hooked in the rectifier to the projector which gives the trouble in order to ascertain whether or not the regularly installed wiring to this projector is in any way defective.

Film Damage of Obscure Origin

FROM W. Allyn Butterfield, projectionist of Napoleon, Ohio, comes this problem:

"You will find in the center of reverse side of the two enclosed film clippings, a straight, thin scratch. These clippings are from a new print, hence the damage evidently was caused by some fault in my projectors, though I am unable, after very careful examination, to find any such fault. My Motiograph projectors, Model K, are two years old but in excellent condition. Soundheads are Western Electric with curved sound gate, mounted on W. E. bases, with hold-back sprocket in takeup magazine, latter having rollers in excellent condition.

"So far as I am able to determine, the film contacts only at its edges all the way through the mechanism, therefore the question is: How is that scratch inflicted through the film's center? Everything is clean; all rollers turn freely. I take real pride in putting on good screen and sound results, even if we are in a small town. Such a report from the exchange is to me a black mark."

Friend Butterfield has the right spirit. While it is possible the damage was done by one of his projectors, that is not necessarily true. Moreover, if other prints have passed through both of his projectors without injury, is not their innocence pretty well proven? The injured print is a new one, but don't let anyone tell you it has never been projected until you received it. The chances are at least ten to one it has, possibly by the exchange itself. Moreover, it has been wound upon a reel, and in that process such damage could be inflicted. Not probable, but nevertheless possible, as is proven by an odd case that came under my own observation some while back.

I was in the office of the manager of a large exchange when an inspector entered bearing a new print just received, which she had wound upon a reel. In mounting the paper binder, she noted a scratch mark on the back of the title, very closely resembling the one Butterfield presents, which was found to extend back indefinitely. The manager was about to order the print returned. Observing that the inspector's fingers were bound with tape, I asked that she step to a rewind in the manager's office and rewind the print exactly as she had previously done. The inspector held the film lightly between her thumb and tape-bound fingers. Examination of that tape disclosed a minute but very sharp particle of steel embedded therein.

A scratch mark on a new print is not necessarily evidence that a projector inflicted it. Butterfield has carefully and thoroughly examined the film tracks of his projectors and found nothing wrong. One guess is as good as another. My own is that Butterfield is wholly blameless.

Yet another curious case of film scratch is reported by Raymond Dilloway, projectionist at the Strong theatre, in Burlington, Vt. He has sent samples of film, each third frame of which shows a tiny abrasion of the sound track.

Now, a projector sprocket wheel circumference is just equal to the length of four frames, hence it could not inflict the same damage in exactly the same place in every third frame, though it might in every fourth one. What the cause could be, I cannot even guess without examining the equipment. What do you fellows think?

Recollections That Show Past is Still with Us

FROM a Missouri theatre owner who was once a projectionist, comes this newsy letter:

"Dear Dad Richardson: I have followed your articles since the early days of the Moving Picture World. Occasionally have written you for advice. This letter is not for publication, but just that I feel the urge to write. [Well, he can't kick if I withhold his name, can he?—F.H.R.]

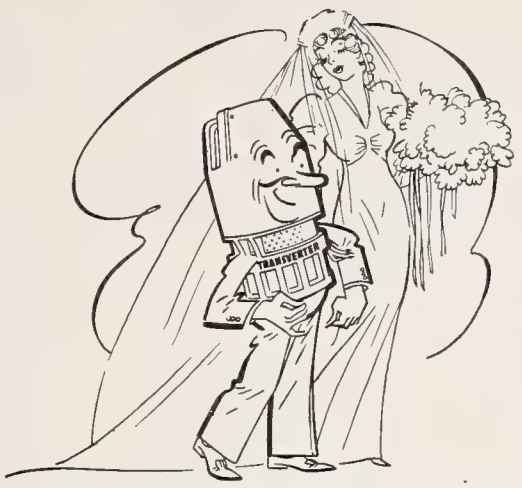
"I am not a projectionist, machine operator or what have you, but the owner of a smalltown theatre. Don't fancy bragging, but will stack our screen results up against any. Moreover, our sound is nothing to be sneezed at.

"Yes, once I was an 'operator,' before the days of the specialized projectionist. Have presided over an Edison Universal and Exhibition model, both one- and two-pin movements, Powers 5 and 6B, Lubin, Selig Polyscope, Pathe, Standard 4, Edison Super Kinetoscope, Motiograph DeLuxe, Monarch, Simplex (though not its latest models), and one that I believe was called the 'Royal.' So you see I have pretty well been through the mill. Of all the projectors made I liked best the old reliable Powers, with its roller pin intermittent movement.

"In the last issue of BETTER THEATRES you said you were unable to recall name of the projector Frank Cannock made prior to the Simplex. Was it not the Edengraph? [It was.—F.H.R.]

"Now don't laugh when I say that we are using a pair of Powers 6B's in my theatre, and are doing so by choice. We just like them! Have probably spent enough on replacement parts to buy two new projectors. Save for the frames and flywheels, I guess there is nothing of the original mechanisms left. But, kept in repair, they give us no trouble. Have them completely overhauled every six months. I don't write many letters, but when I read your article, the old days came back to memory, with this result."

And the result is welcome, indeed. There are hundreds of old-time projectionists who like to hear from and about others whose experiences of projection go back to the early days.



One error occurs, however. The Edison Kinetoscope was not placed on the market; just two or three of them were installed in theatres on trial. Some fault developed. Then about that time, a disastrous fire occurred in the Edison plant and all the jigs, dies, etc., were destroyed, whereupon Mr. Edison sold out all his projector manufacturing business to the Baird Company, which itself dropped out of sight not long after.

ON TRIAL

THIS is a year of ordeal for the motion picture and its masters. The screen's world from London to Tokyo is all but lost to war. At home in America it is deep in conflict of serious order.

Down in New York's Foley Square the organized industry is on trial in Federal court for everything that it has done for two decades, save the making of pictures.

In Washington the entire structure of the industry has been under inquisition in the interminable debates and contentions of the Neely Bill hearings.

But more importantly than all this, the motion picture is also very much on trial before its customers, the patrons of the box office—and that is on the subject of the making and presentation of motion pictures.

A great deal is being said behind hand about that.

The motion picture's controlling personnel can properly be much concerned about Washington and Foley Square, but the blunt fact is that that's just their troubles in which the box office public is not nearly so much interested as in pictures, entertainment.

The organized industry can win or lose actions at law and the public will not be caring very much. That same public, though, seems to care very much indeed about its theatre and pictures.

Nothing that is to be decided in courts of law, or in new legislation, can be quite as important as the progress of the motion picture on trial as entertainment before its patrons.

THUS far, conveyance to the exhibitor and the theatre about the plans and product promises of 1940, taken as a whole, is not overly laden with verve. A great deal that has been heard, the most that has been heard, has been about devices for making the customer pay more for the product—and, if the advocacy of longer runs is to be taken at par, all this is with an inescapable assumption that, while paying more per picture, the customer will be seeing fewer of them. So farther and farther, the trend of such a program of bigger and fewer is to make the motion picture less and less the mass entertainment it has been, taking it farther away from that broad basis of wide popular support as the universal entertainment which has given it stability, success.

And, while the furore of discussions has been of curtailments in product, it is to be observed that compilation of the product announcements, complete this week, gives a total contemplated output of almost exactly as many pictures as before. That has been, to be sure, along with much use of the term flexibility, which may mean what it says, or indecision.

Developments in the organized and controlled screen world in the last few months have not included improvement of the status of the motion picture.

The devices applied to picture merchandising addressed to the public have been more coercive than constructive.

The struggle seems to have been addressed at maintaining within the industry a certain status quo, not an effort at adjustment to the day and times, attunement to taste and buying power.

Examination of payroll reports would indicate that the industry is abundantly supplied with pricefully important talent in all departments, creative and executive. The figures are enough to make one seek a paraphrase for that line of Omar's: "I sometimes wonder what the vintners buy one-half so precious as the stuff they sell." With such clustered golden grapes of genius one might guess the product must be perfect, leaving the problem entirely in the shortcomings of the customers.

THE state of uncertainty is of course getting around to that matter of the customers. There is, for instance, that project for a Gallup poll. With all due respect for Dr. Gallup's scientific sampling technique, it must be observed that Gallup polls appear to be these days rather a sort of fashion, a new method with hint of miraculous divination.

All that any poll can do is to ask the customers.

The motion picture and its showmen have been asking the customers many a year. They are still asking every night from about fifteen thousand marquees. The public has been answering, too.

Apparently there are those who hope to get a more pleasing answer by asking someone else.

Hollywood holds almost all the picture-making skills and talent in the world.

Hollywood has made the world's greatest motion pictures, ever since Hollywood began. It can and will continue to do that.

But in increasing ratio as Hollywood has grown rich, grown powerful, considerations that have had much more to do with prides and vanities, with personal ambitions and positions, have come to stand between picture making and a clear sight of the customer looking at the marquee.

What the screen needs now, especially now as never before in this troubled world, Hollywood can supply, if it will get out of its own light, and let the public issue the oscars.

QUIET PLEASE

THE raspberry tinted cubicle in which this page is contrived is some three hundred and fifty feet up in our ivory tower on the escarpment of Rockefeller canyon.

Deep down below is the sunken garden of Rockefeller Center presided over by a golden image of Prometheus, and all hedged about by exotic trees and flowers. In the winter it is an ice skating rink, where girls in short skirts display their dexterity, and where now, the ice gone and iris blossoming, they are on rollers. It's a touch, a humanizing, democratizing touch, of policy kinship with the gesture of the Sidewalk Superintendent's club idea.

So much for the picture—it's the sound that is on our mind and in our ears. It seems that this Coneyisland skating rink idea has to bring with it mechanical music, not so obtrusive, over the street noises by day, but rising, hour by hour, with upturn

This Week in the News

That Consent Decree

EVEN as the Department of Justice was starting actual trial prosecution of its anti-trust suit against the organized industry Monday in New York, there were some Washington observers still pointing optimistically to an out-of-court settlement, a possibility frequently mentioned during the two years of trial preparation.

They reported renewed conversations between Department of Justice and Department of Commerce officials reviving possibilities of a consent decree, which, of course, could be effected at any time during trial.

Officials of both departments refused, as usual, to comment, but it was reported in the Capital that meeting had been held with high officials of the Department of Justice participating, meeting behind closely guarded doors, someplace in or between the buildings of both departments.

The meetings were suggested by observers in Washington as indicative of possibilities that, with his case in the record, Assistant U. S. Attorney General Thurman Arnold would not be adverse to considering settlement of the issues through a stipulation.

The same observers pointed out that a consent decree would save both the Government and the industry much time and money, would give the Government some, at least, of the "reforms" it seeks through its trust suit, and would give also to the industry a much-desired stability in a time of international stress.

There was a general belief in Washington this week that both sides would welcome a quick termination of the case, rather than have it drag a couple of years through the courts. To the motion picture industry, particularly, Washington sees a settlement desirable because of its possible bearing on the 80 other independent and Governmental trust suits pending, and also on any which might be filed following a final court decision of the "key" case.

The story of the opening of the New York trust trial starts on page 12.

of the "gain-control" through the evening.

We come not to this perpendicular pile of stark commerce for entertainment, for hoopla, nor for adjacency to them. People work nights around here, and they'd like a nice ratio of silence supporting the dignity of labor and Rockefeller Center. It sounds too much like Radio City.

MR. EDDIE DOWLING, variously as actor and producer, for the stage, appears to be considerably surrounded by laurel bearing accomplishments. Both a Pulitzer award and the selection as "best play of the season" by the New York Drama Critics Circle went to William Saroyan's "The Time of Your Life", produced by Mr. Dowling who played in the piece and co-directed with Mr. Saroyan. Mr. Dowling was also the producer of Paul Vincent Carroll's "Shadow and Substance", the Drama Critics' choice of "the best foreign play of 1938", and the same author's "The White Steed" with the same award for 1939.

Suit Indemnification

STOCKHOLDERS of Radio-Keith-Orpheum, Wednesday at their first annual meeting since reorganization, voted an amendment to the corporation's bylaws indemnifying its officers and directors for any "expenses" incurred by being named parties to any suit against the company in connection with their duties, unless dereliction on their part be established. This is the first instance in this age of indemnifying officers in an industry which has so many law suits. Such indemnification, however, is not unusual in large corporations in other industries.

Ned E. Depinet, RKO vice president and proxy for large holdings, presided at the meeting, held in Dover, seat of incorporation. More than 2,000,000 shares out of 2,650,000 were represented. They voted to retain Price, Waterhouse and Company, New York, as corporation auditors for another year.

The meeting was not scheduled to elect directors, since the directors as approved by the United States District Court, in New York, last year in reorganization proceedings under 77-B, have another year to serve.

J. M. Schenck Indicted

JOSEPH M. SCHENCK, chairman of the board of 20th Century-Fox Film Corporation, was indicted Monday by a Federal grand jury in New York, on charges of income tax frauds, conspiracy, perjury and making false statements to a Federal investigator.

This was coincidental with the opening of the trial of the Government's anti-trust action against the major concerns of the organized industry, also in New York.

Joseph H. Moskowitz, an executive of 20th Century-Fox, is also indicted. In the two indictments against Mr. Schenck there is a total of twenty-four counts.

Charge is made of conspiracy and fraud on income taxes for 1935, '36 and '37 by fictitious stock sale transactions and deductions of expenses, amounting to a tax total of some $400,000.

The second indictment, charging perjury and false statements, is based on transactions in 1937 in which the Government asserts Mr. Schenck gave Willie Bioff, Hollywood I. A. T. S. E. representative and labor agent, $100,000 in cash and $50,000 in 20th Century-Fox stock, this subsequent to a strike controversy settlement. The charges include the contention that some ten false statements were made to James A. Ronayne, special agent of the Internal Revenue department.

Bioff is under indictment for alleged income tax frauds pertaining to this transaction, which was under investigation in 1938. That matter is yet pending, while Bioff is in a Chicago jail completing a workhouse sentence on a vice traffic conviction of some eighteen years ago, prior to his rise in labor activities.

Mr. Schenck, in Hollywood, issued a statement, distributed from his New York office late Monday after the announcement of the indictment, in which he said:

"Income tax problems are always complex and subject to dispute. The charges made against me are grossly unfair.

"Two of the best auditing firms in New York, Boyce, Hughes and Farrell, and Webster, Horne and Blanchard, after a recent audit, have advised me that for the years in question I have overpaid rather than underpaid my taxes. Mr. Hughes is the former president of the American Society of Certified Public Accountants and Mr. Webster is the Chairman of the Board of Examiners of the New York State Certified Public Accountants.

"The claim that I made a false statement to a Government agent about another person's tax is not true.

"I am confident that when all the facts are finally determined full vindication will result."

Official Report

OFFICIALS of the industry met at the Union League Club in New York Wednesday with representatives of the War Department and pledged the cooperation of the industry with government plans for national defense.

The War

AS THE Nazi war-machine threw all its power against the French Wednesday, the while England was reassembling its army, the British film distributors organization, the Kinematograph Renters Society, met Wednesday with circuit representatives to study the booking and transportation problems that would result in event of bombing raids over London. Emergency arrangements made last September at the outbreak of the war were prepared for immediate use.

Home office executives in New York at HERALD press time had heard nothing of of their branches and their theatres in Paris, under the new Nazi drive on Paris and southern France.

The threat of a German invasion or air bombardments may result in the complete cessation of all American company production in England. A number of executives have taken the advice of the U. S. Government and left Great Britain.

The President Roosevelt, due Sunday, has on board the following film executives who directed American production in the London area: Ben Goetz, MGM British production head, Mrs. Goetz and Robert T. Kane, in charge of British production for Twentieth Century-Fox, and Mrs. Kane.

Also Joseph Friedman, European manager for Columbia, and Mrs. Friedman; Jeffery Bernerd, head of Grand National Films London; Mrs. David Rose, wife of the head of British production for Paramount; Mrs. Francis L. Harley, wife of the 20th Century-Fox managing director in Great Britain. Others are also en route or awaiting passage.

Breen's Air 'Career'

THE advertising agency of Young & Rubicam, New York, will know by June 24th whether Joseph Ignatius Breen, Production Code Administrator in Hollywood, will take to the air on a commercial broadcast, as a "sideline." Mr. Breen is interrogator, also on the side, for the local Hollywood "Ask the Stars" radio program.

Early in April Mr. Breen began his sideline radio "career" on Warners' Station KFWB, Hollywood, on Monday nights, questioning stars of the movie studios on an Information Please type of program. The show was copyrighted by Russell Hughes, radio producer.

Young & Rubicam took an option on the program, due to expire June 1st. One prospect turned "cold," but a new one is showing interest and the option was extended until June 24th—so disclosed a Young & Rubicam official Wednesday.

No Rushing FCC

THE Federal Communications Commission again dashed hopes of proponents of early television commercialization, when, on Monday in Washington, FCC Chairman James L. Fly warned that the Commission would not allow commercial interests to influence engineering opinion on standards for television; and hence that it would "not encourage" an agreement on standards for the benefit, solely, of commercial interests.

The Commission, several weeks ago, banned commercialization of television, planned by the Radio Corporation of America and others for September 1st.

Both the RCA, and DuMont Laboratories favor early commercialization, and an establishment of standards though their recommendations have differed before the FCC.

The Radio Manufacturers Association meets next Tuesday and Wednesday, in Chicago. Observers of the radio industry expect the manufacturers may attempt to settle their differences and form a united front.

Price Differentiation

THE desire of several distributors to have flexible admissions established to allow price increases for "important pictures" was given encouragement Wednesday by the leader of the MPTOA, Edward L. Kuykendall, who said that he had long advocated a price differentiation and has been successfully employing it for years in his own theatres at Columbia, Miss. Mr. Kuykendall, visiting New York from Washington where he had attended the House Committee hearings on the Neely Bill (see page 21), declared that the industry-wide practice of charging the same admission for good, bad and indifferent pictures is "unsound."

"As for price differentiation, labeling 'bad' pictures, that is nonsense," he added. "The public can tell a 'bad' picture from a 'good' one before seeing it. Many who wouldn't go to see a 'bad' picture at prevailing admissions, might attend if a fair price differential was established. And many more might be attracted by a higher admission to see an 'outstanding' picture."

Radio Figures

WHILE the market in the United States for foreign language motion pictures is narrowing to an all-time low since the post-war period of World-War I, due to the non-availability of imports from countries engaged in World War II, foreign language or foreign appeal radio programs here are growing amazingly, Louis Adamic, of the Community Forum, Philadelphia, estimating that today more than 1,000 air shows are being broadcast daily.

GOVERNMENT, INDUSTRY OPEN BATTLE IN NEW YORK FEDERAL COURTHOUSE

Arnold Outlines Purpose as "Clearing Channels of Industry", Defense Stresses "Vigorous Competition"

The United States Government, at 10:30 last Monday morning in Room 1306 of the Federal Court House in New York City, fired the first verbal barrage against the "Big Eight" of motion pictures in the battle of Foley Square, the anti-trust prosecution which, if lost by the defendants, would result in a remolding of the structure and practices of the American film industry. The event has been two years a-coming and two more years may elapse before the matter is finally concluded, if a consent decree settlement is not signed.

A curious crowd of some 500 persons had assembled in Foley Square hoping to get a glimpse of Hollywood stars and well-known producers but the public was disappointed. The Government was represented by Thurman Arnold and his staff of a dozen anti-trust division members and the defendants had only their counsels and a few home office lawyers numbering about 40.

Government's Aims

The Government seeks the following changes in the industry:

1. Divorcement of production and distribution from exhibition which would mean that Paramount, Twentieth Century-Fox and Warner Brothers would be compelled to drop their theatre interests and Loew's, Inc. and RKO would have to drop production activities.
2. Free access to all product by exhibitors.
3. Injunctions against talent pools and other agreements not available to independent producers.
4. Abandonment of compulsory block booking, forcing of shorts and newsreels, arbitrary designation of playdates, protection, overbuying, double bills, the levying of score charges and the designation of minimum admissions.

To enforce these changes the Government asks a permanent injunction, the appointment of trustees and a court order ruling that all sales contracts which violate these objects are illegal.

The major companies deny that a monopoly exists in the industry and hold that a victory for the Government would be against public interest.

The suit was filed June 20, 1938 in the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York by Lamar Hardy, U. S. attorney for that district under the direction of Attorney General Homer S. Cummings. It is described as in equity No. 87-273, United States of America, Petitioner v. Paramount Pictures, Inc., et al, Defendants.

The following were named defendants: Paramount and three subsidiaries and 21 officers and directors; Loew's, Inc., two subsidiaries and 19 individuals; Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation (RKO), six subsidiaries and 18 individuals; Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., three subsidiaries and 15 individuals; Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, five subsidiaries and 19 individuals; Columbia Pictures Corporation, four subsidiaries and 13 individuals; Universal Corporation, three subsidiaries and 17 individuals; United Artists Corporation and 12 individuals.

In the two years intervening between the time the suit was filed and the opening of the trial on Monday, conferences were held by the lawyers on both sides, interrogatories were prepared and answered and the Government has conducted pre-trial examinations of company executives.

Settlements Have Failed

The Department of Commerce has tried since a year ago to bring industry opinion and that of the Department of Justice together so that the suit could be settled. In January a proposed decree was drafted but not accepted by all the companies or by Thurman Arnold. With the temporary breakdown of consent decree negotiations both sides prepared for the trial which was postponed 30 days.

On the first day of the trial, which is presided over by Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard who has heard many anti-trust actions, the setting was a small panelled courtroom, reminiscent of a Hollywood set in the towering granite Federal Courthouse. But the battery of lawyers taxed the capacity of the small room and the scene was shifted to a larger room.

In addition to the ever-present American flag behind the Judge's bench the only other display in the front of Courtroom 1306 was a large map of the United States which the Government prepared. The map is expected to be one of the main battlegrounds of the trial for on it there has been placed a colored dot for each of the affiliated theatres. The Government will seek to prove that the majors have divided up territories for their theatre interests.

Arnold Opens for Government

After a few minutes to read into the record letters that explained the connection of the Judge's wife with a theatre in Lynchburg, Va., and formal waivers of any question of Judge Goddard's eligibility made by company attorneys and the Government, Thurman Arnold opened the trial proper.

Mr. Arnold, head of the United States anti-trust division, in his opening statement attempted to establish the suit as part of a broad policy "to clear the channels of industry." He was followed by Paul Williams, special assistant attorney general and chief Government trial counsel, who charged major companies with establishing a monopoly by "the tremendous force of their economic power." Mr. Williams asked Federal Judge Goddard to issue a permanent injunction restraining the 167 defendants from indulging in practices characterized as illegal by the Government.

If block booking is eliminated there is grave danger of some of the smaller distributors being forced out of business, said Louis Frohlich, attorney for Columbia, Wednesday, in his opening address.

By the time former Judge Thomas D. Thacher, attorney for Paramount and first defense speaker, rose to make an opening statement on Tuesday cramped conditions in the courtroom had forced the change to a far more spacious room. For over a full court day, Former Judge Thacher ably argued the defense case, detailing the history of the industry to support his claim that the majors sharply competed with each other.

John W. Davis, attorney for Loew's, and Ralph Harris, attorney for 20th Century-Fox, followed Former Judge Thacher on Wednesday.

Linked with General Policy

Mr. Arnold explained the broad outline of the Government's anti-trust policy and attempted to show that the film industry suit was properly part of that policy. The efforts of the Government had been consistently directed towards freeing the channels of industry from restraint and the present suit was in accord with those efforts, he declared.

To preserve political democracy it is essential to secure industrial democracy, Mr. Arnold said. The Government will no longer be acquiescent to the growth of monopoly and could not allow "a few groups" to dominate the film industry, he continued. It was not because of a "whim" that the Government had filed suit against the majors, he said.

The speaker asserted there was no individual in the industry "who did not feel the heavy hand of someone" restricting his freedom. Nor was a film monopoly justified by a desire "to rehabilitate an industry or even to preserve its solvency," Mr. Arnold contended.

One result of integration, he continued, was "notorious waste" in the film business; another, "that it creates a situation where an individual is not free to bring in new ideas." He reiterated that monopoly was the result of a private seizure of industrial power.

Germany, Mr. Arnold said, was an example of a country which had lost its democracy because business had created monopolies in restraint of commerce. Former Judge Thacher successfully objected to Mr. Arnold's discourse on Germany, claiming that if the parties had to go into that question the trial "would take not one year but ten."

Mr. Williams, who followed Mr. Arnold, asserted that "only national relief on a national scale" could correct abuses in the motion picture industry. Efforts by the Department of Justice to adjust individual complaints with the defendants had proved unsatisfactory by 1936, he said.

Mr. Williams traced the history of the film industry and the Government's contentions as to how trade practices and usages arose. He attributed the origin of monopoly to the purchase of theatres for Famous-Players-Lasky by Adolph Zukor.

Mr. Williams revealed that the Government intended to bring in as witnesses a number of men who had been active in the early days of the industry. These witnesses will be used,

GOVERNMENT CALLS EXCHANGE MANAGERS

Philadelphia exchange managers of the eight major companies have been served with subpoenas requiring their appearance as witnesses in the New York anti-trust suit, the Department of Justice announced Tuesday.

Managers subpoenaed are: Frank L. McNamee, RKO; W. G. Mansell, Vitagraph; Earl W. Sweigert, Paramount; George E. Schwartz, Universal; Robert Lynch, Loew's; Harry G. Bodkin, United Artists; Ted Schlanger and Lester Krieger, Warners; and Edgar Moss, Al Davis and Sam Gross, Twentieth Century-Fox.

Testimony of these managers will be taken early in the trial when the Government presents its evidence on the theatre conditions in the Philadelphia area. Over 40 exhibitors from Philadelphia were previously subpoenaed by the Department of Justice.

BATTERY OF DEFENSE LAWYERS READY

he said, to trace the development of the motion picture industry and to show how it evolved into its present form.

In discussing production, the Government attorney said talent loans between the majors "were nothing more than pooling arrangements" and that they had their origin in a desire to perpetuate the monopoly. In the early days, Mr. Williams said, efforts to control the market were directed to signing up all available stars on long term contracts.

Because of the defendants' "economic power," and their mutual cooperation, affiliated houses "almost automatically" obtained first-run on films in the 36 "key cities" of the country, he asserted. Independents in these cities had been relegated to an inferior position without regard to the importance of their houses, he said.

Participation by Three Charged

Columbia, Universal and United Artists had been made defendants in the suit because "they had joined with the producer-exhibitor companies" by making their product available first to affiliates. These three defendants "may be reluctant participants to these practices, but they have indulged in them and that is why they are defendants," Mr. Williams said.

He contended that "desirable product" was scarce in the industry because independents had been discouraged from producing films. He also claimed that affiliates were favored by receiving selective contracts "which are the direct opposite of block booking."

Mr. Williams gave the following figures for affiliated theatres: Paramount, 1,239; Loew's, Inc., 139; RKO, 122; Warners, 507 and 20th Century-Fox, 517.

Former Judge Thacher, the first speaker for the defense, argued that the industry's "amazing accomplishments" could only have resulted from intense competition and that there "was no foundation whatsoever to the charges of monopoly." The suit, he said, was welcome not only to the Government but also to the defendants because it would vindicate them. He held that a Government victory would restore those conditions in the industry which had directly led to monopoly in the past.

Integration of the three branches of the industry had been inaugurated by Adolph Zukor in 1918 to prevent First National Exhibitors from obtaining dominating control, Judge Thacher said. If this integration is ruled illegal, he added, efforts to monopolize similar to those of First National may be made.

Because it was impracticable to build a chain of theatres, Paramount turned to the purchase of circuits "in competition with other companies," Judge Thacher continued. At no time, he said firmly, was there any agreement to divide theatre territories and challenged the Government to produce proof of its assertion.

Vigorous Competition Seen

The cost of production, the high personnel salaries and the prices paid for story material is "persuasive proof" that there is no monopoly in the film business, the defense attorney continued.

Each defendant, he asserted, is confronted with vigorous competition from every other domestic and foreign distributor and the Government is proceeding on an erroneous theory when it compares the film industry with other commercial trades. In the film industry the copyright act protects the producer and all that is sold is the right to exhibit a film at a certain time, he continued.

Print costs, totalling in 1939 $15,000,000, were cited as factors which regulate distributors to an extent. The average film rental "does not cover anything but an infinitesimal fraction of a single print." He said black and white prints costs between $150 and $250 and color between $700 and $900 each.

Evidence to be submitted will show, the former judge said, that there have been no agreements between competitors to deal with each other and "we will show that it could not have happened any other way with or without an agreement." He asserted that "every single one of these defendants is an independent producer and exhibitor, regardless of what the Government may call them." He said many independent producers make good prictures but the business "requires extraordinary skill and enormous capital."

Difficulties Paramount faces in producing good films at a profit were discussed, as well as the business of distribution. Judge Thacher said, "there is no more competitive business in this country than the licensing of these pictures."

Judge Thacher concluded his statement which opened the majors' presentation by saying, "The decree sought in this case would gravely prejudice the public interest. Certainly in no case which has ever been presented, could it be said that the public has been so well served by the highly competitive efforts of those engaged in it."

John W. Davis, attorney for Loew's Inc., and Ralph Harris, counsel for Twentieth Century-Fox, on Wednesday traced the growth of the companies in an attempt to show that there has been no monopoly in the film industry.

Integration of the three branches of the industry has not been prohibited by any court decision, Mr. Davis said in his analysis of the Sherman anti-trust law. He said the Government must prove an actual conspiracy.

The Government has never heretofore told companies that they must confine themselves to "such and such business and no other; or so much business and no more." Loew's cannot take "vicarious responsibility" for the acts of any other company and will insist in the trial that no evidence be binding upon it unless definite proof is given that Loew's participated in the acts complained of, Mr. Davis asserted.

Refuting the claim of waste, the Loew's attorney said his client had earned over $9,000,000 a year for the last four years.

He flatly denied any reciprocity between his company and other major defendants, stating "the only effort is to get its pictures in the best theatres at the best prices; this is commercial endeavor not in violation of any law."

In scouting the Government's claims that independent theatres had been forced out of business because of discrimination, Davis said there were 16,895 independent theatres in 1933 and 16,421 in 1937, but at the same time, that the total seating of these houses had increased from 8,147,000 to 8,530,000. Mr. Davis discussed such practices as block-booking and clearance, calling them "wholly natural growths."

Fox Career Recalled

Mr. Harris detailed the gradual rise of William Fox and termed his career "swashbuckling" and conclusive proof that there has been no conspiracy in the industry. He said, "The evidence will show that in the years in which the circuits were acquired there was a most vigorous and unrestrained competition among the producing companies to secure additional theatres."

The fact that "in certain territories some of the defendants operate the best theatres, the most productive theatres and the largest number of theatres" Mr. Harris said was the result of "unlimited, untrammeled and open competition."

Twentieth Century-Fox owns directly only one first run deluxe theatre in the 36 key cities named by the Government and that one is the Roxy in New York. He contended that National Theatres was not a subsidiary of the company and not directly controlled by it. He said National theatres had six deluxe theatres in the 36 key cities.

The public, Mr. Harris continued, is the ultimate consumer and not the theatre as contended by the Government. "If an independent producer can make pictures which the public will like, those pictures will be shown in every theatre, major or small." He pointed out that it was natural that the large deluxe theatres which can pay the highest rentals will get the best pictures.

Myers Called "Active Enemy"

Also appearing for the defense on Wednesday were Edward C. Raftery, for United Artists and Universal, and Judge Joseph Proskauer, Warners, the last speaker for the defense and who was to complete his address Thursday, after which the Government was to follow with its first witness.

Mr. Raftery charged Abram Myers, Allied head, with being "the active enemy of the best interests in the industry since the day he walked out of the Trade Practice Conference in 1927."

Judge Proskauer, in attacking Mr. Arnold, said: "The ultimate purpose of this case is an attempt at Government seizure of industrial power."

The Wednesday session was also featured by a statement of Mr. Williams to Judge Goddard that the Government would not consider ownership of theatres by a producer unlawful if the producer played only his own product at these houses.

FEDERAL THEATRE FIGHT TO SENATE

Efforts to restore theatre projects to the Federal relief program have shifted to the Senate after refusal of the House of Representatives to rescind its stand abolishing the projects because of allegations of communistic influence and mismanagement.

Representative Emanuel Celler (Dem., New York) appealed to Congress to rescue a growing army of unemployed actors and actresses from what he described as "death blows" struck at the stage by the radio and motion pictures. Despite the pleas the House rejected his amendment to the billion dollar relief bill.

Skouras Theatres, Majors Are Sued

Skouras Theatre Corporation and the major distributors were named defendants Wednesday in a suit charging unreasonable clearance, as filed in the U. S. district court in New York by the River Theatre Corporation, operating the Central Theatre in Pearl River, N. Y. The plaintiff asserted that its 644-seat house should receive clearance seven days after the Skouras' Nyack theatre but that it is compelled to wait from 52 to 72 days.

IATSE TO REELECT BROWNE, WHO COMMENDS BIOFF, NICK, CIRELLA

Attorney Breslin Charges a Campaign of Destruction Against Union with CIO "In Background"

by E. H. MORRIS
in Louisville

Culminating one of its most turbulent years, the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes and Moving Picture Machine Operators, largest theatrical union in America, with 43,437 members, opened its 35th convention, Monday, at the Jefferson County Armory, Louisville.

Browne Defends Leaders

As if anticipating expectations of a large number of the 1,000-odd delegates to hear the organization's official stand on the attacks made on it during the year because of the Bioffs, the Nicks and the Cirellas, George E. Browne, president, made a vigorous defense of the three whose records precipitated charges of "racketeering" against both the IATSE and its American Federation of Labor parent.

Mr. Browne, from the rostrum, publicly gave carte blanche in IATSE Hollywood union matters to Willie Bioff, who reputedly is directing those matters now, even though he is in Chicago city jail serving six months on an 18-year-old pandering charge.

Mr. Browne indicated that as soon as Bioff is released from jail in October—he was committed April 15th—he would return to work in the Hollywood unions, adding, "Let us hope that from now he will be able to enjoy the peace he so richly deserves and that this persecution by his enemies will cease forever."

Even before the convention opened, Mr. Browne called the press to his hotel suite to defend Bioff and Cirella. They are efficient union men, despite their records, he said.

In his Bioff report to the convention, Mr. Browne avoided reference to a federal income tax indictment, which Bioff must answer in Federal Court in Los Angeles, upon completing the pandering sentence. Nor did Mr. Browne refer to Bioff's transactions in 1937 in which the Government asserts he received $100,000 in cash and $50,000 in Twentieth Century-Fox Film stock, this subsequent to a Hollywood strike controversy settlement.

Defense Comes First

Defense of the IATSE subordinates took precedence over such convention matters as jurisdiction of the IATSE vs. CIO affiliates in certain theatrical precincts, "inclusive service" contracts for servicing all theatre equipment, an Altec matter; position of the IATSE in 16mm projection, in television and in the new nickle-in-the-slot movie industry; applying the American Federation of Labor's group insurance to all of IATSE's 43,000 members, and other business. MOTION PICTURE HERALD, on April 27th, described the union insurance plan, which would be written by the Union Labor Life Insurance Company. James J. Brennan, fifth vice preisdent of the IATSE, heads the organization's committee on insurance study. AFL's Matthew Woll is president of Union Labor Life.

Mr. Browne admitted to the IATSE delegates on Tuesday that there were fifth column activities within the organization's ranks.

Congressman William T. Schulte of Indiana and a member of the Hammond, Ind., IATSE Local 135, warned the delegates to be on guard against fifth column elements, particularly in labor movements.

Judge Matthew Levy of New York City on Wednesday urged the delegates to conduct a concerted drive on "subversive" elements within the IATSE.

George M. Breslin, IATSE general counsel in Hollywood, and active in virtually all of its negotiations in recent years with producers on salary demands, as instigated by Bioff, took the floor on Tuesday to echo Mr. Browne's praise of the jailed leader.

"I regret to say those people who would destroy your organization are supported by certain executives who are known to be counselling, advising and furnishing funds for this purpose, as are certain actors, other organizations, the press and politicians, and, of course, the CIO is in the entire background," Mr. Breslin said.

Green Pledges Support

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, completely indorsed the IATSE, and pleded his "unequivocal" support of the organization. He said the union was "splendid" and "one of the outstanding" of the larger AFL subsidiaries and that it could be assured of the Federation's active aid "everywhere, anywhere and all the time."

During an off-the-floor press conference, President Browne specifically denied charges of Westbrook Pegler, Scripps-Howard newspaper columnist, that the IATSE was a "racket union" dominated by an undemocratic leadership. It was Mr. Pegler's columnistic disclosures that principally led to the return of Bioff to jail in Chicago to serve the 18-year-old pandering sentence. Mr. Pegler has for months been attacking, in his columns, many persons in theatrical unions, frequentley mentioning Nick, Cirella, Bioff and others.

"The best reply we can make to Pegler," said Mr. Browne, "is to let the people here see our convention, how we run it, who its delegates are and the quality of its leadership."

He told the interviewing reporters, Sunday, that Nick Cirella, alias Dean, who also has a Chicago police record, "is a good union man, too. My God, his troubles were some 20 years ago!" Cirella, in 1916, was sentenced to jail in Chicago on charges of assault to commit murder and assault to rob. In 1922 Cirella was indicted in Chicago as one of the robbers of a bank messenger but the case against him was non-prossed. He is now Mr. Browne's representative in Chicago, a post similar to that which Bioff holds in Hollywood.

Mr. Browne disclosed that John P. (Big) Nick of St. Louis no longer was first vice president of the IATSE, the post having been taken by Harland Holmden of Cleveland.

It was Nick's brush with the law in St. Louis which has involved The Post-Dispatch of that city in a fight in the Missouri courts.

Nick was found by a St. Louis civil court to have accepted $10,000 from motion picture theatre owners to forestall a wage increase, while in a criminal court a defense demurrer at Nick's trial was sustained. The Post-Dispatch commented editorially on the apparent inconsistency of the two court actions and was cited for contempt.

Kaplan Case Ignored

The staff reporters in Louisville assigned to the convention by the New York Times, which is noted for its reports on labor, observed that Mr. Browne "praised Local 306 of the film operators in New York for remarkable advancement, but there was no hint that Sam Kaplan, who served a penitentiary term for coercion of union members and had once been removed from office by the Alliance itself, was back on the local's executive board."

Mr. Browne emphasized that in the last three years Bioff has obtained for the Hollywood studio workers a total wage increase of 30 per cent and said that in so doing he incurred the displeasure of "powerful monied interests." He said that Bioff's troubles began shortly after he had won the last of three 10 per cent wage increases.

Mr. Browne noted that the conference of the American Federation of Labor studio unions of Los Angeles had previously begged Bioff to be their spokesman in negotiating with the producers in behalf of 35,000 workers, whose welfare, the president said, was menaced by Communistic elements on the West Coast.

"After everybody had received his increase Bioff tendered his resignation as chairman of the committee representing the studio locals, but it is indeed gratifying to me to know that the studio unions refused to accept his resignation, stating to the world that they wanted William Bioff to continue to represent them even if he had to do it from his jail cell," continued Mr. Browne.

"William Bioff has done the most remarkable job any man has ever done for labor against terrific odds. "

Matthew Woll, vice president of the AFL, referred indirectly to the internal difficulties of the IATSE by noting that "we find the press as a whole here and there urging condemnation of labor for faults of one or two officials."

The membership of the IATSE was fixed by the union's president at 43,437, an increase of about 20,000 since he took office six years ago. The union's cash balance was reported as $344,795, an increase of $238,902 over the same period. The cost of the convention will be about $175,000, it was said.

Because of the absence of opposition to Mr. Browne, all officers were expected to be returned to office. They include George E. Browne, Chicago, president; Harland Holmden, Cleveland, first vice-president; William Cobert, Toronto, second vice-president; Richard Walsh, Brooklyn, third vice-president; Floyd Billingsley, San Francisco, fourth vice-president; James J. Brennan, New York, fifth vice-president; Roger Kennedy, Detroit, sixth vice-president; Felix Snow, Kansas City, seventh vice-president, and Louis Krouse, general secretary-treasurer.

WEBER EXPECTED TO RESIGN AFM POST

After 40 years as president of the American Federation of Musicians, Joseph N. Weber will retire, because of ill health, at the organization's 45th annual convention in Indianapolis next Monday, he advised several leaders of the union this week. With knowledge of this move, some AFM officials are reported planning to "draft" James C. Petrillo for the post. Mr. Petrillo is head of the Chicago AFM. Mr. Weber has suffered ill health since the convention in Kansas City, last year.

44 TOP FEATURES, 16 WESTERNS, FOUR SERIALS, 130 SHORTS FROM COLUMBIA

Increase in Number and Appropriations Planned to Offset Foreign Losses; Best Selling Novels Included

"Because of the obvious losses of foreign income," Columbia Pictures Tuesday announced it was "throwing its entire assets into its new 1940-41 season program to make it so important in American distribution that it will materially offset the foreign loss."

Surpassing previous programs in number of productions and budget appropriation, Columbia's promised line up is for 44 features, 16 westerns, four serials and 130 short subjects.

Higher Appropriations

The announcement was made at the first of two sales convention meetings, at the Blackstone Hotel, Chicago.

"A record breaking budget appropriation allowing for a minimum of 16 high-bracket productions," was a feature of the announcement. It was further stated that, "never before has the company been so well prepared with planned story properties, talent and assignments of stars and directors to definite productions."

Next to the higher budget and larger schedule was the list of "great producer-directors" and "great directors," among them Wesley Ruggles, George Stevens, John Stahl, Alexander Hall, Charles Vidor.

Following its policy on well known stories, Columbia has acquired an array of material headed by James Hilton's "And Now Goodbye," A. J. Cronin's "The Valorous Years" and Louis Bromfield's "A Story of Old New Orleans," besides many known plays, novels and short stories.

The company in 1940-41 will also embark on "a new kind of western" program, with stories based on the West's past, and early frontier heroes.

Of the 60 pictures announced, 44 will be productions featuring star, directorial or author names; of the 16 westerns, eight will star Charles Starrett and eight Bill Elliott. The program will be supplemented by four serials "of adult as well as juvenile appeal." "The industry must remain sane in the face of the world's madness," was the keynote of the talk by Jack Cohn, vice-president, Wednesday before delegates to the company's sales meeting at Chicago's Hotel Blackstone.

"The film industry must learn to face facts," said Mr. Cohn. "We cannot ignore the events abroad. We must learn that, in these trying times we stick to our job—that of making, selling and exhibiting motion pictures."

COLUMBIA OBSERVES CODE—MONTAGUE

Columbia will continue to observe provisions of the industry's defunct "fair trade practice code," A. Montague, general sales manager, told the company's executives and sales personnel on Wednesday, the third day of the company's four-day annual sales meeting, which began on Monday at the Blackstone Hotel, in Chicago.

"We intend," Mr. Montague said, "to continue selling that code of fair practice to Columbia exhibitors—not the printed code which has been shelved—but a code that will go even further in principle than that which was printed."

Montague on Costs

"Columbia is going to put its entire resources into its 1940-41 product to build a program which will play a dominant role in the distribution world still available and thus offset the loss in volume caused by the war," Abe Montague, general sales manager, stated Tuesday in an address on Columbia's budget costs before the delegates to the four-day sales meeting now in session at the Hotel Blackstone here.

"Exhibitors in the United States, representing 65 percent of the distribution world still free and open, must give their wholehearted cooperation toward making possible this extra volume of business in the realization that an important part of the negative costs of all pictures formerly came from that part of the world no longer available to American producing and distributing companies," he said, adding:

"Exhibitors in the United States must be made to realize that the problem of production and distribution really is an exhibitor's problem as well. Without the cooperation of exhibitors in the United States, today representing 65 percent of the available distribution world, the battle for this needed increase in revenue would be a losing cause, regardless of the resources and efforts of the producer and distributor."

Messages were read from Harry Cohn, president of Columbia, and Sam Briskin, of the studio; from producer Charles R. Rogers, directors George Stevens, Alexander Hall, Charles Vidor and home office executives Abe Schneider and Nate Spingold.

One hundred and twenty-five home office executives and members of the sales staffs of 16 branch offices were present at the convention, which remains in session through Friday, June 7th. Following the Chicago meeting, further sales talks will be held in Atlantic City on June 11, 12, 13 and 14, for eastern branches.

Jack Cohn opened the session, and then turned the meeting over to A. Montague, who presided.

Following Mr. Montague's discussions there were addresses by Rube Jackter, assistant sales manager, on the company's manpower; an address by A. Schneider, treasurer; Maurice A. Bergman, director of advertising, publicity and exploitation, on matters concerning his department; Joseph McConville, foreign sales manager, on the foreign situation; Lou Weinberg and Louis Astor, on circuit sales; Max Weisfeldt on short subjects, Al Seligman on accessories and Maurice Grad on sales promotion.

Among the home office executives present, in addition to the above, were H. C. Kaufman, G. Josephs, B. E. Zeeman, S. Raisler, V. Borrelli, I. Sherman, J. Freiberg, W. Brennan, and Al Sherman.

Steffes on Leave of Absence from Allied

Al Steffes, president of Allied Theatre Owners of the Northwest, is on a six months leave of absence and a president pro-tem will probably be named by the board of directors. Meanwhile a special committee of the organization has been appointed to name a paid executive secretary to succeed Ben Ashe, present secretary, whose duties as acting manager of the Berger amusement circuit preclude giving the job the attention it demands. Mr. Ashe is chairman of the committee. Under consideration for the post are Charles Weiner, Monogram manager, and Harry Sherman, distributor. In an internal change 10 districts have been set up in Minnesota and a governor will be elected from each district.

Mr. Steffes is withdrawing temporarily from active participation in Allied and theatre operations due to illness. The management of the World and Alvin in Minnesota has been taken over by the Minnesota Amusement Company for three years following negotiations between Mr. Steffes, who is head of World Theatres Corporation, and John J. Friedl of Minnesota Amusement.

URGES BOYCOTT OF GANGSTER PICTURES

Victor B. Wylegala, children's court judge, Buffalo, N. Y., this week urged a boycott of "gangster-type" motion pictures, even though the villain invariably suffers for his crimes.

Speaking before the Hotel Greeters of America in the Hotel Stuyvesant, Judge Wylegala said that despite the crime-does-not-pay moral of this type of picture, the child most often retains the memory of the criminal temporarily outwitting the "cops" and attributes the villain's eventual downfall to stupidity.

The judge cited the case of two boys who were brought before him recently, charged with theft. "They had seen the film, 'Boys Town,'" he explained, "and were so impressed with Father Flanagan's institution that they figured if they were sufficiently bad, they might be sent there."

Film Alliance Plans 38 Films

Film Alliance of the United States plans a total of 38 pictures for the 1940-41 season, including 12 westerns, it was announced this week.

The first two releases will be "Fifth Column Squad" and "Murder, Inc." The first, starring Barry K. Barnes, will be released nationally from June 10th, while "Murder, Inc.," starring Jack La Rue will be released June 24th.

"False Rapture," starring Otto Kruger and Mary Maguire, and "Hell's Cargo," starring Robert Newton and Walter Rilla will be released July 8th and 22nd, respectively. Thereafter, Film Alliance will release one picture every two weeks, according to Norman Elson, sales manager.

"Fifth Column Squad," made in England, deals with a group organized to hunt down German spies within the ranks of the Royal British Air Force, according to the announcement.

Paramount Films Open; Set 20th-Fox Premiere

Paramount opened two pictures, attended by world premiere, on Thursday and Friday of this week and Twentieth Century-Fox is to unveil its newest color picture, "Maryland," next Wednesday in Baltimore.

The Paramount pictures are "Safari," starring Madeleine Carroll and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., which opened at the Strand, Providence, on Thursday, to the accompaniment of a civic celebration, a testimonial dinner, a parade, and personal appearances of the picture's stars, Lynne Overman, Muriel Angelus, and J. Carrol Naish; and "The Ghost Breakers," starring Bob Hope and Paulette Goddard, which was to open Friday at the Michigan Theatre, Detroit, the stars making personal appearances.

Fox's "Maryland," produced by Darryl Zanuck, will open next Wedesnday at two Baltimore theatres, the New and the Centre. There will be an elaborate premiere attended by the state governor and a civic celebration.

Vivien Leigh Honored

The Special Awards Committee of the Broadway Association has chosen Vivien Leigh as "Broadway's First Lady for 1940." Miss Leigh is the first star of stage or screen to appear simultaneously in five Broadway houses, "Waterloo Bridge" at the Capitol; "Gone with the Wind" at the Astor; "21 Days Together" at the Rivoli; "Sidewalks of London" playing subsequent runs on Broadway and elsewhere, and the stage production of "Romeo and Juliet" at the 51st Street theatre.

Set Northwest Picnic

The Northwest Film Club, Seattle, has set June 26th as the date for the annual picnic. The site is yet to be chosen.

COMMITTEE ASKS NEELY REVISION AS ARGUMENTS ON BILL CONCLUDE

Sub-group Gets Measure for "Study"; Compulsory Cancellation, Elimination of Block Booking Indicated

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

The block booking battle of Washington is over. The decision still is in the hands of the referees, a committee of Congressmen.

Completing the hearing of an estimated 750,000 words of testimony, the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee on Tuesday in Washington adjourned its 17-day hearing on the Neely block booking bill and on Wednesday turned the bill over to a sub-committee for "such further study as may be necessary," an action, it was learned in authoritative quarters, that was the first step toward thorough revision of the bill and a possible effort to secure its enactment at this session. The special subcommittee is to rewrite the bill, possibly eliminating the block booking ban and providing compulsory cancellation of pictures for cause, to meet the objections of the public groups to blind selling. The revised bill, it was said, will be framed to meet the demands of the public groups, but will leave the interests of the independents to the Department of Justice.

As the hearings adjourned, Chairman Clarence F. Lea (Dem., Cal.) expressed the hope that a committee meeting could be held on the bill without delay, but admitted that some members might wish to postpone consideration until the testimony was printed, which might make action impossible at this session of Congress.

While perhaps not the longest hearing on the subject of block booking, the sessions just concluded were admitted by both proponents and opponents of the Neely measure to be the most exhaustive investigation of block booking ever made by Congressmen.

Summation and Rebuttal

The final hearings this week were devoted to a summation for the opponents by Austin C. Keough, Paramount vice president and general counsel, and by George J. Schaefer, RKO president, and rebuttal for the proponents by Henry R. Atkinson, co-framer of the bill, and Abram F. Myers, general counsel for Allied.

Motion picture producers might be willing to prepare synopses of their films, but would not dare to attempt it under the heavy penalties provided by the bill for failure to provide true and accurate outlines, it was testified by Ralph Block of the Screen Writers Guild at the final sessions of last week's hearings.

His comments drew from Representative Alfred L. Bulwinkle (Dem., N. C.), the observation that he had received many letters on the bill, and that some of those in favor of the measure promised that if it was passed, the morals of the country would be "cleaned up."

Irritation at the failure of representatives of all interests to go into what he considered the heart of the measure—the block booking prohibition—and to discuss the questions of constitutionality which were involved was voiced by Representative Wolverton, who suggested that some argument as to the legal standing of the bill be presented before the hearings closed.

Mr. Wolverton pointed out that the New York suit, which he said did not involve any moral questions but dealt exclusively with economic considerations, revolved around block booking and that he thought that was the major point in the Neely bill as well.

CONFERENCE LIKELY IF BILL FAILS

If the Neely anti-block booking bill fails to pass this session of Congress, leaders in every sector of the film industry may expect to be invited to an "all-industry conference, to settle our problems." The conference is planned by the New York circuit operator and exhibitor leader, Harry Brandt, president of the Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York. According to Mr. Brandt, an executive committee of New York film industry leaders will first be appointed and these will ask leaders from every section of the country and the industry to meet at a "round-table session," probably in New York.

"Of course, if the Neely Bill passes, we won't have a conference—we won't have an industry," Mr. Brandt added.

At the final sessions of the week, the committee heard the views of a number of exhibitors, all of whom opposed the bill.

Rotus Harvey of San Francisco told the committee the independent exhibitor should be allowed a 30 per cent cancellation which, he said, would enable him to buy from all the companies and enjoy all the best pictures. The greatest evil of the industry, he said, is the double bill, which is driving the public away from the theatres.

Mrs. William Wood, Washington, Ga., who said she had "two theatres and three white elephants," predicted chaos and confusion would ensue if the bill was enacted.

Bob White of Portland, Ore., criticised "misguided reformers" and "natural dissenters in our own ranks" who, he said, make it impossible for controversies to be ironed out within the industry. Lyle N. Wilson of Roanoke Rapids, N. C., said the "theatre-goer doesn't know or care how the pictures get to the theatres" but picks the ones he wants to see. As proof of his contention, he disclosed that he made only $73 from "Abraham Lincoln in Illinois" but grossed $494 from "Road to Singapore."

Portraying himself as a representative of "the average small-town theatre owner and operator," R. N. Smith of Mission, Tex., operating six houses with seating capacities ranging from 300 to 529, said there was no need for the legislation, which he denominated "the most impractical bill ever presented affecting the operation of motion picture theatres."

Urges Trade Practice Code

Hugh W. Bruen of Whittier, Cal., testified that if the Department of Justice would give "the go-ahead signal" on the trade practice code, the difficulties of the industry would largely disappear. He paid tribute to the efforts of Sidney Kent and William F. Rodgers to get the agreement through and said that its benefits were still being felt even though the code never was put into effect.

Mr. Bruen, however, had some criticisms of the majors who, he said, were "domineering" and, by "unscrupulous methods" demanded too much of the box office dollar for themselves, "each year taking a little bit more and figuring and devising new ways in which they can leave us as little as possible without putting us out of business."

He asserted that if the bill was passed "Gone With the Wind" conditions would be applied to all pictures, and said the first-runs so milked that film that he could run it only three days and that advance ticket sales indicated "that is two days too long."

William F. Crockett of Virginia Beach, Va., said that under the bill it might be possible in his state, which has little double featuring, for the exhibitors to lease their screens to the distributors. In other words, he explained, instead of buying a picture and paying 30 per cent, the exhibitor might lease his screen to the company for 70 per cent of the gross, thus geting around the synopsis provision.

Nat M. Williams of Thomasville, Ga., predicted theatres would be unable to operate on fixed admission scales because film prices would be raised on hits to make up for the loss on others.

O. C. Lam, Rome, Ga.; Mack Jackson, Alexander City, Ala.; Stanley Sumner, Cambridge, Mass.; Morris Lowenstein, Oklahoma City, Okla.; H. R. Berry, Hartsville, S. C.; George P. Aarons and J. Luke Gring of Philadelphia, and James Olson, Clare, Mich., also opposed the measure.

Cites Cooperation

A. Julian Brylawski, of the Warner Brothers Washington staff, recalled to the committee the many ways in which the exhibitors cooperated with Government agencies and with national and local organizations in any "drive" which they have undertaken, and urged that no shackles be placed on the industry at a time when it might again be called upon by the Government, to cooperate in the national defense program.

Franchise holders see in the bill a possibility of the loss of important long-run contracts, it was testified by Roy McMinn, Superior, Wis.; Harry Zeitz, New Bedford, Mass., and Fred Green, Woonsocket, R. I.

Among the organization representatives expressing opposition to the bill were Mrs. George Rowles, Omaha, of the Nebraska Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Richard McClure, president of the Chicago Better Films Council, and Mrs. Alonzo Richardson and Mrs. Pierce Chestley, respectively of the Atlanta and Macon (Ga.) Better Films Committees.

Thomas McGuire, public relations director of the Co-operative Theatres of Michigan, laid before the committee a number of amendments which he said would deal adequately with the situation. He suggested that section 3 be eliminated and in its place a provision requiring arbitration of all disputes on contracts, overbuying, clearance and similar problems.

Section 4, Mr. McGuire said, should be amended to provide a mandatory 20 to 25 per cent cancellation clause in all block booking contracts, a prohibition against forced selected playing time on percentage pictures, a prohibition against the imposition of score charges and a provision for identification of pictures which would provide the names of stars, featured players, authors, and the name of the story on which the film is based but not be a synopsis.

William G. Ripley of Long View, Wash., charged that the bill would work a great hardship on the small exhibitor. He represented the Independent Theatre Owners of Washington, Northern Idaho and Alaska.

In response to suggestions by committee members, Francis S. Harmon, Eastern representative of the Production Code Administration, filed a statement showing how the code group operates and discussing, in confidence, some of the pictures on which it has passed, as illustrative of the methods followed in assuring satisfactory standards.

KEOUGH, SCHAEFER HIT NEELY BILL

In a 10,000-word statement, delivered without interruption, Mr. Keough sharply questioned the motives of proponent witnesses, flatly denied the truth of many of their allegations, told the committee that single-selling was the only possible means of operating under the bill and indicated the possibility that all films might be offered on a percentage basis if the legislation was adopted.

Initially, he denounced the offer by proponents of the allegations in the Government suit as "proof" that illegal practices existed and charged the Department of Justice with trying its case in the newspapers through the medium of the official "explanation" released when the suit was filed, in which, incidentally, he said, it was claimed the independent exhibitors were being rapidly driven out of business when authentic statistics proved that not to be the case.

Block Booking Defended

Mr. Keough contended there was nothing illegal or wrong about block booking, and that it applied to chains, both affiliated and independent, as well as to single-house operators, in contradiction of testimony by Allied witnesses. As a matter of fact, he said, in answering Sidney Samuelson's testimony that only "pseudo" competition prevails between the majors, block booking was a development of the keen competition which existed and still exists.

The witness charged I. E. Chadwick, independent producer, with having made many misrepresentations, and answered charges made by Myers, particularly with respect to the fixing of exhibitors' admission prices by the distributors.

The fixing of price minima, he said, is for the purpose of protecting the distributor's good will, and the right of a producer or distributor of a copyrighted article to fix the price to be charged by the sub-licensee has never been condemned under "the Sherman Act or any other act." He compared that right to the right of a manufacturer to fix the resale price of his product under the Miller-Tydings fair trade act.

He said, "I am satisfied, and I believe you must be, that it is virtually impossible to supply the required synopsis before the picture has been finished, tried out on an audience or audiences, recut, reshot and finally delivered to the exchanges to show to their customers.

Here he called attention to Mr. Atkinson's statement that there would be little litigation on synopsis divergences because the companies would not find it worth while to contest such cases and would "make adjustments."

"That tells the story," Mr. Keough declared. "The distributor will not get his contract performed and will not sue because it is too much trouble or too expensive, but will make adjustments. These, of course, will be dollars and cents adjustments. What an instrument for polite blackmail!"

In self-defense, he added, the companies will have to complete pictures before they sell them, a procedure that "is not impossible but it is highly impracticable," and one which will increase costs of production and marketing.

Commenting that there had been little discussion of Section 3, he declared the price-differential provisions would make it impossible for salesmen to price their pictures.

Offering one price for a single picture and a discount for pictures taken in blocks, the salesmen, in every contract, would be laying their companies open to suits based on charges that the exhibitor was coerced into taking more pictures than he wanted, he explained. Further, he added, the bill prohibits the pricing of pictures so that the effect of a lease or offer to lease may be to lessen competition or create monopoly.

Cites "Witch-burning" Provision

In the same section, he went on, is the "witch-burning" provision against the transportation of films leased or to be leased in violation of the bill. This, he explained, would apply most directly to the trucking companies, contracting to give film service. Should an exhibitor serve notice on such a company that a particular film is in violation, the company is between the devil and the sea—if the claim is proven and the company has handled the picture it has violated the law; if the claim is not just and the company has not handled the film it has violated its contract.

Answering questions by Representative Carl Hinshaw (Rep., Cal.) he said it would be impossible for the distributors to protect themselves against suits by including in contracts a provision acknowledging by the exhibitor that he had entered into the deal voluntarily and without coercion, because juries and courts look upon such clauses with suspicion.

Schaefer Attacks Bill

The Neely Bill is untimely, unnecessary, unworkable, and un-American—the latter, because it would "bring about pressure group censorship against the screen," George Schaefer, president of RKO, told the House Interstate Commerce Committee on the last day of the hearings. Mr. Schaefer's arguments were submitted in a 35-page document.

Mr. Schaefer called the bill untimely because "it would add vastly to the burdens of an industry gravely affected by the war"; and unnecessary because "the public interest would not be affected by this bill . . . the record proves that, from the standpoint of public interest, more and more good pictures, fine pictures, and even great pictures, are being produced and exhibited year after year."

The RKO president attacked the measure as unworkable, and said it would bring chaos in the industry and substitute litigation for any possible arbitration or conciliation.

Mr. Schaefer noted that the public already exercised a right of selection: pictures it likes succeed; others fail. Censorship, he remarked, "smells no better, when it is called community selection."

Sections of the bill, Three, Four and Five, were assailed particularly by the RKO executive. He also questioned the good intentions of some who testified for the bill. He contradicted statements made on May 20th to the committee by Sidney Samuelson, Allied Philadelphia leader, and former New Jersey exhibitor and head of that state's Allied.

The industry itself should furnish arbitration and conciliation; not an outside source, Mr. Schaefer pleaded, and asserted that no industry in the country had been benefited merely by legislative fiat.

RKO Contract Figures

RKO does not "force" all its product upon the exhibitor, he said.

"During the 1938-39 season," he explained, "RKO offered 48 pictures. Contracts for the exhibition of the total number were 3,092; contracts for the exhibition of from 36 to 47 pictures amounted to 1,880; contracts for the exhibition of less than 36 pictures amounted to 4,578.

"Thus, more than 67 per cent of our contracts during the past season called for the exhibition of less than the number of pictures we had to offer; and 48 per cent of our contracts were for 36 pictures or less, out of our total production of 48 pictures."

And exhibitors can cancel pictures, Mr. Schaefer noted.

"Finally, there is the fact that in recent years most producers and distributors of motion pictures have granted exhibitors throughout the country a 10 per cent cancellation clause, of which the exhibitor can avail himself in the selection and elimination of the films, if he desires."

He attacked the synopsis provisions of the bill at some length, elaborating on previous arguments presented by the measure's opponents.

Myers Files Written Rebuttal

What promised to be fireworks finale of the hearings fizzled out like a damp squib on Tuesday when, with all members of the committee on the floor of the House except Chairman Lea, Mr. Myers threw in his hand and filed his lengthy rebuttal statement instead of reading it.

His action was the result of extensive questioning of Miss Katherine Lyford, of the Motion Picture Research Council, who, with Mrs. Mary T. Bannerman of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, preceded him with rebuttal testimony. Henry R. Atkinson of Boston, who assisted in the framing of the bill, did not attempt to offer further argument.

Members of the committee asked only one or two questions of Mrs. Bannerman after listening to her argument that there was nothing in the bill to justify charges that it would destroy the industry, result in censorship and create unemployment. Stigmatizing the "centralized, totalitarian control" of the major companies, she contented herself chiefly with stressing the need for protecting children against undesirable pictures.

Miss Lyford, likewise, was permitted to wade through a lengthy statement without interruption, in the course of which she said the bill

1939-40 CONTRACTS AMENDED BY MGM

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has sent a rider amending the current contracts to all exhibitors signed by the company. The points covered are eliminations as a matter of right, exclusion for cause and preferred playing time. P. J. Wood, secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, in the organization's Service Bulletin, said that it was significant that the rider was sent out when the House Committee was holding hearings on the Neely Bill.

Mr. Wood added, "Whatever may be the reason for issuing it, we feel that it will be necessary for an exhibitor to execute the rider in order to get the benefit of the cancellation privilege and enjoy the other benefits announced by Metro at the beginning of the 1939-40 selling season."

Concessions included in the proposed trade practice code, it was reported, will be included in the MGM contracts for the 1940-41 season. MGM has not begun to write contracts for the new season's product.

Myers Contends Bill Would Pass Test of Courts

would make it more difficult for houses showing the singly-sold sex pictures which had been referred to during the hearings.

With the completion of her formal statement, Miss Lyford found herself the target of a barrage of questions.

"Is it your opinion that the passage of this bill will eliminate immoral pictures?" she was asked by Representative Brown.

"It will eliminate the necessity of people seeing them that do not want to see them," the witness explained.

"Do you believe that the average exhibitor will turn down these immoral pictures and will exhibit only the better class pictures and that in turn will force the producers to make only that better type of pictures?"

"Absolutely."

"I would like to believe that, but I don't know whether I can believe it or not," the Congressman observed.

Mr. Brown read from an independent exhibitor paper a review of "Torrid Zone" in which the bawdy character of the film was pointed out, but with a statement that it was a big box office attraction, and asked if such a picture would be rejected.

Witness on Morals

"A picture of that kind is forced on the local theatre," Miss Lyford explained. "We have never contended that the morals of the exhibitors were any better than those of the producers, but an independent exhibitor who now shows a picture like this does so in preference to shelving it and paying for it."

She was asked by Representative Youngdahl whether the answer to the problem might not lie in closer cooperation between the local community and the exhibitor, but the Congressman's efforts to pin her down as to whether local cooperation would be effective were unsuccessful, despite appeal to Chairman Lea to order the witness to respond directly.

Miss Lyford told Representative William P. Cole, Jr. (Dem., Md.), that state censor boards, including that in Maryland, did not work out particularly well, and asserted, in response to a question by Representative Carl Hinshaw (Rep., Cal.) that exhibitors have been refused cancellations on moral grounds, but could not support her charge.

Myers Questioned

In the few minutes available before they had to leave for the House, committee members questioned Mr. Myers along similar lines, Representative Brown asking if a simple provision written into the law, giving exhibitors the right to cancel for cause, would solve the problem.

The allied counsel explained that he did not think so, although it would help, because such a provision, not including the right of selection, was not broad enough.

He was asked by Congressman Hinshaw whether there were any provable cases of exhibitors being denied the right to cancel for cause and explained that during the past six years the major producers have put out no pictures raising the question of morality. Now, however, he added, the studios are putting out questionable pictures and the issue may be tested when those films reach the subsequent run houses, contending that passage of the bill is made more necessary because of the possible refusal of the distributors to accept cancellations.

In the formal statement which he started to read but finally filed, together with the accompanying score of exhibits, Mr. Myers challenged the testimony of practically every witness who appeared for the opposition.

"The Only Menace"

"It is idle for the opponents of the Neely bill to say that compulsory block booking is not practiced," he declared. "I would certainly not be here arguing for this bill if that were true. Except for the few who have appeared here and said that block booking is not now compulsory because of the cancellation privilege, I have never heard any exhibitor say that the practice is not enforced."

"The only menace to the Big Eight from the enactment of the Neely bill is one which those fighting the bill dare not mention," he charged. "That is the opening of the business to the competition of independent productions. With compulsory block booking abolished, the Big Eight, in common with all other industries, will have to sell their products on their merits."

Defends Constitutionality

The only witness to pay attention to the question of constitutionality, Mr. Myers contended that the bill would meet the test of the courts, that it went no further than Congress had gone in many other laws which had been held valid, and that it raised no new problems of jurisprudence.

"I entertain no doubt concerning the constitutionality of the measure as a civil statute," he said. "The only doubt that has been raised concerns its validity as a penal statute. The question is, does Section 3 define the offense with sufficient certainty to support a criminal prosecution?

"The test is essentially one of the reasonableness of the differentials between the price for a block of pictures and the price for an individual picture or a group less than a block. Under the 'rule of reason' the test of a violation of the Sherman Law is the unreasonableness of the restraint imposed."

"However," he said, "should the courts hold Section 3 to be invalid as a criminal statute, its validity as a civil statute would not be impaired. Section 6 of the bill contains the usual separability clause. As stated on my first appearance before the committee, I am confident that the Attorney General will invoke the civil rather than the criminal remedy provided by the bill."

AFL OPPOSES, MUSIC UNIT FAVORS, NEELY

Paul Scharrenberg, legislative representative of the American Federation of Labor, has asked the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee not to approve the Neely bill. He said, "We believe that if this legislation is enacted it will mean a cut of 50 per cent in production schedules affecting adversely the employment of 282,000 workers in the motion picture industry."

The American Federation of Musicians will be asked to support the Neely bill in a resolution to be introduced at the convention June 10th in Indianapolis by A. Rex Riccardi, secretary of the Philadelphia musicians union, Local 77, who indicated that several other locals would also sponsor the resolution which would ask the Federation to lobby actively for the passage of the measure. Mr. Riccardi also said he would ask for legislation aimed at Warner Brothers. The local Philadelphia union has been on strike against Warner theatres for the last six months.

RKO Securities Listed with SEC, Holdings Cited

George J. Schaefer, RKO president, whose contract calls for a salary of $104,000 annually and expenses of $250 per week until December 31, 1941, voluntarily reduced his salary last October to $62,240 per year, according to a registration statement filed by the company with the Securities and Exchange Commission in connection with the listing of new securities of the reorganized company.

Other Officers' Salaries Reduced

Ned E. Depinet, vice-president, was given a new three year contract last January at $1,500 per week and in the same month accepted a salary reduction to $54,980 annually, the statement said.

William Mallard, secretary and general counsel, will receive $21,700 for 1940, also after a salary reduction. The reductions were undertaken as a result of RKO's loss of foreign revenues due to the European war and were made on a graduated scale beginning with salaries of $4,500 a year.

N. Peter Rathvon will receive $21,450 as chairman of the executive committee and a director, and Richard C. Patterson will receive $15,720 as chairman of the RKO board and director of subsidiary companies.

The statement showed that five directors of RKO owned stock in the company. They are: Frederick L. Ehrman, director, 160 shares of preferred and 800 of common; Lawrence Green, director, 5,250 shares of common; Conde Nast, director, 2,860 of common; Mr. Patterson, 689 common, and W. H. Clark, assistant treasurer, one share of preferred and 329 option warrants.

The registration statement also reported that contracts in existence with RKO Pathe News call for 30 per cent of the domestic gross and 35 per cent of the foreign gross of the newsreel, plus expenses, taxes and charges collected by RKO for distributing the newsreel. A flat distribution charge of 35 per cent is made for RKO Pathe's Sportscopes, Information Please and Reelisms subjects, with expenses, taxes and charges additional. A maximum advertising expenditure of $6,500 for each series is specified in the contract.

TELEVISION'S 'INTRUSION' OF TALENT RANKS NOT DISTURBING STUDIOS

Provision for Control of Star Appearances Not Seen Matter for Concern; Contracts Mention Rights

"Around the corner" or not, television as a potential competitor of the motion picture screen is giving Hollywood employers of personality talent no alarm, no incentive to forearm, according to inquiries made this week of studio executives, talent agents and law firms in Hollywood conducting the contractual affairs of the community. On the contrary, direct interest in the whole matter is slim to the vanishing point, theoretical where encountered at all and nowhere a topic for specific consideration in employment negotiations affecting the rights of artists.

Sole formal provision for control of television's almost certain intrusion into the province of the motion picture art-industry, as pertains to player participation, appears in Section 21 of the Screen Actors Guild Minimum Contract for Free Lance Players, a form of contract also approved by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, where mention of television occurs in a sesequence of devices legalistically enumerated. This contract form, commonly although not by requirement utilized in the hiring of artists on one-picture deals at a salary of $20,000 or less for the single production, contains the following text:

Rights Included in Provisions

"21. Rights Granted Producer: The term photoplay as used in this agreement shall be deemed to include motion pictures produced and/or exhibited with sound and voice recording, reproducing and/or transmitting devices, radio devices, and all other improvements and devices, including television, which are now or may hereafter be used in connection with the production and/or exhibition and/or transmission of any present or future kind of motion picture production. The Producer shall have the right to photograph and/or otherwise produce, reproduce, transmit, exhibit, distribute and exploit in connection with the said photoplay the artist's voice, and all instrumental, musical and other sound effects produced by the Artist in connection with such acts, poses, plays and appearances."

Nub of this and other extensive wordings of the contract, according to authorities handling the bulk of Hollywood talent employment affairs, is that it gives the producer complete control of the finished film, including right to grant or deny televising, but places no limitation upon the performer with respect to his personal participation in television programs.

Appearances of screen players on television programs can be controlled while they are under contract by the regulations on Studio Rules (No. 17 in the Screen Actors Guild Minimum Contract for Free Lance Players). This section reads in part:

The Producer shall have the exclusive right to the services of the Artist during the term hereof, and the Artist agrees that during the term hereof the Artist will not render any services of any kind to or for any person, firm, or corporation other than the Producer without first obtaining the express written consent of the Producer."

Individual Provision Made

Doubtlessly certain of the individual contracts between players and studios do contain television clauses of individual character. This would be more or less inevitably the case, according to attorneys, in view of the fact that these individual contracts "differ as widely as the facial features of the players themselves," each such contract being worked out to fit a special case and each point introduced by employer or employee being settled by negotiation. It was emphasized that because of this wide variation it is impractical to obtain a sound foundation for generalization as to the attitude of the high-bracket talent with respect to television.

Samuel T. Lyons, of A. & S. Lyons agency, said that little attention is being given television at present by the agencies for talent and plays and stories. "No one knows what form it will take," he said. However, contracts now being drawn for leading writers frequently exclude the television rights. In the case of less well known authors and material purchased years ago the motion picture companies, in many cases, have acquired television rights.

May Be Used on Programs

It is much the same at present in the case of artists, Mr. Lyons explained. Actors and actresses under long-term exclusive concontract are subject to television service. As for example a Paramount star might be required to appear on a DuMont-Paramount television program. Many performers are "free lance" at present and the television clause in a contract would be inserted when and if it is deemed necessary. Less well known players, it was said, might be required to accept whatever television regulations the studio wishes.

Every since television appeared ready to come out of the laboratory motion picture companies have attempted to acquire television rights when purchasing story properties. William J. Fadiman, eastern story editor for MGM, said that that company has been acquiring, whenever possible, television rights on all stories bought during the past few years. This is in line with the policy of buying all rights that might advance the motion picture. In the case of prominent authors the question of the sale of the television rights is subject to negotiation. Some writers wish to keep those rights in the hope of selling them in the near future for a substantial price.

ORDER PROBE OF ICKES CHARGES

A Congressional investigation of the charges recently imposed by Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes on motion picture companies desiring to make pictures on the public lands and in the national parks was ordered last week by the Senate.

The subject of bitter attack when it was revealed that the Secretary planned to charge film companies up to $500 a day for the privilege of using public lands, an investigation of the whole matter, including the Interior Departmnet's own motion picture activities, was sought by Senator Henry F. Ashurst (Dem. Ariz.,) on April 24th.

The resolution was referred to the Senate Public Lands Committee, which was named to conduct the investigation, where it was found that another phase of Secretary Ickes' activities, the administration of public lands, was also suggested for investigation in a proposal introduced March 9th by Senator Pat McCarran (Dem., Nev.).

By what was said to be an unanimous vote, the committee merged the two resolutions and recommended authorization of the investigation by the Senate which, without debate or formal vote, approved the probe.

SHORT PLAYS, SINGLE FILM OFFERED AS DUALS SUBSTITUTE AFTER TESTS

Summer Bookings for One-Hour Versions of Broadway "Hits" Are Arranged for Resort Towns, Says NBC Sponsor

Streamlined one-hour versions of established Broadway "hit" plays, also using an extensive radio tieup to build business, are being advocated as a substitute for double features in outlying areas and small towns which do not have regular stage productions. The idea has been given tests in several places in the east in recent weeks at the instigation of National Broadcasting Company, whose Artists Bureau has talent to place on the wholesale.

The plan has been tried out this season in Stamford, Providence and other places, and will be put into effect by film theatres in a number of resort towns this summer to combat competition from "summer theatre groups." Next fall and winter the streamlined play company is to have a NBC radio tieup, probably in Pittsburgh.

Circuit Proposed

Although a circuit using a number of companies and presenting condensed versions of Broadway "hits" immediately after the road company completes the tour is the plan for the future, the tests adjudged most successful have been made with a "feature length" (about one hour) production of "Kiss the Boys Goodbye." A tabloid version of "The Pursuit of Happiness" also was tried out but it was found that plays which had not been made into motion pictures were more suitable.

The Music Corporation of America was reported to be interested in a similar plan of using stage stock companies, both in summer and winter, as a "second feature." But that organization has dropped the project following a dispute with Actors Equity. This action leaves the field to Ellen Spencer, who owns the rights for short versions of "Kiss the Boys Goodbye" and has made arrangements with the National Broadcasting Company for the radio tieup.

Calls Cooperation Necessary

Ellen Spencer said she believed that the legitimate theatre could be brought back by cooperating with motion picture interests instead of reviling them.

"The movies need the stage; nobody wants double features," she said. "Theatres have had to resort to giveaways to get people back."

Her plan is to present in a motion picture theatre, preferably in a small town or city where professional stage plays are uncommon, a high quality one-hour production of a hit play, using whenever possible the original costumes, sets, paper, and members of the original or road casts.

The "streamlined" production of "Kiss the Boys Goodbye" is offered at $1,500 a week, the play company doing part of the advertising. Miss Spencer said she did not believe in raising the regular admission prices at the motion picture theatre where the condensed play was presented instead of a second feature.

Many changes are required in the usual play to bring it into the one hour running time. Sets must be simplified to fit a small stage in motion picture theatres and make quick scene changes possible. Miss Spencer remarked that the motion picture audience would not wait for long delays.

Adaptations Required

In some cases the "hit" play must be adapted to the film audiences. For example, though "Kiss the Boys Goodbye" is clearly, for a New York audience, take-off on the hunt for the feminine lead for "Gone With the Wind," it was considered necessary to call the character in the play "Scarlett" so the audience in the motion picture theatre would get the point. Also, it was pointed out, changes frequently must be made to bring the play up to the standards of decency required in motion pictures.

The Artists Bureau of the National Broadcasting System has handled some of the bookings for Miss Spencer's production of "Kiss the Boys Goodbye." Sam Ross of the Bureau was very enthusiastic about the possibilities of short plays for motion picture theatres.

Miss Spencer said that the projected radio tieup for next season would be with one of the 50,000 watt NBC stations. Under the plan the company would present a 15 minute radio skit each day and the streamlined Broadway play would be presented for a week at a town within the range of the station. The radio show would advertise the stage presentation at the local motion picture theatre, and vice versa. It was said that one company could spend between three and four months covering the towns within the range of a 50,000 watt transmitter. At present Pittsburgh is favored for the scene of the radio-stage-motion picture three-way tieup.

Would Bill with "A" Film

So far one of the obstacles encountered is that the play "can't fight the picture," according to Miss Spencer. In some of the test runs the play has been put on with a "B" picture. She said that the streamlined play should be billed with an "A" picture.

Relations with the stage hand unions have been excellent, Miss Spencer said. In the usual case she, as the producer, makes the necessary agreement with the local branch of the union. Where the theatre has an agreement with the union covering the stage crew for shows, those regulations are followed.

Short plays presented before motion picture audiences have another advantage of being a proving ground for young and inexperienced film players, according to Miss Spencer. Training before audiences in film theatres, she said, would give performers a knowledge of the tastes and reactions of the same persons they must please in their film productions. In this way, she said, the condensed plays offer a better training school for the screen than Broadway or stock.

Certain union difficulties have been blamed for temporarily hindering the spread of the "streamlined" play plan, but Miss Spencer said a number of bookings for theatres in resort towns were being arranged. In those locations, she added, the stage presentation, instead of a second feature, will enable the exhibitor to compete more successfully with summer stock theatres.

Bookings for the fall and winter are being arranged with an independent theatre circuit.

CBS HAS PLAN FOR ROAD UNITS

The Columbia Broadcasting System will send out road companies to tour the 360 communities where the radio chain's Artists' Service has organized concert audiences for the past 11 years after next January 1st, if cooperation of all groups concerned can be obtained. Ralph F. Colin, general counsel, said CBS would ask the stage unions for cooperation. The help of producers and managers already has been requested.

The original producer of the play is to supervise each touring company and the plays will be presented, according to Mr. Colin, only in communities which indicate in advance that they want such productions. He added that CBS would not attempt to compete with stage plays in larger cities.

Theatre Society Sets Fall Tours

The American Theatre Society has announced that it is arranging for a tour of four plays to be presented in small cities on a guaranteed or local sponsorship basis.

The four plays scheduled next season will include, according to the announcement, "The Time of Your Life" by William Saroyan and "The Man Who Came to Dinner." Each play selected would be presented under the producer's own management on the guaranteed or sponsorship basis and he would share in any profits earned by the American Theatre Society after the costs had been met.

Warren P. Munsell, business manager of the American Theatre Society, will act in the same capacity for the American Theatre Society Tours and will be in charge of the booking. The minimum guarantee will depend chiefly on the particular play. Mr. Munsell said that in most cases the American Theatre Society will work with local groups such as the Junior League and other organizations.

Philadelphia Group Plans To Attract the Youth

The development of a youthful audience for the legitimate theatre will be one of the prime objectives of the Philadelphia Theatregoers' Council next season. The Schubert enterprises, controlling the Forrest and Locust Street theatres in Philadelphia, have signified their willingness to cooperate with the movement. If the Council can submit a practical plan, tickets at reduced rates on specific nights for all legitimate productions will be offered to students of schools and colleges. Council leaders announced that similar negotiations are being carried on with the Theatre Guild, the Playwrights Company and other producing organizations which book their plays through the Schubert organization in Philadelphia.

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

REACHING the busy desk of our busy Yawn Editor, from Berlin, the other morning mail, was the biggest yawn of the month in the nature of a press statement over the signature of one Constance Drexel, presumably a Nazi star, in which she describes Berlin as "the Hollywood of Europe," adding: "Much to my surprise, I have found expression of (Nazi) art in the theatre, the film and in opera and music, free from (Nazi) political theories, and allowed to go ahead on its own merits with only a SLIGHT (the caps are ours) government control over moral and cultural standards, and against criticisms of accepted institutions. Art and politics are divorced"; she said, as she probably adjusted her gas mask while standing on a food rationing line, next to an air raid shelter, with bayonets nearby.

In practically the same breath another statement described the completion by the Nazis of a feature of the Irish fight for freedom from England, made in the Nazis' Tobis Berlin studios.

All is not lost in Italy to the American motion picture. Hollywood and Rome haven't been talking to each other, filmwise, for a year, yet only last week the Italian Government must have gone an awfully long way out of its way to give prizes to three American pictures, "Poultry, an Industry," "Clouds —a Weather Forecast" and "Sugar Cane."

Metro press agents are trying to kick up a lot of attention for the company's new "Waterloo Bridge" picture by pointing up Robert Taylor's new mustache in the film. In keeping with the state of the world, they are calling it a "military mustache," and on that score some of Robert's fans think it does make him "more manlike," although others disagree.

Apparently Metro's press agents "tipped off" Mr. Jimmy Jemail, inquiring photographer for the New York Daily News, that it might be all right with them if Jimmy stood in front of Metro's Capitol theatre on Broadway, and asked customers how much they liked Robert's new military-type mustache, publishing their views the next morning in the Daily News.

"It's very becoming," said Miss S. Brenner, secretary, of the Bronx, "because the mustache makes him look very manly." Vincent Carey, student, on the other hand, wouldn't go for it, observing that "it makes him look like a glamour boy." Phyllis Colt thinks "Bob is wonderful in his new mustache. Now when he kisses, it's really grand." Mrs. Roth, Coney Island, thinks "Mr. Taylor doesn't look as pretty as before. He now appears more manly," she said, etc., etc.

REGIMENTATION!

Midway in a sequence of studio stars sent by the Paramount production department to greet sales delegates to that company's recent convention in Hollywood, Fredric March got up and said that he'd always believe that proper procedure in a spot like his was to "stand up to be seen—speak up to be heard—and shut up to be appreciated."

Later in the day came a number of other stars and starlets, including Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., who, not aware of the presence earlier of Mr. March, or of March's remarks, piped up that he'd always believed that proper procedure in a spot like his was to "Stand up to be seen—speak up to be heard—and shut up to be appreciated."

Lieutenant Paul Mooney and some of the other boys on QP staffs who are reserve army officers are being deluged these days with price lists and "special sale" notices on army officers' uniforms and equipment. They show some nice trench coats, finely tailored with shoulder straps, in cravanette gabardine, at $12.50 the garment, overseas caps, at a dollar, nice shiny sabre chains for ninety-five cents.

"ON ACCOUNT OF UNSETTLED MARKET CONDITIONS, PRICES ARE SUBJECT TO CHANGE WITHOUT NOTICE," advises one advertisement.

The last attribute was considered extremely important due to the importance of a doctor's bedside manner which, in some cases, might be misunderstood."

Discussing his defense setup, one part of which may include widespread use of motion pictures for recruiting propaganda purposes, as requested by the Army, President Roosevelt told White House reporters the other day that the Government is not going to upset the normal habits of the country any more than can be helped—that he is not going to "discombobolate" us—whatever that is.

WILLIAM MICHALSON, manager of the Plaza Theatre, Stamford, Conn., since 1936, and identified with the theatre business since 1912, retired on June 1st to enter the bedding business in Port Chester, N. Y. He'll own the Empire Bedding Service. Theatre owners and friends joined in a farewell party for Bill on Monday, May 27, at Rich's Restaurant, Old Greenwich.

Starting in theatricals 28 years ago as a candy butcher at the Garrick Theatre, Chicago, May 29, 1912, Mr. Michalson started out in 1914 with a road show version of David Wark Griffith's "Birth of a Nation," handling the book concession of the original "GWTW" production. The next year he handled the book concession for the stage version of "Experience," with Ernest Glendenning as the star.

Getting into the motion picture business after remaining on the outer fringe at the start, Bill was company manager for Metro's "Four Horsemen," and in 1920 he went with the Fox Film exchange in Chicago under Clyde Eckhardt, filling the post of exchange publicity man. With the transfer of Mr. Eckhardt to New York as assistant to 'Winnie' Sheehan, Mr. Michalson hied east and received his first theatre assignment with the old Fox Academy of Music on 14th Street. Theatre assignments elsewhere followed.

He wanted a soft spot to rest, picked mattresses.

"Freedom Radio"

[The notes on this page concerning British production were mailed from London May 15th.]

One of the most ambitious British production ventures to be launched since the outbreak of war has started at Sound City, where Mario Zampi and his director, Anthony Asquith, have opened production on "Freedom Radio," which is set for Columbia release. Numerically "Freedom Radio" reaches a considerable height, with 120 speaking parts, ninety different sets, 3,000 extras and 300 technicians and artisans in constant employment.

On other scores the film attains high levels, with a weighty cast, and a subject which remains one of the most stirring real life institutions of the War. Diana Wynyard and Clive Brook head the cast. The film is budgeted at £60,000. It will not be a propagandist picture, but a drama written around a realist subject.

Four months have been spent in the preparation of the script, and Zampi declares that as a result he will not have to alter a line. The story covers three years, climaxing with the invasion of Poland.

It is, of course, devised around the secret broadcasting centre which has been maintained by German rebels. Paul Sherriff, designer of the sets, spent eleven weeks research before starting on the 400 sketches which form the basis from which the final sets will be built. His most ambitious set up is a recreation of the Berlin Sportspalast, with Adolf Hitler addressing a massed crowd of Nazi youth.

No Nazi leaders will be represented in the film.

Ban Lifted

With the lifting—after prolonged pressure—of the British Board of Film Censors' ban on "Love on the Dole," work has now commenced on the film version of one of the outstanding British stage hits of recent years in Britain. For many years bids have been made for screen rights of Walter Greenwood's play by both American and British interests. To British National producer John Corfield goes the fortune of securing the final okay.

David Macdonald, one of the most successful and creative of local directors—he is an American—is already on location filming exteriors and background material.

The film has a social flavor but is essentially a romantic and dramatic story glimpsing a slice of essentially British life. Seen already by over three million people it has run in London and provincial stages for some years. Greenwood, author of the play, is working on the script.

NATIONAL ANTHEM IN ESPERANTO

A new national anthem has been added to the list of those already in existence in Europe. It is the national anthem of "Esperanto" and has been composed by Louis Levy for Gainsborough's "Neutral Port" in which comedian Will Fyffe is the star. First line of this musical chef d'oeuvre is: "Grika rek marchinello dal breba var—say Esperanto". No translation is available.

Documentaries

No cessation in the activities of the documentary producers can be observed by students of the British production scene. Despite the confused and sterile condition of the entertainment section the realist band are, for the most part, hard at work on Ministry of Information subjects and others sponsored by corporations, public services, and so forth.

Strand Film Company who have seventy-five films to their credit have not halted their activities since the war. According to chief Donald Taylor the outbreak of hostilities, with the invasion of film territory by government departments, has brought even more intense activity.

Among the recent productions of Strand is "These Children Are Safe," a study of evacuation, with the stress laid not only on the process itself but no less on the effects from the intermingling of country and town children. Others are "Britain's Youth," a pictorial emphasis on the importance of health and fitness in times of national emergency; "Overground and Underground," the story of London's transport, and "New Britain," a study of industrial and municipal structures in this country.

"Busman" Finished

Final shots have now been taken on Metro British Studios' fourth production in this country, "Busman's Honeymoon," and Ben Goetz is now at work putting the Montgomery-Cummings film into final shape. After location shots in the "olde worlde" village of Penn Bucks, and a conclusive passage on the Devon farmhouse set, lights were dimmed.

Preparations are already afoot for the next Metro British opus, another Montgomery subject, "I Had a Comrade," which is a screen story—by Viscount Castlerosse, titled columnist of London's "Sunday Express"—based on the life of Niemoller.

Radio Program

"Garrison Theatre" has been one of wartime radio's greatest successes in Britain. It has been broadcast every Saturday and is a species of vaudeville show with a military setting. Now Butchers announce "Garrison Follies," a film with an obvious bid to exploit the popularity of the radio feature. Barry Lupino, member of one of the most famous families on the English vaudeville and musical comedy stage, stars.

Growing in Roles

What he calls a new technique is being used by director Thorold Dickinson, currently making "Gaslight" for John Corfield's British National company at Denham. Dickinson is shooting the film in sequence, just as it would appear in stage or narrative form. The reason for this is that the story is a psychological one, with one of the leading characters, the wife, being auto-suggested into hysteria, insanity and ultimate suicide. Dickinson is convinced his artistes will give, and are giving, better acting results by growing, so to speak, with their roles.

Diana Wynyard is the wife, Anton Walbrook the husband. Not the least important player is young Cathleen Cordell, junior British actress, discovered coincidentally by producer Corfield and his two leading artistes Walbrook and Wynyard.

"Gaslight" has a Victorian setting. One of the sets, that of a living room, has no less than 1,200 pieces in it. A "spotter" was engaged to follow the camera on its tracking, particularly to eliminate glare and reflection from the masses of mirrors, chandeliers and glass knickknacks on the scene.

At Rock Studios

The Rock Studios at Elstree have been born to new life with the launching of production there on the British Eagle Films' "Gentlemen of Venture," which Paul Stein is directing for release in Spain by RKO.

The cast is headed by Wilfrid Lawson and Norah Swinburne.

Directors of British Eagle Films are Walter B. Hanbury and C. F. Urry.

"Under Your Hat," West End comedy success, has been acquired for film production by Grand National Pictures. The stars of the stage show, comedian Jack Hulbert and his wife, Cicely Courtneidge, also will star in the film.

Another stage subject announced for production by the same organization is "Room for Two," which will be made under the banner of Hurley Productions and released through Grand National with Frances Day and Vic Oliver starred.

ECHO OF BOMBS ACROSS THE CHANNEL SPURS BRITISH FILM RENTALS FIGHT

Exhibitors' Association Uses "Wind" Battle as Lever Against Distributors' Scale; Local Campaigns Started

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

The cataclysmic suddenness with which the War has been brought to the very shores of England has had an inevitable effect upon that lesser war which the British exhibitors have been waging upon the renters. Though the battle against Metro's "Gone With the Wind" policy remains, the fight has widened to a more general sphere and is now being waged against film rentals without reserve.

On the exclusively "Gone With the Wind" front the campaign has taken a somewhat new line in the launching of local campaigns against "blacklegs" who have booked the film contrary to Association policy. The first of these was launched at Manchester where the Gaiety, independent house owned by Harry Buxton, booked "Wind" on, it is stated, Metro's own terms and where the CEA leaders immediately rushed to stage picket demonstrations and to address the public through the press and screen.

On the wider front the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association has formally announced that all existing standards of film rentals have ceased to exist and invoked their members not to rush into film contracts, to book from-hand-to-mouth, and to keep a close watch upon the commercial situation altogether.

So far the Metro super has not been shown outside the West End, where it has already been withdrawn from one theatre, the Ritz, Metro's own sister show house to the Empire. It is freely stated in exhibitor circles now that the Associated British deal is only for a limited number of houses, probably a dozen, and that terms very different from those asked originally have been agreed upon.

There is the further likelihood that a compromise on this particular film will be arrived at, probably by joint agreement between Metro and the CEA. Such an agreement would probably be based upon a 50 per cent rental with, in certain areas, a 2s 6d minimum admission and a guarantee of 10 per cent as originally put forward by Metro.

Changed by War

It was probably inevitable that the acute worsening of war conditions in Europe would immediately change the whole trade situation, not least of all that of film rentals. Not slow to rise to the occasion, within less than a week of the invasion of Belgium and Holland, the CEA had jumped into the battle again challenging the whole existing system or standards of film rentals. When the controversy began it was little thought that events would move with such swiftness and that War would be literally so soon be knocking at England's door.

To quote the CEA in its latest manifesto: "In the light of current events in Holland and Belgium all such demands (Metro's 70 per cent demands) can be regarded as having gone by the board, for exhibitors are now concerned with minimum audiences, not prices."

Previously, the CEA had advised its members that 50 per cent would be the maximum price for "Wind"; now, in view of the circumstances, they doubt whether any film would justify such a price. "The whole idea of film rentals must be recast to take account of the current war situation."

It will come as no surprise that cinema audiences, following the invasion of the Low Countries, were practically nil. "No one," says the CEA, "knows when the public is likely to return." Naturally, of course, they are already returning, though not in numbers sufficient to please the hearts either of exhibitors or distributors. It is considered obvious by exhibitors that every civilian will be ultimately called upon to spend either spare time or whole time in National Defense, will have less time in fact to go to the cinema. Another closure of cinemas is indeed not ruled out in the event of severe bombings in this country.

Warned on Contracts

"So," instructs the CEA, "do not rush into any film contracts. Book from hand to mouth. You have nothing to lose and everything to gain."

Immediate effects of this have already been felt by film salesmen who are finding exhibitors unwilling to commit themselves to long distance bookings and unwilling to pay any but the most moderate rentals for films.

It is generally agreed among exhibitors and distributors that if conditions remain as they are, there will have to be a complete reorientation of standards and ideas. War conditions will call for new trading conditions and the distributors, it would seem, will be practically powerless under present circumstances to retain the older conditions.

With the utmost effort being needed to persuade people into the cinemas, exhibitors currently are particularly resolute in regard to the question of admission increases. As already suggested in these columns, they are fully aware that the cinema seat will have to follow in line with other commodities and be increased in price. The rising cost of materials, the swelling of overheads, the need to meet the demand for war bonuses on the part of employees, will call for a footing of the bill by the customer himself. Exhibitors, however, will not concede, either in principle or practice, that any other party shall have a say in the increasing of admission prices but the exhibitor himself. As Charles Metcalfe has pointed out, it will create a precedent which will be tried again and again. It is generally agreed, too, that the 2/6 admission, which may yet form the basis of a compromise in regard to "Wind," is something more than difficult, and that 3/6 and 4/6 admission is, speaking in general terms of British cinema patronage, "fantastic."

It is not believed anywhere in exhibitor circles that the Associated British deal, which it is claimed has been booked for only about twelve cinemas, involved 70 per cent. Fifty per cent is thought to be nearer the maximum and that the conditions stipulate for a minimum admission charge of 2/6. The terms further are said to be elastic and dependent greatly on the business which is done.

"Wind" in London

Trade reports in London are to the effect that "Gone With the Wind" broke no records at the Empire and Palace where it is playing reserved seat engagements. It is reported that only the first few days at the Empire were exceptional with the remainder of business at only normal levels for both houses.

BRITISH PURCHASE TAX BEING READIED

The new purchase tax on theatre admissions in the United Kingdom is expected to be drafted and ratified shortly in a form which will provide for direct payment of the levy by the public, rather than by either the exhibitor or the distributor.

Current suggestions to the Chancellor of the Exchequer provide for collections in the form of a Government stamp affixed to all admission tickets, the tax to be based upon a pre-determined percentage of the cost of each ticket.

Besides conforming with the Government's plan of levying the new taxes directly on the public, the proposal also would remove from the public mind any possible impression that the industry was benefiting by the increased admissions which would result from collecting the tax from either distributor or exhibitor and passing the additional cost along to the public, it was pointed out.

The proposal would also eliminate the necessity of setting up collection machinery.

Segal Optimistic On Foreign Market

Theatre attendance and exchange business in Europe was "remarkably good" up to four weeks ago, before the German invasion of the Low Countries, and of France, Jack Segal, executive assistant to Joseph McConville, foreign sales head of Columbia Pictures, told the press at the company's New York home offices, on Monday, following a six months' stay in Europe, during which he visited most of the countries in its western and southern sections.

Mr. Segal believes that Germany will not permanently occupy the countries now governed by her military and he noted that theatres in devastated and warring countries always reopen soon after misfortune, or even remain open during conflict. He said business was "normal' in Scandinavia and "very good" in the Near East. Theatre attendance in Britain up to four weeks ago, he said, was normal despite the war and he remarked that the military, and with it the economic situation might change, "in one day."

Mr. Segal bought one Spanish-made picture, "Don Floripondio," which Columbia will distribute in Latin America. The acquisition allows Columbia to import ten American pictures into Spain.

By agreement with a French company, Columbia produced a picture in France, "Untel Pere et Fils," he said, and the company also is making a picture in England.

ZANUCK, ACADEMY TAKE UP PRODUCTION COSTS

Basic Committees Formed to Study Projects Affecting Studio Technical Operations

The first organized industry-wide campaign to effect economies in technical operations got under way this week, under the auspices of the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, as basic committees appointed by Darryl F. Zanuck, chairman, started their work.

The move was inaugurated at a meeting of about 50 leading Hollywood technicians last week at the Beverly Wilshire Hotel, where five groups, covering the various technical and scientific aspects of motion picture production, began greatly expanded activities on behalf of the entire industry.

To "Cut Corners"

The general direction of the project, which is designed to find ways to "cut corners" in the many technical operations of the studios, will be in the hands of the Council, which consists of one representative from each studio. In addition to Mr. Zanuck, the membership is: John Aalberg, RKO; Bernard B. Brown, Universal; Farciot Edouart, Paramount; E. H. Hansen, 20th Century-Fox; Nathan Levinson, Warners; John Livadary, Columbia; Thomas Moulton, Samuel Goldwyn Studios; Elmer Raguse, Hal Roach studios; Douglas Shearer, M-G-M, and Gordon S. Mitchell, manager of the council.

While the council since its creation has been active in bringing new technical methods to the screen and effecting economies in many new methods, this is the first all-inclusive program in the history of the industry.

Memberships of the basic committees are as follows:

CINEMATOGRAPHIC: John Arnold, chairman; Dan Clark, Robert deGrasse, Merritt Gerstad, C. Roy Hunter, Roy Seawright, William Thomas, Joseph Valentine, Joseph Walker.

CINE-TECHNICAL: Grover Laube, chairman; Harry Cunningham, Frank C. Gilbert, Emil Oster, Al Tondreau, A. G. Wise.

LABORATORY: J. M. Nickolaus, chairman; Fred Gage, Michael Leshing, George Seid, Sidney Solow, Ray Wilkinson.

OPTICAL: Burton F. Miller, chairman; Fred Albin, John Fulton, Grover Laube, John Livadary, Wilbur Silvertooth, W. B. Slaughter, Jr.

SOUND: Loren Ryder, chairman; Lawrence Aicholtz, C. W. Faulkner, Wesley C. Miller, William Mueller, Clem Portman, Elmer Raguse, Gordon Sawyer, S. J. Twining.

The basic laboratory committee met Monday; Sound, Tuesday; Photographic, Wednesday; Optical, Thursday and Cine-technical Friday.

Mr. Zanuck, in addressing the technicians at the Beverly-Wilshire Hotel last week, said in part:

"Due to the success of the past efforts of the Research Council, the council is appointing new basic committees in the fields of photography, sound, optics, laboratory and cine-development. These new committees will multiply the past benefits resulting from the council's activities and will return the utmost value to the industry from these efforts.

"The Academy Research Council is concerned with a project involving investigation beyond the facilities of any individual studio and which can be handled more efficiently and more economically by cooperative effort.

"The Research Council is responsible for all matters of standardization on behalf of the motion picture studios, cooperating with the various equipment manufacturers and supply companies and coordinating its activities with the standardization activities of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers and the sectional committee on Motion Pictures of the American Standards Assn.

"The newly appointed Basic committees will direct the cooperative conduct of all projects in their respective fields. Each of the committees consists in general of a representative from each of the studios sponsoring the council, thus giving each producing company the benefit of the efforts of the best technical personnel in the industry.

"Facilities of all the studios are of course available to the council and its committees. As in the past, it is anticipated that the equipment companies will actively cooperate in the work.

Explains Procedure

"In practice, the following procedure will be followed:

"A new project or an existing problem may be brought to the attention of the Research Council by anyone connected with the motion picture industry. The problem will then be given consideration by the council, to decide to which one, if any, of the basic committees it will be referred. The basic committee will then lay out a program for investigation and either handle the problem itself, turn it over to one of the existing subcommittees, or set up a new subcommittee specifically for consideration of this problem.

"After thorough investigation and study of the project, the subcommittee will make its report to the basic committee which will then report its recommendations to the Research Council. The Research Council will determine final disposition of the matter.

"If the subject of the report is of industry-wide interest, it may be published for general circulation, or if of specialized interest to only a small group within the industry it may be distributed upon a restricted basis to only those interested in that particular subject.

NBC Still Seeks Majors' Support

The National Broadcasting Company will again ask the majors to sponsor its short wave broadcasts of film news to Latin America and Europe, at the regular quarterly meeting June 12th of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, it was declared on Monday by an official of the NBC.

Declaring that negotiations with the majors for such sponsorship had been retarded by the absence of foreign sales managers from their New York desks, in recent weeks, and by other factors, the broadcasting company spokesman said the project would again be presented to the majors, with short wave broadcasts' popularity attested by signing of contracts with the NBC by corporations in other industries.

The company's short wave programs have elicited "tremendous" mail response, especially from Latin America, according to Lunsford P. Yandell, in charge of international broadcast sales for the NBC, an assistant treasurer of the Radio Corporation of America, and a director of the new RKO.

At present, the NBC, using material from the MPPDA, is broadcasting film industry news in six languages, Spanish, Portugese, Italian, German, French, and English. Each program occupies 15 minutes, once a week. Tentatively offered to the majors is a program containing film news, "personal appearances" of film stars, orchestras, and material transcribed in Hollywood, for one half hour, seven times per week, for one year. The majors could, in these programs, boost their product particularly, or generally. The industry could also sponsor a general institutional program, it was suggested.

Principles of RCA Sound in 68-Page Book

The principles of RCA sound and sound equipment are explained in a 68-page book prepared by RCA Photophone and distributed by RCA's national service organization. Entitled "Photophone Systems and Technical Data for Projectionists," the book is illustrated with photographs of equipment, diagrams, charts and graphs. Functional circuit diagrams for each RCA Photophone sound reproducing system are also included.

It was prepared under the supervision of W. L. Jones, RCA National Service manager, and Adolph Goodman, assistant manager.

Scheduled for departure from California's San Pedro harbor on June 15th is Warner Brothers' "Sea Hawk," sailing vessel giving its name to the forthcoming Errol Flynn film.

Employed during filming off Catalina Island for exteriors, the vessel has had a Diesel engine installed, as well as accommodations for 50 people. Current plans call for setting a course which will include a trip to New York via the Panama Canal, with arrival in New York's North River about August 15th. The boat will remain there about a month, during which time will occur the Broadway premiere of the picture.

Stops at some 15 cities are planned, with broadcasts and ceremonies attendant at each one. In New York, according to advance Warner words on the subject, more than 10,000 people are expected to inspect the ship, and elaborate welcoming ceremonies are being planned with U. S. Navy officials taking part.

The crew, it is said, will wear apparel of the Elizabethan period. No commitments have been made as to whether conversation will be restricted to blank verse.

"NO PING, NO PURR"—LANDIS

A loud backfire, with concomitant publicity reverberations, echoed through Hollywood this week as blonde Carole Landis refused publicly to be known as "The ping girl—because she makes you purr".

The battle started when the Hal Roach forces invited members of the local press to attend a party in honor of Miss Landis, currently being seen, in generous measure, in "1,000,000 B.C." Acceptances poured in, orders were happily given for large quantities of liquid refreshment, when Miss Landis put a spike in the wheels of social progress.

In the form of large advertisements in local papers, Miss Landis extendea her "apologies to the working press". Said she: "While I know that many things are endured in the name of publicity, this mental blitzkrieg carries things a little too far. I was never consulted about the scheme, nor do I approve the appellation they would like to inflict upon me. For these reasons I will not be present at my own reception, to ping, purr or even coo."

The party was called off, with regrets and a great deal of space devoted to it in local newspaper circles. Since then, Miss Landis has had her contract renewed.

RKO Product

At the closing sessions of RKO Radio's annual sales convention, in New York, last week, at which 53 features were announced for 1940-41 (See MOTION PICTURE HERALD, June 1, page 28, for titles), George Schaefer, president told the delegates that 23 of the 26 major productions planned were all well along in production.

Herbert Wilcox will produce and direct two features starring Anna Neagle. They are "No, No, Nanette," with Vincent Youmans' music, book by Otto Harbach and Frank Mandel, and lyrics by Harbach and Irving Caesar, and "Sunny," the Charles Dillingham musical with a Jerome Kern score and lyrics by Otto Harbach and Oscar Hammerstein II.

Andre Daven and Nat Wachsberger, who have had extensive production here and abroad, will team as co-producers in association with Harry Brandt for the production of two pictures starring Charles Boyer. The first will be directed by Anatole Litvak and is tentatively titled "Ariane Pretends." It is based on the novel by the French author, Claude Anet. Mr. Daven was at one time head of the Theatre des Champs Elysees in Paris. Later he went to Germany where he produced the French versions of the Erich Pommer films for UFA.

The first will be the next Gene Towne and Grahame Baker production, "Little Men," from the Louisa May Alcott novel, with Norman McLeod directing. On its completion Miss Francis will go into "Debutantes, Inc.," now being prepared by Cliff Reid, producer, for late Summer filming.

Lou Brock will be in charge of the short subjects production for RKO for the 1940-41 season. He will also produce a feature, "They Met in Argentina," a South American musical starring Maureen O'Hara, Gene Raymond and Alberto Vila.

Charles Roberts and Harry D'Arcy will make the two-reel subjects for the new season.

Earthbound

(20th Century-Fox)

Melodramatic Mysticism

Showmen who recall Samuel Goldwyn's 1920 picturization of this Basil King story as the first of the screen's adventurings into the realm of mysticism will remember that it made box office history in its generation and set something of a standard for works in kind. The Warner Baxter-Andrea Leeds vehicle now at hand from the Sol Wurtzel side of the 20th Century-Fox studio and produced on a scale commensurate with the caliber of the talent presented, has been brought up to date by John Howard Lawson and Samuel G. Engel in their adaptation, but not changed as to fundamental plot.

Scene of the modern version is Paris, where a man who seems to have done some forthright philandering with the girl who has become his best friend's wife, but still loves her original interest, is shot and killed by her for declining to renew the affair. From this point on the man continues in wraith-like presence among the living who bury his body and proceed with a trial of the friend who attempts to shoulder the girl's guilt. His efforts to communicate with the living are fruitless, but the audience is left to decide whether his astral presence finally leads his wife to the discovery of the evidence which brings justice, after which the man, no longer "earthbound," goes his way.

Direction is by Irving Pichel, recently in the news as producer of the independently made "Great Commandment," purchased by the studio for refilming.

Previewed at the Fox Wilshire theatre in Los Angeles, where it appeared to give complete satisfaction.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

Safari

(Paramount)

African Adventure

Names of Madeleine Carroll, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Tullio Carminati and Lynne Overman as personalities in an African adventure story would seem to stack up as substantial exploitation material for showmanly use in just about any situation or time. If the situation happens to be one, however, in which the word "adventure" has become synonymous with the phrase "kops and robbers" or its variants, the film may be quite as authentically advertised as being as much concerned with the romantic conflict between two men and a woman as it is with the dangers of the jungle or more so.

The script by Delmar Daves, from a story by Paul Hervey Fox, has a wealthy sportsman arriving in Africa by yacht for big game hunting in company with a young woman interested in him, on rebound from grief in the death of her beloved, for the security his money and position promise. The sportsman employs a young American hunter to take charge of the safari, hunter and girl fall in love with each other and ultimately, after emotional and adventurous incidents making up the main body of the film, send the wealthy sportsman about his business.

Produced on high budget basis by Anthony Veiler and directed for both personality and story values by Edward H. Griffith, the picture contains incidental references to such matters as the German demand for Danzig and the hero's past participation as volunteer aviator on the side of the Chinese forces in China, as well as the death of the heroine's first love in the fighting around Madrid, but these are without relation to the main theme.

Susan and God

(MGM)

Comedy-Drama

This, Ladies and Gentlemen of the Show Business, is a picture for each of you to see for yourself and make up your own mind about. That is because this picture is unlike any other ever offered you in its handling of the word God.

The picture is a transcription by Anita Loos of the Rachel Crothers stage play of the same title, about which newspaper and magazine readers learned at second hand during its New York run. In the film Joan Crawford plays the role Gertrude Lawrence enacted on the stage and in a manner that brought loud and repeated applause from a Hollywood preview audience including press, profession and public.

The production is on the Hunt Stromberg scale and George Cukor, associated with Mr. Stromberg and Miss Crawford in production of "The Women," directed.

The story is about a wealthy matron, living apart from her husband and adolescent daughter, who comes home from Europe imbued with "a movement" launched by one "Lady Wigstaff," and announces to her circle of Long Island associates that she has found "a new approach to God." She sets out to persuade each of them to publicly confess to the others their various extra-marital interests, continuing to resist pleas of her husband and daughter to re-establish her own domestic scene until he makes a bargain under terms of which, conditional on her living with them through the summer, although expressedly not as his wife, he will abstain from drinking or, if he fails to, grant her a wanted divorce. She learns, after distressing incidents affecting first the others and then herself, that she has been exhorting about God without following her own lecturings, and a happy ending is finally achieved.

Conquest of the Air

(Korda - United Artists)

Aviation Documentary

Launched by one director in 1937, shelved and tackled again by others, this production has at last come to light with on it, in one form or another the mark of Korda, John Monk Saunders, Donald Taylor, and others. Yet with all its checkered history it is an interesting and a vivid study. With the aid of diagrams, models, recreated episodes, newsreel sequences, commentary and pictorial punch, it traces the story of man's efforts to fly, from the distant days of Icarus, to the American Clipper. The net result is an absorbing historical fresco, which in its comparatively brief span, misses few of the essentials of an immense subject. Aviation is front page news all over and the film should appeal equally on both sides of the Atlantic.

The early pioneers, Roger Bacon, Borelli, Zoroaster, Cavallo, are seen with their futile flying machines. Down the ages the story is traced to Montgolfier and Maxim, to the Wrights, Bleriot, Latham, Lindbergh, "Smithy," Earhart, Amy Johnson, to the "Clipper" and the modern bomber, the forestry fire fighter and the Soviet seedsower, sword planes, ploughshare planes. Not much is missing from the story which has drama and spectacle, thrill, nobility and the ignominious barbarity of the modern bomber.

The high technical quality of the film is notable, more especially so for its checkered history. Laurence Olivier and other noted British players have passages in the film, Oliver as the Puckish dandy, Vincent Lunardi.

Some of the recreated flights with primitive type machines are extremely well done. There is a dramatic and tense episode built on D'Annunzio's famous leaflet flight over Vienna.

Shown to a sparse and somewhat down to earth London trade audience the film, whilst now and again it raised a misplaced laugh, seemed to grip, and at times registered its drama. General feeling seemed that it was what is known here as "for discriminating audiences."

Tear Gas Squad

(Warner Brothers)

The Irish of It

Oddly enough, considering the title, this is concerned with Irish family life and romance, following the lines of Warners' previous "Three Cheers for the Irish." The title's connection with the story derives from the climax when tear gas is used to capture criminals cornered in a loft.

Dennis Morgan, playing the lead, is a singer in a night club whose principal number is a parody in which he appears in a police uniform. He meets Gloria Dickson at the club and manages to be invited to her home, where he finds that her father and two other members of her family are policemen.

Morgan or "Tommy McCabe" in the film, decides to join the police academy. "Sergeant Morrissey," a rival suitor played by John Payne, is assigned to the academy as an instructor at the same time. "McCabe" is assigned to the police glee club instead of a "beat" and is insubordinate to the chief. He is suspended but becomes a hero when he is responsible for the capture of criminals implicated in the death of a brother.

44 GOVERNORS WANT THEIR STATES FILMED

What the Governor of North Carolina said to the Governor of South Carolina may be forever shrouded in mystery. But no mystery whatsoever surrounds the responses of the Governors of 44 States, queried by Wesley Ruggles, film producer-director, as to possible highlights in state history for picture use.

Currently making "Arizona" for Columbia release, Mr. Ruggles recently sent letters to the State heads, had replies from all queried. And all, according to the Columbia studio, were "anxious and willing to have their states selected for a motion picture."

Books, pamphlets and Chamber of Commerce releases flooded the Ruggles mails as the states rushed to join the band wagon. Seen as bringing a happy flush to the cheeks of many a constituent was a gubernatorially achieved celluloid history.

Rocky Mountain Rangers

(Republic)

Mesquiteer Melodrama

"Fifth column" tactics, this time on the side of justice, are practiced by that horse and saddle triumvirate, the Three Mesquiteers, in their latest cinema crusade. The time and place of the story are the Texas Panhandle territory before that district became part of the union of states.

"Stony Brooke" in the versatile person of Robert Livingston is the chief underminer in the domain of "King Barton." His cohorts, "Rusty" and "Rico" are on hand to take care of the loose ends but it is mainly through "Stony's" remarkable resemblence to a district bad man, "the Laredo Kid" that the trio is able to work its collective way into membership of the "Barton" mob and thus stall the group's terroristic hold over the local inhabitants. The act becomes a bit unsettled when the real "Laredo Kid" turns up but through a series of well organized fist and gun encounters, in addition to the usual Mesquiteer superb horsemanship, the forces of law and order come out of the dispute the victor.

Gestapo

(Produced in England by Twentieth Century Pictures for MGM release)

European Spy Melodrama

Exploiting the spirit and events of the day before yesterday, and cashing in on anti-Nazi feeling, the producers have used up the whole box of tricks in giving spy melodrama a topical note. Reminiscent in more than one way of Hitchcock's "The Lady Vanishes" it develops much of its action on a trans-European express, but includes concentration camps, storm troopers and the Czecho-Slovak invasion. The serious concern of the populace with very serious war matters is likely to militate against a picture which is so essentially non-escapist, which reminds them of what they neither need nor want to be reminded of.

The story traces the adventures of a Secret Service man who is successful in masquerading as a German officer, and who works to get a friendly Czech smuggled out of Germany. There is a conscientious Nazi lieutenant who at last pierces the Secret Agent's disguise, and there is a climax in which the gun battle in the woods of the Hitchcock film, is matched by a similar and vigorous gun fight on, across, and over an Alpine cable railway. There are, too, the Charters-Caldicott brace of pukka Englishmen, who again make racial comedy play a vaguely dramatic role.

Rex Harrisons' winning personality helps over the incredible masquerade and Paul Von Hernried is a characteristic Nazi officer.

Shown to a trade show audience the film went down as well as any motion picture might be expected to do with war a hundred and fifty miles away.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

March of Time, Vol. 6, No. 11

(RKO Radio)

The U. S. Navy—1940

From a consideration of European and Asiatic war machines, the March of Time analysts in the newest number for this series have shifted their camera eye to military matters of a more intimate interest to American audiences. Themed on the subject of the American Navy's status quo for the bellicose year of 1940, the issue in brief but informative statements and excellently photographed sequences surveys the naval strength of the United States sea forces, offering comprehensive explanations to cover the past, present and future histories of this country's fleet.

Tracing naval history since World War I, the picture shows the rebuilding program for this part of the American national defense system, such as increasing naval budgets, the recruiting and training of more officers and crew personnel, the reinforcing of fortifications along the Panama Canal Zone and other important coastal and insular supply bases, and the coordination of the Coast Guard and Marine forces into the navy setup. American audiences in viewing this coverage may gain a hopeful note in the statement that on comparative basis their country's navy is inferior to no other nation's fleet afloat. This miniature documentary, in view of the President's words on defense preparedness, is screen material important for the inspection of every American audience.—Running time, 19 minutes.

Adventures of Red Ryder

Cartoon Serial

Fanciers of pen and ink muscle men in newspaper cartoon strips will be considerably pleased to hear, as well as see, the doughty "Red Ryder" in this screen treatment. As played by Don "Red" Barry, an up and coming knuckle boy, "Red" makes the crossing from newspaper strip to film footage with the ease and excitement characteristic of this energetic class. In the opening chapter, "Red" is pitting forces against the land grabbing tactics of local money bags and politicos, who are subjecting the country to a reign of terrorization in order to corner right of way for a contemplated railroad. In the initial stanza, there is staged a round of fisticuffs across floor, over bar and down from balcony that should find its place in the gallery of classic screen slug fests. "Red" is considerably aided in his clean up campaign by the nimble cooperation of Tommy Cook as peppy, brownskinned "Little Beaver." The young brave should have many admirers and imitators from the juvenile section of chapter play enthusiasts. William Witney and John English cooperated in the joint direction of the script, which was shot under the sponsorship of Hiram S. Brown, Jr., associate producer. Concerned in the serial proceedings, either for or against "Red' are Noah Beery, Bob Kortman, Maude Pierce Allen, Vivian Coe, Hal Taliaferro, Harry Worth, Carleton Young and Ray Teal. Release date, June 15, 1940. Running time, 12 episodes, first chapter, 29 minutes, subsequent chapters, two reels each.

Servant of Mankind

(MGM)

Thomas A. Edison

"Servant of Mankind" is a brief pictorial biography of Thomas Alva Edison and is designed obviously as the advance runner for the company's feature, "Edison, the Man." However, aside from its exploitation advantages for the feature the film can stand on its own for its educational and entertainment values. Running time, 9 minutes.

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

Sea Sport Slant

This Ed Thorgerson sport slant on the ways of men with a sailing ship should have chief interest for seamen, whether amateur or professional, and to admirers of superlative photography. Reviewing sailing boat technique from the well equipped facilities of a Newport society regatta to the primitive but effective ways of navigation, as practiced by Oriental seamen, the material skips smartly from sea scenes on the Atlantic to the waters of the Far East. The camerawork is particularly outstanding and the many shots of full masted ships, done in shadow and light shading, should arouse audiences with an eye for distinctive photographic beauty.—Running time, nine minutes.

Northwest Allied Seeks Film Pool

Allied exhibitors of the Northwest, asserting they number 75 and represent more than 100 theatres in the Minneapolis service territory, are again advocating a buying pool. Percentages asked by distributors have been assailed, and a reduction of rentals of from 25 to 33⅓ per cent is being asked.

The exhibitors met Monday night in Minneapolis. Besides discussing the pool plans, they pledged support to National Allied policies, and predicted they would bring every independent exhibitor of the territory into the organization before the season's end.

The board of the Northwest Allied is to meet next Tuesday, to act on the resolutions by the exhibitors, against percentages and for film rental reductions; and to recommend a successor to Al Steffes, president, who has been given a six-months leave of absence because of illness.

U.S. Has 'M-Day' Plans for Radio; Law on the Books

Engagement of the United States in war would bring about radically changed conditions in the broadcasting field, the extent of which would depend, however, on whether the United States was invaded—a less remote possibility than was generally thought a year ago—or whether it does its fighting at a distance, as in the last war.

War, Navy Department Plans

Plans for the part to be played by broadcasting have been worked out, more or less in broad form, by the War and Navy Departments in cooperation with the Federal Communications Commission and other Federal agencies. They are being kept confidential, pending the approach of a possible "M Day," when the entire nation will be asked to mobilize for war.

Should war occur, it will not be necessary for the Administration to ask Congress for any authority over broadcasting, for that was granted the President six years ago this month, in the Communications Act of 1934.

That law provides that "upon proclamation by the President that there exists war or a threat of war or a state of public peril or disaster or other national emergency, or in order to preserve the neutrality of the United States, the President may suspend or amend, for such time as he may see fit, the rules and regulations applicable to any or all stations within the jurisdiction of the United States as prescribed by the commission, and may cause the closing of any station for radio communication and the removal therefrom of its apparatus and equipment, or he may authorize the use or control of any such station and/or its apparatus and equipment by any department of the Government under such regulations as he may prescribe, upon just compensation to the owners.'

Army Would Be in Control

With the way paved for action, it would need only the signature of the President to the appropriate orders to put the Army in full control of all broadcasting stations of the country and to turn over to the Navy the international communications stations along the coast.

Naturally, the treatment accorded broadcasting would depend to large extent upon the type of war in which we might be engaged. Should we become involved in an European war, for instance, it is quite probable that there would be as little interference with operations as possible in meeting military necessities.

"Business as usual" would be the motto in such a war, so far as possible, just as, in England and France, efforts are being made to continue export trade and to keep broadcasting operating without interruption.

However, if the demand for man power necessitated, it is quite likely that a number of the smaller stations would be closed in communities which still would have service and that the larger stations would be availed of, as in England and France, to keep the population in touch with such developments as the Government saw fit to publish and for the purpose also of maintaining the morale of the civil population.

On the other hand, in the event of an invasion, all radio would be immediately taken over and, in all likelihood, broadcasting would be suspended by all but "key" stations which, together, would form a chain reaching every section of the country, which would be used by the Government to give instructions to civilians, to warn against possible attack on individual points and for the many other military needs which would arise, such as those dealing with the distribution of foodstuffs, the calling of certain groups to arms, etc.

Naturally, the outline of operation is merely one of possible activity. In practice, it would be subject to many changes and deviations, all depending on the character of the war, the current condition of the country, the particular needs of the moment and the like. But, if "M Day" comes, radio and its men will be immediately called upon for service.

May Seek Review of Nebraska ASCAP Case

Indications are that the attorney general of Nebraska will move some time next month to obtain a review by the United States Supreme Court of the Federal statutory court decision which held the state's anti-ASCAP law unconstitutional. A request for a new trial of the case was denied recently by the statutory court.

The attorney general's office in Lincoln, Neb., has spent considerable time in the past few weeks on the case.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

CLOUDS OVER EUROPE: Laurence Olivier, Valerie Hobson, Ralph Richardson—One thing making this picture especially interesting is its timeliness. The plot was light, fast and pleasing. Ralph Richardson offers a fair quality of comedy. Running time, 79 minutes. Played May 17-18.—Simon Galitzki, Coed Theatre, Topeka, Kansas. General patronage.

GOLDEN BOY: Barbara Stanwyck, William Holden, Adolphe Menjou, Joseph Calleia—Double with "South of the Border." Very good program; very good business. Running time, 100 minutes.—Frank J. Beck, Frank J. Beck's Theatre Circuit, Spokane, Wash. Small town and rural patronage.

HIS GIRL FRIDAY: Cary Grant, Rosalind Russell, Ralph Bellamy—Swell entertainment but, believe me, you know you've been somewhere when it's over. Never had a picture which wore you out like this one does. Running time, 92 minutes. Played May 8-9.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Mo. Small town patronage.

MUSIC IN MY HEART: Tony Martin, Rita Hayworth, Edith Fellows—Just as we expected, this was satisfactory musical offering, which drew quite well and satisfied. Running time, 72 minutes. Played May 15-16.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

SPOILERS OF THE RANGE: Charles Starrett, Iris Meredith—Played this on a double bill to outstanding business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

TOO MANY HUSBANDS: Fred MacMurray, Jean Arthur, Melvyn Douglas—Good comedy and plenty fast. Audience eats it up. Box office 25 per cent above average. Played May 19-22.—M. A. Kirkhart, Vogue Theatre, Lincoln, Ill. General patronage.

First National

FIGHTING 69TH: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, George Brent, Jeffrey Lynn, Dennis Morgan, Alan Hale—Very good. One of the few war pictures to go over here. A swell lesson in this as well as a lot of entertainment. Played May 26-28.—Mrs. O. A. Jensen, Silver Hill Theatre, Oshkosh, Neb. Small town patronage.

FIGHTING 69TH: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, George Brent, Jeffrey Lynn, Dennis Morgan, Alan Hale—The best war picture I've seen. You can't beat Cagney. His name goes a long way here. Good business and a very timely picture. Wish Hitler could see it. Weather good. Played May 15.—Felix H. Tisdale, Ritz Theatre, Brantley, Ala. Small town patronage.

OLD MAID, THE: Bette Davis, Miriam Hopkins, George Brent, Jane Bryan—There have been many reports on this. So there is very little that I can add as regards to the quality of this excellent picture but I will pass on a remark from one of our steady patrons that there was no need of Bette Davis to have become so drab looking, even though she was an old maid. As to business on this, the first day it looked as if it would be the year's low, the second day it turned cool and business picked up as a result that the three days' showing resulted in just fair average business.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

WE ARE NOT ALONE: Paul Muni, Jane Bryan, Flora Robson, Una O'Connor—Not as well liked as previous Muni pictures. Too slow moving and tragic ending not well liked. Played May 22.—Mrs. O. A. Jensen, Silver Hill Theatre, Oshkosh, Neb. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

AND ONE WAS BEAUTIFUL: Robert Cummings, Laraine Day, Jean Muir, Billie Burke—An excellent picture that is sure to please. Played May 22-24.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Colo. General patronage.

ANOTHER THIN MAN: William Powell, Myrna Loy, Ruth Hussey, Virginia Grey—Very good. Double billed with "And One Was Beautiful" to turn in surprising three day mid-week gross. Played May 22-24.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Colo. General patronage.

BABES IN ARMS: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Guy Kibbee, Charles Winninger—A really delightful picture starring two of moviedom's best juveniles in parts that were really made for them. The singing of Judy and the excellent impersonations by Mickey, especially his impersonation of Lionel Barrymore, are worth the price of admission themselves. If you haven't treated your patrons to this tuneful, comical picture, which also contains a reasonable amount of pathos, do so and do so now. They'll surely thank you for it. Running time, 95 minutes. Played April 13.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

BABES IN ARMS: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Charles Winninger, Guy Kibbee—Double billed with "Dr. Kildare's Strange Case." Picture was definitely a wow but the edge was worn off by the time it got to us. Was third run at the time. Played April 27-30—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Colo. General patronage.

BABES IN ARMS: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Charles Winninger, Guy Kibbee—Double with Robert Taylor in "Remember." Did nice business and patrons raved over show. Paid too much money, though, and lost money on the date. Played April 23-24.—Ed. Mansfield, Regent Theatre, Kansas City, Mo. General patronage.

BALALAIKA: Nelson Eddy, Ilona Massey, Frank Morgan, Charles Ruggles—This proved to be the best midweek draw in several weeks. We had good show weather and we also told the ladies that dinner plates would be the piece of chinaware on that night. Yes, we are one of the many exhibitors that have to resort to giveaways but I am willing to credit the extra business on this date to the picture. A good story, fine singing that was very tuneful to the popular ear. Ilona Massey as also quite an eyeful. Nelson Eddy was at his best.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

BLACKMAIL: Edward G. Robinson, Ruth Hussey, Bobs Watson, Gene Lockhart—Teamed this one with "Henry Goes Arizona" and "Drunken Driving." Did not do as well as "Ninotchka" but was liked. Played April 18-20.—Ed. Mansfield, Regent Theatre, Kansas City, Mo. General patronage.

CONGO MAISIE: Ann Sothern, John Carroll, Rita Johnson—Played on Bank Night. Good business and good picture. Not quite as good as "Maisie." Patrons were satisfied and so were we.—Felix H. Tisdale, Ritz Theatre, Brantley, Ala. Small town patronage.

DR. KILDARE'S STRANGE CASE: Lionel Barrymore, Lew Ayres, Laraine Day, Samuel S. Hinds, Nat Pendleton—These are so much better than the usual series of one cast pictures that criticism would seem out of place. But our patrons say that they are cut along much too same a line. A crisis that will lose "Kildare" his job, then he has the offer to work with another doctor but still loyal to "Gillespie." There is always the emergency that "Dr. Kildare" has to cope with and, I ask you, if that has not been the theme of every Kildare picture. The touches of humor are the only change. I can see them wearing thin in the near future. For even now they are not doing the business that the first ones did. The cast is tops in them but not the stories.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

DR. KILDARE'S STRANGE CASE: Lionel Barrymore, Lew Ayres, Laraine Day—Usually good grossers, this Kildare picture failed to get even average business at the box office. Picture was fairly well made but definitely lacked the power to draw in additional business or to even keep the regular flow coming. Played April 27-30.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Colo. General patronage.

GONE WITH THE WIND: Vivien Leigh, Clark Gable, Leslie Howard, Olivia de Havilland, Hattie McDaniel—Very good. Everyone liked the picture but many stayed away on account of the high admission charges. Didn't make any money but am glad we played it. Played May 24-25.—Mrs. O. A. Jensen, Silver Hill Theatre, Oshkosh, Neb. Small town patronage.

I TAKE THIS WOMAN: Hedy Lamarr, Spencer Tracy—Good picture. Fair business. Spencer Tracy hasn't lost a fan yet. I was glad to stand in the lobby and not have to force a smile as they came out of this one. Be sure and play it. Weather good. Played May 19-20.—Felix H. Tisdale, Ritz Theatre, Brantley, Ala. Small town patronage.

JUDGE HARDY AND SON: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden—Mickey will do it every time. A big favorite in my section with all ages. Swell entertainment. Good business. Weather O.K. Played May 3-4.—Felix H. Tisdale, Ritz Theatre, Brantley, Ala. Small town patronage.

MAN FROM DAKOTA: Wallace Beery, John Howard, Dolores Del Rio—Beery's poorest picture. Very disappointing. So do not look for too much. Running time, 91 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MARX BROTHERS "AT THE CIRCUS": Marx Brothers, Kenny Baker, Florence Rice—Played this with Wallace Beery in "Thunder Afloat." Did fair business; nothing extra. Patrons enjoyed both picture. Played April 11-13.—Ed Mansfield, Regent Theatre, Kansas City, Mo. General patronage.

MARX BROTHERS "AT THE CIRCUS": Marx Brothers, Kenny Baker, Florence Rice—Good Marx Brothers' picture. Business normal again. Played May 15-17.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Colo. General patronage.

NINOTCHKA: Greta Garbo, Melvyn Douglas, Ina Claire—This picture not only pleased everyone but did surprising business. Garbo has never done well for us, as usually spot her on Tuesday and Wednesday, but am sorry I did not play this on a week-end. Companion feature was "They All Come Out," also March of Time "The Republic of Finland." Played April 16-17.—Ed Mansfield, Regent Theatre, Kansas City, Mo. General patronage.

NORTHWEST PASSAGE: Spencer Tracy, Robert Young, Walter Brennan—Was excellent and unusual film fare which drew about 40 per cent extra business over present averages. Beautifully photographed and not too gruesome as some had led us to believe. Running time, 126 minutes. Played May 12-13.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

REMEMBER?: Robert Taylor, Greer Garson, Lew Ayres—Doubled with "Babes in Arms." Did nice business and patrons raved over show. Paid too much money though and lost money on the date. Played April 23-24.—Ed. Mansfield, Regent Theatre, Kansas City, Mo. General patronage.

STRANGE CARGO: Clark Gable, Joan Crawford, Ian Hunter, Peter Lorre—A good picture that pleased and drew good business.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

THUNDER AFLOAT: Wallace Beery, Chester Morris, Virginia Grey—Played this with "Marx Brothers 'At the Circus.'" Did fair business; nothing extra. Patrons enjoyed both pictures. Played April 11-13.—Ed Mansfield, Regent Theatre, Kansas City, Mo. General patronage.

TWO GIRLS ON BROADWAY: Lana Turner, Joan Blondell, George Murphy—Deserved much more business than it got. War jitters sank this swell little picture. Played May 11-14.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Colo. General patronage.

YOUNG DR. KILDARE: Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore—A very good story but failed to do business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Monogram

BAREFOOT BOY: Jackie Moran, Marcia Mae Jones—Here is a picture that will entertain the adults and make the kids go wild. It is a "Tom Sawyer" type of story really worth running. I would like to see more pictures like this one. Doubled with "Bachelor Mother." Running time, 64 minutes.—Frank J. Beck, Frank J. Beck's Theatre Circuit, Spokane, Wash. Small town and rural patronage.

What the Picture Did for Me

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

RHYTHM OF THE RIO GRANDE: Tex Ritter, Susan Dale—Tex Ritter fans will like this one, specially the juvenile trade. Average western fare. Running time, 53 minutes. Played May 19.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

WOLF CALL: Movita, John Carroll—Good picture but lacked northern scenery. Doubled with "Honeymoon in Bali." Good business. Running time, 61 minutes.—Frank J. Beck, Frank J. Beck's Theatre Circuit, Spokane, Wash. Small town and rural patronage.

Paramount

DR. CYCLOPS: Albert Dekker, Janice Logan—The capacity of my theatre is 1,000 and at every show all seats are filled. You guessed it. We rope 'em and bring 'em in. "Dr. Cyclops" was surprisingly different and awe inspiring but lacked appeal here. Running time, 76 minutes. F. G. Mills, Director of Motion Pictures, Prison Theatre, Florida State Prison, Raiford, Fla. Prison patronage.

FRENCH WITHOUT TEARS: Ray Milland, Ellen Drew—A clever little picture that got plenty of laughs and a very nice business. Played May 8-10.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Colo. General patronage.

GULLIVER'S TRAVELS: Color Cartoon Feature—This is truly a marvel. Messrs. Fleischer did a wonderful job. We had good business, mainly children. Running time, 77 minutes. Played May 20-21.—Don C. Ware, Joy Theatre, Belzoni, Miss. General patronage.

GULLIVER'S TRAVELS: Color Cartoon Feature—Big disappointment. Didn't draw and only pleased the kids. Adults were generally very much bored by the whole thing. Sure hope "Pinocchio" does better for us. Running time, 77 minutes. Played May 5-7.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

GULLIVER'S TRAVELS: Color Cartoon Feature—Entertaining cartoon that did good business. Doubled with "The Eagle and the Hawk." Running time, 74 minutes.—Frank J. Beck, Frank J. Beck's Theatre Circuit, Spokane, Wash. Small town and rural patronage.

HERITAGE OF THE DESERT: Donald Woods, Evelyn Venable—This was a good western and with some good western songs this would have been an extra good western. Why not make up some songs for these, Harry Sherman? Westerns are no good in my territory without songs.—J. N. Wells, Wells Theatre, Kingsland, Ga. General patronage.

HONEYMOON IN BALI: Fred MacMurray, Madeleine Carroll, Helen Broderick, Allan Jones—Double billed with "French Without Tears" to make a tremendously enjoyable program that pleased all and sent the ticket machine into high gear. Played May 8-10.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Colo. General patronage.

HONEYMOON IN BALI: Fred MacMurray, Madeleine Carrol, Allan Jones, Helen Broderick—Doubled with "Wolf Call." Very good picture and good business. Running time, 95 minutes.—Frank J. Beck, Frank J. Beck's Theatre Circuit, Spokane, Wash. Small town and rural patronage.

LIGHT OF THE WESTERN STARS, THE: Victor Jory, Jo Ann Sayers, Russell Hayden, Noah Beery, Jr.—Holds our 1940 record for top four day grosses so far this year. Picture, backed by huge campaign, justified every nickel spent and licked war jitters, competition and turned in an outstanding gross. The picture is truly excellent with the Harry Sherman touch sparkling all over it. Running time, 70 minutes. Played May 18-21.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Colo. General patronage.

LIGHT THAT FAILED, THE: Ronald Colman, Walter Huston, Ida Lupino, Muriel Angelus—Good picture for that type of story and is well produced. However, the box office was below average. Running time, 99 minutes. Played April 28-30.—M. A. Kirkhart, Vogue Theatre, Lincoln, Ill. General patronage.

OPENED BY MISTAKE: Charles Ruggles, Robert Paige, Janice Logan—Fair picture that did only fair business in spite of big giveaway that has been clicking steadily. Played May 1-3.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Colo. General patronage.

OUR LEADING CITIZEN: Bob Burns. Susan Hayward—A picture that made more than a favorable impression here. The type of theme used in this picture, portraying some difficulty of the working class with the so-called aristocracy, never fails to gain the complete appreciation of everyone. Bob Burns with his homely humor lends ample support. A pleasing picture. Running time, 88 minutes. Played May 17-18.—Simon Galitzki, Coed Theatre, Topeka, Kansas. General patronage.

ROAD TO SINGAPORE: Bing Crosby, Dorothy Lamour, Bob Hope—The picture was fast with clever dialogue and plenty of wit. We need more of this type. It did plenty of business. Running time, 85 minutes. Played April 21-25.—M. A. Kirkhart, Vogue Theatre, Lincoln, Ill. General patronage.

SEVENTEEN: Jackie Cooper, Betty Field—Disappointed very much and did not draw like we thought it would. Most patrons said it did not have the appeal that Tarkington's book had. Running time, 75 minutes. Played May 17-18.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

SEVENTEEN: Jackie Cooper, Betty Field—Just fair. Not half as good as "What a Life," Running time, 78 minutes.—Frank J. Beck, Frank J. Beck's Theatre Circuit, Spokane, Wash. Small town and rural patronage.

SEVENTEEN: Jackie Cooper, Betty Field—Picture very mediocre. Betty Field will never be box office. Cooper saved what there was to the picture. Box office starved. Running time, 78 minutes. Played May 12-14.—M. A. Kirkhart, Vogue Theatre, Lincoln, Ill. General patronage.

STAR MAKER, THE: Bing Crosby, Louise Campbell, Linda Ware, Ned Sparks—Third run. Double billed with "Opened by Mistake" which let us down through no fault of this picture. Played May 1-3.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Colo. General patronage.

STAR MAKER, THE: Bing Crosby, Louise Campbell, Ned Sparks, Linda Ware—An exceptionally fine picture but for some unknown reason we barely made film rental.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

TELEVISION SPY: William Henry, Judith Barrett—Just a program filler good for the second half of a double bill for which we have absolutely no use. Did fairly satisfy our Giveaway crowd. Running time, 58 minutes. Played May 22-23.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

WHAT A LIFE: Jackie Cooper, Betty Field, John Howard, Lionel Stander—Jackie Cooper very good as "Henry Aldrich." Very entertaining picture. Running time, 79 minutes.—Frank J. Beck, Frank J. Beck's Theatre Circuit, Spokane, Wash. Small town and rural patronage.

Republic

GAUCHO SERENADE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, June Storey—Gene Autry is still tops here and "Gaucho Serenade" was well enjoyed by my customers. Business very good. Running time, 66 minutes. Played May 24-25.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

JEEPERS CREEPERS: Weaver Brothers and Elviry, Roy Rogers—Entertaining picture, beautiful outdoor scenery, good business. Running time, 69 minutes.—Frank J. Beck, Frank J. Beck's Theatre Circuit, Spokane, Wash. Small town and rural patronage.

ROVIN' TUMBLEWEEDS: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Mary Carlisle—If it wasn't for "Frog," Autry wouldn't go over so hot. As long as they're together, all's well. Good business Friday and Saturday. Weather O. K. Played May 1.—Felix H. Tisdale, Ritz Theatre, Brantley, Ala. Small town patronage.

SOUTH OF THE BORDER: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Doubled with "Golden Boy." Very entertaining program. Unusually good business. Running time 71 minutes.—Frank J. Beck, Frank J. Beck's Theatre Circuit, Spokane, Wash. Small town and rural patronage.

RKO Radio

BACHELOR MOTHER: Ginger Rogers, David Niven, Charles Coburn—Very entertaining comedy; good business. Running time, 82 minutes.—Frank J. Beck, Frank J. Beck's Theatre Circuit, Spokane, Wash. Small town and rural patronage.

HUNCHBACK OF NOTRE DAME, THE: Charles Laughton, Maureen O'Hara, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Basil Rathbone, Thomas Mitchell, Walter Hampden—As most of you know all about this picture, I will confine myself to what the picture did for me and it was not so good. It was below average in adult patronage and above average in children patronage. As a whole, with the additional children ticket buyers receipts were about average. A word about the makeup of Charles Laughton. It was a triumph in the art of makeup and the real artistry of it was that it did not look like makeup.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BOY FRIEND: Jane Withers, Richard Bond, Arleen Whelan—A real good picture that did outstanding business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

DRUMS ALONG THE MOHAWK: Henry Fonda, Claudette Colbert, Edna May Oliver—Well liked here. Not much business as it was just ahead of "GWTW." Played May 19-21.—Mrs. O. A. Jensen, Silver Hill Theatre, Oshkosh, Neb. Small town patronage.

GRAPES OF WRATH, THE: Henry Fonda, Jane Darwell, John Carradine, Dorris Bowdon, Charley Grapewin—After large advertising campaign, business average. Certainly glad we did not allow Fox to bamboozle us into an extended run on this. Picture not liked; left a bad taste in the mouth of our patrons who go to a show to be entertained. Let's leave these problems to the administration and give the public entertainment.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

HOLLYWOOD CAVALCADE: Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Stuart Erwin, Buster Keaton—Good color; very entertaining picture. Just a little slow toward the end. Running time, 97 minutes.—Frank J. Beck, Frank J. Beck's Theatre Circuit, Spokane, Wash. Small town and rural patronage.

SHOOTING HIGH: Jane Withers, Gene Autry, Marjorie Weaver—Ran into very poor business on this picture. Some of it may have been due to war conditions. Picture itself was nothing sensational. Played May 4-7.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Colo. General patronage.

STANLEY AND LIVINGSTONE: Spencer Tracy, Richard Greene, Nancy Kelly, Walter Brennan, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Charles Coburn, Henry Hull—Double billed with "Two Girls on Broadway" but even then it failed to overcome the war jitters which gripped the nation and cut our business down as badly as it did yours. Played May 11-14.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Colo. General patronage.

SUBMARINE PATROL: Richard Greene, Nancy Kelly, George Bancroft, Preston Foster—Doubled with "Old Barn Dance." Very entertaining picture; good business. Running time, 90 minutes.—Frank J. Beck, Frank J. Beck's Theatre Circuit, Spokane, Wash. Small town and rural patronage.

SWANEE RIVER: Don Ameche, Andrea Leeds, Al Jolson—A fine picture but we never received as much comment as expected on this. Some seemed to like it and some didn't. For me the picture didn't give enough of Foster's life. I feel it would have been much more interesting if they had gone into detail a bit more. What they did do with the production was great but they could have done more. Britannica gives some facts that would have made great film material concerning Foster's life. Running time, 86 minutes. Played May 19-21.—Simon Galitzki, Coed Theatre, Topeka, Kansas. General patronage.

TOO BUSY TO WORK: Jed Prouty, Spring Byington, Joan Davis—The average person enjoys this type of film and one would do well to play these with other pictures. Joan Davis makes this much more interesting than any they have made for some time. Running time, 65 minutes. Played May 19-21.—Simon Galitzki, Coed Theatre, Topeka, Kansas. General patronage.

YOUNG AS YOU FEEL: Jed Prouty, Spring Byington—Not as clever lines as previous Jones Family. Also children have much minor parts. Just fair.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

United Artists

CHUMP AT OXFORD: Laurel and Hardy—The usual Laurel and Hardy line and the picture was okay for we heard the audience laugh once more and believe me they are going to need a lot more of them in the coming season. I'll cheer some light comedies if I get them and I am sure that the public will do the same.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

HOUSEKEEPER'S DAUGHTER: Joan Bennett, Adolphe Menjou, William Gargan—Good comedy and those that saw it enjoyed it. Box office was average. Running time, 80 minutes. Played May 5-7.—M. A. Kirkhart, Vogue Theatre, Lincoln, Ill. General patronage.

OVER THE MOON: Merle Oberon, Rex Harrison—These London films may click in England but they don't over here. A fairly good show but no draw. Played it on cash night. Running time, 78 minutes. Played May 15-16.—Don C. Ware, Joy Theatre, Belzoni, Miss. General patronage.

REAL GLORY, THE: Gary Cooper, David Niven, Andrea Leeds—Played this feature late. Seemed to please my Saturday night crowd. Good outdoor action picture. Running time, 96 minutes. Played May 9.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

REBECCA: Laurence Olivier, Joan Fontaine, George Sanders, Judith Anderson—This is a class picture produced faithfully from the widely read novel. It was well received, produced carefully and deserved more support than it received. But, business is seriously down with us and we credit it to the war situation in Europe. I can see no other reason for the sudden recession that we are experiencing. I am very much afraid that critical times are ahead for all of us. We note that people seem preoccupied and anxious. That is not normal. And I would like to get this off my chest and that is the money that is wasted on press sheets. The better the picture and the one that you will do business comes in with some 36 pages. All that the exhibitor needs is a selection of two or three mats, a few selling ideas and the synopsis. I will gamble that the average exhibitor looks over about four pages and throws the thing aside and refuses to waste his time looking at a duplication of ideas. He knows ahead what he has to sell from the reviews. That is if he is onto his job.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

Universal

DESTRY RIDES AGAIN: Marlene Dietrich, James Stewart, Charles Winninger, Mischa Auer, Brian Donlevy, Una Merkel—Lived up to its reputation, giving us an increase of about 40 per cent over Sunday-Monday average but not what it would have done if we had been allowed to use it on Friday-Saturday. Running time, 93 minutes. Played May 19-20.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

FIRST LOVE: Deanna Durbin, Helen Parrish, Robert Stack, Eugene Pallette, Leatrice Joy—Deanna Durbin keeps up the dizzy pace of turning out hit after hit and this is a swell Cinderella story that could not help but please those that saw it, but I regret to say that not enough saw this to make this profitable. Business on this was below average.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

MA, HE'S MAKING EYES AT ME: Tom Brown, Constance Moore—Good little money maker that pleased our audience. Played May 15-17.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Colo. General patronage.

MIKADO, THE: Kenny Baker, Jean Colin—Patrons walked out on this one. Could say a lot more but it would not look right in print. Running time, 91 minutes.—Frank J. Beck, Frank J. Beck's Theatre Circuit, Spokane, Wash. Small town and rural patronage.

MY LITTLE CHICKADEE: W. C. Fields, Mae West, Joseph Calleia, Dick Foran—Terrible! Had more kicks on this than any picture in a long time. Just a lot of film with nothing on it. It we are ever tempted to use a subject with either of these stars again, we hope we wake up before it's too late. Running time, 83 minutes. Played May 10-11.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

SKI PATROL: Luli Deste, Philip Dorn—Double billed with "The Light of the Western Stars" and while we didn't need it to bring in any people this surprising little picture contains lots of excitement and new wrinkles that will keep you interested for the 59 minutes it runs. Running time, 59 minutes. Played May 18-21.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Colo. General patronage.

SKI PATROL: Philip Dorn, Luli Deste, Stanley Fields—Good timely subject dealing with Russian invasion of Finland. Played this with Gene Autry in "Gaucho Serenade." Business good. Running time, 64 minutes. Played May 24-25.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

UNEXPECTED FATHER: Baby Sandy, Mischa Auer—Everyone enjoyed this picture. Good business. Running time, 78 minutes.—Frank J. Beck, Frank J. Beck's Theatre Circuit, Spokane, Wash. Small town and rural patronage.

Warner Brothers

KING OF THE LUMBERJACKS: John Payne, Gloria Dickson, Stanley Fields—Here is a good action drama. Did very well for us. Here is the fallacy of giving top billing to names and then have another actor take all the honors. Payne and Dickson only have supporting roles and Stanley Fields is the whole show and he is plenty good. Running time, 55 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

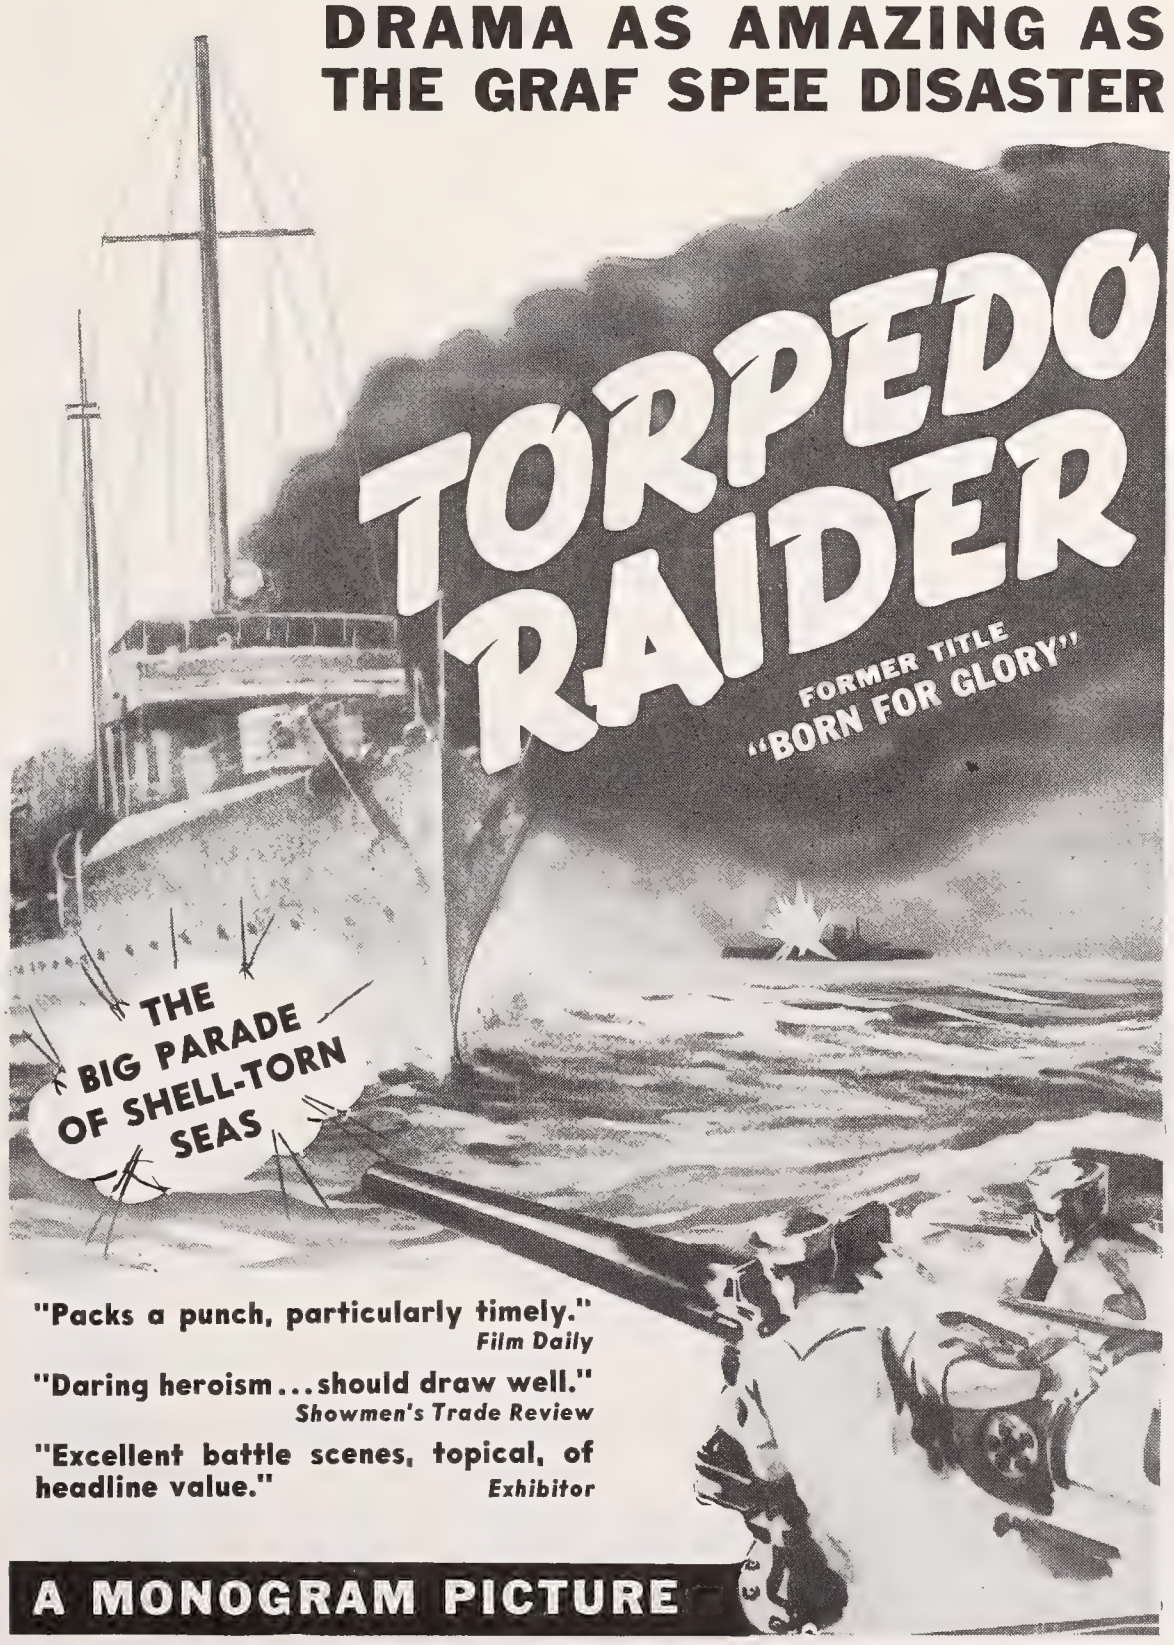
MAN FROM MONTEREY: John Wayne—One of John Wayne's best western pictures. Fair business but no extra draw. Weather good. Played May 17-18.—Felix H. Tisdale, Ritz Theatre, Brantley, Ala. Small town patronage.

PRIDE OF THE BLUE GRASS: Edith Fellows, James McCallion—Played this on Bank Night. For those who like horses, it's "tops." Enjoyed by all. We didn't know the stars but they were O. K.—Felix H. Tisdale, Ritz Theatre, Brantley, Ala. Small town patronage.

TEAR GAS SQUAD: Dennis Morgan, John Payne, Gloria Dickson—Good for B houses. A good filler where a short feature is required. Running time, 54 minutes. Played May 19.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

TORCHY PLAYS WITH DYNAMITE: Jane Wyman, Allen Jenkins, Sheila Bromley—This was doubled with "The Old Maid" and it was a good companion picture, giving the action lovers something to their liking. Changing players in a well known series of pictures like the "Torchy" series is usually dangerous, but this proved rather a good action picture. Jane Wyman sinks her teeth into the role in fine shape and if they want to make more "Torchy" pictures with her it's O. K. with me. Allen Jenkins was fully adequate for his part and a word of praise should be given to Sheila Bromley for a fine supporting role.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

VIRGINIA CITY: Errol Flynn, Miriam Hopkins, Randolph Scott, Alan Hale, Humphrey Bogart—A swell picture that goes right up the old alley for a small town exhibitor. Not the production that "Dodge City" was but still a beautiful picture. Too bad it had to be a costume picture, as these are not the draw that others are. Running time, 119 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.



Miscellaneous (Mercury)

PRISON TRAIN: Fred Keating, Linda Winters—

Wouldn't bring in a nickel, even if it was double billed with "GWTW." Played May 4-7.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Peublo, Colo. General patronage.

DREAMS ON ICE: Color Rhapsodies—Just ordinary. —Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS: Everyone of these subjects pleases the largest per cent of patrons.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

SKINNY THE MOOCHER: Charley Chase—Charley Chase was a real draw at one time but has ceased to mean a thing. Comedies are slow and have few laughs. The only comedy at present that has a real pull is the Three Stooges.—Ed Mansfield, Regent Theatre, Kansas City, Mo. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

DRUNK DRIVING: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—Caused a great deal of comment and is very much worth showing and all law enforcing agencies heartily approve. It builds good will.—Ed. Mansfield, Regent Theatre, Kansas City, Mo. General patronage.

Paramount

FOWL BALL PLAYER: Stone Age Cartoons—An average black and white cartoon.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

RKO Radio

BEACH PICNIC: Walt Disney Cartoons—Disney cartoons are tops here and are a real pull at the box office. Play everyone of them. But I think Mr. Disney should give us more of a break on his features. Could not play "Snow White" because of the rental. Even with good business I would have lost money.—Ed. Mansfield, Regent Theatre, Kansas City, Mo. General patronage.

BLAMED FOR A BLONDE: Ray Atwell—Between the little blonde saleslady, the supply of kitchen utensils, blondie's pugnacious boy friend and his wife, Atwell has a rather trying time. It was well appreciated here. Running time, 16 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

INFORMATION PLEASE: Badly photographed and too much talk. Means nothing whatsoever in this house. Sorry I have to play the series.—Ed. Mansfield, Regent Theatre, Kansas City, Mo. General patronage.

PATHE NEWS: About 80 per cent war and out of date even with a can news; 20 per cent war would be plenty. If the drop in business is caused by the war, why help it along by making people war conscious.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ICE POND, THE: Terry-Toons—These black and white Terry-Toons are not worth their price even though they are cheaper than the others. Running time, seven minutes.—J. N. Wells, Wells Theatre, Kingsland, Ga. General patronage.

United Artists

PETRA: World Windows—Not very good.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Universal

GOING PLACES: No. 73—Not so hot as this is more of Popular Mechanics type of reel than a Going Places. Just fair. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

RHUMBA LAND: Two-Reel Musicals—Who ever told Universal they should bring back to life "The Girl in Red.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

SOUP TO MUTTS: Lantz Cartunes—One of the best that Lantz has made, which is not saying much, as they are usually not so hot. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

STRANGER THAN FICTION: No. 70—An excellent filler reel.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

DANGEROUS DAN McFOO: Merrie Melodies—Very good.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Teachers' Group Tests Film Plan

A nationwide experiment to determine the possibility of substituting older "A" pictures for current "B" pictures and of using recommended older films for a planned series of students' matinees, around which curriculum units in photoplay discrimination will be built, will be tried in the academic year 1940-41 under the auspices of the motion picture committee of the Department of Secondary Teachers of the NEA.

School authorities, in cooperation with theatre managers, will select 10 films to be shown in the school year on one afternoon or one Saturday morning each month. The films thus revived will serve as the basis of a new course in "Types of the Photoplay." The experiment is under the supervision of Dr. William Lewin, of the Weequahic High School at Newark.

The complaint charges the defendant with conspiring to deprive the plaintiff of the patent by assigning it to the Radtke Patent Corporation. Files Chakeres Suit

Ben Coffett has filed suit in Hillsboro, Ohio, against Chakeres Theatres, Inc., seeking judgment for $2,255.36. He charges that he was wrongfully discharged by the defendant on April 6, 1940.

"Ecstasy" Loses Plea

Ohio Hearing on Bank Night Set

The Ohio supreme court will hear the case of Andrew Attenwiler against the Troy Amusement Company, Troy, next Thursday. The plaintiff is seeking judgment for $500 damages, refund of $10 admissions paid over a designated period, and the discontinuance of Bank Night at the Mayflower theatre in Troy on the ground that it violates the Ohio lottery law.

Attorneys for the defendants appealed from a decision of the appellate court, which ruled Bank Night as operated in Troy constituted a lottery. A similar suit recently was instituted against the same defendants by Michael E. Norris, Troy attorney. Suits against other theatres in the state are being held in abeyance pending disposition of the Troy case.

Nebraska Game Called Lottery

Screeno-Quiz, a theatre giveaway being tried in Omaha, has been ruled a lottery by Walter Johnson, attorney general of Nebraska. Mr. Johnson's ruling, citing the Bank Night case of the State against the Fox Beatrice Theatres Corporation several years ago, said it had all the elements—chance, prize and consideration—yet was more devious and complicated than Bank Night.

Omaha theatres have inaugurated a weekly cooperative giveaway of $500 under the name of Prosperity Club. The plan is financed by all houses, downtown and neighborhoods, on the basis of seating capacity.

Delaware County Ban

Bingo and Bank Nights have been banned in Delaware County, adjoining Philadelphia, by Henry G. Sweney, acting district attorney, in extending his drive against gambling, graft and vice to include the games. A form letter was sent to all theatres and churches in the county, warning them that those games are illegal and should be stopped. No threat was made in the letters, but Mr. Sweney said: "I feel pretty sure the theatres will cooperate, and, of course, the churches will."

Pointing out that Bingo games were "flourishing" in Mobile, Ala., under sponsorship of church and fraternal organizations, attorneys for Ricardo Montiel, manager of the Saenger theatre there, who is charged with operating a lottery in conducting Bank Nights, this week in an appeal to the equity division of the circuit court claimed discrimination. As a result of the plea the judge postponed trial of Mr. Montiel to June 27th to allow study of the discriminatory charges.

Kansas City police have tightened their enforcement against giveaways in theatres, and even have asked exhibitors to stop giving away dishes and similar premiums.

Herman J. Silver, manager of the Earle at New Castle, Del., has received a suspended sentence in Wilmington from a $50 fine in the court of common pleas on a charge involving the conducting of Bank Night.

Saenger Files Statement

Saenger Theatres Corporation, of New Orleans, operator of theatres in Louisiana, Texas, Mississippi, Alabama, Florida and Arkansas, has filed with the Securities Commission in Washington, D. C., a registration statement covering $2,450,000 of first mortgage and collateral trust 4½ per cent sinking fund liens due in 1952. The company formally announced it would use the proceeds to retire debt of itself and subsidiaries. Underwriter is Nusloch, Baudean and Smith, New Orleans brokerage house.

THE OLD RECIPE

Well, friends, they're bringing out the old drum again, and it still gives out.

Yes, sir, the boys are digging Old Man Ballyhoo out of the cellar, brushing off the cobwebs, putting him back to work.

Asked for suggestions to speed up the ticket-machine, the Old Gent replied:

"Make more boom-boom."

So boom-boom it is, growing louder and louder with every mail.

One member writes:

"We went out and raised a little hell and darned if it didn't do some good. A goodly representation of the neighbors was at each performance."

Another says it this way:

"We decided to go out and try to out-Barnum Barnum. Had the city talking and after looking over our campaign, maybe you will, too."

And so it goes. Yet more straws in the exploitation wind to turn it into a howling boxoffice gale.

This year, the Big Top is playing to more frequent capacity houses.

This year, the World's Fair is headed for much fatter grosses than in 1939.

The reason?

More excitement. More color. More "circus" than ever before.

Excite 'em. Chill 'em. Thrill 'em. "Hey, hey, folks, step up, step up, step up."

That's the answer. It's the old infallible recipe.

Can't sell pictures with canned-goods methods. Can't merchandise movies with tea-time tieins. 'Taint that kind of a pitch. Just got to be boom-boom. Got to "raise a little hell".

Judged by the work he has been doing as assistant to the knowing Joe DiPesa, in Boston, Joe Longo will find a fertile field for his endeavors in his new post of publicity director for the Cleveland Loew's Theatres. Joe will take a bow as ye Round Table wishes him well in the bigger job.

Aside from their classification under special events, this year Flag Day and July Fourth loom importantly as occasions to be singled out for program emphasis. The universal concern over the European situation and the involvement of personal liberties would call upon the theatres of America to participate in local observances by featuring patriotic exercises and patriotic short subjects as added attractions.

FOR PROFIT PLUS PRESTIGE

The series of 4-H Club amateur shows staged by Schiner Lou Hart as "Farm Entertainment Nights" is proving a profitable venture in more ways than one. As detailed on another page, the project has brought fine grosses, fattened the Club's treasury, secured valued publicity, built boxoffice esteem throughout the county from among the many friends and families of the young entertainers.

One does not usually associate activities of serious-minded 4-H members with the more sophisticated nuances of amateur night performances. In bringing the two together harmoniously Hart has tapped an unusual source of revenue while adding no little to the popularity of the association in public regard.

OF SERVICE IN THE SUMMER

With air-conditioning equipment in top shape, with cooling campaigns going high, wide and handsome, your observant manager is now giving full consideration to the equally important matter of patron-handling in the summer months. He realizes that folks are apt to be touchier in the hot weather, that perfect service must be more so, that the personnel is to be thoroughly schooled in following-through.

It may not always be the easiest thing to act the genial host when the thermometer ascends and the folks demand lots of instant attention. But it pays. The smart theatreman well knows that the customer spends his money where he is most welcome.

Round Table In Pictures

Four by six foot compoboard bookcase used in the lobby of the Capitol, in Yarmouth, N. S., was arranged by Charles Downey to exploit his forthcoming attractions. Simulated books of motion picture versions are planted on shelves, and as pictures are played replaced with newer ones.

Securing permission from the New York Humane Society, Publicity Director Phil Laufer for "Biscuit Eater" date at Loew's Criterion on Broadway had six boys and girls, with their dogs placarded, parading midtown sector. Stunt was given further okay by uniformed representative of the Society, who accompanied the kids.

To the victor belong the spoils, as illustrated above in the presentation by Skip Weshner, Warner district manager, of a week's vacation in Atlantic City to Elmer Hollander, Stanton, Philadelphia, winner of the Warner Philadelphia zone 7th annual managers' week. Hollander came through first in the drive among some 105 managers.

HauntedHouseAds Bring Many Calls

Planted by the United Detroit ad forces, a trio of classified notices gagging up the personal appearance of Bob Hope and his radio troupe at the Michigan's world premiere date of "Ghost Breakers," brought in a flock of phone calls for "Yahoodi," the name signed to the announcements and the fictious character in the star's radio programs. Copy ran as follows:

Are There Hants in Your Pantry?

Looking for a legitimate, thoroughly-haunted house; preferably complete with rappings, poltergiest phenomena, telekinetic stuff, all the business. For Bob Hope party June 6, connection with World Premiere of "The Ghost Breakers," at the Michigan Theatre. If you're haunted, call me at Cadillac-8074. It'll pay!

Generous Publicity Landed By Bell for Dr. Giovanni

When Dr. Giovanni recently played Loew's Capitol, in Washington, Ray Bell took the "pickpocket" down to the offices of the Times-Herald, where he performed for the amazement and amusement of the reporters. Result: a three-quarter page story with art work and theatre mention, which Bell proceeded to blowup for display out front during run.

Much publicity was also accorded Bell's "My Son, My Son" educational contest which was plugged on various radio programs. As judges, publicist enlisted the support of Dean of a local university, a senator and member of the local educations board. Stories were run in paper ahead, and during run, winding up with generous break when winner's name was announced.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Andrews Ties "Blondie" To Local Comic Strip

Two days ahead of opening of "Blondie on a Budget," Stan Andrews at the Capitol in Guelph, Ontario, captioned the Blondie comic strip in his local daily with copy to the effect that the picture could be seen at his house. This was also carried through opening day and during run, this netting him a little extra publicity.

Locating an empty store window in the downtown shopping district, Stan utilized it for his advance exploitation on "Dr. Ehrlich," lettering the windows with title, cast and playdates.

COMMERCE CHAMBER HOLDS "ZONE" BALL

Unique buildup for the picture at the Fox, Hutchinson, Kansas, was a "Torrid Zone" ball, costume party promoted under the auspices of the local Junior Chamber of Commerce to an estimated attendance of over 700. The festivities were marked with a contest for "belle of the ball", the winner presented with a loving cup from Ann Sheridan.

Three-Way Tiein Aids McCoy on "The Marines"

Announcing a tieup on "The Marines Fly High" in conjunction with the annual model airplane contest sponsored by the Athens Banner-Herald, merchants and theatre, under the supervision of the YMCA, P. E. McCoy, manager of the L&J Georgia Theatre, in Athens, Ga., broke stories in co-operating paper several weeks in advance which continued throughout event. Preparations were broadcast over WGAU each week during the Y's weekly broadcast and special window cards distributed over the city and rural districts. Announcements were made in city and rural schools, rules appearing on each of their bulletin booards.

Several days ahead of opening, model planes were displayed in merchants' windows, each bearing a card with picture title, stars, theatre and playdates. One week before contest the C.A.A. instructor of the University of Georgia went on the air describing prizes to be awarded, giving rules, etc. Prizes consisted of one year flying instructions gratis, medals, trophies and merchandise all donated by stores and various civic groups. Winners received their awards on stage and were presented with congratulatory wires received from stars in the picture.

For "The Invisible Man," which played during a big collegiate weekend which included large baseball game and commencement exercises McCoy, through the courtesy of program officials of the University, had student don attire such as worn by the invisible man in the picture. Lad constantly paraded through the audiences of the dances, ball games, track and literary meets, etc. Feature was tieup with umpire of game who announced over speaker that the "Invisible Man" would appear on the pitcher's mound to deliver the ball, plug was also gotten in for the picture, playdates, etc.

Personal Endorsement Letter In Lobby Aids on "Rebecca"

In a giant lobby setpiece, labeled "an open letter to the public," Harold Leand, manager of the Revere, at Revere, Mass., addressed a personal endorsement letter to his patrons for date on "Rebecca." Planted a week ahead of opening, Round Tabler says blowup of the letter proved a sure-stopper.

For what he chooses to call a "pepper-upper" show, Leand booked "Road to Singapore," Joe Penner's "Millionaire Playboy," plus the Warner old-time movie short, "Small Town Idol." Billed and advertised as "an all-laugh" show, Harold reports excellent business for his midweek change.

'Turnabout' Tieins Stress Laff Ideas

As to be expected, Round Tablers are going all-out on comedy in selling "Turnabout" with Bill Saxton, in Baltimore, for instance, tieing Station WCAO to a turnabout quiz broadcast wherein the public was invited to ask the questions instead of the announcer. This was done out front at Loew's Century on opening day of the date.

Saxton also used the ambulance stunt at conclusion of the first performance, having the vehicle driven up to the theatre and ushers dressed as internes carrying stretcher from the auditorium. Crowds quickly collected saw a dummy on the stretcher and banners reading: "She laughed her head off seeing," etc., etc. Lobby display featured a display of stills with captions in rhyme.

At Shea's Buffalo, Charlie Taylor's campaign sold the date around the theme of "Let's Have Some Fun," emphasised in all the advertising plus the line the picture was "the big laugh Buffalo needs." Advance teaser ads featured laughing cartoon face. Main attractor for lobby showing was a gag display including broken alarm clock, laughometer, pair of stitch-pullers, fish bowl filled with "tears," etc. Each article was captioned with appropriate copy explaining how patrons laughed and cried with glee at the Hollywood preview of the picture.

Contests Highlight Deering's Activities

Reporting on his recent doings at Loew's, in Houston, Texas, Round Tabler Francis Deering calls attention to his "Strange Cargo" contest in which cooperating paper ran five photos of scenes from older pictures in which Gable and Crawford were starred. Cash and tickets were offered to those identifying each picture and writing the best short letter on why they thought these two stars make a great movie combination.

Despite the strict policy against proclamations of any sort, Deering received the cooperation of Mayor Holcombe, who set aside a "My Son Day" in connection with the showing of that picture. Pictures of His Honor signing the proclamation with Boy Scouts standing by were run in local dailies. Also featured was the scholarship contest, whereby fathers were invited to write a letter to the cooperating paper stating why they believed their sons deserved the title of "America's Perfect Son." Much publicity was given the contest which ran week ahead.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Now, It's Bananas

Folks in Uvalde, Tex., were showered with bananas last week on a tiein made by Manager Scotty Scott for "Torrid Zone" at the Strand. Distributed widely around the town, each piece of fruit was tagged with copy reading:

"Souvenir from Cagney, Sheridan, O'Brien, in Torrid Zone. Action every minute and more laughs than there are bananas in Central America."

Schiners Tie Running Sign to Syracuse Theatre Dates

Some of the wide attention given the new electric sign on one of Syracuse's busiest corners may be traced to the tiein made by Gus Lampe and Harry Unterfort on behalf of RKO-Schine's Keith's. Similar to the moving display on the New York Times building, the sign, through a tieup arranged by the Round Tablers, flashes the theatre, picture, stars and playdates every five minutes for three hours daily and two hours on Sundays.

To attract further notice, different names are run three times daily, followed by copy inviting those seletced to go to the theatre within an hour for guest tickets. The hookup is given additional publicity through station WOLF which supplies the wire news service for the sign. Spot announcements have been promoted to stress the contest slant, station also plugging theatre and current dates.

Coast-to-Coast Team Sells "20 Mule" Dates

Ahead of "20 Mule Team" at the Fox, Philadelphia, the Warnermen had the assistance of MGM's travelling ballyhoo of borax wagons and mules, conducted around town under the wing of Jim Ashcraft, MGM exploiteer working with Ev Callow's ad forces. The featured parade took place a few day ahead and was widely publicized in the newspapers and also on the screens of the downtown Warner houses. The ballyhoo was preceded by an all girls' cadet band, the procession making the main streets to the City Hall. Here a broadcast took place over WFIL, civic notables and Warner executives appearing in the program.

In Washington, Carter Barron and Ray Bell conducted the wagons on a tour of the city and Capitol Hill. Parade through the business section was headed by Congressman Nichols of Oklahoma in cowhand costume and prominent senators and congressmen were on hand to pose for newspaper shots for the ballyhoo.

Local Gal Makes Good

With Rita Johnson in the East to appear at the New Jersey world premiere of "Edison, the Man," arrangements were made to have the star visit her home town, Worcester, Mass., and to stop en route at various cities in the Loew New England division. Plans developed by Harry Shaw, division head, and Lou Brown, publicity director, were topped with a civic holiday acclaimed by the mayor of Worcester, the city being decorated for the event. The star was further honored at a luncheon presided over by the city head, and at the picture's opening at Loew's the same night.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Franklin Plugs Localites

For "It's a Date," starring Deanna Durbin, Mitchell Franklin, manager of the Mayfair and Regent Theatres, in St. John, N. B., played up the local native son and daughter angles. Special advertising pointed out that it was the first time the young star, a native of Winnipeg, played opposite Walter Pidgeon, a native of St. John. Canadian atmosphere to the film personnel was stressed and brief biographical sketches of the two ex-Canadians were featured in advertising.

High Schools Cooperate With Peters on "Florian"

An essay contest on the reign of Emperor Franz Josef, who is portrayed in "Florian" tying in the Lippizan horses, was conducted in the English, Drama and Photo Fan Appreciation Clubs of the Reading, Pa., high schools as part of George Peters' campaign on that picture at Loew's Colonial. Copies of the Felix Salten novel on which the picture is based were awarded as prizes with guest tickets to runnersup. Announcements were made over the schools' public address system to its 3,000 students and stills were placed on all school bulletin boards. Stories and art were also used in the school newspaper.

Giant walking book, seven feet high, using two ushers inside and one outside as a guide, was sent through the streets several days ahead and during engagement. Two different three-sheets were used as the front and back covers of the book. Classified ad contest offered prizes to readers of a local newspaper who could write the title name most times on a postcard and parade of cadet band and chorus was held opening night, marchers carrying banners announcing that they were on their way to see the picture, brief concert being held at City Park before proceeding to the theatre.

Clean-Up Campaigns Aided by Managers

Participation in the annual Laporte, Ind., Clean-Up, Paint-Up and Fix-Up community drive was encouraged by Manager J. R. Wheeler, with a Saturday morning Tin Can matinee at the Roxy, admission for which was a minimum of 15 cans and special prizes for those bringing in the greatest numbers. Boy Scouts aided in rounding up the cans and the juvenile participants were paraded to the theatre behind large picture banners carried by the ushers. The matinee and Wheeler's participation was also mentioned in all the newspaper publicity on the drive.

Another Manta-man to use the can idea was Don Johnson, at the Gayety, South Chicago, the Round Tabler putting this on as an individual venture. Since he could not stage the event on a Saturday morning, Johnson switched it to a week day after school, building up interest with a double-truck in his local paper, copy offering admission for 25 cans.

Trick Phone Stunt Sells 'Wife' Date

Patrons at the RKO Albee, Providence, a week ahead of "My Favorite Wife," were confronted with a side-wall poster reading: "Please answer the phone. Cary Grant would like to speak with you." Below the poster, illustrated with a still of the star phoning, was a small table supporting a telephone. When receiver was placed to the ear, the following conversation was heard:

"This is Cary Grant speaking, and have I got a dilemma on my hands. Imagine being married to two women at the same time. What to do? What to do? Well, you'll find out what I did when you see 'My Favorite Wife' with Irene Dunne, Gail Patrick, Randolph Scott and myself, when it comes to the RKO Albee, May 28th. And it's apt to be the funniest picture you will see in many a moon."

The hookup was effected with a special record carrying the plug and played on a phonograph placed on a shelf below the telephone. Lifting the receiver started the record, which automatically repeated the message. According to Bill Morton who doped out the idea with Manager George French, the gag not only proved to be a top lobby stopper, but actually had people calling the theatre asking to speak with the star.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Scholarship Contest Held By Murphy for "My Son"

Following through on the nationwide offer of a free scholarship for some child, in connection with opening of "My Son, My Son," Manager Frank Murphy at Loew's in Syracuse planted his contest in local daily week ahead of opening. Dramatization of the picture was planted with the Little Theatre Group for radio use and further breaks were secured on the air through cooperation of commentators from women's clubs.

Date on "Young Tom Edison" brought a museum display on the mezzanine lounge, relics including replicas of the original Edison ediphone, phonographs, etc. Pianist was promoted from music company for lobby entertainment in conjunction with this exhibit.

PIANO USED IN "DATE" NETS FACTORY CO-OP AD

Discovering that a Story & Clark make of piano, manufactured in Grand Haven, Mich., was used in the production of "It's A Date", Manager Tommy Turner, of the Grand, in that city, was able to promote the factory for a four-column tiein ad in advance of his showing.

To elaborate the hookup, Turner also had a duplicate of the instrument displayed in the theatre foyer, which was noted in a page-one newspaper story, and allowed the theatreman to post one-sheets and stills in the factory and windows of local distributors.

4-H Clubs Stage 'Amateur Night'

Discovering that many members of the potent 4-H Clubs in his area were possessed of talents exhibited only before fellow members at social gatherings, Manager Lou S. Hart has arranged for the youngsters to stage a series of amateur shows at Schine's Hipp, Gloversville with the cooperation of the local farm bureau. The tieup was simple, Hart convincing the bureau heads that the youngsters deserved an opportunity to show their stuff before wider audiences, that the project was worthy enough to rate the association's endorsement.

To insure the highest type of entertainment, called "Farm Entertainment Nights," four weeks of auditions, supervised by the theatreman and bureau heads, were held before the first performance which brought capacity business. The auditions still continue with each week's show given by a different club which is rewarded with a sum of cash for the general treasury.

A lot of extra business is obtained through club contacts throughout the county and the newspapers which devote generous space to the various performances. Hart intends continuing the shows indefinitely and reports enthusiastic assistance from the members and bureau heads in keeping the caliber of "nights" within the aims of the association.

Boyd Promotes Store For "Pinocchio" Giveaway

Killing two birds with one stone, Cliff Boyd at the Paramount in Brattleboro, Vt., for "Pinocchio" promoted store for distribution of glossy tinted throwaways of cuts of the various characters in the picture. Enterprising theatremen offered these to the first 500 kids attending first chapter of his new serial.

Bumper strips were planted on all local buses in conjunction with which girl reading a "press sheet" covered entire city. Cooperation of superintendent of schools was secured, teachers and pupils attending one of the special shows in body after school. Numerous window tieups were promoted and chain druggist featured a "Pinocchio" sundae.

Magnifying Glass Poster Sells "Grapes of Wrath"

A Cheer-up poster, mounted upon an easel, brought a lot of attention to "Grapes of Wrath" at Warner Rhodes, Chicago. In size, 40 by 60, and placed conspicuously in the lobby, the top line of large copy read: "Quit Your Kicking. You're Mighty Lucky. How would you like to be in their boots?" Immediately below was placed a small shot of the Joad family, two and a half by three and three-quarters inches in size, with caption copy.

The snapper proved to be a magnifying glass attached to a long chain and hung from the easel. The tieup copy line below read: "Yes, go ahead and use the magnifying glass."

More than one idea may be included in one entry but Preliminary Awards will be voted for best individual idea.

No fancy entries are necessary. With the usual "evidence", submit brief description and "reasons why" an entry should be considered.

At this writing, the fifth Fortnight of the Second Quarter has passed with one period more to go until the end of the Second Quarter. It is to be kept in mind that, with everything equal, theatremen who score more often in the Fortnighters will receive greater consideration in voting the Quarter-Master Awards.

Local "Smith" Made Mayor On Tiein for "Mr. Smith"

To find the local Smith to act as honorary Mayor of Lake Charles, La., during the run of "Mr. Smith" at the Arcade, Manager Sidney Havenar working with Millard Lee, ad head, asked the public via radio, the papers, trailers, etc., to suggest residents of that name they felt worthy of the designation. The Mayor agreed to work on the stunt, giving up his office to the Smith selected.

After a spirited advance, the choice was made, "Mr. Smith" being escorted to City Hall by a parade of National Guardsmen and bands carrying theatre banners. In line also were the Boy Scouts, American Legion and cars were promoted from the Oldsmobile dealer. At the City Hall the key to the city was handed to the newly elected executive and two local girls acting as maids of honor presented flowers to the two Mayors. Handling of the entire promotion by Havenar and Lee landed the stunt on page one.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Shannon Bylines Column In Neighborhood Weekly

Along with his other duties at the Boulevard Theatre, in Pittsburgh, Manager Chuck Shannon has turned columnist and gets out bylined chatter each week for a local shopping guide. Needless to say, Shannon manages to get in some excellent plugs for his current and forthcoming attractions.

Neat tieup was effected recently by the theatreman on "Drums of Fu Manchu" with members of his kid club making up posters week in advance. Through the efforts of assistant Wilford Sklar, a Chinese laundryman was promoted for distribution of heralds in all outgoing bundles, and in a house-to-house canvass, store ad covering entire cost.

Locating a group of kids who had their own "Frankenstein" club, Shannon tied them in on his "Dracula" and "Frankenstein" date with the boys plugging the date at their respective schools. Members of the club were invited to give their own skit on stage which brought friends and relatives out to witness the playlet.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Humorous Slants Used By Neagley on "Detour"

Gag campaign was accorded Warners' Merrie Melody cartoon "Cross Country Detours" by Dan C. Neagley at the Stanley, in Bridgeton, N. J., who distributed novelty throwaways in the form of paper bags in which were inserted heralds with copy "It's in the bag, an entertainment trip with laffs, see," etc., etc. Newspaper coverage included cartoon contest for children with prizes to those submitting best drawings. Another newspaper slant was a jumbled word contest, whereby list of picture titles was run, with guest tickets for those unscrambling the mixed title letters correctly.

What proved to be an excellent stopper was the corner store which was promoted by Neagley and rigged up as the agency for "Cross Country Detours," with appropriate signs reading "the funniest laugh tour of the season," etc., etc. Special room was also reserved in the lobby for use of those having hysterics after viewing the film.

Of Current Attractions From Various Sectors

EXPLOITATION BRIEFS FROM A-FIELD

MONEY-BACK OFFER FOR "IT'S A DATE"

So sure was Manager Herb Grove that "It's a Date" at the Fort, Rock Island, Ill., would provide universal entertainment, that he guaranteed the attraction in his newspaper advertising, offering refund of admission to anyone professing not to like the attraction.

Tying in with the local safety campaign underway in Northampton, Mass., Milton L. Wainstein, manager of the Plaza Theatre, distributed small cards printed on one side of which were the rules which all members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars Safety Club for boys promised to observe, reverse side calling attention to opening of "Northwest Passage" and offering free admissions to those holding cards bearing numbers corresponding with those posted on lobby bulletin board.

And then over a set of six stills special cutout copy read: "And now—the greatest of them all—Broadway Melody of 1940."

A full page co-op ad was promoted by George Sullivan of the Clifton Theatre, in Huntingdon, Pa., for "My Son, My Son" in which each merchant's ad carried such tiein copy as "My son, give mother a dress from," or "for the good son, a bike from," etc., etc.

Reported by Sam Traynor, general manager of the Bailey Enterprises in Princeton, Ill., was the exploitation arranged by manager Herman Claymon at the Minonk Theatre, in Minonk, Ill., for "Fighting 69th." Entire staff was dressed in soldier outfits, helmets, guns, etc. during run of picture. Display in front of house consisted of barbed-wire entanglement with dummy soldiers, machine guns, etc.

Special front was constructed by C. Frederick at the Garden Theatre, in Greenfield, Mass., for "Geronimo." Either side of the boxoffice carried blowups of the head of the Red Raider holding a tomahawk. Title letters in cutout were displayed under marquee with drawings of Indian headgear.

Neat promotion was arranged by Milton Levy at the subsequent-run Commercial Theatre, in Chicago through tieup with local jeweler who agreed to give a gold baby ring free to every child born in the district during the run of the picture. In addition, merchant gave diamond ring to the first girl and first boy born during the run. Giveaway was publicized in local paper and through trailers on screen.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger (†) symbol indicates picture is of the 1939-40 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

PEACE, NOW

ENCOURAGING aspects of constructive practicality are manifest in the endeavours now being made for a settlement in the Federal anti-trust suit against the organized motion picture industry.

It ought to be possible to compose differences and make adjustment between the laws of the land and the interests of industry by negotiation without resort to the war of trial.

The process is applied every hour every day in the conduct of American business—and today the government of these United States is very much in business.

Lawsuits are the resort of those who cannot meet and agree by reason. They commonly mean that one or both sides are unreasonable.

The government's suit in many of its aspects assumes that a considerable part of what the motion picture has done in becoming an industry has not been and is not addressed at the common welfare.

If the industry is as interested in polls as it seems to be, the expressions of the government and those behind its action may be taken to be a sort of a poll of some sorts of opinion, among the customers.

Meanwhile, on the other side of the case, the government may well be aware that integrations and combinations are inevitable if the nation is to be served by corporate enterprises and aggregations of capital. No ideally designed industrial unit has ever been evolved and no law nor set of laws or fiats can finally adjust all relations between producer and consumer, vendor and buyer—save in a totalitarian state, ruled by force.

THE whole commercial system, including the motion picture, has evolved by cut-and-try methods of sheer experience. A good deal of what the motion picture industry in all of its branches has done has been practically right, or it would not have survived and expanded and prospered the while.

But the laws of government and the practices of industries are, alike, crystallizations of the experiences of yesterday in yesterday's world. For better or for worse, the world is being made a new and different world in many of its aspects.

Certain values, however, remain immutable, including common decency and commonsense.

Therefore, it would seem sensible to find a program of conduct for this industry, and others, without spending several million dollars and a year or two in court to arrive at a decision not more infallible, nor any more promising of constructive effect, than one which can be had, from the same order of minds and intelligences and knowledge now.

ADVANCED PRICES

INDICATIONS are to be had that on the precedent of "Gone With the Wind" exhibitors suitably located are inclined to explore a new policy of pricing admissions on the measure of individual entertainment merit of the offerings.

Currently come reports from Warner offices that they are finding extensive cooperation on a movement urging the exhibitors to set increased prices at the box office for "All This and Heaven Too". This, it is to be observed, is subsequent to the selling of the picture to the theatres.

It is becoming increasingly clear that not only has the motion picture several publics, but also that it has several levels of entertainment buying power, and demand.

When attractions of special drawing power have appeared, it has ever been the experience of the theatre that they could bring in patronage from among those who attended less frequently but would pay more. That started way back yonder with "Quo Vadis" and the "Birth of a Nation".

Admission price changes, adequately presented to the public, also can be in themselves devices of showmanship, as was in effect observed that other day by Mr. Edward L. Kuykendall when he said: "Many more may be attracted by a higher admission to see an outstanding picture." Price, now and then, can be the challenge to attention.

"NEW BLOOD"

AN annual award to the producer who brings to the screen the best new talent of the year, to be adjudged by the film critics of the press, was suggested recently by Mr. Maurice Silverstone of United Artists Corporation.

It is Mr. Silverstone's contention that "new blood" is among the most urgent needs of the screen industry.

Clearly enough, for all its vaunted enterprise, the most conspicuous strategy of the Hollywood production community has been in bidding against itself for ready-made kudos. "New blood" commonly arrives by invasion and accident.

The possibility still remains that an excellent picture could be made without the assistance of any person now in Hollywood, or connected therewith. Hollywood would not be enthusiastic about that; arrangements in fact have been made that that shall not occur. Lady Hollywood is a jealous wench.

ALL of which tends to remind one of a suggestion on this page quite a spell back in which it was observed that it would be nice if there might be a medal, an oscar or other such recognition for that producer, writer, director, or other creative personage, who had contrived to deliver the most box-office profit for the least money invested.

The awards of this industry seem largely to go to those persons who have been able to buy the largest portions of ready-made success. There is nothing to be objected to in that process, except the commissions charged.

Mr. Adolph Zukor once remarked that "there can never be a monopoly of brains in this business." That goes for all talent, whether the talent involves brains or mere instincts.

WEEK-ENDS are not what they used to be. An airline's lanes cross the valley of the Silvermine two thousand feet overhead, and, the times being what they are, the planes that once passed as unnoticed as cars on the highway, all require a look now. One day there might be one with a swastika on the wings—a thought that invades even the preoccupations and peace of a garden.

U. S. Tax Goes Down to 31 Cent Admissions

THE federal Emergency Revenue Bill passed by the House of Representatives and sent to the Senate late Tuesday extends to the motion picture theatres the existing 10 per cent admission tax downward from exemption at 40 cents to 30 cents a seat. This is expected to increase revenues from the screen's theatres from $9,000,000 a year to $25,000,000, according to estimates made by some statisticians. The tax will become effective June 30, 1940, after passage by the Senate.

Most exhibitors interrogated on Wednesday indicated a probable decision to pass the tax to the box office customers. There was much debating in some circuit offices about the question of setting prices to avoid odd change in pennies. Somewhat less than a thousand screen theatres have been paying taxes on admissions above 40 cents, and the national average admission is around 22½ cents, well below the tax minimum.

This is the first legislation affecting the motion picture industry concerning which no oppositions or representations by the industry have been made.

The tax measure was passed by the House with a record for both speed and unanimity, the vote being 396 to 6, and only two weeks from its introduction.

In Washington it was anticipated that the bill would be passed by the Senate with equal celerity—in the same response to the expanded rearmament program.

The tax on theatre admissions falls under Title II of the measure, in effect for the five-year period 1940-45.

The measure also increases considerably the taxation of entertainments which may be considered the screen's competitors, as for instance, "Cabarets, roofgardens, etc., old rate $0.01½ up to .02," an increase of 33 1/3 percent. Gasoline is put up from $0.01 to .01½, an increase of 50 percent. The cocktail industry faces increases in taxation of 10 percent each for wholesalers, retailers, stills and rectifiers. Box seats, previously taxed at 10 percent will now pay 11. Radios previously taxed at 5 percent will pay 5½, a 10 percent increase.

Tobacco, including especially cigarettes which share in the indulgence purse of the movie majorities, is up mostly in all its forms 16 2/3. Interestly, the tax on chewing tobacco was not increased. The tax makers found there were not enough chewers left to count.

War Competition

SOME of the current fluctuations of the box office curve may find explanation in the competition of war-heated radio. For four months now there has been especially marked increase in the radio audience and its hours of attention.

A comparison of the number of sets in use, between the hours of 7 and 10:30 P. M., shows an increase for the first five months of 1940, as compared with the same months of 1939, thus:

January	February	March	April	May
2.9%	4.6%	5.7%	14.6%	10.0%

Examination of the commentator ratings, based on the figures from the C. E. Hooper reports, shows them generally holding their own on percentages of attention from radio equipped homes through March, April and May, but with an upturn and increase of nearly twenty percent for Raymand Gram Swing, reaching the audience over the Mutual network, and over WOR in the metropolitan area of New York.

Professor Foes

A NEW "Public Enemy No. 1" in the person of professors of a type "which during these troublous years has become legion in educational institutions," was put in nomination in a commencement day address at Niagara University, Niagara Falls, N. Y. Monday (June 10) by Martin Quigley of New York, publisher and editor-in-chief of Quigley Publications.

"When I use the term Public Enemy I am not thinking of some despised criminal, exalted in notoriety by the press. Such a person may take life, but he does not poison minds, corrupt souls. He is not in a position to seize youth and blight careers.

"I am thinking, rather of such figures as the California professor who tells us that "the conditions of 1940 can not be met by the morals of 1490—of the professor of sociology, at one of our great Eastern Universities who told me he did not know what Communism was,—a professor of sociology, mind you—again, of another college professor, attached to a great university handsomely endowed by rich persons so busy making money they do not know what is going on in the world, who has insinuated into textbooks widely used in the public schools many references glorifying the ghastly experiment in human misery of the Russian soviets.

"I do not consider these gentlemen public enemies by intent, but by performance. They seek, perhaps with great goodwill, to solve the problems of the day. They remind one, however, of the faithful bear of the old fable. You will recall that the bear sat by to protect his master's sleep in the forest. A persistent fly buzzed about. It would not be brushed away. So as it alighted on the sleeping master's brow the bear crushed the fly with a big stone—and his master, too."

Mr. Quigley was honored on the occasion by Niagara's degree of Doctor of Laws. Honorary degrees were also conferred on John S. McCarrens, vice president and general manager of the Cleveland Plain Dealer and president of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, and Bernard E. Finucane, civic leader in Rochester, N. Y.

War Notes

ENGLAND'S film production industry put "feelers" across the Atlantic this week toward Canada, prospecting in Montreal for a possible new home, according to R. C. Sherriff, author of "Journey's End" who arrived in that city Wednesday in connection with the mission.

Mr. Sherriff has collaborated in recent years with Alexander Korda, producing in London. Mr. Korda is now en route to Montreal from England.

Quota production by American companies in London at press hour was near a standstill.

While U. S. distributors lose little, if anything in Italy, as a result of Mussolini's war declaration—American distributors having withdrawn from that country 18 months ago—there will be some film losses in French, British and Italian colonies to where the war has been carried.

Foreign department executives of distributors in New York assert that such heretofore "open countries" as Egypt, Greece, Turkey and Near East, Yugoslavia, Bulgaria, Rumania and Hungary—all in the extended "war zone," are affected, representing four per cent of U. S. distributors' foreign revenue, an estimated $3,000,000.

Closing of the Mediteranean appears to leave only Portugal and Sweden the only completely "open" markets in Europe.

Warners this week offered to donate to charity receipts from "Confessions of Nazi Spy" in Brazil if that government would allow its exhibition there.

Political Note, by Associated Press: Los Angeles—Diego Rivera and Paulette Goddard arrived by plane from Dallas Monday, the Mexican muralist asserting the actress helped him "escape from Mexico with my life." Rivera said he was granted a 72-hour stay against arrest after his house in Mexico City had been entered by a police squad after an attempt on the life of Leon Trotsky.

Chaplin vs. "Life"

LIFE magazine got a picture of Charles Chaplin, in the title role of "The Dictator" —a "scoop."

Then Mr. Chaplin got an injunction.

It will give publicity to the picture, which awaits release—and to Life.

Life was caught in mid-issue with 1,600,000 copies on their way to the dealers, to whom they were to be delivered, anyway. Another 1,200,000 copies still to be distributed, were to be held pending decision in the injunction suit which Mr. Chaplin had brought Wednesday in New York Federal court. The action, and consequent temporary injunction, is against Time, Inc., publishers of Life. The suit is by Charles Chaplin and the Charles Chaplin Film Corporation. It names in addition to Time, Henry R. Luce, John S. Billings, Roy E. Larsen and Charles D. Jackson. The suit asks permanent injunction, a million dollars in damages and "exemplary" damages.

The claim is that publication of the picture is damaging to Mr. Chaplin's contemplated prospect of $5,000,000 profits from his production. The picture is said to show Mr. Chaplin, dressed as "a dictator" with a double cross on his cap.

Life said it had bought the pictures from an unknown person, and had informed Mr. Chaplin that the picture would be used. Secrecy has ever been his publicity policy.

Exhibitors Organize

THE state of the nation, cinemawise, this week prompted owners of scores of theatres in two states to organize in order to give concerted attention to problems of the day.

Fifty Illinois down-state exhibitors of the new United Theatre Owners of Illinois will meet June 27th at the Pere Marquette Hotel in Peoria, Ill., to complete organization plans. Edward Zorn, of Pontiac, will preside. Legislative problems confronting Illinois exhibitors will be discussed, special attention being given to a proposed three percent gross tax on admissions. Other matters to be treated are slot machine movies, city seat tax increases and "gypsy" motion picture operators.

After a two-year lapse, activities of the Independent Theatre Owners Association of Kansas City have been resumed. Independents have organized to tackle the problems of declining grosses and increased expenses. Officers are: Ed S. Young, Central theatre, president; Stanley Schwartz, Tivoli, first vice-president; Arthur Burke, Colonial and Gillham, second vice-president; Ed Hartman, Saline Theatre Corporation, secretary and Harry A. Beynon, Ritz, treasurer.

Relics of "Birth"

DESPITE efforts by pressure groups to keep "The Birth of a Nation" off the screen, the film, or rather a part of it, opened this week at the 55th Street Playhouse in New York. However, the victory has gone to the pressure groups, for only a bit more than half of the original 12 reels has been revived. All "reconstruction" material has been eliminated; the Klan is gone; gone too are scenes with Negroes, except as background.

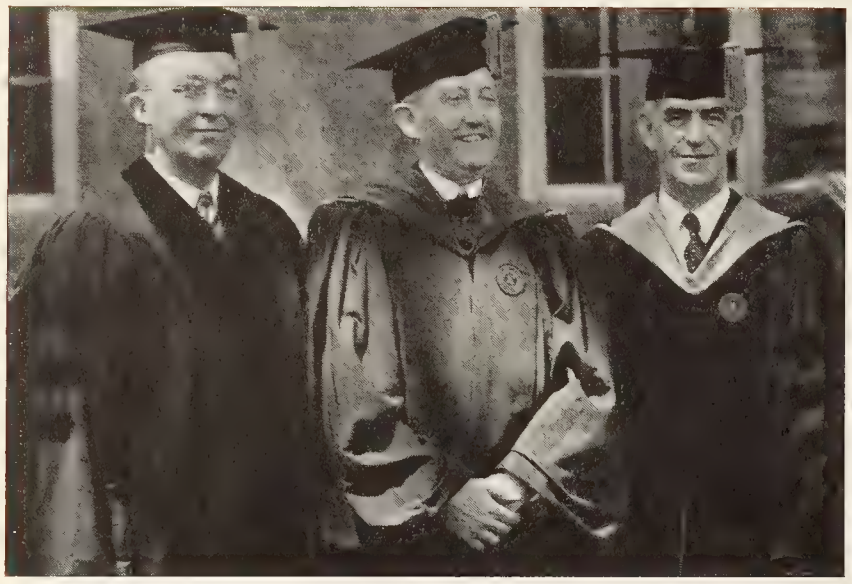
The "specially edited version," according to the management's announcement, "contains no scene which by the widest stretch of the imagination can be considered offensive to members of any race, color or creed or as a glorification of their enemies." Harold Newberger, president of the theatre company, said that he believed "a good film survives."

Business was reported to be satisfactory, with an attendance of some 600 on Monday, the opening day, at the house which seats 250. The management said there was no complaint and that threats of picketing had not materialized.

Although warned that hundreds of letters of protest would be received, "only a couple of dozen came and most of these were obviously inspired," said Mr. Newberger. The bulk of the letters were addressed to the fictitious office of "director of the theatre," several appeared to have been written on the same typewriter and many used the same arguments in the same order.

The Daily Worker, Communist newspaper, has been bitterly attacking "The Birth of a Nation" and D. W. Griffith and on June 6th protested against the present New York revival of the film.

Schenck Pleads



PLEAS of not guilty to indictments bearing on income tax returns and related matters were made Wednesday by Joseph M. Schenck and Joseph H. Moskowitz, of Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation before Judge William Bondy in Federal court in New York. Bail was set at $1,500 each, with observation by the judge that he thought there was no probability of the defendants failing to appear for trial. They are to appear July 29 for the fixing of the trial date.

Max D. Steuer appeared as attorney for Mr. Schenck, John Burns for Mr. Moskowitz, and Mathias F. Correa for the government.

Mr. Steuer was granted thirty days for motions or change of plea, a formal procedure. The defendants, it was stated, might leave the jurisdiction of the court on business errands upon consent of the court.

NEW YORK EXECUTIVES ON THE GREEN

The Eastman Kodak Team: Woody Sherin, George Blair, Dick Brady and Ted Curtis, ready for the fray.

ON Tuesday some 200 executives of the motion picture industry in the New York area adjourned to the Glen Oaks Club for a day of golf and tennis. The occasion was the 28th annual Film Daily golf tournament.

The team championship was won by MGM (Thomas Gerety, Jack Bowen, J. F. Murphy, Sydney Braunberg), with RKO and Universal the runners-up. Walter Seaton had the low net. The Quigley Publications Trophy for low gross went to Mitchell May, Jr. The low net for an exhibitor was won by William Brandt. In tennis Louis Nizer took the singles prize and Orton Hicks and Mr. Nizer won the doubles.

"DIVORCEMENT IN ABEYANCE" AS U. S. APPROVES NEGOTIATIONS FOR DECREE

Court Allows Adjournment in New York to Talk of Peace; Compromise Consent Decree Seen Possible

Settlement of the United States Government's "key" New York anti-trust suit by a consent decree, with theatre divorcement held in abeyance, impends. Prospects favor success of the negotiations.

A brand new structure of trade practice is in sight for the motion picture industry, with lawyers and executives sitting in round-table negotiation.

All hope for a settlement, even that held by the most optimistic, had faded on that Monday morning of June 3rd when the 74-year-old jurist, Henry Warren Goddard, rapped a mahogany gavel at precisely 10:31 and ordered the trial to commence. Through the next three days he listened to the sometimes vitriolic opening statements bellowed in his 13th-floor Foley Square New York courtroom by "a million dollar's worth of legal talent."

The trial proceeded through Wednesday afternoon when, unknown to but a handful on the "inside" soundings were being made behind the scenes with a view to determining the chances for and price of out-of-court settlement, the Government this time making the first soundings. When the opening hour arrived the next morning Judge Goddard was asked to adjourn the proceedings to allow further settlement explorations. Judge Goddard on Monday granted a second adjournment, and on Wednesday, a third, to Monday, all during the "armistice" encouraging settlement.

Official Approval Given

Official approval of the Government, required from the Attorney General for any formal settlement conversations or negotiations, arrived in New York late Tuesday night, from Robert Houghwout Jackson, in Washington.

No disclosure has been forthcoming from either side—nor is any expected at this time—as to the specific provisions of the "agreement in principle." It is learned, however, that the big bone of contention—the Department of Justice's insistent demands for absolute divorcement of circuit operation from production-distribution, has been shelved, to be held in abeyance for later attention.

It appears probable that the basis of the consent decree would be a trade practice program in the direction suggested last March by the Department of Commerce, establishing arbitration, disposing of the bulk block booking problem by providing for block sales of only five features, enacting pre-screenings to appease complaints against blind selling, etc., etc. The Department of Commerce recommendations contained no mention of circuit divorcement.

It is quite possible that the absolute refusal heretofore of the Department of Justice to consider any settlement without absolute divorcement—as mentioned so frequently in pre-trial months by Thurman Arnold, chief Government "trust buster," has been considerably softened because of a realization of the potential effect such severance of corporate outlets from manufacture would have on the whole structure of American business. The issue would seem to be too big to be joined to the other issues in this trial.

In some quarters in Washington there was discussion last weekend that the divorcement stumbling block could be disposed of with partial divorcement, say a 50 per cent divorcement, or a divorcement of the circuits' neighborhood houses the while they retained their downtown, key city "show windows." It is the circuit neighborhood house that has caused most of the independent exhibitor complaints, because of "special privileges" accorded them to the dissatisfaction of the competing independent.

Judge Goddard, agreeing, Wednesday morning to the third postponement, told J. Stephen Doyle, special assistant attorney general, who requested the petition, that he expected daily reports of any progress made, so that he might arrange his trial schedule in the event negotiations should be such as to warrant postponement beyond Monday.

It appears likely that with the "agreement in principle" holding the Government would arrange for trial adjournment until October, or even beyond the presidential election in November, and work with the industry's leaders and lawyers this summer on the actual document of settlement.

It is admitted in certain distribution sectors that most of the companies, if not all, have long realized that the time is at hand when they must give real concessions to complaining independent exhibitors, and that only the divorcement issue prevented their capitulation on some of the drastic changes demanded both by the Government and the independents in this and the dozens of other trust suits pending.

It is presumed that a settlement would dispose of matters relating to the Neely anti-block and blind selling bill pending in Congress, a perennial issue in Congress these dozen years.

Washington sources Wednesday expressed the belief that the New York trust trial would never be completed, basing their conclusions on the conversations now under way.

Majors Favor "Code"

Assistant Attorney General Doyle said before Judge Goddard Wednesday, "There might be an adjournment in the form of a consent decree."

While certain of the eight distributor defendants are understood to be reluctant to legally commit themselves, in writing, to a consent decree, rather favoring a stipulation for their voluntary adoption of a "fair practice code," it was learned Wednesday that the Government is unwilling to settle the suit in any other form than a court decree, this, of course, giving the U. S. the legal means of direct contempt action in the event of deviations from practices agreed upon.

Another straw in the wind pointing to settlement was seen Wednesday when it became known that the Government had plans

Rewritten Neely Bill May Have Cancellation Replacing Synopsis

Facing only the obstacle of an early adjournment of Congress, the Neely anti-block booking bill this week appeared headed for possible enactment on a basis that would be satisfactory to the proponents of the legislation and not unduly harsh upon the distributors.

Indications in Washington were that a bill making it compulsory for exhibition contracts to provide for cancellations, say, of 10-15-20 per cent, as proposed by some of the distributors, and even possibly higher, without the rigorous synopsis provisions of the Senate-approved measure and without any restrictions on sales in blocks, will be substituted for the legislation on which the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee concluded 17 days of hearings ten days ago.

The revised bill is being drafted by a subcommittee headed by Representative Clarence F. Lea (Dem., Cal.), chairman of the full committee, and consisting of Representatives Lyle Boren (Okla.), Martin J. Kennedy (N. Y.) and James P. McGranery (Pa.), Democrats, and Charles A. Wolverton (N. Y.), Pehr G. Holmes (Mass.) and Carl Hinshaw (Cal.), Republicans, to which the measure was turned over after preliminary discussion at which an effort to table it was defeated on the ground that to do so would merely serve to bring the whole fight up again next session.

If at all possible, Chairman Lea is anxious to have the House dispose finally of the measure this year, so that it need never be revived, and it is believed that if the House passes the revised measure now contemplated the Senate will accept the amended legislation and thus terminate a fight which has been continuously before Congress for the past dozen years.

RECESS HALTS ANTI-TRUST DEFENSE

quickly to shift its Department of Justice men working on the film case to national defense activity as soon as settlement negotions should become positive.

Any code or trade practice program effected would be reconsidered after a trial period for any necessary changes. Arbitration probably would be effected under Government supervision.

Majors' Attorneys Blast Back at the Government

In the actual trial days just before the adjournment, counsel for the majors, impugned motives of the prosecution and of persons in the film industry favoring litigation and legislation, and assailed "Government in private industry."

Thurman W. Arnold, head of the anti-trust division of the U. S. Department of Justice, came in for some jibes from John W. Davis, for Loew's, Inc. The latter called Mr. Arnold "this knight in shining armor" and ridiculed Mr. Arnold's contention that the Sherman Act had been dormant until he had "awakened it from its sleep."

Ralph Harris, lawyer for Twentieth Century-Fox, following Mr. Davis on the same day, assailed government charges of conspiracy among defendants to divide territories as being "as untrue, as they are naive." The evidence would reveal that there was "most vigorous and unrestricted competition" in the years during which some of the theatre chains of the defendants were obtained, he said.

Louis Frohlich, chief counsel for Columbia in the case, cited the rise of the brothers Cohn, operating Columbia, as proof that the industtry was not monopolistic. Ninety pictures, and more, in the past ten years had been distributed for independent producers, by Columbia, he added.

Suit Dismissal Sought

The companies without theatre affiliates, Columbia, United Artists, and Universal, would be forced from business, if block-booking was eliminated, Mr. Frohlich said, noting that other companies would find it easier to sell pictures.

Following Mr. Frohlich, and speaking for Universal and United Artists, Edward C. Raftery said Universal had more selective contracts with independents than with affiliated theatres and that United Artists now distributed for 13 independent producers, and exercised no limitation upon other producers who used its services except that the producer must spend a minimum of $500,000 per picture and that United Artists must approve stars and directors.

On Thursday, Judge Joseph Proskauer, Warner attorney, closed the defense's opening statements. Independent exhibitors supporting the suit would be among the chief sufferers from a Government victory, Mr. Proskauer said after citing figures to disprove a charge of monopoly.

Mr. Raftery and Judge Proskauer applied to Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard for a dismissal of the complaint against all officers and directors of their two companies. The applications had been scheduled to be decided simultaneously with a previous one made by RKO for similar relief.

Dismissal of the suit against Columbia was asked by Louis Frohlich, Columbia attorney, who claimed that the Government had precluded itself from pressing the suit by bringing the Interstate action against the majors in Texas.

Mr. Frohlich maintained that the Government should have brought up their present charges during hearings on the Interstate case, since the conspiracy was "continuous." Judge Goddard ordered Mr. Frohlich to file a formal application for dismissal.

Judge Proskauer argued that a study of the sources of stars would definitely prove that "there could not possibly be a monopoly." Of the 66 players under contract with Warners in 1931 only three are still with the company, he said, "because all the others were hired away by competitors."

In discussing distribution, he challenged the Government "to produce one word of testimony that there ever has been a denial of distribution facilities to an independent picture with box-office appeal."

As proof that the Government had overemphasized loans of talent between producers, he stated that Warners in the past four years had borrowed from other majors in only four instances. In the same four years Warners loaned 13 major players to independents, he added.

Taking up charges of monopoly in exhibition, Judge Proskauer pointed out that the number of independent theatres in the past five years had increased 34 per cent. Of the total of 19,000 theatres in the United States, Warners has 537, the five majors 2,400, circuits 4,000 and "utterly independent owners" 12,000, he continued. "Does that look like a monopoly?," he asked.

Says Patrons Profit

No conspiracy can be spelled out of the purchase and sale of product by the five producer-exhibitors, Judge Proskauer asserted. In 1939, he said, Loew's expended only 2.2 per cent of its total film payments for Warner product while the latter paid 21.3 per cent of its expenditures to Loew's.

The theatre patron has profited under the present situation in the industry, the lawyer declared. Although the average cost of producing a film rose from $261,000 in 1933 to $445,000 in 1938, the average cost to the patron was reduced from 37 cents to 30 cents, he stated.

Bertram Shipman, attorney for the Chase National Bank, briefly contended that the Bank could not have participated in a conspiracy.

Philadelphia Lawyers Receive Subpoenas

Even as the Department of Justice in New York ostensibly relaxed its prosecution of the majors in the anti-trust suit while both sides discussed a settlement, it nevertheless issued subpoenas over the weekend requiring the attendance at the trial of United States Senator George Wharton Pepper, Warner attorney in Philadelphia, and of John J. Gain, also a lawyer in that city.

Senator Pepper was requested to produce records and contracts obtained from Columbus Stamper, Philadelphia exhibitor, these pertaining to the Great Northern, Rivoli, Tioga, Tower, Roosevelt, Keystone, State and Nixon theatres.

Mr. Gain was directed to show lists of bondholders in the Carman Theatres in that city.

Seymour Krieger and Seymour Simon, of the Justice Department staff, have been in Philadelphia examining 20 exhibitors subpoenaed as Government witnesses. Testimony regarding the Philadelphia territory had been scheduled as the first to be given, in the presentation of the Government case.

AMERICANISM NOTE

The Loew's circuit, in addition to opening the show each morning with "The Star Spangled Banner", is making arrangements to close the last night show with "The Stars and Stripes Forever" as an exit march.

The circuit also announces that it has decided to name its newest theatre "Loew's American". Now under construction, the house will be opened around October 1st. Seating 2000, it is located in the east Bronx, New York, near Tremont Avenue and Westchester Avenue, in the new Parkchester development of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company.

FCC Attacks Radio Networks

Holding that there is no monopoly in radio chain broadcasting but that "many arbitrary and inequitable practices" prevail, the Federal Communications Commission Wednesday released its long delayed report on the investigation initiated in November, 1938.

The report was made public while Commissioner Thad H. Brown, who last week was renominated by President Roosevelt as a member of the FCC, was being grilled by the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee.

Networks Hit

The report held that the networks occupy a dominant position in the broadcasting field; that the interests of affiliated outlet stations have been subordinated to those of the net-work-owned stations, but that the nets which claim to be national do not in fact render nation-wide primary service.

The report held that network duplication should be held to a minimum, and that consideration should be given to the problem of retaining the advantages of chain service while eliminating its abuses.

"It is clear that the importance from a public standpoint of chain broadcasting operations is far greater than that of any individual broadcast stations," it was declared. "It would appear, therefore, that some means should be developed to insure the operation of chain broadcasting organizations in the public interest."

The elimination of arbitary and inequitable contractual arrangements would tend to subject the nets to active competition and render the independent stations more secure, it was held.

The report recommended revision of the so-called clear-channel policy so as to make greater use of the clear channels, of which all but two of the present 26 are on the Columbia and NBC nets.

The report held that no additional legislation is necessary, but that the necessary reforms can be brought about by changes in regulations.

Appearing before the Senate committee considering his nomination, Commissioner Brown was extensively questioned, primarily by Senator Charles W. Tobey (Rep., N. H.), regarding the delay in making the report, transfers of stations at prices far in excess of their physical value and other matters which have been the subject of Congressional interest.

It was indicated, however, that his nomination would be given the approval of the committee and confirmed by the Senate.

ALLIED TO TAKE ARBITRATION PLAN TO INDEPENDENTS AT NATIONAL MEET

Chicago Session, Arranged by Kirsch and Record Committee, Starts Next Week; Sales Managers Invited

Culminating weeks of advance preparations of unusual pretentiousness, conducted by Jack Kirsch, president of Allied of Illinois and a committee of unprecedented size, the national Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors on Wednesday will go into annual session, at Chicago's Morrison Hotel, at a time when the motion picture industry is faced with more grave problems than in a quarter of a century.

Recommendations which, in the opinion of Mr. Kirsch, convention chairman, will materially aid the independent exhibitor, will be made at the meeting, opening on the morning of the 19th, and running through Friday, the 21st.

Arbitration on Agenda

Provisions for arbitration for settling trade disputes arising between theatre owners and distributors will be one of the important items on the convention agenda, according to Mr. Kirsch, who guarded against any advance insights into details, except that a five man board is in mind—consisting of one distributor, one affiliated exhibitor, two independent exhibitors and one neutral.

Admittedly, solutions are sought for some of the biggest problems in years: block booking; the pending Federal "key" anti-trust prosecution of the majors and the relation thereto of a consent decree (see page 13); the economic effects of the almost depleted foreign markets on Hollywood product and prices, on rentals and the both of those on theatre operations. Problems of double features, premiums and other perennials will all be treated, of course, but these may pale in significance and importance before the other matters of the day.

The directors will meet first at 11 Wednesday morning, in preparation for the first open floor session, in the Morrison Hotel's Mural Room, Wednesday afternoon. The directors will hold additional meetings at the same hour on Thursday and Friday, and, again, each of those afternoons will be turned over to delegates.

Banquet Friday

The annual banquet will conclude the convention Friday evening, in the Morrison's Terrace Room. It is understood that James J. Walker, former New York Mayor, now a lawyer, will preside.

Representatives of 2,000 theatres, all independent, are expected from 21 states, according to Mr. Kirsch, who predicted that "this year's convention bids fair to be the most successful national convention in the history of Allied States."

Allied board members were in meeting midweek at the national headquarters of General Counsel Myers, in Washington, discussing policy and procedure.

Invitations for attendance have been sent by Mr. Kirsch to distribution sales managers. Several sales managers attending last year's national Allied convention, in Minneapolis, walked out of the meeting, charging Allied with unfairness because of their complete rejection of the proposed motion picture industry trade practice program.

Pointing to the war situation, to motion picture matters before Congress, the Department of Justice, the Department of Commerce and those in the courts, to any product curtailment by Hollywood, to box office reactions and other business, as items of open and committee discussion, Pete J. Wood, Allied head of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, at Columbus, this week urged independents to attend the convention, because, "This will be the most timely meeting in the history of the movies."

Record Committee In Charge

Composed of presidents and officers of the various Allied units throughout the country, the Chicago convention committee, headed by Mr. Kirsch, includes W. L. Ainsworth, Wisconsin; Ray Branch, Michigan; Roy Harrold, Indiana; Frank Hornig, Maryland; Frank Lydon, Massachusetts; Richard D. Marks, Jr., West Virginia; Lee W. Newberry, New Jersey; Charles H. Olive, Washington, D. C.; Seth D. Perkins, California, Arizona and Nevada; M. A. Rosenberg, western Pennsylvania; Sidney E. Samuelson, eastern Pennsylvania; Al Schumann, Connecticut; W. A. Steffes, Minnesota; Orville Von Gulker, Oklahoma, and Martin G. Smith and P. J. Wood, Ohio.

H. A. Cole, of Texas, national president of Allied, assisted by Mr. Myers and Nathan Yamins, of Fall River, Mass., are also on the general committee.

Activity on the part of manufacturers of theatrical supplies in negotiating for display space is reported by the convention exhibits committee, comprising Harry Reckas, chairman; Harold Gollos, Jerome Marks, Paul Meltzer and B. Charuhas. Among the companies which have signed for exhibits are: Adler Sign, American Seating, American Ticket, American Vending, Arcus Ticket, Brenkert Light and Projector, Burch Manufacturing, Confection Cabinet, Consolidated Book Publishers, Cretor's Popcorn Machine, De Vry, Holmes Projectors, Heywood-Wakefield, Ideal Seating, International Seat, Kroehler Manufacturing, Motiograph Projectors, National Carbon, National Program and Printing, National Screen Service, and its two subsidiaries, National Screen Accessories, and Advertising Accessories, National Theatre Supply, RCA and Universal Theatre Premiums.

Despite "Mud-Slinging", Allied Induced "Reforms" Says Myers

Virtually on the eve of the National Allied States Association annual convention Abram F. Myers, its general counsel, assailed "outbursts" during the recent Neely Bill hearings in Washington, against Allied; called "more timely, and in better taste" the proposal of National Theatres' chief, Spyros Skouras, for a "moral merger" to face the industry's common enemies; and claimed that "for two years the industry has had the opportunity to clean house but that opportunity has twice been muffed by attempts to cut across lots instead of turning square corners." The Myers blast was issued, by bulletin, from his Washington headquarters.

"No amount of mud-slinging," said Mr. Myers, who fought for the Neely Bill at the recent House hearings, "can deprive Allied of the credit for bringing about the reforms which so many have talked about, and about which only Allied has taken effective action."

While the majors have progressed towards a completely monopolized industry and while it was a blessing that the Government called a halt when it did, and in the manner it did, Mr. Myers thinks, according to the bulletin, that "it remains to be seen whether the vision exists to seize the present opportunity to put the affairs of the industry on a legal and equitable basis.

"This will call for the best efforts of the really big men in the industry," he added; "it cannot be left to minor employees, and second string lawyers, whose approach to a solution has not risen above attacks on Allied leaders."

Kuykendall Pledges Exhibitor Support to Defense Program

Exhibitors will support President Roosevelt's national defense program, whole-heartedly, Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, told the semi-annual convention of the Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina, at Myrtle Beach, South Carolina, held Sunday through Tuesday.

Mr. Kuykendall spoke on Monday attacking the flood of lawsuits in the industry, saying that arbitration could settle many of them.

He also stressed the importance of entertainment and relaxation, at the present time; theatres, he noted, fulfilled their duty.

Other speakers were Claude Lee, public relations representative of Paramount Pictures: Lyle M. Wilson, of Roanoke Rapids; and George Dembow, of National Screen Service.

There were no elections, the convention not being annual.

A technical forum in which exhibitors participated featured talks by Ray Rowe, of Burtaw, N. C.; Harry Buchanan, of Hendersonville, N. C.; William Conn, of Gastonia, N. C.; George Pharr, of Lancaster, S. C.; Fuller Sams, of Statesville, N. C., and Henry Berry, of Hartsville, S. C., president of the organization.

Virginia MPTO Summer Meeting on June 24th

The annual mid-summer convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Virginia, an independent organization, will be held this year at the Chamberlin Hotel, Old Point Comfort.

William F. Crockett, president, and operator of the Bayne Theatre, Virginia Beach, will preside, assisted by Sydney J. Gates, of the Roxy Theatre, Norfolk, general chairman; and H. Graham Barbee, Jr., publicity chairman.

For those arriving on Saturday, there will be various entertainment forms; on Sunday, there will be a special fishing trip; on Monday, day of the convention, there will be business sessions, with a banquet and dance at night.

SKOURAS, SEARS PRESS HIGHER ADMISSION DRIVE

Circuit Head Cites Figures to Show Only 140 Houses Charge Over 40 Cents

Higher admissions, cooperation between rival film industry factions, optimism among industry executives and advertising men, continuance of pre-release engagements of better pictures, and production of good pictures by Hollywood, were emphasized as primary needs of the industry today by Spyros Skouras, head of National Theatres, who spoke as guest of honor at the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers' biweekly luncheon Thursday, June 6th, in New York. His plea for higher admission scales was supported this week in a statement to the press by Gradwell Sears, Warner Brothers general sales manager.

Urges 50 Cents Admission

Theatres in key cities should charge at least 50 cents admission, Mr. Skouras declared. "About 2,500 theatres in the country charged over 50 cents in 1932-33, and only 140 charge more than 40 cents minimum now," he contended.

"If we can increase 25 per cent of these admissions, we will probably make up our losses," Mr. Skouras asserted, adding, "No industry today sells its merchandise as cheaply as the motion picture.

"It will help everyone," he continued. "It will help make the motion picture industry self-sustaining in this country alone."

To the advertising executives present he said: "You men are the spark of the imagination of this industry."

In this connection, he recalled early days in St. Louis. Three theatres spent $12,000 to $15,000 each week on advertising, he said, but they received little mention in the newspapers. Today, he said, the newspapers in that city, and in others, devote much of their space to motion picture news, a job done by publicity men of the film industry. He cited the newspaper stories on "Gone With the Wind," noting the editorial space its opening received "even in the New York Times."

Mr. Skouras called newspaper critics generally "fair and honest" and said the producers wanted to be guided by "honest criticism."

Cites Double Features

Pre-releases should be encouraged, Mr. Skouras said, for they bring public interest, which could not be purchased, except with great advertising expenditure. These, however, should only be used for important pictures, he specified.

"We are facing a difficult situation," he continued. "We must be united. We must not fight each other. Care is necessary to sell a picture. We cannot afford to have expensive pictures flop. It probably will destroy us.

"Our difficulties cannot be overcome by reduction of budgets, of salaries, by elimination of employees. They can only be overcome by unity, and an understanding of showmanship.

The circuit head cited double pictures as one of the present injurious policies, but absolved theatre operators of responsibility for them. He accused the studios of not supplying sufficient meritorious product and said exhibitors had been forced to seek artificial stimulants such as bargain shows.

The distribution offices in New York have not been doing their share, Mr. Skouras asserted. He excepted, however, their work in the motion pictures' greatest year drive, which he praised as highly effective. He regretted the lethargic trend which he said he had observed since then.

Mr. Skouras was introduced by Charles E. McCarthy, director of advertising and publicity for Twentieth Century Fox. A previous speaker was Charles Coburn, actor, who recommended training schools for actors, for the motion picture industry. Leon Bamberger, president of the A. M. P. A., presided.

Sears Agrees on Admissions

Mr. Sears, in his statement this week, said: "I think Mr. Skouras is absolutely right in his analysis of the admission price situation. There have got to be reasonably higher prices to protect the producer, the distributor and the exhibitor in the critical situation we are all facing. If the highest quality in production is to be kept up, there must be sufficient revenue to pay the bills and insure a fair profit. There is no doubt in my mind that the public wants high-grade entertainment and is going to insist on it. Nor do I doubt for a moment that the public is willing to pay a fair price for it.

Also, Mr. Sears agreed with Mr. Skouras that "a close-knit and practical program of cooperation is urgently needed because the industry is facing the most formidable crisis in its history. It is a matter of bread and butter for us to solve the problems that confront us; and this applies to everybody engaged in every branch of the industry, from production chiefs in Hollywood to the theatre manager who has been driven to give-aways and all sorts of undesirable stunts.

"The suggestion of a committee representing all sections of the industry, to meet regularly to consider our common problems, is in my judgment a sound one, and I hope it will be carried out.

"There is only one passage in Mr. Skouras's speech, as reported in the trade press, to which I cannot whole-heartedly subscribe. He is quoted as saying: 'We are no longer fighting each other, nor is there any longer such a thing as competition, but a question of establishing solidarity or perishing.'

"I can't agree that there is no longer such a thing as competition. There is and there must be. But it ought to be intelligent, far-sighted, and I might say, generous competition. Our industry is one big family. We can and should try to set the pace for each other in the things that build up the industry—good pictures, effective distribution, attractive presentation, etc. But, as a family, there are matters on which we should stand firmly together in the interests of all concerned."

IATSE BACKS BROWNE, BIOFF; ASKS 30-HOUR WEEK; WEBER LEAVES AFM

Formal Resolution Commends "Honesty and Integrity" of Studio Labor Leader; Group Insurance Plan Rejected

William Bioff, Hollywood studio head now serving an 18-year-old sentence of six months for pandering, and also under an income tax indictment in Los Angeles, was to receive in his bleak Chicago city jail cell this week, a flourishing scroll recording a resolution "reaffirming his honesty and integrity," as passed Thursday, June 6th, without opposition or applause, by nearly 1,000 delegates of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes and Moving Picture Operators, in convention at Louisville.

George E. Browne, IATSE president, who had earlier in the convention week highly praised Bioff, was unanimously re-elected, along with his entire administration, including Nick Cirella, vice president, holder of a police record.

The convention voted for a 30-hour week throughout the industry, and for complete IATSE unionization of the entire 16mm field, regardless of the branch: theatrical, non-theatrical, commercial, etc., and that all pictures produced by IATSE members be projected only by IATSE members.

Introduced by Hollywood Group

The Bioff resolution of honesty was introduced by IATSE District No. 2, comprising the delegation from the Hollywood sector over which Bioff presides, and where he obtained wage increases for 35,000 workers from the producers. The resolution, one of the longest introduced at the convention, said that "Brother Bioff has been unmercifully persecuted by unscrupulous interests determined to exert every means to wreck our International."

The IATSE Administration received one setback from the delegates when they refused to vote for compulsory group life insurance, as proposed by Matthew Woll, a leader of the American Federation of Labor, with which the IATSE is affiliated. The plan would have enrolled the entire 43,000 IATSE members for $500 each at 65 cents a week.

A resolution gave IATSE leaders unlimited power to oust Communists and other subversives from the organization, after Mr. Browne earlier had admitted from the rostrum that subversive elements had filtered into the membership.

Other resolutions were aimed to tighten IATSE's position in film lines in which it already operates, and to further extend its position in other lines, moves of one form or another affecting production, distribution and exhibition.

Delegates attending the 35th biennial convention took action on 50 resolutions. By vote of the delegates, the following were referred to the incoming general executive board (Numbers are the order of appearance in the minutes):

1. That the constitution be revised regarding studio sound technicians' charters, with a full and direct charter issued to sound technicians being construed as granting jurisdiction to members of such locals over all persons engaged in or doing work of any nature in the transmission of sound and carrier frequencies and recording, with locals exercising jurisdiction over all soundmen—public address operators, film loaders, play-back operators, newsreel soundmen, commercial and industrial soundmen.

2. That support be given sound men by the IATSE in their negotiations for agreements as to wages, hours and working conditions.

4. That the constitution be amended so that a full and direct charter be issued to all persons engaged as directors of photography, or cameramen of all kinds.

5. That the constitution be amended to cover a full and direct charter for motion picture costumers, granting them jurisdiction over all persons handling costumes and accessories where pictures are made, except in theatres and places of amusement.

6. A charter classification for motion picture grips.

7. A charter classification for allied craftsmen.

8. A charter classification for studio set electricians.

9. A charter classification for studio laborers and utility workers.

10. A charter classification for make-up artists, hair-stylists and make-up women.

11. Urging a clear and definite decision of interpretation of Section Ten, paragraph B of by-laws to eliminate "confusion" in California over operators and auditorium sound units.

12. Authorizing the president and incoming general executive board to place full moral and economic support of the IATSE behind the Canadian membership to combat further inroads by dual organizations, and for the IATSE as a whole to resist attacks on Canadian locals.

13. A charter classification of treasurers and ticket sellers from "B" to full representation as IATSE members.

NICK AND WESTON INDICTED AGAIN

John P. "Big" Nick, deposed head of the St. Louis projectionists' Local 143, and Clyde Weston, the union's ousted business agent, were indicted Tuesday in that city, by a federal grand jury, for violating the Federal Anti-Racketeering Act, passed by Congress in 1934, and invoked for the first time in St. Louis. The Act provides a maximum penalty of 10 years' imprisonment and a $10,000 fine. The indictment's allegations are virtually the same as those in the state's indictment of Nick and Weston, charging them with extorting $6,500 from St. Louis theatre owners in 1937. Nick has been freed of the state charges; Weston's case is still pending. The alleged payment is the basis of some of the 12 counts in the indictment, which also adds that Nick and Weston sabotaged motion picture equipment; that they used control of the union to coerce exhibitors into payment; and that they threatened exhibitors with injury.

Nick surrendered Wednesday and furnished $15,000 bond. Weston was still to place bond.

Musicians' Head Quits Presidency After 40 Years

Forty years as president of the American Federation of Musicians were concluded on Monday in Indianapolis with the resignation of Joseph N. Weber, who told delegates his physical condition would not permit him to accept the position, "even for one more year."

The declaration was made on the first day of the organization's 45th annual convention, Monday through Friday. Mr. Weber remarked of his resignation: "No statement of my whole life has been so hard to make—I have grown up with the AFM." On Wednesday Mr. Weber was voted a permanent specially created post of "technical adviser" at $20,000 a year.

Petrillo Favored

James C. Petrillo, head of the Chicago federation and stormy petrel of musicians' labor politics for many years, appeared likely to succeed Mr. Weber at the elections on Thursday, as this issue went to press. Leaders of the federation, before and during the convention, had indicated a "draft-Petrillo" movement.

Highlight of the convention speeches was that by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, who assailed the entrance of Italy into the European War, and who supported material aid by America to the Allies.

The convention unanimously resolved allegiance to the United States Government and opposition to subversive movements. It pledged $5,000 to the American Red Cross.

Late Wednesday the convention indorsed the Neely anti-block booking bill "or any substitute." Pleas were made from the floor to continue lobbying efforts in Washington to maintain WPA music projects.

A resolution calling on AFM members to discontinue making all phonograph recordings and electrical transcriptions within 90 days of convention adjournment, until an understanding is reached with recording companies, record distributors and music box operators was referred to the executive committee.

Ninety resolutions were presented up to Wednesday. Elections were to be held Friday.

It was reported on the opening day that 728 locals, in the United States and Canada, were represented.

John H. Goll is president and Abraham Hammerschlag business agent of Indianapolis Local.

IATSE Affiliation Up

The Federation's affiliation with the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, revision of which had been urged in many musicians' locals before the convention, was expected to be discussed and acted upon.

The Philadelphia situation, in which Local 77 is in the sixth month of a strike against the Warner circuit, and in which national Federation aid has been asked, was also on the agenda.

While Mr. Petrillo, president of the Chicago local and a member of the Federation's executive board, was mentioned up to mid-week as probable successor to Mr. Weber, one other name was discussed by delegates before the elections, that of Fred Birnbach, secretary of the Federation.

IATSE AIMS TO TIGHTEN CONTROL

ment fund for IATSE members incapacitated by age or infirmity.

26. Constitutional amendment providing charter classification of studio mechanics.

27. Constitutional amendment making Paragraph 3 read: distributor agrees, before filling any vacancy in shipping, inspection or poster department, to notify the union. 28. That any employee engaged in making shipments be classified as a shipper.

29. That the general executive board continue to have complete jurisdiction over a "special department," which is still in the experimental stage, and be empowered to make adjustments in structure of Class "B" locals and of IATSE at large.

36. That the general executive board be instructed to formulate new rules governing production contracts, insuring union labor conditions to IATSE members working under contract.

Referred to General Office

Resolutions referred to the IATSE General Office included:

37. That District No. 9 take some action in efforts of Local No. 372, Rapid City, S. D., to negotiate contracts or agreements of any nature with Black Hills Amusement Company, since efforts of the IATSE international representative have met with no success so far.

38. A petition to the president to grant all film exchange employees locals an "A" status.

40. On record in support of a 30-hour week throughout the motion picture industry and that general executive board aid locals in securing 30-hour week in all agreements.

46. That IATSE international officers collaborate with officials of Film Technicians Local No. 683 in negotiating a new contract with producers based on conditions of security, thus making effective many years work spent in building up wage scales.

Resolutions Rejected

Resolutions rejected by the delegates included:

43. That the IATSE call upon President Roosevelt, the State Department and Congress to keep U. S. clear of any war involvements, and specifically to prevent by all means the granting of any public or private funds to any warring power.

44. Amendment to Section 16 of Article VII of the Constitution taking away "emergency" powers of the IATSE president and restoring home rule to locals, presented by Local No. 683.

45. Repeal of assessment power in constitution and substituting referendum before assessment.

"WAR BARS WAGE RISE"—PRODUCERS

The quickening European War tempo makes it impossible for producers to sign contracts which increase costs, representatives of Hollywood producers informed those of the Screen Writers Guild, on Monday, in Hollywood. The Guild has been seeking a collective bargaining agreement. Present at the conference were: for the producers, E. J. Mannix, MGM; Jack L. Warner, Warner Brothers; J. R. McDonough, RKO; Cliff Work, Universal; for the Guild, Sheridan Gibney, Charles Brackett, Dore Schary, Mary McCall, Jr., and Leonard Janofsky, Guild attorney.

42. That a per capita tax to IATSE be reduced 25 per cent.

Resolutions passed include:

3. Reaffirming a belief in the honesty and integrity of William Bioff.

14, 15, 20, 21, 25, 30, 48. Indorsing the present administration and work of IATSE president George E. Browne.

18. That all pictures made by IATSE members be projected by IA members.

19. Action toward protection of jurisdiction of the IATSE regarding AFL Circus, Carnival, Fairs and Rodeo International Union, chartered February 19, 1940.

24. A request for help in defeating the Neely Bill (S. 280-H.R. 145) passage in the present Congress (76th session).

31. Enlargement of the IATSE emblem on pictures made by IATSE members to screen size.

32. That the General Executive Board be empowered to promulgate such by-laws, rules and regulations as in its judgment may be deemed proper and expedient, to fine and expel from the IATSE or to otherwise discipline members who engage in subversive activities to the detriment of the IATSE or its affiliates.

33. Condemning the use by the Department of Justice of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act against labor unions and urging all such pending prosecutions be dropped.

34, 39. Offering the U. S. Government the strength and resources of the IATSE to promote a defense program.

47. Rise for minute of silence for the Rev. Father Michael McGuire, St. Viators College, Kankakee, Ill., deceased.

49. Rise for minute of silence for James Lemke, past president, deceased.

50. Thanks to Louisville Locals, Nos. 17 and 163, Mayor, speakers and manager of hotel for efforts making convention "one of outstanding in IA's history."

AGVA Licenses Talent Agents in Five Cities

Even as its national officers were attempting to secure a closed shop contract with the country's largest circuits, the disputed points being under arbitration this week and last in New York, the American Guild of Variety Artists was also licensing talent agencies in various cities as part of its country-wide drive to unionize all sectors of the "vaudeville-variety" field.

The New York office last week announced it had licensed 132 local talent agencies in five cities. They are: 17 agencies, and five associates, in New York; 64 agents in Chicago; 26 agents, and nine associates, in Los Angeles; and five agents and one associate, in Montreal. It was also said by the New York office that applications from eight agents and four associates in New York, were being considered.

The licenses provide for limitation of agents' commissions to 10 per cent, and for their agreement not to service non-AGVA members.

TMAT Denied International Charter by AFL Council

The American Federation of Labor executive council last week denied the application of the Theatrical Managers, Agents, and Treasurers' Union for an international charter and directed that it organize only managers and agents in Greater New York.

George E. Browne, president of the International Alliance of Theatrical Employees, admitted the treasurers' part of the organization into the alliance several months ago, and opposed the TMAT request for a greater jurisdiction and their claim that his union infringed their province.

The TMAT on Monday, in New York, re-elected its national officers, headed by president Saul Abraham. They also approved two constitutional amendments, one to allow deletion of all references in the union's literature to the treasurers, and the other to eliminate the "motion picture division" which for months has also desired to join the IATSE.

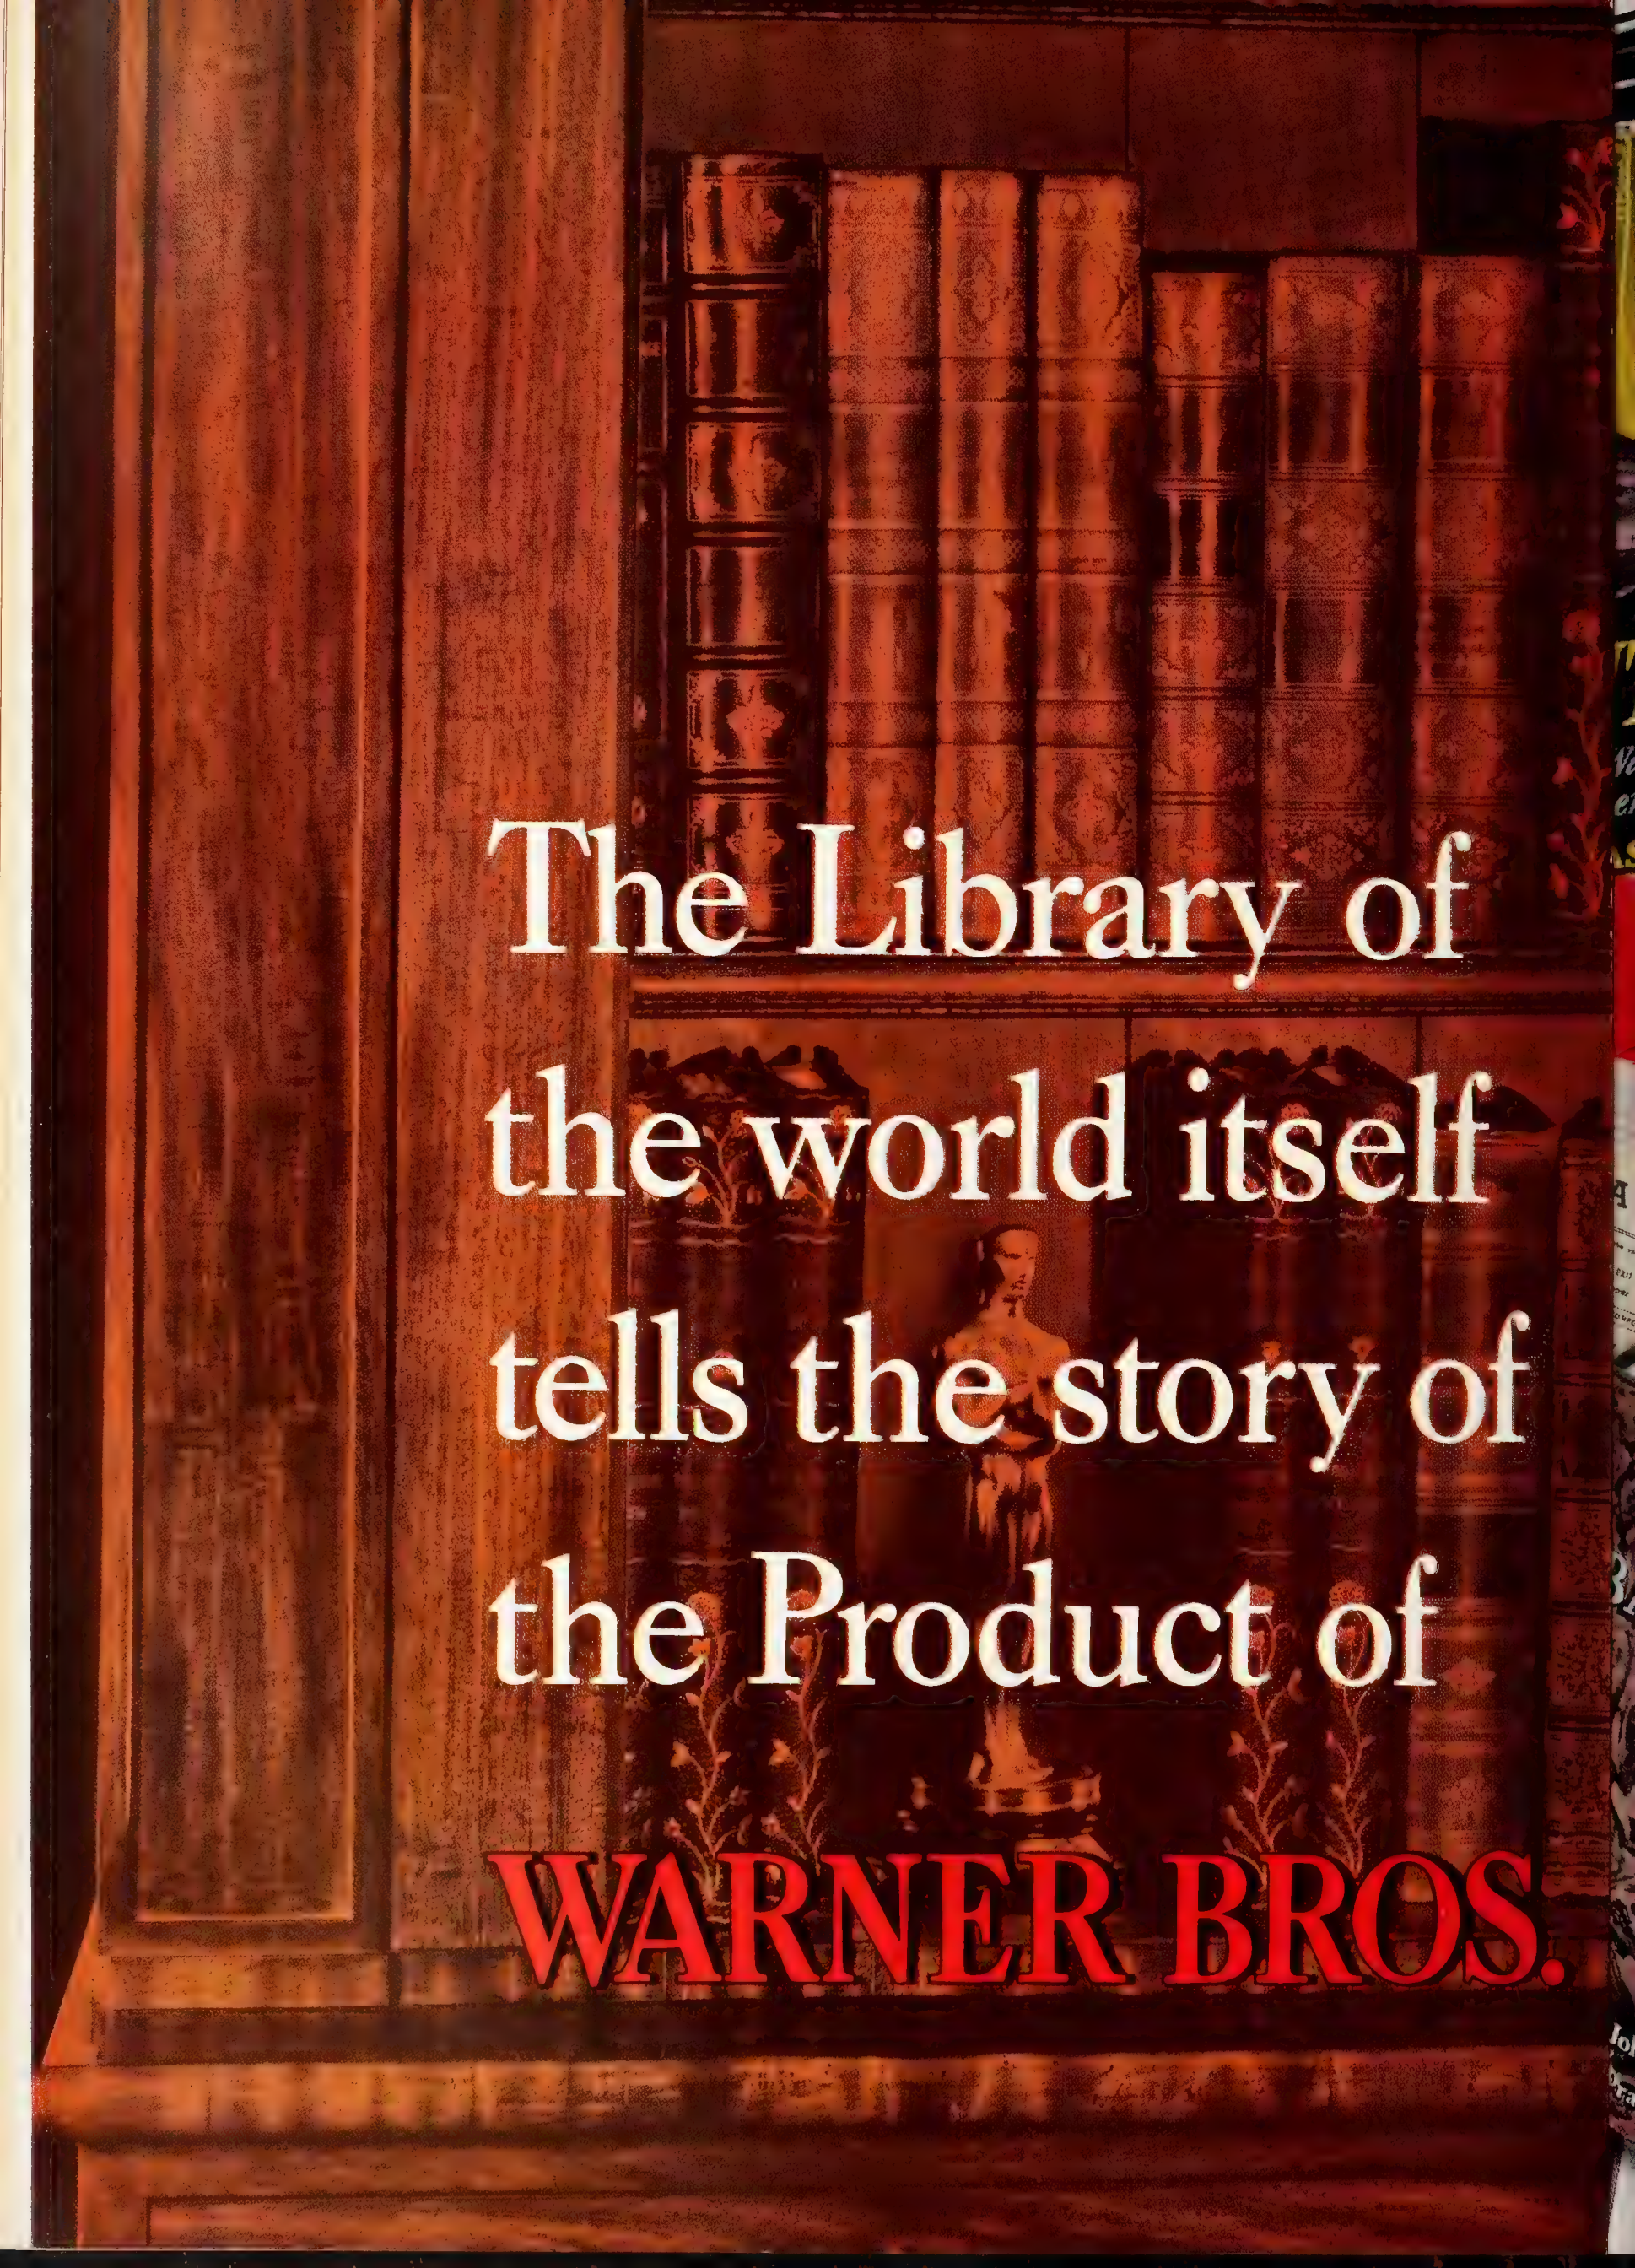
At the IATSE convention in Louisville, last week, managers of the TMAT motion picture division were refused a charter.

Candy Counter Unions

Unionization of candy counter employees is being sought by the Retail Clerks' Union, of the American Federation of Labor, in Chicago. According to Max Caldwell, head of the city's local, contracts have been submitted to larger circuits, demanding an $18.50 minimum for men, and a $16.50 minimum for women.

New York's projectionist's local, 306, and the Independent Theatre Owners Association, of that city, are expected to confer on wages and working conditions, following a request for such a conference, by the ITOA, last Wednesday, to the local's executive board. The projectionists are now operating under a contract with the ITOA, obtained several months ago.

All film companies and theatres in the New York area have been requested by the Photo Employees Union, Local 21314, to give their photographic work to unionized reproduction firms. Listed as recognized by the union are photo work firms such as Apeda Studios, and Arrow Photo Service. The union has asked other film industry unions for cooperation.



Projectionists in Scranton, Pennsylvania, have been occupied in recent weeks by a dispute between the regular American Federation of Labor projectionists' union and a C.I.O. organization, members of which, the AFL union claims, have been hired by some local exhibitors who refused to renew AFL contracts. The matter is before the local National Labor Relations Board office.

WARNERS, COLUMBIA AND REPUBLIC WIND UP 1940 CONVENTION SEASON

Patriotic Theme Stressed at Warner Pittsburgh Session; Columbia Sets Five Dates for Summer Releases

This week the 1940 convention season was completed and sales policies set with Warner Brothers holding a convention in Chicago, the second of two regionals; Columbia meeting for the second session in Atlantic City and Republic having its fourth and final regional convention in New York.

The Warner Brothers product for the 1940-41 season, totalling 48 features and two specials, was announced at the first session held in Pittsburgh last weekend. The story appeared in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, June 8th on page 17.

The Columbia product announcement of 44 features, 16 westerns and four serials also was made last week and appeared on page 15 of the HERALD.

Republic's 1940-41 list of product with 58 features was published on page 37 of the issue of June 1st.

Warner Brothers Meet In Pittsburgh, Chicago

Following the three-day meeting in Pittsburgh this week, Warner Brothers will conclude the convention season in Chicago June 17th to 19th. The Chicago convention will be attended by the southern and western sales staffs. Representatives from the east and Canada were at the Pittsburgh meeting which opened Monday.

Maj. Albert Warner, vice-president and treasurer of Warner Brothers, at the opening of the convention said, "There is no place in the organization of Warner Brothers or of any other patriotic American business for Nazis, Fascists, Communists, fellow-travelers or followers of any other 'ism.' Loyalty to Americanisms and the American flag comes first."

Last week Harry M. Warner, president, denounced subversive elements in the United States in an address to 6,000 studio workers and others in California. See page 32.

In an address to the convention—Joseph Hummel, foreign sales executive, said Harry Warner had cabled the Brazilian Government offering to turn over the entire receipts in that country of "Confessions of a Nazi Spy" to the Red Cross if Brazil would consent to the showing of the film which has been held up by the censor for many months.

Gradwell L. Sears, general sales manager, outlined the new season's product to the 200 convention delegates, including the sales force, theatre men and executives from the home office. Special screenings of "The Sea Hawk" and "All This and Heaven Too" were held.

Through special booking arrangements made by Harry Seed, local exchange manager for Warners four downtown Pittsburgh theatres played Warner films.

Other speakers on Monday were Joseph Bernhard, president and general manager of Warner Brothers Circuit Management Corporation; Leonard Schlesinger, assistant general manager of Warner Brothers Theatres, and Samuel Schneider, home office executive.

Telephone Conference Held

On Tuesday S. Charles Einfeld, director of advertising and publicity—and Mort Blumenstock, publicity and advertising manager outlined administration and publicity plans for the 1940-41 product. Norman Moray spoke on the new short subject program.

Mort Blumenstock, Charles Einfeld, Major Albert Warner, Gradwell Sears and Carl Leserman conclude a session at the Warner regional convention in Pittsburgh.

By means of a special transcontinental telephone hook-up H. M. Warner; Jack L. Warner, vice-president in charge of production and Hal B. Wallis, executive producer, addressed the convention delegates.

Carl Leserman, assistant to Mr. Sears, announced that Ed Schnitzer, eastern district manager, won third prize in the Sears Drive. Awards were made to Mr. Schnitzer and the following branch managers in his district; J. Roger Mahan, New Haven; Norman Ayers, Boston; Charles Rich, Buffalo (just appointed Cleveland manager): Sam Lefkowitz, New York and Paul Krumenacker, Albany.

The delegates were greeted by editorials in the daily newspapers, a page advertisement bought and signed by independent exhibitors, banners and "Brother Orchid" cutouts and stickers. Promotional angles were directed by Joe Feldman and James Totman of the local office, in collaboration with Dick Hyland of the New York office.

The Pittsburgh Press in an editorial Monday titled "The Screen Helps America" commended Warners Brothers for their work in promoting Americanism and exposing fifth column groups.

UNUSUAL RIGHTS SET ON "STORM"

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in purchasing the serial rights to Phyllis Bottome's "The Mortal Storm" also has obtained the right to supply the serialization free to a number of metropolitan newspapers in the United States and Canada, which had settled terms for purchasing the story. According to the company it marks the first time that a story set for purchase by newspapers has been turned over to them without charge. Another unique feature of the deal, it is said, is that newspapers will be permitted to set direct from the text of the novel. MGM's film version, starring James Stewart and Margaret Sullavan, will be nationally released this week.

87% GAIN IN INCOME REPORTED BY UNIVERSAL, HALF YEAR NET $1,381,002

Profit for Second Quarter Announced at $920,370 by Cowdin; Reserve Fund Increased to $8,000 a Week

Continuing its progress of the last two years, Universal Pictures Company, Inc. earned a net profit of $920,370 in the second quarter ended April 27, 1940, before Federal income taxes and special amortization reserve, J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of the board, announced Friday, June 7th, in New York. This compares with a net profit, similarly computed, of $581,587 in the corresponding quarter of last year and a net loss of $199,487 in the second quarter two years ago.

$641,424 Gain for Half Year

For the first half of the fiscal year, net earnings on the same basis amounted to $1,381,002, a gain of $641,424 or 86.73 per cent, compared with $739,578 in the first half of last year, Mr. Cowdin said. In the corresponding period two years ago, the company had a net loss of $588,285.

With reference to the special amortization reserve of $5,000 a week, which was announced when the first quarter results were published, Mr. Cowdin said in a report to stockholders:

"Since then developments in world markets have further complicated and restricted our foreign business and have added to the uncertainties of the business for the immediate future. As a result the management has increased the amount of this reserve to $8,000 a week retroactive to the start of the fiscal year. Further changes in these reserves will be made from time to time as the necessity appears."

After provision for this reserve of $8,000 a week, amounting for the 26 weeks to $208,000, net earnings for the first six months, before Federal income taxes were $1,173,002.

Operating with lowered rates of exchange, the dollar volume of Universal's foreign business during the first six months of the fiscal year was slightly ahead of the corresponding period a year ago, Mr. Cowdin said, adding that in terms of foreign currencies the increase was much more substantial.

9,700 Contracts

"It is important to note the strides which the company has made in the domestic field," Mr. Cowdin continued. "Through the policy of the sales organization, together with continued improvement in the Universal's product, the company has been able to close over 9,700 contracts in the domestic market for 1939-1940 product as compared with 8,400 contracts secured for 1938-1939 product."

Some 18 months ago, Mr. Cowdin said, the management undertook to re-arrange its affairs and operations to enable the company to cope with conditions that might result from war. As a result, he said, "we now have every expectation that starting September 1st of this year, the company will receive sufficient income from its domestic operations to continue to improve its position."

The company's financial position further improved during the period, there having been a net reduction of $1,381,745 in bank loans and an increase of $1,163,257 in net working capital. During the current quarter, the reduction of bank loans has continued until as of June 1st they aggregated $1,050,000.

The studio, Mr. Cowdin said, is well advanced on production, the last picture of the 1939-1940 period being scheduled to start within 10 days. "It is confidently expected to complete the program within the budget alloted to it and on time, and plans to have one-third of the new season's product completed when deliveries are scheduled to start," it was said.

KUYKENDALL ASKS AID OF INDUSTRY

At a meeting in New York on Wednesday, June 5th, Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, asked representatives of every phase of the motion picture industry to offer wholehearted assistance and cooperation to the government in its plans for national defense.

In a message sent to some 9,000 theatres Mr. Kuykendall said, ". . . in order that we may do our part in keeping the public informed with governmental plans and activities along this line, I earnestly urge that every newsreel containing such information be given a full and complete showing at each performance, with the object of showing our determination that we be kept out of the terrible conflict that is now going on."

Foreign Market Cited

Discussing the war's effect on the industry, Mr. Cowdin said: "We must recognize that the American motion picture business has been most severely affected and is still facing very serious problems. The business, in all its elements, ranks as the third or fourth largest industry in America. Enjoying a worldwide market reaching practically every country of the world, the operations of the industry have been based by necessity on serving these markets and on the income derived therefrom.

"The management of your company has full confidence in the ability of the industry generally to meet these problems successfully but it appreciates that this can only be done through the active cooperation of all the elements of the business whether they be management, securityholders, employees, labor, distributors, stars, producers, directors, writers, exhibitors or the motion picture public."

"Developments in the world markets have further complicated and restricted our foreign business and have added to the uncertainties of the business for the immediate future. As a result the management has deemed it prudent to increase the amount of the above-mentioned reserve to $8,000 per week, retroactive to the start of the fiscal year. Further changes in these reserves will be made from time to time as the necessity appears."

Foreign Dollar Volume Advances

In further explanation of foreign operations, Mr. Cowdin said that operating with lowered rates of exchange, the dollar volume of Universal's foreign business during the first six months of the current fiscal year was slightly ahead of the corresponding period a year ago, amounting to $4,610,850, as compared with $4,584,855, an increase of .56 percent, and an increase of 22.61 percent over the corresponding period two years ago. In terms of foreign currencies such business of course showed a much more substantial increase over the previous years," adding:

"The expansion of the business in Great Britain, achieved by our distributor General Film Distributors, Ltd., has contributed substantially to the increase in our foreign operations throughout the period. The market in Great Britain is second only to that in the United States and constitutes roughly one-half of our normal foreign business. The growth of British revenues is shown in the following three-year comparison:

Six months ended
April 27, 1940	£572,896
April 28, 1939	£423,038
April 30, 1938	£298,875

"The loss in dollars to Universal from the decline in exchange rates is well illustrated in the British market. Had it been possible to convert pounds into dollars this year at the rate prevailing a year ago, the dollar volume of the company's British business would have been $349,850 greater than was actually the case.

"Our Canadian distributors, Empire Universal Films, Ltd., have shown a substantial increase in volume of business done during the period as compared to last year. Such increase has been more than sufficient to offset the depreciation in the Canadian exchange rate.

Domestic Gross Compared

"While our foreign business under present conditions is of course of great importance and concern to us, it is equally important to note the strides which the company has made in the the domestic field, which may possibly be called upon to supply all the dollars needed by the company for its operations. The following table of gross domestic business done during the first half of this year and for each of the last two years, indicates the extent of this improvement:

Six months ended
April 27, 1940	$8,903,565
April 28, 1939	$7,562,390
April 30, 1938	$5,899,861

"Under the provisions of its charter the company is required to retire 1,500 shares of its first preferred stock during the current calendar year. 750 shares of this stock have already been cancelled and retired and the remaining 750 shares are in the treasury of the company, available for the sinking fund payment due December 31, 1940.

"The management has continued to consider plans for corporate simplication, to which reference was made in the annual report. Current world conditions including the unsettlement of security markets, has of course, complicated this problem. The management, however, expects to continue its efforts in this direction," said Mr. Cowdin.

WARNER ACTS AGAINST STUDIO 'SUBVERSIVES'

Company President Urges the Deportation of Nazi and Communist Sympathizers

Harry M. Warner, president of Warner Brothers, last week told a mass meeting of some 6,000 employes and guests assembled in the Crafts building of the Burbank studio that members of "bunds, and Communist, Fascist, Nazi and other un-American organizations" would be dismissed from the company.

The meeting, largest ever held by a single studio, loudly cheered the statement and applauded wildly Mr. Warner's further comment:

"If any person likes those reprehensible foreign doctrines so well, let him go back there. If he hasn't the money, tell him to come in and see me. I would rather use my money to send those persons back than to send 20 ambulances over there for Red Cross work as I did today."

FBI Head Introduced

Declaring that subversive interests were at work in the film industry and that such activities were going on in the Warners' plant, Mr. Warner appealed to the workers to turn over information on "borers from within" to Arthur Cornelius, Jr., local head of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, whom he introduced.

Disclosing the reason for the meeting, to which employes were summoned by him in personal letters, Mr. Warner said:

"We are face to face with a common problem. This is not a problem affecting only money.

"It is a problem affecting life itself. Not only our lives, but our children's lives, and our children's children's lives.

"We cannot be blinded to the dangers confronting us as the people in European countries were before the war.

"There is a steady undercurrent of un-American activity going on in this country, in Hollywood, in our own studio, seeking to deliver all of us to foreign interests.

"I have found in America, in my travels, among the high and the low a feeling that no nation would invade us, no nation would dare attack us. In the interests of our company, I have traveled many times to Europe and found the same attitude existed there before the war.

Cites European Experiences

"Several years ago, the Prime Minister of Denmark told me there was no danger of invasion from his neighbor. I attempted to tell him there was danger from within, not only from without. In Oslo, I found the same thing. In France and in London, it was repeated.

"And history has now proved that a new method of war has come into being. The danger also confronts America.

"The danger comes from within, as well as from without."

Citing reports of Nazi activity in the United States, Mr. Warner continued:

"I would like to see a law passed that all members of un-American organizations be deported, and all citizens of the United States favoring an enemy nation have their citizenship revoked and then be deported to the land to which they are native or of which they are an employe."

After reciting his experiences during the evacuation of children from London last year, Mr. Warner, who left England three days before the war broke out, said:

"I received many threatening and insulting letters upon my return from England last year when I said at a press conference:

"'That which we fought the British to obtain, we will have to fight to retain.'

"That still holds.

"Don't misunderstand me. I don't want war! I hate it as no other man!

"But—at my age—I would not hesitate to join up and fight to my utmost if our good neighbors, Mexico or Canada, were invaded by that devil.

"Juarez" and Shorts Cited

"You may have been wondering why 'Juarez' was made by our studio. We didn't make any money on that picture. We lost on it.

"You may have been wondering why Hal Wallis and Paul Muni made that trip to Mexico to get the story approved.

"We knew that Communism, Nazism and Fascism were making great moves in this part of the world.

"We made that picture to show the people down in Mexico that some one had given his life that Mexico could be a democratic country.

"We didn't stop that project because we would lose money on it. We didn't consider the financial angle on that picture or on our historical shorts.

"It is a well known fact in the industry that we lose from $25,000 to $30,000 on each of those patriotic shorts.

"But we tell our producers and our investors that that is the cheapest investment they can allow us to make, even if we do lose money. If we don't succeed in combating this foreign influence, it doesn't matter what we have—it won't be worth anything, anyway."

Persecutions Recalled

Reading reports of Nazi organization work carried on in Los Angeles, Mr. Warner declared emphatically:

"I would rather be killed and see my children buried than to live under conditions those people are trying to create.

"My father and mother lived under such a system; that is the reason they came over here. They left everything in Europe and we started at the bottom over here.

"Every night my brothers and I went on our knees and thanked God my father brought us here."

Recalling the persecutions of minorities abroad, the Warner company head asserted:

"When the first persecution took place in Germany against a people of a certain faith, the mistake was that the world did not rise against any people who attack any minority because they have a faith.

"If that had happened, I would not stand here thinking about the future protection of our children.

"How many of you were asked of what faith you were when you were employed here?

Quotes from Propaganda

At this point Mr. Warner read from a translation of a pamphlet printed some years ago in Germany which attacked Christianity, as well as all other religions, and advocated paganism.

"The world knew of this thing at that time, and did not rise against the oppressors. Now we must all stand together, Catholic, Jew and Protestant.

"We are confronted with a highly organized machine for spreading subversive and alien doctrines. It saddens me to think that otherwise sane thinking Americans are following these leaders.

"It is happening right here in this studio. In the cars on the lot—in my own car—I have found literature on that subject.

"Somebody knew who placed it in the cars and allowed them to do it. It is important to the American government that this be stopped.

"I want you all to turn in the perpetrators of this un-American activity to the government. And here is the man you should tell—Arthur Cornelius, Jr., head of the local Federal Bureau of Investigation."

Mr. Cornelius did not speak and Mr. Warner continued:

"I pray with all my heart that Christianity survives.

"The most beautiful words in the world are those of Christ's:

"'Peace on earth, good will to all men.'

"He didn't say good will to men of a certain faith. He said all men."

On the dais with Mr. Warner were Col. John F. Curry, commander of Hamilton Field; Los Angeles City Attorney Ray Chesebro, and Bryan Foy.

Robert Schless, Warner European manager, spoke briefly, and Olive Ponitz, opera singer, opened and closed the session, held in the studio, with "The Star Spangled Banner" and "God Bless America."

Invited guests included Ralph Wheelwright of M-G-M; Jock Lawrence of Samuel Goldwyn studios; Cliff Work of Universal; Walter Wanger; Fred Beetson, executive vice-president of the Association of Motion Picture Producers; Thornton Sargent and other officers of Fox West Coast; Sol Lesser; Jack Chertok of M-G-M; Anthony Veiller of Paramount; Al Goetz; Mr. and Mrs. Leo Goldsmith of Douglas Aircraft and Jesse Lasky.

Others present were Donald Crisp, Charles Ruggles, Ann Sheridan, George Brent, William Cagney, James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Anthony Quinn, Jeffrey Lynn, Jane Wyman, Ronald Reagan, Wayne Morris and Herbert Marshall.

"THE SCREEN HELPS AMERICA"

An editorial from the Pittsburgh Press of last Monday said:

"Officials of the Warner Brothers motion picture circuit are meeting in Pittsburgh today in convention, and we therefore take this opportunity to commend them on the work they have been doing for the last three years to promote Americanism and expose influences which have recently come to be recognized under the name of the 'fifth column.'

"The motion picture screen can be a great educator because its appeal is universal. It is particularly important because it reaches, better even than the spoken or written word, those who may be newcomers to America ana who may read or speak little English."

The editorial enumerated many Warner pictures of contemporary bearing, including "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," "The Life of Emile Zola," "Juarez," the patriotic shorts and "The Secret Army," now in production.

POOR SEASON SEEN FOR SUMMER STOCK

Few Broadway Plays Adaptable to the Summer Trade; Week to Week Bookings

The doldrums experienced by the Broadway stage this past season are expected to react in kind on the summer stock circuit, thus making for less competition from that angle to motion picture theatres. The stock companies have few plums to pick for even some of the better legitimate shows presented in the winter and spring are not considered good material for the summer hinterland trade.

At the close of the Broadway season, although several plays will continue through the summer, only 15 shows had run over 100 performances or more, compared to 22 at last season's close.

Having Considerable Difficulty

The stock companies are said to be experiencing considerable difficulty in lining up their July and August schedules and most are said to be going ahead only with two or three weeks of repertory set. On the other hand, such stars as Ethel Barrymore, Jane Cowl and Ina Claire have plays set that probably will serve them for the entire summer, making one-week stands. Miss Barrymore's vehicle is "The School for Scandal"; Miss Cowl's "Captain Brassbound's Conversion" and Miss Claire's "Biography."

Sylvia Field, Michael Whalen, Millard Mitchell and Viola Roache are taking the lead roles at Denver's Elitch's Gardens, where Arnold Guertler will have his usual 10-week season. George Somnes will direct and his wife, Helen Bonfils, owner of the Denver Post, will be a member of the company.

The Amherst, Mass., Theatre has received a subsidy from Amherst College and Harold Kennedy has been engaged as manager. He has Edith Van Cleve slated to direct five weeks, and has scheduled Sylvia Sidney and Luther Adler in "No Time for Comedy" and Donn Cook and John Beal in "Outward Bound" and possibly Ezra Stone in "What a Life." This is one of the theatres Miss Cowl will play.

John Cornell and John Haggott have taken over the Westport Country Playhouse, as they did last season, from its owner Lawrence Langner. They will alternate productions with the McCarter Theatre at Princeton, which will be under the management of Warren Munsell, Jr., whose father is general manager for the Theatre Guild. The Princeton theatre will open with Miss Cowl and will include on its schedule a production of Paul Robeson in "Emperor Jones."

Ruth Gordon has signified her intention of playing a number of Summer theatres in "Here Today."

Proceeds to Charity

Gertrude Lawrence will open the season at Dennis, Mass., in "Private Lives," giving her proceeds for the week to the Allied Relief Fund. Paul Robeson will be seen in "Emperor Jones" in a number of the Summer theatres. "The Weak Link" and "Separate Rooms" are finding a place on several schedules. One of the theatres still to make an announcement is the late Alexander Dean's former stand, at Cohasset, Mass., which probably will be operated by Mrs. Dean. Joe E. Brown will be seen in several places in "Elmer the Great" and Sinclair Lewis will return to playing his "Angela Is 22" in several localities, including Maplewood. Sheila Barrett will make her non-musical stage debut at Clinton, Conn., in a new play, "Some Days You Don't," by Charles Schnee, which Alexander Kirkland hopes to bring to Broadway in the Fall. Erich Von Stroheim has signified his desire to appear in Summer theatres, and Bela Blau is interested in his appearing in "Margin for Error."

Louis Calhern, Haila Stoddard, Florence McGee and Natalie Schafer will be members of the permanent cast at the Buck's County Theatre, New Hope, Pa. This house, operated this season by Theron Bamberger and Kenyon Nicholson, will open with Calhern and Peggy Wood in "The Royal Family" and Lenore Ulrich will appear there in one starring show during the season. Miss Wood will also be seen in a revival of "The Texas Nightingale." "Yes, My Darling Daughter" is another of their planned bills.

"Amphitryon 38" Scheduled

One of the more ambitious of the soon-to-be-made announcements is Walter Hartwig's production of "Amphitryon 38." Hartwig's theatre is at Ogunquit, Me. Cheryl Crawford and John J. Wildberg have taken over the Maplewood Theatre, at Maplewood, N. J., and will open their season with Helen Menken in "Enter Madame."

Melville Burke will again direct at Skowhegan, Me., where the Owen Davises and Arthur Byrons are regular summer residents. One of the more important of their endeavors this Summer will be the production of "The Norths Meet Murder," dramatized by Davis from the New Yorker Magazine stories of Richard Lockridge, drama critic of the The Sun. This is a property of William Harris, Jr., for Broadway in the Fall. "Life With Father" received its tryout last Summer at the Skowhegan Theatre. (The only other Summer theatre tryout in the history of Summer theatres to have been a hit on Broadway was "The Pursuit of Happiness," which Lawrence Langner presented at his Westport Theatre before Rowland Stebbins did it on Broadway.)

Day Tuttle is taking a sabbatical leave from his accustomed post as co-manager of the Mt. Kisco Playhouse, leaving the work to his colleague, Richard Skinner.

The Equity Class A Summer theatres that have signified their intention of reopening this Summer are: Richard Berger's Municipal Opera Company in St. Louis, Malcolm Atterbury's Tamarack Players at Lake Pleasant, N. Y.; Justus J. Addiss' Chapel Playhouse Players at Guilford, Conn.; William Miles' Berkshire Playhouse Stockbridge, Mass.; Virginia Franke and Walter Davis' Skaneateles Summer Theatre, Skaneateles, N. Y.; Watson Barratt and Victor Payne-Jennings' Summer Stock at Spring Lake, N. J.; John Huntington and Mariam Batista's Cambridge Summer Theatre (Brattle Hall), Cambridge, Mass.; Lydia B. Noble's Montowese Playhouse, Branford, Conn.; Joseph Cortere's Memphis Open Air Co., Memphis; Robert Elwyn's Woodstock Players, Woodstock, N. Y.; Frederick Walker's Mountain Playhouse, Jennerstown, Pa.

More Houses Reopening

Also, Martin Meyers and David Walper's Montclair Theatre, Montclair, N. J.; Henry Levin and Martin Manulis' Bass Rocks Theatre, Gloucester, Mass.; Morgan Farley's Nantucket Players, Nantucket, Mass.; Alexander Kirkland's Summer theatre, Clinton, Conn.; Guy Palmerton's Lake Whalom Playhouse, Fitchburg, Mass.; Charles Coburn's Mohawk Drama Festival, Schenectady, N. Y.; Walter Armitage, who has taken over the County Theatre, Suffern, N. Y.; Alan Grey Holmes' Town Hall Playhouse, Westboro, Mass.; Richard Aldrich's Cape Playhouse, Dennis, Mass.; Philip Carr, Charles Atkin and Kate Holt's New England Playhouse, Ridgefield, Conn.; Julian Olney's Ridgefield Theatre Players, White Plains, N. Y.; Hope Newcomb's Marblehead Summer Co., Marblehead, Mass.

Also, Mrs. Alice J. Tyler's Theatre-by-the-Sea, Matunuck, R. I.; The Oak Bluff's Summer Co., Martha Vineyard, Mass.; Maryverne Jones' Starlight Theatre, Pawling, N. Y.; Royal Stout's Nuangola Players, Nuangola, Pa.; Mary Ann Dentler's Bandbox Theatre, Suffield, Conn.; T. C. Upham's Cape Theatre, Cape May, N. J.; Robert T. Schnitzer's Robin Hood Theatre, Arden, Del.; Nancy Rogers' Casino Theatre, Newport, R. I.; Bela Blau's Deertrees Theatre, Harrison, Me.; and Edward Goodnow and Francis Grover Cleveland's Barnstormers, Tamworth, N. H. In addition to these there are those previously mentioned theatres at Elitch's Gardens, Denver; Skowhegan, Me.; the Buck's County Playhouse at New Hope, Pa.; Westport, Conn.; Princeton, N. J., and Maplewood, N. J.

CLAUSE COVERS WAR—EQUITY

While Summer theatre and Broadway managers are still attempting to insert war clauses in actors' contracts, Actors Equity holds to the theory that the "Act of God or the Public Enemy" clause in its constitution covers any possible American intervention or further effect of a European conflict on the theatre.

If the war has a resultant bad effect on Broadway, managers may appeal to Equity for permission to close shows without liability for salaries.

UA to Distribute Latin Productions

United Artists has set two distribution deals for a total of five Spanish-language productions to be released in the 1940-41 season. The company has acquired the Latin American rights to "Escandalo," which was produced in Santiago, Chile, by Jorge Delano and Emilio Taulis in cooperation with Alfonso Merlet.

Directed by Mr. Delano and featuring several popular native stars, "Escandalo," has been acclaimed in private previews as the best picture ever made in Chile, according to an announcement by United Artists. Its initial public showing will take place in Santiago at a first run theatre within the next few weeks.

The second deal is for a series of four Spanish language pictures to be made by Latin American Productions, Inc., of which Geza P. Polaty is president and supervising producer. The productions will be filmed either in Cuba or Argentina, depending on the background of the stories. Under the terms of the contract, the first picture will be delivered by November 15, 1940.

Opera in Cincinnati

Theatres in Cincinnati again this year will experience outdoor competition from the Summer season of opera at the Cincinnati Zoological Gardens, which opens June 30th and continues through August 10th. It is a civic enterprise usually heavily patronized.

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

(The notes on this page were mailed from London May 30th.)

Formby Comedy

John Paddy Carstairs, one of the younger band of British directors, and responsible for the Ministry of Information's "Security Shorts," is to have directorial charge of the next George Formby comedy to be produced at Ealing Studios under the title "Spare a Copper."

Michael Balcon, producer at Ealing, has given Carstairs responsibility for directing Britain's Number One Box Office Star.

Formby's role in the new film will be that of a "war reserve policeman" (an emergency police force, members of which are civilians in ordinary life), who has ambitions, and achieves them, getting in the flying squad.

The setting of the film is post-Munich and pre-War.

Carstairs has been given a commission in the R. A. F. Volunteer Reserve and will probably join the Colors on the completion of the film.

Meanwhile at Ealing Studios British comedian Tommy Trinder is at work on "Sailors Three," which is being directed by Walter Forde.

The Admiralty has collaborated on this film with the loan of Naval equipment, including searchlights, cordite cases, submarine detectors and Naval telephones.

Two in Work

Most active production and distribution company in this country at the moment is Grand National, two of whose units are in full production swing at Worton Hall and Twickenham.

At the former studio director Jack Raymond is making "You Will Remember," in which Robert Morley plays the part of the famous composer Leslie Stuart, among whose works were "Lily of Laguna" and "Little Dolly Daydream," both of which have been recorded for the film by the London Symphony Orchestra.

With Morley in the cast is the distinguished actor-playwright Emlyn Williams, whose role is that of Stuart's life-long friend Bob Slater. Throughout the film the story of Stuart's life with its alternating spurts of poverty and riches, triumph and despair, is told. Through its vicissitudinous range Slater remains the boy of the Manchester streets, sweep, hawker and shoeblack, always loyal friend of the composer.

Dorothy Hyson in the film plays the part of young Ellaline Terriss, wife of actor Seymour Hicks.

Meanwhile at Twickenham the Jack Hulbert-Cicely Courtneidge comedy team are at work on the screen version of the musical show "Under Your Hat," which Maurice Elvey is directing.

The film follows closely the shape and narrative of the stage show which was, it is claimed, written with one eye on ultimate production as a film.

Lew Stone's band provides the musical setting.

"DOCTOR" ILL, FILM IS HALTED

Production has been halted temporarily on "Freedom Radio" which Mario Zampi is producing at Sound City, London, for Columbia release. Clive Brook, playing the role of Hitler's throat specialist, was unable to appear on schedule because of an attack of laryngitis.

Anthony Asquith is directing the film in which Derek Farr, new juvenile, said to be destined for stardom, is prominently cast.

Sales Aid

War conditions have not deterred a leading advertising agency, Erwin, Wasey & Company, from launching a film section. This section which is headed by Frances Phillips, erstwhile of Paramount and Warner Bros., intends to develop the use of the film as a sales aid for the commodities covered by the agency.

Aim of Miss Phillips is that her advertising films shall always have entertainment value.

RKO and MGM

A halt has been called once again to the British production activities of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, who have closed down their Denham offices and suspended production of their next film.

Ben Goetz, it is understood, is leaving shortly for New York.

Further plans to extend their British production program have been developed by RKO-Radio and announced here by the company's British chief, Ralph Hanbury. It is intended to make one film at least in which Dannielle Darrieux will star, and to produce another, or more than one, with Michele Morgan.

One or more of the "Saint" series will, in all probability, be produced here as well.

William Sistrom, it is reported, will return to this country to finalise studio and personnel arrangements, and will have with him as collaborator Gregor Rabinovitch.

This production program will be made on an extensive budget commensurate with RKO-Radio Hollywood production.

British National has already started work on "Crooks Tour," the Naughton Wayne-Basil Radford comedy drama, at the recently acquired Rock Studios at Elstree, to follow on "Old Mother Riley" and William Greenwood's "Love on the Dole."

GABRIEL PASCAL is still in Devon shooting exterior sequences on Shaw's "Major Barbara."

ALEXANDER KORDA is currently engaged in casting a final and critical eye over the Somlo production "Old Bill and Son," which was made at Denham for G. F. D. release.

HERBERT MASON is completing work at Teddington on the Brock Williams story "Fingers."

Executives Arrive in New York from London

Ben Goetz, head of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production in England, and Robert T. Kane, in charge of Twentieth Century-Fox-British production; Joseph Friedman, Columbia's British sales manager; Jeffrey Bernerd of Grand National Films of London, and their wives arrived in New York Sunday on the President Roosevelt.

Sees Production Possible

Mr. Goetz, who left for Hollywood Tuesday night by plane, pointed out on his arrival that while no long range plans for European operations could be made at this time, some production in England could be continued depending upon the future course of the war, however, and the willingness of Hollywood talent and technicians to assist.

He intimated that production could be carried on in England now, but that the scarcity of talent made casting difficult, and technicians, too, are at a premium. If Hollywood could fill these needs Mr. Goetz said he would return to England confident that he could reesume production. He completed "Busman's Honeymoon" with Robert Montgomery recently and brought a print with him.

Returning to London

Mr. Friedman attended the Columbia sales convention in Atlantic City. He plans to return to London but his family will remain in this country. He reported film and theatre business in London as "good."

Mr. Bernerd is here to negotiate for British distribution rights with American producers and independent distributors.

Arriving Monday on the Manhattan were Boris Jesenof, former branch manager for Columbia in Brussels, and Sydney Bruckner, traveling auditor for the company; Andre Heymann, head of French Cinema Center, and Ramon Novarro. Mr. Heymann, while abroad, acquired 10 French features and four short subjects for distribution here.

BRITISH INDUSTRY GIRDS TO FACE WAR CARRIED TO THE HOME FRONT

Exhibitors, Renters Protest New Purchase Tax; Prepare Emergency Measure to Meet Air Bombing and Invasion

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

No more unready than any other section of the community to shoulder burdens imposed in the interests of national survival, the British industry has shown itself toeing the mark during the last few anxious days. Burdens of taxation, of emergency regulations and rationing have been accepted here with a good grace, though in some cases not without some criticism.

Purchase Tax Brings Problem

Most considerable of the new loads laid on its already heavily burdened shoulders is the Purchase Tax, which it was unexpectedly announced last week, would be applied to the film industry. There is no question here of unwillingness to accept this tax. The urgency of the situation has prevented any resolute objection. Discussion, however, goes on in regard to the machinery by which the duty, which has many complexities, might be applied. An effort is currently being made to achieve a joint trade policy and formulate a scheme which the Customs and Exise Department might accept.

During the last week, with the menace of war coming ever nearer to these shores strict rationing of paper supplies has been set up. It will have obvious repercussions on the trade. Local authorities too, under Home Office pressure, have been insisting on the complete carrying out of the emergency safety regulations not so distantly imposed on picture houses. Limitation of petrol supplies is stimulating further pooling of the resources and activities of the transport companies. This year's CEA Conference at Bournemouth, the trade's big annual festival has been cancelled.

The CEA, anticipating possible interruption of communication by highway and railroad in the event of violent bombing or invasion, this week announced plans for regional dumps for current release prints. The KRS is cooperating in their establishment.

In spite of the threat of invasion David Rose on Wednesday announced the continuance of Paramount's British program with production of A. J. Cronin's "Hatters Castle" to start at once.

Industry Case Presented

The CEA and the KRS, presenting their case to the Government this week, argued that the industry already was bearing the theatre tax imposed during the last war as an emergency. They outlined the administrative complications arising from existing duties and said they would be unable to pass the tax on to the public as readily as dealers in other commodities might. It was pointed out that south and east coast houses had lost 75 per cent of their normal revenue in recent weeks and that the tax probably would diminish patronage still more with consequent decreased revenue to the Treasury.

An estimate of what the Purchase Tax would yield in these mercurial days is difficult. Prewar trade averages would assess the taxable rental at roughly £16,000,000. The percentage which the Government intended to ask has not been decided but is expected to stand at between ten percent and fifteen percent. This would hand over to the State another £1,600,000 to £2,500,000 per annum, over and above the revenue already derived from the theatre tax.

In turn—and provided of course that patrons were willing to pay the extra money—there would be an increase in the money taken by the Government in theatre tax. It would presumably be necessary to increase admission charges. This by reason of the rising scale of the theatre tax would still further raise the cost of the patron's ticket with the exchequer profiting more than doubly. Other and less optimistic students of the trade scene foresee a drop in attendances with an equivalent drop in the Government's share of the booty.

No lack of public spirit or patriotic feeling can be considered responsible for the industry's discontent. This has mustered mainly against the application of a tax on the public, to those catering for it, an application which would seem likely to defeat its own ends. Trade conferences between the CEA and the KRS have been arranged and between the CEA and other industry sections. It is hoped that a joint trade policy will be achieved and a practicable solution found for a complex problem.

Not least interesting suggestion which has been mooted and which is likely to find a front place in exhibitor councils is that the tax be applied to the picture theatre patron's ticket in the form of a government stamp based on whatever percentage the Customs and Excise Department determines. Such a formula would remove the need for increasing admissions at present—though it is understood they will have to be increased later,—would obliterate any ideas in the public mind that the industry was benefiting and would obviate the necessity for complex machinery of collection. Not improbably such a plan would have joint trade support. Whether it would satisfy the Treasury remains to be seen.

Paper Supply Restricted

A recent order on the control of paper supplies is bound to affect both renters and exhibitors. Quite apart from the strict rationing of paper which has had a restrictive effect upon trade publicity, the new order prohibits the use of posters beyond a certain size—2400 square inches—restricts their display to the place of actual sale—in the industry's case the picture house itself, and bars the senders of circulars from so doing if similar circulars have not been issued during the previous twelve months.

There is a further regulation which will have the effect of limiting publicity sheets to lighter paper. These regulations will naturally restrict the use of throwaways and handbills, of the renters' puffs and envelope stuffers, limit the use of posters as publicity and of the monthly programs exhibitors here issue as a general rule.

In some districts, notably Manchester, picture houses have been asked and have agreed to lend their premises for the temporary shelter of victims of air raids.

Meanwhile, though it has taken a rather rearguard place, the minor battle against "Gone With the Wind" continues. The first screening of the film outside Metro's London theatres found the CEA flying squad rushed to Manchester, the scene of battle, organizing a local campaign against the Gaiety Theatre which had taken the film on Metro's terms and charged the 4s 6d and 3s 6d stipulated. The campaign was fierce and relentless.

Public Appeal Staged

Councillor Harry Mears and W. R. Fuller, president and secretary of the CEA respectively travelled north, contacted the local branches and helped give the public campaign weight. With them went Frank Tilley, public relations officer, erstwhile director of publicity for Radio Pictures and one of the trade's most experienced and tenacious journalists. He it was who called the local press together, introduced Mears and Fuller, "sold" them the story of the battle which found its way to the major newspages of every daily evening and Sunday journal in the Lancashire area.

Five hundred sixteen sheet posters blazed from the Manchester boardings enjoining the public not to pay more than their normal prices to see any film in the district. Three hundred trailers told the local patronage from the screens of every local house but those on the Associated British chain and a few others, that if they waited a little while they would see "Wind" in the district under normal circumstances and at normal prices. The local press, whilst it readily realized the news values of the campaign, refused to take any advertisements on the grounds that they were controversial.

Likelihood that a compromise will be achieved after a joint meeting between the Metro organization and the CEA leaders has been intensified by the war situation which has emptied picture houses lamentably.

If any severe bombing starts, as start it inevitably will, it is certain that picture houses will be closed immediately, to be opened only when and at such places as circumstances permit. Talk has been current in informed circles of restricted hours of opening being ordained if the battlefield spreads to Britain. But nothing but guesswork is capable of forecasting the shape of things to come.

Film Labor Groups Exempted

Eight different classes of film employees have been added to the list of reserved occupations, workers who are exempt from military duty. They include film directors, first assistants and producers in both feature and documentary production, art directors, scenarists and makeup artists.

The Rock studios which until recently have been under Ministry of Food Control, have been released and taken over by British National Release.

BRITISH TO PUSH FILM PROPAGANDA

The appointment of Neville Kearney to direct the Film Department of the British Council is regarded as an indication that the use of films to carry British propaganda to foreign countries will be intensified. The British Council is a semi-official body, Government sponsored and to some extent Government controlled, one of whose prime objectives is British propaganda abroad.

Mr. Kearney resigned recently from his post of secretary of the British Film Production Association.

STANDARD TICKET FOR NOVA SCOTIA HOUSES

Exhibitors Fear Confusion from New Universal Combined Tax Slip and Admission Price

A new headache for motion picture exhibitors in Nova Scotia, where the consumption of aspirins by theatremen is of record volume, is a combination, standard, single admission and tax ticket originated by the censor board chairman, C. H. Bennett, at St. John.

This eliminates all use of the individual theatre ticket and the provincial amusement tax ticket, which have been in use for a quarter century. The combination ticket is said to be without parallel anywhere.

All Amusements Affected

The only marking on it is by the censor board, and there is nothing to prevent a person from buying one of the tickets at one amusement place, and using it at another. Theatres, skating rinks, tent shows, fairs, dance halls, are all affected by the new order which makes use of the censor board's own ticket compulsory, and provides a penalty for non-observance of a special order-in-council passed unexpectedly to introduce the ticket.

It is the view of Mr. Bennett that the doormen should be able to pick out their own serial numbers, but exhibitors claim there will be confusion and needless delay in rush periods in the theatres when doormen cannot examine tickets minutely. The ticket was ordered into use without taking the exhibitors into consultation.

Would End Local Levies

The plan for the reorganization of the Canadian public financing system, last week before that country's House of Commons in Ottawa, and proposed in the report of the Royal Commission on Dominion-Provincial Relations, provides for the elimination of "nuisance taxes," such as the gasoline, amusement, and sales levies, by provincial and municipal governments. However, under the plan, these governments could still levy on real estate, and could still obtain fees from licensing.

Newsreel Business Up

The intensified European war is bringing increased business in Canada, the newsreels have reported. The newsreels report that although their product is being censored, it is being delivered to Canadian theatres without appreciable delay.

Canadian newsreel cameramen were able, recently, to obtain a comprehensive picture of that country's round-up of fifth columnists, despite the suddenness of the raids and the police vigilance.

Famous Players Canadian Retires Bonds

Famous Players Canadian Corporation is retiring $350,000 of its outstanding bonds, one year before allotted time, the original date having been June 1, 1941. Redemption is underway.

The circuit has also retired in full, a block of serial bonds, amounting to $350,000, which matured this month.

Bonds of the corporation this week were being quoted on the open market at a par value of approximately $100. The company is to pay a dividend of 25 cents on common shares at the end of the month, this being for the second quarter of 1940.

Marcus Loew Theatres, Ltd., operating the Toronto Loew's, has declared a $3.50 dividend on its seven per cent cumulative preferred shares, applicable to the six months ending December 31, 1938. The company is thus one year in arrears, an improvement over two years ago, when it was considerably behind in payments.

Nathanson CBC Official

N. L. Nathanson, president of the Famous Players Canadian Corporation, has been made vice-chairman of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, succeeding General V. W. Odlum, who has been appointed to command the Second Division of the Canadian Active Service Force. Mr. Nathanson is already a member of the broadcasting corporation's board of governors, now being on his second three year term.

Women Applaud Singles

Members of The Imperial Order of the Daughters of the British Empire, in annual convention at St. John, New Brunswick, recorded opposition to double features, and called "the ideal program" one in which there is "one feature picture, with accompanying shorts, and a newsreel."

The women also reiterated their approval of British pictures, and said they would continue to direct sponsorship of such pictures, in cooperation with exhibitors. The new censor bureau in Quebec, to select pictures for children, was praised.

Tourist Bureau Started By Canadian Pioneers

The Canadian Picture Pioneers, affiliated with Picture Pioneers, of which Jack Cohn, Columbia vice-president and chairman of the board, is head, has arranged a tourist and travel information bureau for those in the film industry and relatives according to Syd Taube, who was in New York this week on business.

The Canadian branch of Picture Pioneers was organized about four months ago and held its first meeting last month. It has 103 life members. Clair Hague is chairman and Ray Lewis is secretary-treasurer.

Smith as Toastmaster

Andy Smith, RKO sales manager, will be toastmaster, in Buffalo, on June 24, evening, at the testimonial banquet to Charles Boasberg and Elmer Lux. The local Variety Club is sponsoring the banquet. Mr. Boasberg was promoted from RKO branch managership in Buffalo, to the company's eastern central district managership; and Elmer Lux succeeded Mr. Boasberg in the Buffalo post.

CONTRACT CAUTION ADVISED BY WOOD

Because the loss of foreign revenue may result in higher film rentals in this country, P. J. Wood, secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, at Columbus, has cautioned independent exhibitors against signing contracts for new season product until after the national Allied convention in Chicago June 19-21, when a study of the situation is to be made.

"With the economic turmoil facing the nation due to the foreign situation, no independent exhibitor should sign any contracts for 1940-41 until he knows definitely what turn the war in Europe will take," Mr. Wood says in his current bulletin.

Variety Opens Oklahoma Tent; Dallas Charities

With ceremonies attended by numerous local theatremen, a charter was presented to the Oklahoma City Variety Club Tent 22 Monday, June 3rd, in Oklahoma City. Nation club officials presented the charter to the club, the newest in the organization. James G. Balmer, national dough guy, inducted 120 members of the tent in the presence of the guests and John Harris, national chief barker, Pittsburgh.

L. C. Griffith, president of the Griffith Amusement Company, is the local tent's Chief Barker. Morris Loewenstein, of the Majestic Theatre, Oklahoma City, and Brownie Akers, division manager of the Griffith circuit, were in charge of arrangements for the ceremonies.

In South Dallas, with Chief Barker R. J. O'Donnell of the Dallas Variety Club tent in charge of ground breaking, construction of a swimming pool for the children of the section was begun.

The pool will be 40 by 105 feet, will have a bath house and other equipment, and will cost $20,000. The Dallas park board, which furnished the ground in Sullivan Park, and which will furnish the water, praised the local club, which has pledged itself to spend $75,000 this year in charitable activities.

$1,100,000 Spent For Plays

In 1937-38, Hollywood producers paid $700,000 for 12 stage plays for filming, average cost, $58,333 apiece; in 1938-39, they paid $760,000 for 14 plays, averaging $54,285; in the 1939-40 season, just closing, they bought 18 plays for $1,100,000, averaging $61,111, about $7,000 more per play, on the average, then the year before. Sidney Fleisher, director of film negotiations for the Dramatists Guild, in New York, this week disclosed the play-buying activities of Hollywood for 1939-40.

Frequently a Hollywood producer announces the purchase of a stage success for a huge sum; sometimes that sum is a publicity figure. Under its agreement with the producers, the Dramatists Guild agrees to allow the producer to issue his own "purchase figure," but the actual figures are reported each year by the Guild, which, however, does not enumerate individual purchase prices.

Broadcast Music Begins Collections

Broadcast Music, Inc., the new music publishing firm established in New York several months ago by the National Association of Broadcasters, to replace the American Society of Composers, Authors, and Publishers, as a music source for radio, films, and the stage, this week requested its 294 member stations to pay the first 15 per cent installment on their annual license fees.

License 15 Per Cent a Month

Payment was requested within ten days. The letter was signed by Merrit E. Tompkins, BMI general manager. The 294 member stations have already paid for their stock. Payment of the annual license fees was set at 15 per cent per month, the time of beginning of payments being left to the BMI board's discretion.

BMI hopes to replace ASCAP at the end of the year, as the music source for approximately 800 stations; at that time, the present five year ASCAP contracts expire. The 294 stations claimed as subscribers for BMI are countered by ASCAP claims of "300" as tentative signatories for a new contract, which was submitted in rough form several weeks ago, and the final draft of which is due for submission next week.

The music firm, meanwhile, has been pushing the songs it has created, or acquired from other, older music firms; among them, the songs of the Cole Publishing Company of Chicago.

It has arranged with 300 stations to feature two of its new songs, each week. Among most recent of its songs are "Here in the Velvet Night" and "In the Silence of the Dawn."

It is drafting a contract with its composers, to pay them for radio rights, on the basis of the number of times their work is played on the radio. The new arrangement will be more fair to the composers than the ASCAP arrangement, BMI claims.

The National Broadcasting Company and the Columbia Broadcasting System, are naming "coordinators" to encourage the use of BMI music.

Newspapers owning radio stations (it is estimated that one third of the country's 814 stations are controlled by newspapers) are not aligning themselves with either side, in the BMI-ASCAP struggle, it was noted by observers of the newspaper scene, in New York, this week.

Butterfield Made Newsreel Contact for Republicans

Allyn Butterfield, former producer for Republic and newsreel editor, has been appointed representative for newsreel activities by Franklyn Waltman, director of publicity for the Republican National Committee. He is now working on arrangements for newsreel coverage of the Republican National Convention, opening June 24th.

After the candidate is selected Mr. Butterfield is expected to accompany him on the campaign tours. Mr. Butterfield said the campaign trains would have special facilities for newsreel coverage. He added, "the picture-going-public will receive fast service in the matter of political news activities."

Limit "Free" Performances

The New York Theatre Authority has submitted to theatrical unions in that city a proposal that no performers earning less than $100 per week be allowed to give their services, free, at benefits in that area. Such a rule is in force in Chicago.

Lohr Resigning NBC Presidency

The resignation of Lenox R. Lohr, president of the National Broadcasting Company, effective July 12th, was announced this week by David Sarnoff, chairman of the board. Mr. Lohr will become president of the Museum of Science and Industry, at Chicago, a position left vacant by the death of Rufus Dawes. The NBC board will meet July 12th to select a successor.

Mr. Lohr became president of NBC on January 1, 1936. He was the general manager of the Century of Progress Exposition at Chicago in 1933 and 1934, in which he was associated with Mr. Dawes. A graduate of Cornell he served with the United States Army in France with the rank of major. For several years he was a member of the board of directors and executive secretary of the Society of American Military Engineers and editor of its journal, The Military Engineer.

MGM Renewing Radio Program, Sidney Says

MGM stars will return to the air in the fall and the company is seeking a sponsor, Louis K. Sidney, radio head for the company, said last week at the studio.

Renewal of sponsorship, by the Gulf Oil Company, of the Screen Actors Guild air show, depends upon the popularity of the summer substitute program, the Ellery Queen mysteries, Young and Rubicam, advertising agency, announced.

Nebraska to Seek ASCAP Review

Walter Johnson, attorney general of Nebraska, said this week that a review by the United States supreme court of the case involving constitutionality of the state's anti-American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers law would be sought "within two weeks." The law was held invalid last December by a three judge federal statutory court.

Louis Frohlich of Schwartz & Frolich, counsel, in New York Monday said that Nebraska's time for filing an appeal from the statutory court's decision had expired and that, if an appeal was taken to the United States supreme court now, the Sociey would move to have it dismissed on that ground.

Florida Law Held Invalid

The Florida anti-ASCAP law is invalid for the same reasons that Nebraska's anti-ASCAP law was found to be unconstitutional by a federal statutory court, it is contended in final briefs filed in federal court in Gainesville last week by Schwartz & Frohlich.

It was pointed out that the two state measures were "substantially identical" in language, and charged that the real aim of the statutes was not to serve the public interest but "to give immunity to certain Florida music users against suits for infringements."

A hearing on the Society's action to have the state law declared unconstitutional was held in Gainesville before a federal statutory court last month. With the filing of the briefs, the court will take the case under advisement and hand down its decision later.

Repeal Bill Loses

The bill introduced in the Louisiana legislature by Senator Nicholas Carbajal of Orleans Parish, which would have repealed the anti-ASCAP law, was defeated last week by indefinite postponement.

Prosecution of the long pending anti-trust suit against the Society in New York rests upon the present federal grand jury's inquiry into ASCAP activities, it was indicated in New York and Washington this week. In Washington, an official of the Department of Justice confirmed that preliminary steps towards a new anti-trust investigation had been taken. Recently, the grand jury in New York issued subpoenas for ASCAP records and books.

See No Cost Burden From Binaural Sound

Hollywood's studio sound technicians feel not at all alarmed that the new "binaural," "stereophonic," "third dimensional" sound, which was first shown publicly by the Telephone Company last spring (Motion Picture Herald, April 13th) will have any great affect in the near future, either economically or technically, on theatre operation. They see it rather as a matter of far distant date; they see economic conditions as controlling the time for taking this "logical step in the evolution of sound technique."

Additional encouragement for exhibitors who might be concerned over new burdens in cost was the statement, Wednesday, in Hollywood, by John K. Hilliard, chairman of the Academy Research Council's theatre standardization committee, that "the new development will not make current sound equipment obsolete."

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Everybody, nearly, has had the panicky experience of unpacking a weekend bag and discovering that half the stuff he really needed is back in the closet at home. Well, "In the name of Happier Weekending," the James McCreery department store in New York, "sought out three semi-professional New York weekenders —men who can practically pack a Friday-to-Sunday suitcase with their eyes closed—and asked each one to write out his 'must' list for the completely equipped weekend." First semi-pro weekender who can pack a bag with his eyes closed, to reply to James McCreery was none other than eyes-closed bag packing expert John Barrymore of stage and movies, who said that his bag must include:

"A red vest, an elk's tooth, a harmonica, flashlight, one pair pants—minimum age 3 years, white beach shoes, half sleeve shirt, flannel trousers, lightweight straw hat, 4 pair hose, white Palm Beach suit, tropical worsted dinner jacket, black tie, patent leather pumps, bedroom slippers, brown coat, brown and white shoes, 3 lightweight shirts, wash ties, ankle length socks, 2 juicy murder stories, sweater, tie clip, narrow suspenders, pajamas, handkerchiefs, a red bathing suit (must be red), sun glasses, hair tonic, a pad of writing paper for inspirations, a sprinkling can (I love to sprinkle flowers), ice bag."

Wisconsin's former Governor Walter J. Kohler, who died last April, decreed in his will that $250,000 of the many millions he left, be used to build a theatre in the native village of Kohler, Wisconsin, as a memorial to his father and brothers. The Kohler millions were made from the Kohler of Kohler manufacture of plain and pretty bathtubs. Cecil B. DeMille used many a Kohler of Kohler bathtub during his many years of glorifying bathtubs in films.

Theatre giveaways grow in uniqueness. Each day the manager of the Rex theatre at Sheridan, Arkansas, for example, telephones persons whose names are picked at random from the local directory, a la radio's "Pot o' Gold," and if the person called can give the title of the picture current at the Rex, he gets free passes.

Producing his first all-color picture in his 38 years of producing, Cecil Blount DeMille brought in "North West Mounted Police" for Paramount nine days ahead of schedule and $125,000 under budget. Under-budget pictures in Hollywood these days are mighty rare, if not non-existent.

Twenty-eight days before finishing the picture, DeMille began putting $100 a day into a fund to be distributed as a bonus among workers such as makeup men, hairdressers, et cetera.

He gave 28 persons $100 each from the accumulated fund of $2,800 for helping him bring in the picture ahead of schedule and under budget. Another Hollywood rarity.

CONFUCIUS Say: Lots of Pickets, Sell More Tickets." Sayings like this have appeared on the marquee of the Bull's Head Theatre, North Scranton, Pa., during the past several months.

Thus has the attention of the public been drawn to the spat between the owners and the movie operators' union, which has been picketing the show house since October 1, last.

Each day for the past four or five weeks a new phrase or a new "Confucius Say" proverb, has appeared in the out-front marquee space usually reserved for the title of the feature.

Furthermore it is emblazoned in eight-inch letters that can easily be seen from a distance. All of which, of course, is by way of heckling the pickets who walk to and fro in front of the small independently owned theatre, bearing a sign charging unfairness to the A. F. of L.

But the pickets go doggedly on about their business. If they mind the heckling, they don't show it.

The history of the dispute is rather long. Chief bone of contention at the moment, however, is whether the United Theatrical Workers, a C. I. O. unit, or the IATSE Motion Picture Operators' Local Union, No. 329, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, is the bargaining agency.

Robert A. Lesaius and his two sons, Harold J. and Adolph, operators of the theatre, claim they are affiliated with the C. I. O. union.

At first the Lesaiuses had one of the C. I. O. pickets "picket" the A. F. of L. pickets. This idea, apparently, didn't work out so well because the theatre occupies only a 20-foot frontage.

Then down came the regular feature picture announcement from the "attraction board" and up went the written taunts.

Among the burlesques on the Confucius proverbs have been the following: "Drive Slow: Pickets Working," "Long Time Walky, Maybe Make Whacky," "How Many Pickets Make a Fence?" "Walk Every Day, Good for the Heels."

Others which the Chinese sage didn't get credit for included: "Some Have Rickets, We Have Pickets," "Score for Pickets, No Runs, No Hits, One Error."

Other unique developments have followed.

According to Joseph V. Phillips, attorney for the theatre, someone—he doesn't say who—distributed thousands of cut-rate coupons to youngsters in the vicinity of the theatre.

The coupons and five cents entitled youngsters up to 14 years of age to one admission, or so the coupon read.

The Lesaiuses insist they had nothing to do with the coupons. Their price to children had been 10 cents.

But, instead of refusing the coupons, plus the nickel, they honored both. The result, the theatre "played" to 835 youngsters in one afternoon.

The coupon idea worked so well that the owners used them over again, according to their counsel.

Then a second batch appeared, again from mysterious sources. These reduced the price to three cents.

This time the owners balked.

Lieutenant W. S. Finlayson, 28, known in theatricals as Wallace Douglas, who played the part of Raleigh in "Journey's End" in the U. S., in which he was missing during action, is reported from London as missing in real life in World War II.

Like others passing midtown New York movie houses we have wondered mornings whence came all the youngsters in lines at box offices. The Bureau of School Attendance made a guess, found the answer: every day 1,000 school children play "hookey" to see their favorite stars. In one theatre, officers arrested 96 truants in a morning, went down through the auditorium, pulled them from their seats.

Mr. Walter Elias Disney, of the RKO-cartoon distributor Disneys, wants all of his exhibitor customers to know that "Peg Leg" Pete, the Disney cartoon villain, vs. Donald Duck, is no longer to be seen with his peg-leg, starting with the current "The Riveter." Reason: "The magic of the Disney artists decided it was no longer necessary" for "Peg Leg" Pete to have a peg leg. Just like that.

Under the synopsis clause of the Neely Bill now before Congress, Mr. Disney's artists would not be able to have such quick-changing "magic."

Paramount feels mighty cocky about overcoming what it calls "the three greatest Technicolor problems: fire, storm and flesh," disclosing that for Dorothy Lamour's "Typhoon," "a whole island had to be made in the miniature, then burned with strontium and other chemicals for precise film tone in long-shot scenes of the fire. For closeups, more than an acre of 'jungle' was built and burned. Special neon lights were needed for the critical shadings of a storm sky," said the company.

"As for flesh," it added, "Dorothy wears mostly that, having traded in her famous sarong for its little sister, a lava lava. Robert Preston, playing opposite her, wears a masculine equivalent."

Lava is volcanic, as any geologist will tell you.

A preview with an audience of horses is the "achievement" of Loew's in Indianapolis, whose lusty lads took a projector and a print of "Florian" to the Junior Horsemen's Association show at the Algonquin Club near Indianapolis.

Joseph P. Holleran, assistant manager of the house, asserts "the horses followed Florian's performings with deep interest and echoed his whinnyings. When Florian descends to the ignominy of hauling a wagon, the association's fine steeds registered extreme disapproval," Mr. Holleran says. Says Mr. Holleran.

No Comment Department, from an item in the New York Herald-Tribune:

> The title of Paramount's "The Road To Rio" has been changed to "The Road to Zanzibar" because it was discovered that the authors had set the locale of their story off the east coast of Africa and not South America. The picture will be a successor to "The Road to Singapore."

The Canadian Motion Picture Industry, agreeing that the American continent is at the moment a pretty good place to place one's feet, is joining with the Dominion Government in raising interest of Americans for and in behalf of Canada as a vacation land this summer. THE STARS LOOK DOWN

The preview of Warners' "All This and Heaven, Too", considered by the studio a top-flight attraction worthy of special selling, was to be dignified by the heavens last Thursday at the Carthay Circle.

The start of the picture's projection was to come from a light impulse emanating from the star Pollux, which, according to the studio, started its earthly descent the same hour Bette Davis was born 31 years ago.

Through Dr. Dinsmore Alter, head of the Griffith Park observatories in Hollywood, arrangements have been made to start the film through a series of photo-electric cell relays to capture the light impulse from Pollux, harnessed to close an electric circuit.

Miss Davis, star of the picture based on the Rachel Field novel, will press a button in the Carthay Circle's lobby, thus capturing the light rays and starting the picture.

Science is reported to be continuing its forward march in other fields, as well.

With activity started on the program, what is reported to be a new high in summer production has been recorded at the studio. Nine new pictures are being prepared, four are now before the cameras and seven are being edited.

Films and Planes

Presaging further use of the possibilities inherent in tie-ups with aviation, Columbia, last Sunday, sponsored a trip to Tucson, Arizona, in conjunction with American Airlines.

Done on behalf of Wesley Ruggles' currently filming "Arizona," on location at Tucson, the trip offered consisted of a day's excursion. A special plane left Los Angeles Sunday morning, returned the same night. In between, those with $56.05 to spend were greeted, according to advertisements, by Mr. Ruggles and Arizona's Governor Robert E. Jones. A visit to the set, lunch and dinner with the picture's cast, a tour of Tucson were also on the day's agenda.

Regular price of a round trip ticket between Tucson and Los Angeles is $54.05.

The Refugee

(Republic)

Peoples in Migration

Parallel heroes of this Republic special are a North Dakota farmer forced from his land by the ravages of nature and a Viennese doctor forced from his homeland by the German acquisition of Austria who brings medical service to the farmer's dust-blown community and blends his destiny and his daughter's with that of the farm folk as they move by motor caravan to Oregon to occupy new acres. Structure of the story is such as to present simultaneously and as identical the plight of both refugees and there is no attempt to achieve by dialogue means any points not made by action and progress of the story.

Opening in a radio station with a "We the People" program in progress, the film introduces the Austrian and other refugee doctors as available for call to sections of the country not supplied with medical practitioners. Responding to a telegraphed summons from Asheville Forks, N. D., the doctor and his daughter arrive and give immediate aid to dust storm sufferers and stay on to merge their fortunes with those of the distressed farmers. Romance comes to the girl and the farm leader but is thrust aside when word comes that her former sweetheart believed dead in Austria has escaped and is coming to America. The farmer leads his followers to Oregon, after besting a rebellious faction intent on going to California instead, and when the girl meets her fiance in San Francisco but discovers he has entered the service of Germany's ruling party she joins the American farmer in Oregon.

Although the cross country trip of the farmers' motor caravan is a cause and objective comparable to that shown in "The Grapes of Wrath" the similarity ends there. These farmers are of the hard working clean spoken church going kind long depicted in film and book as typically American and there is no filth in word or act of the production.

John Wayne as the farmer hero is as he was in "Stage Coach." Charles Coburn as the refugee doctor and Sigrid Gurie as his daughter impressed the preview audience visibly while Spencer Charters' performance of the single comedy role drew laughter repeatedly from the audience.

The Mortal Storm

(MGM)

Germany Under Hitler

On the afternoon of June 10th, the Hollywood motion picture press arrived at the Four Star Theatre with Signor Mussolini's radioed declaration of war still echoing in its ears and talk of nothing else on its lips to sit in witness on this filmic indictment of the Hitler regime in Germany. It was not as to a play that these people came, nor as toward an entertainment. Their reaction to the series of tragedies which make up the story was rather as persons summoned to jury service might respond to shocking testimony. There was weeping and indignation during the screening and resounding applause at the end, but no laughter at any time and no trace of the hoarse whisperings and muttered wisecrackery which are habitual in Hollywood.

Telling the story of a non-Aryan professor and his family in Germany from the time of Hitler's appointment as chancellor to the professor's death in a concentration camp, and the shooting of his daughter as she seeks to escape across the border, the picture minces no terms and disguises no identities. Operations of storm troopers and police are depicted as merciless and with no gestures toward possible extenuation. A few months or weeks ago this Hollywood press audience would have used the word "propaganda" to describe the film and speculated on the policy prompting its manufacture. The word was not heard in the auditorium or the foyer on June 10th.

Ranking Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer talent performs the tragedy under the experienced Frank Borzage's direction, affording a marquee text of manifest box office value. Derived from Phyllis Bottome's widely discussed novel of like title, and which it follows closely, the film has earnestness, power and conviction.

Girl in 313

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

Mystery Muddle

"Girl in 313" partakes of story elements recently seen in "I Was an Adventuress" and "Free, Blonde and 21."

It is, as was the former, a story of jewel thieves taking advantage of jewelry "showings" and society functions for the plying of their trade. It is also, as was "Free, Blonde and 21," based in part on activity in a women's hotel, as was, additionally, Elsa Maxwell's "Hotel for Women" released last year.

Florence Rice appears as a detective who masquerades as a jewel thief, Kent Taylor as a jewel thief masquerading as a detective. She catches him ultimately, but his death only serves to remind her that she had fallen in love with him in the process.

Lionel Atwill is the leader of the gang, posing as a reputable jeweler. And, as they did in "Free, Blonde and 21," Katherine Aldrich, Elyse Knox and Joan Valerie all appear, with Mary Treen as the hotel's maid, a part formerly enacted by Joan Davis.

The picture was directed by Ricardo Cortez, produced by Sol Wurtzel. Both acted similarly on "Free, Blonde and 21." Barry Trivers and Clay Adams wrote the screen play, based on a story by Hilda Stone.

Gaslight

(British National - Anglo American)

Victorian Marital Melodrama

As a play the original from which this tensely dramatic period piece is adapted, ran long and successfully on the London stage. This polished and gripping film version should command that best of all publicity—word of mouth. Its psychology is morbid and its gloom unbroken, but the dramatic atmosphere is skilfully sustained and built up, the production polish above criticism, and the portrayal, both of Diana Wynyard as the tortured, hynotized Victorian wife, and Wallbrook as the slimy, sinister husband, something better than brilliant. In a world which has already woe enough the sombre quality of the film may not at first seem attractive, but "Gaslight" certainly offers escape from the thoughts of bombers and refugees. Exhibitors will have difficulty enough in selling anything in the days to come, but they will certainly find it easier to sell this than films about Nazi espionage or the horrors of war.

The story, set in Victorian London, is about a husband who has murdered an old woman for her rubies and goes back to the scene of his crime, torturing his wife mentally into a near madness so that anything she might accuse him of would be explained by her insanity. It is grimly psychological and emotional stuff but it awakens to a crescendo of melodrama when the husband is revealed in his true colors and only escapes the avenging knife of his wife by his own madness.

The production's atmosphere of Victorian London is excellent. The dinginess of London's tree lined squares, with horse busses and parasols has never been so expertly done. It is a perfect period cameo. Dickinson's direction of the film is sensitive, using tempo and lighting to etch his effects, but his treatment of the subject eliminates all non essentials, building his structure of drama to its final peak.

Lighting and camerawork mean much in such a film as this. They are both superlatice. Other technical credits go to the cutting and the scenario departments—and above all to the art director and set designer.

Shown to a trade audience in London the film obviously gripped without bad patches. The atmosphere was tense throughout and more applause than is normal was accorded the film at the close. Here and there one found criticism of its slowness and of its unalloyed gloom. AUDREY FLANAGAN.

Western

Law and justice represented by Tim McCoy emerges on top in this western, as usual, but not until the odds, heavily in favor of the forces of evil, are whittled down in a gradual process. The accepted western technique of devoting much footage to riding, shooting and fist fights is employed.

Appearing with McCoy are Dorothy Short, the girl of the story; Lou Fulton, Carl Hackett, Ted Adams, John Merton, Forrest Taylor, Hal Price and Ken Duncan. The picture was produced by Sigmund Neufeld and directed by Peter Stewart from a screen play by William Lively.

The story pits McCoy against a gang of payroll robbers. The robbers, whose cutthroat leader is not unmasked until the climax, have troubles of their own and in fact have a hard time holding onto the payroll because of the competition. What the gang or the head of the gang is actually after, however, is a mine and stealing the payroll is a means of forcing the mine owner to sell. McCoy steps in and that's that.

Bad Man from Red Butte

(Universal)

Western

Johnny Mack Brown, continuing his western series for Universal, successfully copes with the problem of a dual role here. He appears as "Gil Brady," an outlaw with an awe-inspiring reputation, and as "Buck Halliday," a competent agent for a stage coach line and a law abiding citizen. "Gil" and "Buck" are twin brothers with "Gil" as the black sheep of the family. The story also has to do with the cleaning up of a politically corrupt town in which a mortgage held on a ranch plays an important part.

As in all the Brown series the star has able support from Bob Baker, who does the singing and incidentally plays a lawyer in this story, and Fuzzy Knight, who provides the comedy.

"Gil Brady," out of Red Butte, has acquired a reputation in a small western town which is under the domination of "Tibby Mason." In a fight with "Mason's" men "Gil" is wounded in the shoulder and later dies in an abandoned shack. Meanwhile "Buck" has arrived in town to study a new stage coach route. He is taken for "Gil." The route he decides on for the coach line would run through old man "Todhunter's" ranch, who is willing but tells "Buck" that "Mason" has a mortgage on the ranch and is foreclosing. The maneuverings of "Buck" and "Mason" end, of course, with "Buck" winning out.

Island of Doomed Men

Crime Melodrama

The latest of Columbia's crime melodramas has a somewhat different and unusual plot. The locale is an island in the tropics owned by a diamond merchant. Peter Lorre, exponent of sadist portrayals, appears as the merchant who through subterfuge brings paroled convicts to the island and forces them into slavery. Rochelle Hudson, as the wife of "Danel" (Lorre) lends the only feminine interest to the picture while the male romantic lead is handled by Robert Wilcox as the government agent assigned to uncover the criminal activities of the island.

The picture's innate appeal will be to men. Romance is not stressed, as the main theme of the picture is the cruelties inflicted on the imprisoned workers. There is no comedy.

"Mark Sheldon" (Wilcox) is sent to the island owned and operated by "Danel." After seeing how "Danel" operates and the conditions under which the employees live with no means of leaving the island, he plans an escape with the aid of a few of the other prisoners. "Danel" tries to stop the escape but is killed. The picture ends happily with the convicts, "Shedlon" and "Mrs. Danel" finding freedom.

Phonovision Set To Start Production

Phonovision, the nickel-in-the-slot-movie company, headed by Frank Orsatti, agent for Hollywood talent (among them, Shirley Temple), and Sam Sax, former Brooklyn Vitaphone studio and Warner British production head, this week appeared to be getting steam up.

In New York, where Mr. Sax and Mr. Orsatti have been puffing their wares these past weeks, Phonovision machines were to have their first public display next Monday and Tuesday, at Jack Dempsey's Restaurant. Previously the machines, using 16 mm transcriptions of old Vitaphone and other shorts, had been shown in the Sax-Orsatti New York headquarters, the Sherry Netherland hotel to newspaper men, trade paper people and various other interested persons.

Also Mr. Sax, this week, was "signing up well known name bands"; for he will produce shorts especially for the new medium; and, with camera crews, technicians, and the name bands, he expected to begin production at the old Edison Studio, in the Bronx, in three weeks.

A. C. De Napoli, Jr., formerly engineering laboratories manager for Electrical Research Products, will head the Phonovision Corporation's technical department.

Contracts for production of the machines will be awarded to a company, or several, this week, Mr. Orsatti said. At present, the machines being demonstrated are samples from four projection machine manufacturers and ten cabinet makers, he said.

Forty thousand machines have been ordered, by distributors in every state, Mr. Orsatti claimed, on Wednesday.

Meanwhile, exhibitor reaction in some parts of the country having indicated that, with the growth of the new medium, local exhibitors would attempt to have all laws pertaining to motion picture exhibition also apply to the nickel-in-the-slot machines, a Philadelphia councilman asserted, this week, that he would introduce an ordinance requiring licenses for coin-operated movies.

LETTERS FROM READERS

NU-ART EXPLAINS 16 MM POSITION

To the Editor of the Herald:

The Motion Picture Herald for May 25 quotes a member of our firm as saying:

"The less said about 16 mm films the better. Exhibitors are always squawking when companies sell 16 mm rights to their films."

In itself this quotation is fairly harmless, but the context in which it appears gives it definitely unfair implications. Unmistakably it suggests to the casual reader that the 16 mm business wishes to operate in the dark because it fears the scrutiny of other branches of the motion picture industry. The quotation, picked up from an informal conversation and inaccurately attributed to Gordon W. Hedwig instead of William K. Hedwig, meant only this:

The 16 mm business is reconciled to being ignored by the theatrical trade press except on those occasions when the editors of the Quigley publications and similar journals choose to give utterance to unsympathetic and damaging expressions.

It has long been the desire of the entire 16 mm field to establish the most cordial possible relations, not only with theatrical producing-distributing-exhibiting combines, but with independent theatrical exhibitors as well. This desideratum has been repeatedly shoved out of reach by the consistently unsympathetic attitude of the trade press. To the extent that this state of affairs continues we feel entirely justified in saying, "The less said . . . the better."

We should like, however, to offer two points for your consideration.

The theatrical trade press has never done more than pay lip service to the idea that films have legitimate uses in schools, churches, clubs, business organizations and other non-theatrical situations. The theatrical distributors have never attempted seriously to supply these non-theatrical markets which constitute the legitimate purview of the 16 mm business.

The oft-repeated charge that non-theatrical roadshows and free merchant shows constitute damaging competition for the theatrical exhibitor also needs reconsideration. The experience of many non-theatrical exhibitors, notably in Indiana, seems to demonstrate the opposite. In many instances the appearance of a free merchant show in a town has so stimulated public interest in films that the proprietor of the boarded-up and long-dark opera house has been enabled to dust off the seats, put a new bulb in the gooseneck over the doorway, hang up his one-sheets and do a healthy, profitable business.

All of this is not intended as an effort to engage in controversy. Primarily we were interested in correcting the error attendant on the quotation used in your article. The 16 mm business has no quarrel with any other section of the industry. Most of us believe quite earnestly that a genuine mutuality of interest exists and can be made to flourish if artificial antagonisms between theatrical and non-theatrical groups are not superimposed on their natural relationship.—William K. Hedwig, Nu-Art Films, Inc., 145 West 45th Street, New York, N. Y.

COMMUNITY SINGING BOOSTS PUBLIC MORALE

To the Editor of the Herald:

During these troubled times with wars and rumors of wars constantly in our minds, the manager of the theatre where I am now employed as a featured organist, has hit upon, I think, a most timely and effective way of presenting my community singing programs to the public.

Psychologists all agree that group, or community singing, is the best way to boost up public morale. With this in mind, Mr. Lee Koken, the manager of the R. K. O. Richmond Hill Theatre in Richmond Hill, L. I., has, for the last several weeks, been using "Sing Your Troubles Away with Arlo at the Organ," "A Song a Day Keeps the Blues Away" and other similar slogans on all the theatre's advertising.

And how the patrons sing—they love it. That 10 or 12 minutes of singing not only buoys up the audience spirits, but it also adds that human touch to the program that is so sadly lacking in this age of mechanical entertainment.

Throughout the country there are hundreds of theatres equipped with fine organs that are now silent and unplayed. For much less money than the theatre now spends in one day for cash giveaways or articles of merchandise, the management, by employing a good, competent organist, could add a distinctive, entertaining novelty to the theatre's program every day of the week.

Then, too, there is also advertising value in an organ solo. The organist, by playing the song hits of a picture that is to play the house in the near future, is in a position to give it that one extra plug that may mean dollars and cents to the box-office.

It would seem almost a patriotic duty for the showmen of this country to give Mr. and Mrs. America the opportunity to forget the cares of this troubled world if only for a short while as they sing the nation's songs.—Arlo, R. K. O. Keith's Theatre, Richmond Hill, N. Y.

Business Good in Mexico, Says Roberts

Theatres in Mexico are doing good business and new theatre construction there is under way in numerous localities, Charles Roberts, Columbia's Latin American supervisor, said Thursday, June 6th, on his arrival in New York from Mexico City.

Mr. Roberts said that Mexican production, however, is virtually at a standstill. This has created a problem for exhibitors who are required by law to give periodic playing time to Mexican pictures, and who, in order to comply with the law, are now obliged to run old films.

He said that no official action had been taken on the trades unions' proposal to require American distributors in Mexico to invest the equivalent of 25 per cent of their profits in domestic production.

Seckler Sails

Ned S. Seckler sailed Saturday from New York for San Juan, Puerto Rico, where he will open a territorial office for RKO Radio's foreign department. Phil Reisman, RKO vice-president in charge of distribution, announced the appointment of Mr. Seckler to the new post at the recent sales convention. Mr. Seckler will open the new branch around September 1st. He was formerly RKO home office representative in Havana.

Gell Sails for London

William Gell, Monogram's distributor in London, sailed for home this week after several weeks in New York and Hollywood conferring on the company's next season product.

Schaefer in Havana

To finish his Cuban business, Gus Schaefer, transferred by RKO from its foreign to its domestic departments, was in Havana this week.

Heymann Arrives With Rights to 10 French Films

With first-hand observations of the war, Andre R. Heymann has arrived in New York from France with contracts to the U. S. rights to 10 French productions, five of them Marcel Pagnol films.

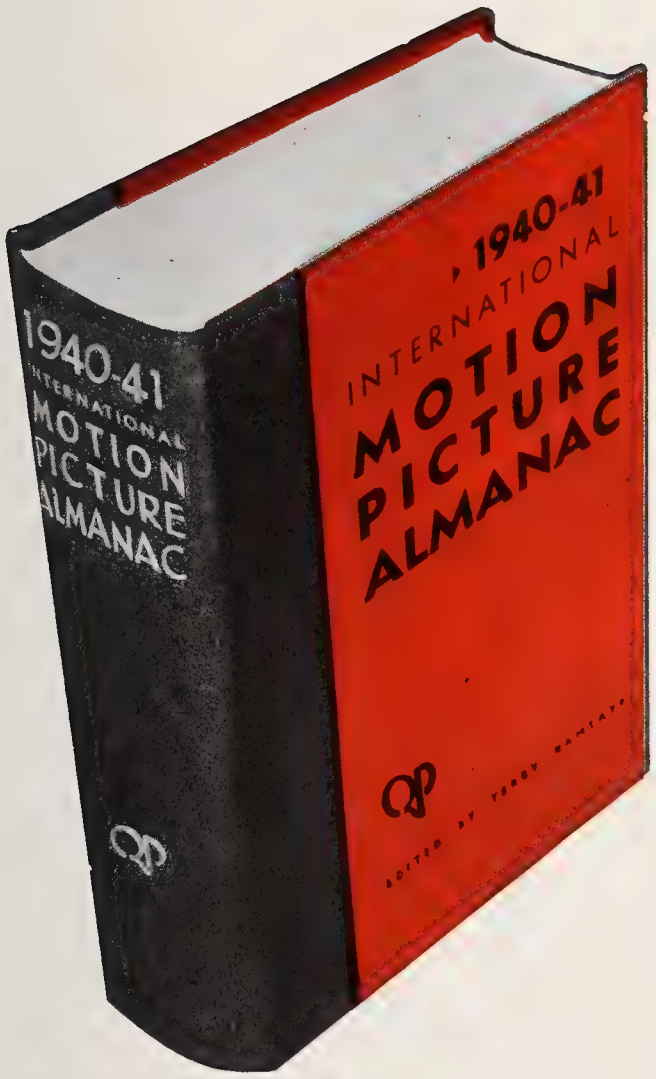
The president of the French Cinema Center, Inc. and French Films Import, Inc., left France on Memorial Day, arriving in New York on the S.S. Manhattan Monday. He sailed for France, his 28th crossing of the Atlantic since 1920, on April 23rd.

Two days after the German invasion of the Lowlands he was invited by the French government to visit the areas in imminent danger of invasion, Mr. Heymann said.

Mr. Heymann said he had contracts for "La Chaland Qui Passe," produced by the late Jean Vigo and starring Michel Simon and Dito Parlo; "Le Grand Jeu," produced by Jacques Feyder, and featuring Francoise Rosay, Marie Bell and Charles Vanel; two productions by Les Films De France, one of which is "L'Honne du Niger," starring Victor Francen and Harry Baur; the following Pagnol productions: "Topaze," featuring Jounet, star in "End of a Day"; "Cesar," starring Raimu and Pierre Fresnay; "Marius," with Raimu, Fresnay and Orane DeMazis; "Joffroi," with Vincent Scotto and Mme. Toinon; "La Fille de Pinsatier," with Raimu and Josette Day, and "Le Femme Ideale," a Berthomieu production, with Le Vigan, star of "Harvest."

The latter film, Mr. Heymann said, was started in Marseilles on May 20th and is not completed. If it is finished, he said, it will be distributed in this country. Mr. Heymann added that he also has contracted for several short subjects including one on the Paris opera, another on Syria and a third on the French fight on leprosy in their African colonies.

Mr. Heymann said he expected the films to arrive here within six weeks despite the situation abroad. They first will be shown in New York and then throughout the United States. Later they will be shown in South America and Canada.



Relative to the film industry in France, Mr. Heymann said: "French industry has been affected, of course, by the war but even today, with French production at a low point, 10 or 15 features will be produced this year. The fact is that the government is allowing certain actors and technicians not only to finish productions started before the war but also new productions.

Roosevelt Resigns Second Goldwyn Post

That James Roosevelt resigned some time ago as president of the Samuel Goldwyn Studios, Inc., was disclosed on Tuesday in Hollywood. No explanation was given. Mr. Roosevelt previously resigned the vice-presidency of the Goldwyn producing company to form Globe Productions.

The Samuel Goldwyn Studios, Inc., manages the Goldwyn lot, formerly known as the United Artists Studios. Mr. Roosevelt's company will continue to use it, it was said.

OBITUARIES

E. E. Clive Dies on Coast

Edward E. Clive, 60, British character actor of the screen and stage, producer and director of the legitimate theatre, died suddenly of a heart ailment June 6th at his Hollywood home. Mr. Clive could caricature an Englishman of any type, but he was fond of his portrayals of butlers on the screen and fonder still of the success he achieved the very first time he essayed such a role in the films, in the "Man from Blankley's" with John Barrymore starred.

Born in Monmouthshire, England, he was a graduate of the University of Wales and studied medicine for four years at St. Bartholomew's Hospital, London, before turning to the stage, where he made his first professional appearance at the age of 22 in "The White Heather," at the Drury Lane theatre.

Although he took up a stage career casually after some dabbling in amateur theatricals, and with little thought of continuing at it long, he eventually appeared in 1,159 stage plays before succumbing to the lure of another field—the motion picture.

He appeared in stock in Boston for 14 consecutive years, most of that time as manager, director and actor in his own company, The Copley Players. Actors and actresses who played under his tutorship there were Leslie Howard, Margaret Sullavan, Genevieve Tobin, and Alan Mowbray.

He appeared in many films, the "Bulldog Drummond" series, "Little Lord Fauntleroy," "Captain Blood," "Libeled Lady," "Dracula's Daughter," "Camille," "Cain and Mabel," "Lloyd's of London," "On the Avenue," "Night Must Fall," "The Emperor's Candlesticks," "Arsene Lupin Returns" and "The Earl of Chicago" among them.

Twenty-five years ago he married Eleanor Ellis, an English actress, who survives him with one son, David John Clive.

Florence Roberts, of Stage and Screen

Florence Roberts, 69, stage and screen actress who played "Granny Jones" in "The Jones Family" series, died June 6th in Hollywood. A native of New York Miss Roberts while appearing under the management of Henry Duffy, attracted the attention of Mack Sennett, who signed her for her first film role in "Grandma's Girl."

Films in which she appeared included "Eyes of the World," "The Truth About Hollywood," "Fanny Foley Herself," "Westward Passage," "Torch Singer," "Hoopla," "Miss Fane's Baby Is Stolen," "Dangerously Yours," "Babes in Toyland," "Les Miserables" and "Your Uncle Dudley."

John Cohen, Jr., Former Critic

He was the critic of the Sun from 1927 to 1933 when he resigned because of poor health. He joined the Chicago staff of the National Broadcasting Company in the following year, staying there a year before his health again failed.

A native of Atlanta, he was the son of the late Major General John S. Cohen, former United States Senator from Georgia; vice-chairman of the Democratic National Committee and editor of the Atlanta Journal. Mr. Cohen was graduated from the United States Naval Academy in 1919 and left the Navy in 1921 to join the staff of the Sun. He worked on general assignments for six years before becoming motion picture critic.

James Hall, Star Of Silent Screen

James Hall, 39, a star of the silent screen and who recently had been a master of ceremonies in night clubs in New York and New Jersey, died June 7th in the Jersey City Medical Center of cirrhosis of the liver. Mr. Hall, who was born in Dallas, ran away from home at 14 and joined a traveling theatrical company. A year later he joined the "Ziegfeld Follies" as the youngest member of the cast.

In the middle twenties he became a screen actor and quickly won starring roles in many pictures. He was a leading man with Bebe Daniels in "Stranded in Paris" in 1926 and "Senorita" in 1927; with Pola Negri in "Hotel Imperial" in 1927, and with Clara Bow in "The Fleet's In" in 1928. At the height of his popularity he played opposite the late Jean Harlow in "Hell's Angels" in 1930. He also had appeared in the silent version of "Four Sons." His salary then ranged from $1,000 to $2,500 a week.

IN COURTS

Trendle Seeks Court Ruling

A test suit was filed in federal court in New York, Thursday, June 6th, by George W. Trendle of Detroit against Paramount Pictures and John H. King which petitions the court to rule illegal an agreement restricting Mr. Trendle from opening theatres in the Detroit area.

The agreement, made in June, 1929, sold the Detroit theatre interests of Mr. Trendle and Mr. King, then known as John Kunsky, with the provision that neither seller was to engage in the theatre business for 50 years in a radius of 150 miles, the complaint states. The plaintiff attacks the agreement as being unreasonable and in restraint of trade.

The suit petitions for an order declaring the agreement void or alternatively fixing the limits in which the plaintiff may operate theatres.

Mr. Trendle was in charge of the Paramount United Detroit theatres' operations from 1929 until last year, when he resigned and was succeeded by Earl Hudson, the present operator for Paramount.

Columbia Wins Point

Columbia on Monday won its court fight against turning over a list of its stockholders when Samuel I. Rosenman, New York supreme court justice, denied an application of James F. Burke, stockholder, for an order directing Columbia to allow an inspection of its books and records. Mr. Burke, claiming to represent eight stockholders, asked for the list to seek support for his attempt to obtain the legal dissolution of Columbia. The plaintiff cited the anti-trust suit, loss of a foreign market and television as reasons for dissolution.

File Premiums Action

Claiming infringement of "Encyclopedia Night," used to promote attendance at theatres, Premium Promotion Syndicate, Inc., has filed suit in New York supreme court against Price Theatres Premiums Corporation seeking an injunction and $25,000 damages. The plaintiff claims that he originated the idea in 1939 of distributing encyclopedias to theatre patrons.

Settle Time Suit

A stipulation settling the suit of Time, Inc., against Anschel Barshay, trading as the "Voice of Time," and dropping the appeal of the defendant from an injunction and accounting, was filed in federal court in New York Friday, June 7th. Under the settlement Mr. Barshay is restrained from broadcasting as the "Voice of Time" and the plaintiff waives all rights to damages.

Start Racine Action

Frank La Boda, Racine, Wis., has started action against Warner Brothers' Venetian theatre in that city charging that Eli Arkin, manager of the house, refused to pay a $900 "Treasure Chest" award claimed won by the plaintiff on May 18th.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

IN EARLY ARIZONA: Bill Elliott—It did real nice week-end business. As to the quality of this picture it seemed to satisfy and we can say it outgrossed "Gone With the Wind."—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

LONE WOLF STRIKES, THE: Warren William, Joan Perry—A good program picture. Running time, 67 minutes. Played May 17-18.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

MUSIC IN MY HEART: Tony Martin, Edith Fellows, Rita Hayworth—Just a fair musical that just about got by. The story moves slowly; singing is just fair and some of our patrons were disappointed. Columbia should have done much better.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

TOO MANY HUSBANDS: Jean Arthur, Melvyn Douglas, Fred MacMurray—Columbia certainly slipped on this comedy. Our print was cut five minutes so perhaps was some of the trouble but perhaps five minutes more would have made it worse. Just an average picture good for a mid-week date or the upper half of a double bill. Running time, 79 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

First National

ANGEL FROM TEXAS, AN: Eddie Albert, Rosemary Lane, Wayne Morris, Ronald Reagan, Jane Wyman—Too silly to be thoroughly enjoyed. Just a fair program picture not good enough for single bill or Sunday date. Running time, 69 minutes. Played May 25-27.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

DR. EHRLICH'S MAGIC BULLET: Edward G. Robinson, Ruth Gordon, Otto Kruger, Donald Crisp—Although I wasn't expecting a tremendous crowd, I was greatly surprised by how few came to see this picture. All those who came praised it to the skies and I personally think it is one of the best of the year. I think I can blame some of it on the title because war and gangster stories don't go well here and I could not convince them otherwise. I am ashamed of my college patrons for not turning out for this in great style. This was played on straight percentage and about all the company received from here was enough to pay for inspecting the print after it was returned. Running time, 100 minutes. Played May 23.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

DR. EHRLICH'S MAGIC BULLET: Edward G. Robinson, Ruth Gordon, Otto Kruger, Donald Crisp—Good show but I do think the locale being German kept patrons away. Business below average. Robinson's make-up and acting wonderful.—Douglas Miller, Rex Theatre, Taber, Alberta, Canada. Small town patronage.

FOUR WIVES: Lane Sisters, Gale Page, Claude Rains, Jeffrey Lynn, Dick Foran, Frank McHugh, May Robson—Folks thought it the most uninteresting picture shown for many months. While it drew well, there were more walkouts than we have ever had. A few of the old people thought it very crude in plot. Running time, 98 minutes. Played May 4-5.—S. E. Bower, Desert Theatre, Hawthorne, Nev. Mining, CCC and Marine patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

AND ONE WAS BEAUTIFUL: Robert Cummings, Laraine Day, Jean Muir, Billie Burke—Pleased on family night. Running time, 70 minutes. Played May 21—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

ANDY HARDY GETS SPRING FEVER: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden—This series are a sure hit. Business good; all satisfield.—Douglas Miller, Rex Theatre, Taber, Alberta, Canada. Small town patronage.

BALALAIKA: Nelson Eddy, Ilona Massey, Frank Morgan, Charles Ruggles—Another of your high class musicals that failed miserably at the box office. When will MGM get wise to the fact that Nelson Eddy means nothing in a picture unless he is co-starred with Jeanette MacDonald. Running time, 102 minutes. Played May 14-16.—Paul McBride, Avalon Theatre, Fillmore, Utah. Small town and rural patronage.

DR. KILDARE'S STRANGE CASE: Lionel Barrymore, Lew Ayres, Laraine Day—Congratulations to Metro on this series. They are a life saver in the bracket they are in. This one the best yet.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

DR. KILDARE'S STRANGE CASE: Lionel Barrymore, Lew Ayres, Laraine Day—Good picture; fair business. Running time, 77 minutes. Played May 22-23.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

DR. KILDARE'S STRANGE CASE: Lionel Barrymore, Lew Ayres, Laraine Day—Interesting picture enjoyed by all. Running time, 77 minutes. Played May 3.—S. E. Bower, Desert Theatre, Hawthorne, Nev. Mining, CCC and Marine patronage.

EDISON, THE MAN: Spencer Tracy, Rita Johnson, Gene Lockhart, Charles Coburn—Good picture and good business. Spencer Tracy as Edison is tops. Running time, 107 minutes. Played May 29-30.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

EDISON, THE MAN: Spencer Tracy, Rita Johnson, Gene Lockhart, Charles Coburn—This is a fair drawing card and MGM had a checker to see we did not cheat them on the percentage but unless business picks up tonight they won't get any average on this picture. Played May 26.—Sam Brooks, Liberty Theatre, Hailey, Idaho. Mining and tourist patronage.

GONE WITH THE WIND: Vivien Leigh, Clark Gable, Leslie Howard, Olivia de Havilland, Hattie McDaniel—The best shellacking we ever have had in our five years of business and I don't mean maybe. They won't go for a dollar or Metro tactics here. We told the public no picture for 1940 and then got sold for another theatre, tickets a month ago. The only thing we can do is charge it all up to experience and pass the word along to small exhibitors to pass it up. You cannot win on it; forget the prestige. It won't pay your bills. Give us Gene Autry or Cagney. We cannot agree as to the merits of the production but we have found out that every exhibitor that has played it in small towns has regretted it. We couldn't make money if it were on regular terms. I guess we will never learn and Barnum was right.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

GONE WITH THE WIND: Vivien Leigh, Clark Gable, Leslie Howard, Olivia de Havilland, Hattie McDaniel—This isn't a small town picture. Rental terms were too high. MGM should be ashamed to contact an exhibitor for new picture contracts after forcing him to pay so much on this production. Would advise all small towns to lay off until the rentals and admission prices are reduced. Running time, three hours and 46 minutes.—Paul McBride, Avalon Theatre, Fillmore, Utah. Small town and rural patronage.

GONE WITH THE WIND: Vivien Leigh, Clark Gable, Leslie Howard, Olivia de Havilland, Hattie McDaniel—Look out, you small town boys, you will not do the business on this Metro will lead you to believe. Don't believe people will pay $1.10 to see this over again. I admit I was the sucker for giving 70 percent of my receipts but never again. Played May 16-18.—Sam Brooks, Liberty Theatre, Hailey, Idaho. Mining and tourist patronage.

GOODBYE, MR. CHIPS: Robert Donat, Greer Garson—This was a pip. Business above average and they still talk about it.—Douglas Miller, Rex Theatre, Taber, Alberta, Canada. Small town patronage.

HONOLULU: Eleanor Powell, Robert Young, Burns and Allen—Below average business. This picture did not merit top grouping. Running time, 83 minutes. Played May 21-23.—Douglas Miller, Rex Theatre, Taber, Alberta, Canada. Small town patronage.

MAN FROM DAKOTA: Wallace Beery, John Howard, Dolores Del Rio—This was sort of hot and cold. No raves; most of the people came in to get away from the cool and threatening weather. Running time, 76 minutes. Played May 30.—H. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

NORTHWEST PASSAGE: Spencer Tracy, Robert Young, Walter Brennan—Only picture we have ever run for three days and it grossed a box office top. Proved to be just the kind of picture all our people like. Running time, 126 minutes. Played April 26-28.—S. E. Bower, Desert Theatre, Hawthorne, Nev. Mining, CCC and Marine patronage.

REMEMBER?: Robert Taylor, Greer Garson, Lew Ayres—Excellent entertainment that was well liked here. Play it if you haven't because it's good for a lot of laughs and should do business. Running time, 84 minutes. Played May 26-28.—Simon Galitzki, Coed Theatre, Topeka, Kansas. General patronage.

WATERLOO BRIDGE: Vivien Leigh, Robert Taylor—We are playing this next Sunday-Monday-Tuesday. Don't expect much business but we bought this on a flat rental so will get to run our own house for three nights. What a break. Next year, boys, let's try and run our own theatres without the help of some $17.50 clerk looking down our collars.—Sam Brooks, Liberty Theatre, Hailey, Idaho. Mining and tourist patronage.

WIZARD OF OZ, THE: Judy Garland, Frank Morgan, Jack Haley, Bert Lahr, Ray Bolger, Billie Burke, Margaret Hamilton—The kids and myself liked this show but most of my regular patrons stayed away because they thought it was a full length feature cartoon.—Douglas Miller, Rex Theatre, Taber, Alberta, Canada. Small town patronage.

YOUNG TOM EDISON: Mickey Rooney, Fay Bainter, Virginia Weidler, George Bancroft—Drew a good house and pleased the patrons. Running time, 85 minutes. Played May 10.—S. E. Bower, Desert Theatre, Hawthorne, Nev. Mining, CCC and Marine patronage.

Paramount

BEAU GESTE: Gary Cooper, Ray Milland, Robert Preston, Brian Donlevy—The first real show from this company in a long time. Drew well.—Douglas Miller, Rex Theatre, Taber, Alberta, Canada. Small town patronage.

BISCUIT EATER, THE: Billy Lee—If you want a picture that's different, don't miss this one. We grossed extra business and everyone was delighted with it. Tie in with local fish and game clubs. This one brought in many strange faces that hadn't been in for months. Running time, 80 minutes. Played May 28.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

CAT AND THE CANARY, THE: Bob Hope, Paulette Goddard—A swell comedy mystery that kept the patrons well entertained. Fast moving, thrilling and plenty of laughs.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

COCOANUT GROVE: Fred MacMurray, Ben Blue, Harriet Hilliard—Brought this one back and played to capacity houses both nights on bargain night. Biggest gross for these two nights this year. Our customers like musicals, old or new. Running time, 90 minutes. Played May 28-29.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

DR. CYCLOPS: Albert Dekker, Janice Logan—Not even a good program picture with no name stars and enhanced only by good color. Exceptionally poor business for holiday. Running time, 77 minutes. Played May 28-30.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

DR. CYCLOPS: Albert Dekker, Janice Logan—This fantastic picture pleased on Friday-Saturday. Business good. Running time, 75 minutes. Played May 24-25.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

EMERGENCY SQUAD: Louise Campbell, William

Henry—A swell little action picture that can serve well on a double feature. This picture moves along rapidly, is entertaining and will satisfy any audience. —Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

FARMER'S DAUGHTER, THE: Martha Raye, Charlie Ruggles—A good program picture for a small town. Good comedy and the crazy antics of the entire cast make this film good light entertainment. None of our patrons seemed to object to the craziness of the cast.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

GERONIMO: Preston Foster, Andy Devine. Ellen Drew—Did not draw as well as expected but the patrons were well satisfied. Running time, 90 minutes. Played April 30-May 1.—S. E. Bower, Desert Theatre, Hawthorne, Nev. Mining, CCC and Marine patronage.

GERONIMO: Preston Foster, Andy Devine, Ralph Morgan, Ellen Drew—A good outdoor picture that will keep the patrons well entertained. The title is nothing to draw them in but if you are fortunate in attracting them, they will be entertained with another of Paramount's action filled dramas of the west.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

GREAT VICTOR HERBERT, THE: Allan Jones, Marv Martin, Walter Connolly—Most of the seats were empty both nights this was shown. The music was good but the plot weak. Running time, 91 minutes. Played May 7-8.—S. E. Bower, Desert Theatre, Hawthorne, Nev. Mining, CCC and Marine patronage.

GULLIVER'S TRAVELS: Color Cartoon Feature—I stalled this one off as long as I could but still Paramount had the nerve to have a checker on this. Even the kids did not go for this picture. Just a lot of cartoon so they said. Played May 23.—Sam Brooks, Liberty Theatre, Hailey, Idaho. Mining and tourist patronage.

JAMAICA INN: Charles Laughton, Maureen O'Hara, Emlyn Williams, Leslie Banks—The poor quality of the sound seemed to spoil this feature. Average business. Running time, 100 minutes. Played May 8-9.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

KNIGHTS OF THE RANGE: Russell Hayden, Jean Parker—A better than average Western. This type of story always brings extra business. Running time, 70 minutes. Played May 17-18.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

LIGHT THAT FAILED, THE: Ronald Coleman, Walter Huston, Ida Lupino, Muriel Angelus—A good picture that did not do business. Running time, 97 minutes. Played May 6-7.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

NIGHT OF NIGHTS: Pat O'Brien, Olympe Bradna, Roland Young—This absolutely the worst picture I have ever shown in my theatre. After seeing this, I can easily understand why people are staying away from theatres. Running time, 86 minutes. Played May 17-18.—Paul McBride, Avalon Theatre, Fillmore, Utah. Small town and rural patronage.

ROAD TO SINGAPORE: Bing Crosby, Bob Hope, Dorothy Lamour—Drew a good house and entertained the patrons but it was really a poor production for this cast. Our patrons have always liked these three stars, which accounts for the good house but it wouldn't seem as though they would come out for many pictures so poorly made. Running time, 87 minutes. Played May 11-12.—S. E. Bower, Desert Theatre, Hawthorne, Nev. Mining, CCC and Marine patronage.

RULERS OF THE SEA: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Margaret Lockwood, Will Fyffe—Nothing big but a good feature. Business average. This Will Fyffe is a real actor. The best dying scene I ever saw.—Douglas Miller, Rex Theatre, Taber, Alberta, Canada. Small town patronage.

SEVENTEEN: Jackie Cooper, Betty Field—Very disappointed in this one. Expected a really big picture but finally wound up with a programmer. Patrons seemed to be quite disappointed and business way off on this one!—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

SIDEWALKS OF LONDON: Charles Laughton, Vivien Leigh—We were told this was nose diving around town but in spite of unfavorable reports tried to slip this over on our unsuspecting audience. But the word had traveled around and we spent two lonesome days. Running tmie, 85 minutes. Played May 31-June 1.—H. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

TYPHOON: Dorothy Lamour, Robert Preston, Lynne Overman, J. Carroll Naish—An excellent South Sea Island picture, featuring Lamour, Preston, Lynne Overman, J. Carroll Naish. A tornado of tropic love, great forest fires, high winds and waves, drunken sailors and Coco, the chimpanzee, made up a very interesting picture with no dull moments intervening. Running time, 75 minutes. Played May 30-June 5.—William Noble. Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

UNION PACIFIC: Barbara Stanwyck, Joel McCrea, Akim Tamiroff, Lynne Overman, Robert Preston, Brian Donlevy—This one certainly pleased all of our patrons and that is not hard to understand, what with such an excellent cast and story. Perhaps, the outstanding characters in the eyes of our choosey audience were "Fiesta" Tamiroff and "Leach Overmile" Overman. The antics of these men kept the boys in a constant uproar. This picture brought Barbara Stanwyck before our audience for the first time in a long while and it is pleasing for me to state that she is still held in high regard as an outstanding actress. This picture is one that contains sufficient action, romance, comedy and historical facts to please most any audience so contact Paramount and treat your patrons to a really fine picture. Running time, 125 minutes. Played April 20.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

NEW CONTRIBUTORS TO DEPARTMENT

Two new contributors sent reports this week to the What the Picture Did for Me department and two others whose reports have been missing for some time resumed. The two new contributors are:

SAM BROOKS, Liberty Theatre, Hailey, Idaho.

DOUGLAS MILLER, Rex Theatre, Taber, Alberta, Canada.

The two who have resumed after a lapse are:

THEODORE J. FRIEDMAN, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y.

PAUL MCBRIDE, Avalon Theatre, Fillmore, Utah.

Read the reports of these and other exhibitors in the adjoining columns.

Republic

CALLING ALL MARINES: Helen Mack, Robert Kent, Donald Barry, Warren Hymer—Enjoyed real good week-end business on a dual bill with "In Early Arizona."—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

IN OLD MISSOURI: Weaver Brothers and Elviry —Our patrons came to see "Sidewalks of London" but this comedy saved the show. Plenty of good hearty laughs. A good half of any double bill. Running time, 69 minutes. Played May 30-June 1.—H. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

SOUTH OF THE BORDER: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Just a cheap western with a good song. But, play up the song and they will come.—Douglas Miller, Rex Theatre, Taber, Alberta, Canada. Small town patronage.

WYOMING OUTLAWS: Three Mesquiteers (John Wayne, Ray Corrigan, Raymond Hatton) Donald Barry, Adele Pearce—A better than average western with lot of action. Played with Warners' "Granny Get Your Gun." Running time, 55 minutes. Played May 10-11.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

ABE LINCOLN IN ILLINOIS: Raymond Massey, Ruth Gordon, Mary Howard—All those who saw this thought it was exceptionally good and commented afterwards about it. However, business was only average. If this type of picture does business anywhere, it should be here in a college town but for some reason or other it didn't. I am not sorry I played it but I would like to know the reason for its failure. It is truly a wonderful film. Running time, 110 minutes. Played May 16.—W. Varick Nevins, III. Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y.—Small college town and rural patronage.

ALLEGHENY UPRISING: Claire Trevor, John Wayne, Brian Donlevy, George Sanders—Just a a western and not a very good one at that. Give me "Hopalong" any time.—Douglas Miller, Rex Theatre, Taber, Alberta, Canada. Small town patronage.

HUNCHBACK OF NOTRE DAME, THE: Charles Laughton, Maureen O'Hara, Basil Rathbone, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Thomas Mitchell—Matinee business poor but evenings okay. Did extra business. Terrible but good at the box office. It seems they want to be frightened.—Douglas Miller, Rex Theatre, Taber, Alberta, Canada. Small town patronage.

NURSE EDITH CAVELL: Anna Neagle, Edna May Oliver, George Sanders, May Robson, Zasu Pitts —Everyone seemed to like it who came. No draw because of sad story. Running time, 97 minutes. Played December 14-16.—Douglas Miller, Rex Theatre, Taber, Alberta, Canada. Small town patronage.

PINOCCHIO: Disney Feature Cartoon—All I will say about it is adults won't come to see cartoon features any more and I don't intend to play another at 50 per cent.—Douglas Miller, Rex Theatre, Taber, Alberta, Canada. Small town patronage.

PINOCCHIO: Disney Feature Cartoon—Good picture and good business. People said it was better than "Snow White" or "Gulliver's Travels." Running time, 80 minutes. Played May 26-28.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BLUE BIRD, THE: Shirley Temple, Spring Byington—A very good story and quite an entertaining picture. A little fantastic but still good entertainment. Definitely not a mass appeal picture as the prior Shirley Temple films.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

DAY-TIME WIFE: Tyrone Power, Linda Darnell, Warren William, Binnie Barnes—A good picture with lots of comedy. Running time, 73 minutes. Played May 15-16.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

GRAPES OF WRATH, THE: Henry Fonda, Jane Darwell, John Carradine, Dorris Bowdon, Charley Grapewin—Excellent photography, excellent sound, excellent acting but only average business. Yes, it is depressing; but so is the war news and no one stops listening to the radio on that account. I guess I did better with it than some of the rest of you. I took in just enough so that the percentage paid for the guarantee. In other words, there almost was some overage. I guess "The Grapes of Wrath" were seedless. They certainly were seed less than other pictures I have run lately. (Pardon the pun). Running time, 128 minutes. Played May 30-June 1.—W. Varick Nevins, Ill., Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

GRAPES OF WRATH, THE: Henry Fonda, Jane Darwell, John Carradine, Dorris Bowdon, Charley Grapewin—The few patrons that came to see this picture did not like it. Another flop from Fox. Running time, 128 minutes. Played May 13-14.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

GRAPES OF WRATH, THE: Henry Fonda, Jane Darwell, John Carradine, Dorris Bowdon, Charley Grapewin—Excellently acted picture and one of the best of the year. However, the box office did not reflect so well for our Sunday business was way off. Our people have problems of their own without seeing others suffer. Running time, 128 minutes. Played May 25-27.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

GRAPES OF WRATH, THE: Henry Fonda, Jane Darwell, John Carradine. Dorris Bowdon, Charley Grapewin—A really swell picture! Superbly acted and having magnificent appeal. These pictures, although they do not break any box office records, certainly do fill the bill for entertainment. Played this picture to not one word of adverse criticism.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

GRAPES OF WRATH, THE: Henry Fonda, Jane Darwell, John Carradine. Dorris Bowdon, Charley Grapewin—Although we did very well, most of our patrons thought this picture was very depressihg. The direction and cast was tops. Running time, 128 minutes. Played May 19-20.—H. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

LITTLE OLD NEW YORK: Alice Faye, Fred MacMurray, Richard Green, Brenda Joyce—In a way it was like "Rulers of the Sea" but not half as good.—Douglas Miller, Rex Theatre, Taber, Alberta, Canada. Small town patronage.

STANLEY AND LIVINGSTONE: Spencer Tracy, Richard Greene, Nancy Kelly, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Charles Coburn, Walter Brennan, Henry Hull—I thought this was a fine picture. Different, too, from the general run. Box office about average. Why don't these top pictures bring extra business?—Douglas Miller, Rex Theatre, Taber, Alberta, Canada. Small town patronage.

SWANEE RIVER: Don Ameche, Andrea Leeds, Al Jolson—Here is a very good color film with fine music and beautiful scenes. I don't think it comes under the heading of great but it certainly drew a good crowd. Al Jolson does a very good job in a supporting role. I think it was the music that Stephen Foster wrote rather than the story that contained all the appeal. I doubled this with "Eternally Yours" and was not disappointed in the receipts. Running time, 86 minutes. Played May 17-18.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

SWANEE RIVER: Don Ameche, Andrea Leeds, Al Jolson—This picture is the tops in entertainment. Show business would show a great increase if there were more pictures of this caliber. I had numerous people tell me they liked this picture better than "Gone with the Wind." Running time, 86 minutes. Played May 26-28.—Paul McBride. Avalon Theatre, Fillmore, Utah. Small town and rural patronage.

SWANEE RIVER: Don Ameche, Andrea Leeds, Al Jolson—This is one swell picture but everybody in my territory had seen it before I was able to get it. Had good draw anyway. Why don't the producers make more pictures like this and quit cluttering up the screens with so much B's and C's and on down the alphabet?—J. N. Wells, Wells Theatre, Kingsland, Ga. General patronage.

THEY CAME BY NIGHT: Will Fyffe—I played this with "Four Wives" and drew a good crowd. One thing I can say for this English film is this: at least, no one walked out. The acent is not too, too bad. The third reel has a very funny drunk sequence in it and the last reel is fast and furious action. The first two reels just run along waiting for the last two to arrive. I won't comment on it; make up your own mind from what I just said. Running time, 73 minutes. Played May 24-25.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

VIVA CISCO KID: Cesar Romero, Jean Rogers—Pleased the week-end crowd. Fair business. Running time, 70 minutes. Played May 31-June 1.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

YOUNG MR. LINCOLN: Henry Fonda, Alice Brady, Marjorie Weaver, Arleen Whelan—Fine picture. Those who saw it said so but did not draw.—Douglas Miller, Rex Theatre, Taber, Alberta, Canada. Small town patronage.

United Artists

CHUMP AT OXFORD: Laurel and Hardy—This is just what the doctor ordered. A lot of hokum thrown together in a disjointed picture that drew extra business and plenty of laughs. Running time, 63 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

ETERNALLY YOURS: David Niven, Loretta Young, Hugh Herbert, Billie Burke, Zasu Pitts—This is an entertaining comedy that has a distinctly different flavor. A good crowd came to see "Swanee River" on the same program and seemed to enjoy themselves while this one was showing too. In other words, it is one of those nice pictures that is neither good nor bad. I don't think it would draw well enough as a single. Running time, 91 minutes. Played May 17-18.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

FOUR FEATHERS: John Clements, June Duprez, C. Aubrey Smith, Ralph Richardson—Good show, beautiful color, good acting and average business.—Douglas Miller, Rex Theatre, Taber, Alberta, Canada. Small town patronage.

LION HAS WINGS, THE: Merle Oberson, Ralph Richardson, June Duprez, Flora Robson—A difficult subject upon which to blithely heap criticism in these grim times. But, with the exception of its documentary values and certain footage here and there disclosing the unique and complicated methods by which Britain intends to thwart a Nazi invasion, "The Lion Has Wings" not only falls far below the standard of film entertainment expected by audiences in general but will also decidedly disappoint those whose intelligence prompts them to attend shows of this nature. I should be inclined to state that exhibitors contemplating a showing of "The Lion Has Wings" in the future should consider two important facts—first, the preparedness theme depicting a fully adequate British air force has been sufficiently challenged by now to cause a decided reaction in the audience. Second, the propaganda is singularly amateurish and impotent. The British boys are all sandy-haired and jolly fellows as they bring down one Nazi bomber after another, piloted by evil, narrow-eyed German "boys" between the ages of 35 and 40. Hitler was booed several times by the country boys who came to see a thrilling drama and desired an outlet but the main part of the audience sat and whispered amongst themselves, scraping their feet and shifting about in their seats (which, incidentally, are unusually comfortable and commodious—advt.). Ralph Richardson appears now and then to kiss Merle Oberon and vice versa but Lowell Thomas is always talking, even through those gripping scenes when comments offstage are absolutely unnecessary. I did not intend this review to be a criticism of countries or causes. It is merely written for the odd exhibitor who might thoroughly disappoint his audience by running "The Lion Has Wings" as a feature film and would surely benefit no cause in so doing. Played May 30-31.—C. T. Cooney, Jr., Waldo Theatre Corp., Waldoboro, Maine. General patronage.

LION HAS WINGS, THE: Merle Oberon, Ralph Richardson, June Duprez, Flora Robson—I thought I would make some money on this but didn't. Wasn't worth top money in this town.—Douglas Miller, Rex Theatre, Taber, Alberta, Canada. Small town patronage.

REBECCA: Laurence Olivier, Joan Fontaine, George Sanders, Judith Anderson—In general, Memorial Day is not considered a good playdate. However, I have no complaints about the business I did. It certainly went over big at the box office. Of course, it is an excellent film and everyone here liked it very much. The main comment, though, was this, "Why can't all pictures follow the book as well as 'Rebecca'? I hope more producers will pay attention to this fact. Quite a few people around here have almost quit going to pictures made from books they have read because they claim changing the story ruins the book for them. "Rebecca" helped reclaim some of these people. However, don't make one producer do the whole thing. Well, anyway, we can face the summer slump with better spirits now. Running time, 128 minutes. Played May 30.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

YOUNG IN HEART, THE: Janet Gaynor, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Paulette Goddard, Billie Burke, Roland Young—Everybody that saw this picture came out with praises. We did not enjoy good business on it and I don't know why.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Universal

BIG GUY, THE: Victor McLaglen, Jackie Cooper—A good action filled programmer from Universal. McLaglen doesn't give any too good of a performance but Jackie Cooper does his share of acting to make this entertaining film fare.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

DANGER ON WHEELS: Richard Arlen, Andy Devine—The best in this series of pictures thus far. These stars well liked and get us business for bargain nights better than most program pictures. Running time, 61 minutes.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

DESTRY RIDES AGAIN: Marlene Dietrich, James Stewart, Charles Winninger, Brian Aherne, Mischa Auer, Una Merkel—Good stars, well cast. Don't be afraid of this one. It will make money.—Douglas Miller, Rex Theatre, Taber, Alberta, Canada. Small town patronage.

FIRST LOVE: Deanna Durbin, Helen Parrish, Robert Stack, Eugene Pallette, Leatrice Joy—A fair show but not the best Durbin by any means.—Douglas Miller, Rex Theatre, Taber, Alberta, Canada. Small town patronage.

UNEXPECTED FATHER: Baby Sandy, Mischa Auer—This was a real show. I would say a worthy "B." Played on a single bill and did extra business.—Douglas Miller, Rex Theatre, Taber, Alberta, Canada. Small town patronage.

Warner Brothers

CHILD IS BORN, A: Geraldine Fitzgerald, Jeffrey Lynn, Gladys George—A picture that did not go over here. The material seemed to be put together in a spotty fashion and the ladies did not receive it as we had hoped. The enigmatical atmosphere seemed to depress rather than entertain or educate. They have all the material needed here for a fine picture but didn't use it. Running time, 79 minutes.—Played May 26-28.—Simon Galitzki, Coed Theatre, Topeka, Kansas. General patronage.

CHILD IS BORN, A: Geraldine Fitzgerald, Jeffrey Lynn, Gladys George—Fair show. Has wonderful showmanship possibilities.—Douglas Miller, Rex Theatre, Taber, Alberta, Canada. Small town patronage.

GRANNY GET YOUR GUN: May Robson, Harry Davenport, Margot Stevenson—A program picture that did more business than the average special production. Our patrons enjoyed this picture. Played with Republic's "Wyoming Outlaw." Running time, 56 minutes. Played May 10-11.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

INVISIBLE STRIPES: George Raft, William Holden, Jane Bryan, Humphrey Bogart—The usual run of the mill type of picture with a theme that's threadbare. I don't see why they continue to make a film of this type. They certainly do no good, taking up a lot of time and it costs money to make them. I presume they would go over in some places but they certainly do not have universal appeal. Running time, 82 minutes. Played May 24-25.—Simon Galitzki, Coed Theatre, Topeka, Kansas. General patronage.

Louisiana Has Flood of Bills

A deluge of new bills directly or indirectly affecting the motion picture industry of Louisiana found their way into the state legislature before the deadline for filing of such proposed acts was reached this week.

New Tax Approved

The Louisiana House of Representatives, Friday, June 7, passed a bill imposing a tax up to $200 per theatre on motion picture circuits, based on the number of units run anywhere in the United States. The bill is identical with one passed by the House at the 1938 session but killed by the Senate. The new bill has yet to face the Senate. Proceeds would go to welfare work with its sponsor, Representative A. D. Floyers, Jena, estimating a return of $50,000 to $250,000 a year.

The tax would begin at $50 for each house up to five; $75 for each to 10; $100 to 20; $125 to 30; $150 to 40; $175 to 50 and 200 for each above 50.

Censorship Bills in Senate

Two separate Senate bills, reading almost identical, would make censorship of motion pictures provided by acts of 1935 mandatory. While this act has been in force five years in the state under the guiding hand of the late Huey P. Long "dictatorship" rule recently broken in Louisiana after 12 years duration, it had never been enforced. Under the two bills filed for mandate, the state board would be comprised of five men appointed by the governor and would assess fees computed according to length of films to be censored.

In the meantime, Representative Burg of New Orleans threw a bill into the House asking complete repeal of the 1935 act creating the censorship board. This same representative also filed a House bill which would repeal an act which permits the city of New Orleans to levy a city amusement tax of 2 per cent on admissions.

A Senate bill by Senator Nick Carbejal of New Orleans would limit to five cents the admission price to picture shows to children under 15 years of age. Senate Bill 311 by Senator Dudley Le Blanc of Abbeville would prohibit operators of chain theatres in the state from operating more than one house in each town of less than 20,000 population.

Additional Tax Measure

Another tax measure before the Louisiana House which would impose an admission levy beginning with one cent on tickets of 11 to 18 cents and up to 10 cents on dollar tickets has been disclaimed by the administration and may thus face a tough battle for success. It is sponsored by Representative Wilbur Teal McCain of Grant parish and covers all phases of amusements except entertainment where 75 per cent or more of the proceeds go to charity. Guesses are that the bill would bring in $1,000,000 or more a year with proceeds for welfare work.

The tax graduates about 18 cents with two cents up to 28 cents tickets and one cent hereafter for each 10-cent increase in admission up to $1. Thereafter the rate is 10 cents plus an additional penny for each added 25 cents. Places where food on drink is served along with entertainment, the tax will be based on 25 per cent of the food and drink bill in addition to admission costs.

Sunday Films

The Ravena theatre, Ravena, N. Y., operated by the Mitchell Conery circuit, is now operating Sundays following a favorable referendum by voters of the town.

Charlotte's, N. C., long fight for Sunday motion pictures received a definite set back when the city council defeated a proposal for Sunday films offered by Councilman H. H. Baxter. Mr. Baxter then proposed blue laws so rigid, in a complete turnabout, that Charlotte citizens would not be permitted to buy soft drinks on Sundays.

The controversy over Delaware's Sunday blue laws flared anew at Dover last week where Hansel Marvel, 23 year old dance hall operator, finishing a 24 hour sentence in Kent County jail, said he intended to "bust Delaware's Sunday blue laws wide open or close down everything in the state."

Detroit Theatres' Reprieve

Detroit theatres got a reprieve this week on the ordinance banning red or flashing signs within 22 feet of a sidewalk, when Mayor Edward J. Jeffries threatened to veto the bill unless the council granted a public hearing. United Detroit Theatres, Allied Theatres and Co-operative Theatres of Michigan acted jointly in opposing the ordinance.

Pettey Working for PM

Tom Pettey, formerly press representative for the Motion Picture Producers Association, in Hollywood, has been appointed Hollywood correspondent for PM, a New York daily newspaper, which begins operation this month. Mr. Pettey was in New York this week, discussing his duties with the PM publishers.

Chatkin Joins Filmack

Herbert Chatkin, formerly with National Screen Service, has joined the Filmack Trailer Company in Chicago. He becomes promotion manager.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor

GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

THE LONG VIEW

It's a cinch to point out that the manager's part is to get in there and pitch, week-in and week-out. It isn't any more difficult to emphasize that the manager bears a heavy responsibility in stirring up clouds of boxoffice dust from one end of the year to the other. These declarations are fairly obvious by now, at least to the members who, as these pages show, sit up nights doping out healthy ways and means of keeping their theatres in the public limelight. It should be equally obvious that the managers who shoulder these responsibilities most effectively are those possessed of a sound, workable philosophy to help them do a consistently top job, a philosophy often to be summed up in the line:

"If a picture is played, it has to be sold."

In reporting his dynamic two-in-one campaign on "Joe and Ethel Turp", told on another page, Roy Hanson, for instance, sets forth his findings in these words:

"Our plan is to sell the pictures with entertainment value but that lack natural boxoffice pull. We get widespread coverage for the big nationally advertised pictures, but we try to execute new and novel stunts to sell the sleepers."

Describing his success with "Balalaika", Jimmy Redmond lays it on the line thusly:

"I have been following your editorial page with interest because of the angle you are using to tell fellows that a picture is never pre-sold, that it must be sold by the manager. I have found out that pictures rated "thumbs-down" can be sold if the right approach is used in your own particular territory."

However the manager regards his labors, his mission—if you will—neither success nor contentment in his work can be had unless he develops a practical "reason-why" to back him up when the going is hard. It has numerously been proven that a picture's draw is determined by the theatreman's conception of what he has to sell.

WAR NEWS IN THE THEATRE

It is already evident that the handling of war news has divided exhibition into two camps. As protection for the boxoffice, one side is bending every effort to tie in the latest flashes as a part of the theatre program. The other group is set agin it, in emphasizing that motion picture entertainment is to be offered as an escape from war tension and decidedly not as a part of it.

Since the conflict will continue to occupy the press, radio and conversation, any discussion at this point to clarify the situation is to be regarded as a matter of high importance to the health of the grosses. In seeking opinions from representative members, to be published in early issues, your Round Table hopes to present sufficient evidence from both sides for the guidance of those seeking counsel.

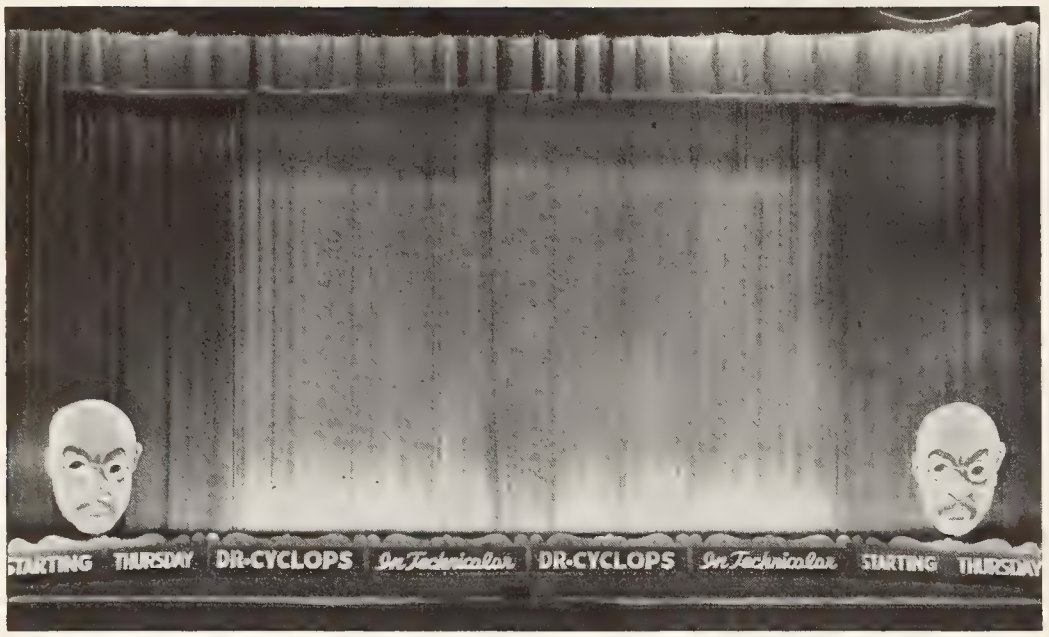
SOMEWHAT ON THE SAME

Although your Round Table will refrain at this time from taking sides in the matter set forth above, we are not hesitant in casting an immediate vote with those who stress the need of more screwballery to offset the war jitters. Thus, the publication on another page of Harry Palmer's April Fool show is in keeping with suggestions from members that this type of buffoonery be taken up over a wider terrain.

Such jestful didoes are hardly intended to replace any unit of the regular program. Where skillfully intruded as added attractions, they can be expected to strengthen the theatre's appeal as a refuge from the ominous echoes of battle.



A-Mike Vogel

Your Chairman welcomes this opportunity to reply to the member from the second-run who accompanies an excellent campaign with the complaint that subsequent-run theatres do not get any too much space in these pages.

The Round Table functions mainly as a clearing house for tested ideas in the field. No one type of operation is favored over another. The section is wide open for all, first or last run, de luxe or neighborhood, key city or hamlet. It's "what", not "where".

If there be a demand for more subsequent-run campaigns, let more members in such situations answer the call and come a-runnin'.

"You send 'em. We print 'em."

Arranged by Manager Charlie Bierbauer and publicist Nick Todorov was the stage setting in advance of "Dr. Cyclops" at the W. & V. Colonial, Allentown, Pa. Animation was provided by the blinking eyes in the cutout heads of the scientist which were placed at either side of the stage.

The wheel of fortune goes round and round, but this time John Hesse at the Roger Sherman, in New Haven, knows where it goes, and offers guest tickets as a consequence. Patrons are invited to try their spinning luck and if the wheel stops at number on which "It's a Date" opens, they win.

Ben Simon at Loew's Metropolitan in Brooklyn ushered in his spring season by converting his lobby into a rustic scene. Tacked to wooden fence were crude signs of forthcoming attractions and a breath of the outdoors was created by spotting of artificial dogwood and apple blossom trees.

Round Table In Pictures

Latest model mimeograph duplicator was secured by Les Pollock for "Edison, the Man" lobby stunt at Loew's, Rochester. Usherettes operated machine distributing handbills which called attention to the picture and playdates. Poster copy was omitted in order to arouse patrons' curiosity.

'Anything Can Happen' Show In Which "Anything" Does

Palmer's Screwball Party Includes "Hot Seat" and Other Gags

The details of Harry Palmer's April Fool show, in these columns, are set down in answer to the growing demand among theatremen for more screwballery in their programs to counteract the tension of these war-torn days.

Although planned for just one day of the year, it has been suggested that the April Fool shows put on variously by members are ideal for adaptation at other times along the pattern traced by the "Take A Chance" and "Mystery" shows, found highly popular some years back.

Sold well in advance as a program in which "anything can happen," the April Fool's midnight show put on by Harry Palmer, at the Majestic, Seymour, Ind., proved to be one in which plenty of screwballery was let loose. This was indicated ahead especially in the advertising out front which was purposely jumbled.

To start the proceedings at the midnight show, special tickets colored differently from the others were placed in the ticket machine, spaced every 30 or 40 apart. Cashier watched for these and when they came up, admissions were returned and patrons told the ticket was on the house. Every tenth person was presented with large lollypop, or trick hat, blowout, etc., by the doorman.

Inside lobby, on platform, was placed one of the ushers with large basket of flowers, to be presented to each woman patron. When the ladies reached for the flowers, they received only the stem, the flowers being previously clipped and held together by the usher's fingers. The bloom was tossed back into the basket and another prepared for the next "victim." The gag gathered an appreciative audience of those who had "bit" and watched to see others taken in on it. Ushers were dressed in character, most with shirt tails out, some in pajamas. All carried lanterns instead of flashlights. In some instances, ushers requested patrons to escort them to seats.

Trick Newsreel Opens Show

Program opened with the regular Movietone introduction of the news, followed by old clips of the early thirties and including a 1926 style show. None of the subtitles fitted the subjects. Next was a Popeye with patrons instructed, via trailer, to use colored glasses previously distributed by the ushers so that the cartoon could be seen in color. Nothing happened since the glasses revealed nothing.

After the cartoon, house lights were brought up and 14 ushers, as popcorn and candy venders turned loose in the aisles. If popcorn was purchased, the nickel was given to another patron who was told to buy a candy bar from another vendor who, in turn, passed the coin to another patron asked to buy a balloon from an usher with a handful of them. Balloons were filled with gas and released just before purchasers could get to them. The nickels were thus kept in circulation until all the wares were disposed of. The entire stunt lasted but a few minutes as the ushers worked fast.

Male-Milliner Stunt Pleases

At the conclusion of the vending session, announcement was made from the stage that at the end of 60 seconds, a certain theatre seat would be "hot." Large clock was placed on stage to tick off the seconds. Patrons began to squirm with some standing as the minute ended when a plant in the audience let out a yell and galloped up the aisle.

An audience-participation stunt that proved popular was a woman's hat trimming contest with six male patrons invited on the stage to take part, the theatre providing all the necessary materials for the trimming. Then, the curtains were parted to reveal an assortment of tin pans, sauce pans, lamp shades, waste baskets, small mops, brooms, paint brushes, kitchen utensils, fresh vegetables. From these, plus yards of adhesive tape, the entrants went to work behind the curtain. Over the house microphone and delivered in horse race reporter style, Palmer gave a running account of the contest. Curtain was opened when hats were completed with audience allowed to vote for the best, awarded the prize of a large ice cream cone.

The feature presentation was introduced by a trailer announcement head, with the trailer cut into the feature in such a way that the first reel was well on its way before patrons realized they were viewing the feature picture.

A melodrama is denoted by the abbreviation Mel., Comedy by Com., Comedy-Melodrama by Com.-Mel., Musical by Mus., Musical Comedy by Mus.-Com., Western by West. If the production is made in color, the letter "C" appears in parenthesis after the classification. Thus: Com.-Mel. (C) denotes a Comedy-Melodrama in Color.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger (†) symbol indicates picture is of the 1939-40 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

WAR ADJUSTMENT

THE motion picture continues, with many perplexities, to adjust itself to a world at war, an embittered, desperately busy world, an uncertain world in which every one is either fighting or fearing.

For years, not too heedfully, production and distribution have been doing more fretting than planning about a shrinking world market. Now, for a while, the war has made all of the decisions necessary. The world market is no problem.

At long last, in halting phrases of most unfamiliar and difficult words, Hollywood is talking economies, but not out loud. The budgets are getting attention. There is a speed-up to save costly payrolls. But in that community where competence has always been measured by costs and dollars there are few who know how to say what, today. There are, nonetheless, evidences here and there encouraging the notion that Hollywood, now that it has to live off the homefolks, will be arranging to make itself entertaining to them, anyway.

Pleasant encouragement is had from the official expression of Mr. Barney Balaban this week saying that domestic theatre receipts are now "slightly in excess" of those for the same period last year, and holding that indications point to increase.

There should be, indeed, prospect of box office increase if the billions of dollars of the armament program are brought to bear on industrial payrolls. It has long been clear enough that with certain lags in response, the box office curve must follow the payroll graph. The motion picture is well woven into the warp and woof of the national economic fabric—especially the woof!

MEANWHILE, exhibition, which has been through wars before, is now experiencing the first competition with a war interest fanned and fed by radio.

For some weeks now, as recorded in this week's news pages, the box office has been variously invaded by the radio's hold on attention. Commentators and war news broadcasters have suddenly become new stars, with audiences greater than ever recorded before.

In some instances, without marked success, and without entirely clear legal title to the process, theatres have been interrupting shows for radio interludes.

Others have been seeking to present more topical material, more newsreel coverage, and to give these attentions special exploitation.

Interesting discussion by showmen is presented in this week's issue in the Round Table section.

The showmen responding to Mr. A-Mike Vogel's inquiry appear to have preponderantly decided that the theatre is a place where most of the patrons would like to escape a world at war and find their entertainment in fancies detached from the world of the actual, the terribly actual. But the vote is not overwhelmingly one-sided. One thing is clear: The city folks, surrounded with newspaper extras and all manner of swift communication, care less for war on the screen than the more remote and lesser communities, where it seems farther away.

Variations in community reaction are marked. There is evidence again that the motion picture theatre needs to be operated by a showman, and with enough control of his program and offerings to fit them to the tastes, the changing tastes, of his audience.

Exhibition is something that cannot be shipped in a can.

TOO MUCH STAR

DESPITE all the shouting, biography on the screen is not an imposing success, despite the fact that it appears to be, as Mr. Damon Runyon remarks, "really excellent cinema fodder".

Mr. Runyon pondering the problem has tended to an opinion that screen biography seems to fail because of the restrictions imposed by relatives, heirs, descendants, reducing the subject to namby-pamby and inhuman sanctity. That may be part of it. It is true, too, that the more successful autobiographical pictures have been devoted to figures more remote.

A more important unrecognized factor is that the casting of biographical pictures always puts a well-known star in the role of the well-known person to be depicted. That brings a clash, conscious or unconscious, in the mind of the spectator. Dramatic illusion cannot be had of the divided state of mind that results from seeing Mr. Mickey Rooney playing Mr. Thomas A. Edison, when you have to be so very conscious that it is Mr. Rooney, as an example. A substantially unknown player, certainly not a star, would do better in the role of actuality. The relatively unknown player would be more acceptable in the role of the well known personality. There's not enough make-believe on the screen with two stars in the single role, the well-known player and the well-known subject. The prescription calls for complete submersion of the player in the part, and no star can ever achieve that.

ELECTRONIC EYE

WE hear so much about the triumphs, real and fancied, on the studio stages of Hollywood, but so very little indeed of those technological operations which begin at the camera and end at the projection machine-and-screen.

Just now comes word, incidentally, indirectly, by way of Schenectady and the General Electric Company, of the efficiency of the new exposure meters which enable the cameramen of Hollywood so to standardize their exposures as to make negatives with so little variation that whole productions can go through the printing machine which make the theatre positives with only one or two light changes.

This acquires significance for the layman by considering the fact that the typical and standard printing machines long in use by the laboratories supply a capacity for eighteen gradations or intensities of light, in anticipation of that range of variation in the density of the negative. The new light meters have a capacity for the accurate measurement of light on the set from .05 to 1,700 candlepower per square foot. No eye can guess that well.

This Week in the News

War Benefit Films

THE organized American motion picture industry will supply Canadian showmen with prints of certain features without charge for special war benefit showings in the Dominion in connection with the Canadians' war savings' stamp drive.

The action was decreed at the regular quarterly meeting of the directors of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America in New York Wednesday afternoon after they heard an appeal from N. L. Nathanson, president of Famous Players-Canadian Corporation and chairman of the Canadian motion picture industry committee on cooperation with the Canadian Government.

In the special war savings shows patrons are to be admitted to theatres on presentation of war savings stamps.

Details of print delivery and selection will be worked out soon, it was said.

Also present at the meeting were Will H. Hays, president of the MPPDA; E. W. Hammons, Educational; E. B. Hatrick, News of the Day; W. C. Michel, Twentieth Century-Fox; Murray Silverstone, United Artists; George Schaefer, RKO; Barney Balaban, Paramount; Jack Cohn, Columbia; David Bernstein, Loew's; J. A. Hazen, Warners; Charles Prutzman, Universal, and Major Frederick L. Herron.

Preparation of the Allied war charities feature to be made by British and French nationals now in Hollywood started this week and actual shooting will begin shortly, Herbert Wilcox of London, a principal in the project, said in New York Wednesday. The services of all talent are being contributed, and Mr. Wilcox estimated a $2,000,000 net from world distribution, all profits to be turned over to Allied and sympathetic accredited charities.

The story, "Octave of Jealousy," an original by Stacy Aumonier, will be devoid of propaganda, Mr. Wilcox said. RKO will finance the picture and distribute it.

The War and Business

TWO separate sources reported this week that business is better at U. S. movie box offices, despite complaints to the contrary, complaints expressed mostly in general terms.

Barney Balaban, president of Paramount, in New York, Tuesday, said "Domestic theatre business is slightly in excess of the same period last year, no decline is expected. In fact," he added, "indications point to the contrary." (See page 14.)

And from the New York Wall Street sector came a report from Poor's, investment publishers, that in the domestic market, the outlook is much brighter, with greater theatre attendance reflecting from improved industrial conditions growing mostly out of war and defense orders. It was estimated that a rise of only seven per cent in box office receipts would prove compensatory to a 50 per cent decline in foreign film rentals.

In England, further tightening of defense preparations further reduced theatre business. With the turning of the war in the direction of England, U. S. film companies were expecting a complete shutdown.

In France, it was presumed that the motion picture business was at a complete standstill. In the absence of any means of wire contact—cable and wire service having been suspended—there was no telling the state of affairs cinemawise, nor of the status of the monies U. S. companies have on deposit in banks there. Distributors in New York have suspended shipments of prints.

The Job—in Wartime

Today our world is at war. The spirit and strength of all peoples devoted to the doctrine of human rights and individual liberties is on trial by ordeal against the fires of that age-old viciousness that might makes right.

All that is meant by "the American way" is also on trial.

The French nation, weakened from within by subversive disorders, class hatreds, political theorists and selfish politicians, has failed. With this failure what has been one of the finest flowerings of modern civilization goes into the shadows. If it is to be restored to the light it must be re-born in pain and travail.

The British people and its institutions, culturally and traditionally akin to our people and our institutions, stand bravely, but imperilled, against the menacing fires.

For America and "the American way" we are going—perhaps driven—into a vast program of armament, whether it be preparation for war or preparation for peace. Armament is now the overwhelming national concern. World conditions are such that while we may not be at war, we are not at peace.

It is under such world conditions that the motion picture and its industry must function.

While there is much that the motion picture industry may do, the best that it can do is to function soundly and competently as a purveyor of entertainment which in our days and for our people has become a necessity of life.

A people loyal to "the American way" is the nation's best measure of preparedness. To the sum of such devotion and loyalty the motion picture, by offering wholesome, inspiring and refreshing entertainment, can contribute much.

Because so much of the structure and policies of the industry are under special legal and social attention, it is well that it should be remembered that commercial stability of its industrial and commercial mechanisms is a necessary and traditional component of "the American way"—that way which presumes a good life for those who can earn it, and charity, public and private, for the rest.

Such stability, maintained within the requirements of its total social responsibilities, will enable the industry to do its substantial share for the continuance of "the American way" against all assailants, foreign and domestic.

The War and Taxes

THE Customs Excise Office in London Wednesday told the British film industry in that country that motion pictures must contribute more taxes for the war. No amount was disclosed, but it will probably be around $10,000,000. The statement was made after the organized exhibitors and distributors had discussed with the Government the difficulties of applying the new purchase tax to theatre admissions.

Word from London Wednesday indicated that the Government was willing to accept payment by an increase in the entertainments tax, with the formulation of a practical plan left to the trade. The Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association was expected to formulate a carefully graded tax scheme, with the Government, of course, having the final word on the approval of the tax.

The prime objective of the CEA is to continue six-pence tickets tax free.

Daily Newsmagazine

"PM" used to mean Penn-Maryland whiskey, but now it's a newspaper, a five cent newspaper in two colors, not quite tabloid in size and looking very much indeed like a slick Sunday supplement, issued in New York daily beginning Tuesday. The project is the promotion and enterprise of Ralph Ingersoll, with much upper register financial backing, in sequel to his marked successes in the service of the New Yorker, Time, et al.

The publication has many of the aspects of Time, Life, Fortune, a touch of the New Yorker and a whiff of Esquire, with remote undertones of the Readers' Digest. The policy has not been made clear. It is said to be subject to change without notice.

An endeavour, avowed, has been made to make PM free of all newspaper precedent, formulæ, pattern. That part of the project is an entire success.

An exceptionally competent promotion job was done.

Tom Pettey, formerly of the West Coast Hays office and Mrs. Cecelia Ager, who wrote "Going Places" for Variety, and a contributor to sundry better magazines, are taking care of cinema matters for PM.

PM is a five cent daily—there's to be a weekly edition, Saturdays. The paper is to carry no advertising.

Odlum for Divorcement

ONE of the biggest stockholders of one of the "big eight," Floyd B. Odlum, of Atlas, in RKO, threw a bombshell into the ranks of distributor-circuit operators Tuesday morning when he openly advocated circuit divorcement, for more profits, more efficiency. When one company, such as his RKO, engages in production-distribution and exhibition, the interests of one branch dominates the other, he said.

Mr. Odlum had just appeared before Federal Judge William Bondy, in New York, on some final details pertaining to RKO's reorganization (see page 16) when he turned to reporters with the statement which must have echoed in chambers nearby, in the very court house where lawyers for the majors were trying to settle the Government's anti-trust prosecution on the basis of no theatre divorcement (see page 12).

He said he had tried to bring about theatre divorcement in RKO long before the Government filed its suit for divorcement, in 1938, seeking to set up two separate and distinct companies, but other interests in the company disapproved.

Mr. Odlum favors single selling, too, each picture on its individual merit.

The Nick Case

MOTION PICTURE unionists hold the dubious distinction of being among the very first to be arraigned on charges of violating the Federal anti-racketeering act. Last week, John P. Nick, ousted boss of Projectionists Local 43, in St. Louis, surrendered, and on Monday, Clyde Weston, his chief aide, gave up, $15,000 bail being set for both.

The act, seldom invoked in the country and used here for the first time in St. Louis, was designed to protect trade and commerce against interference by violence, threats, coercion or intimidation.

The pair are alleged to have received $6,500 from St. Louis exhibitors to forestall wage demands in 1937 made by working members of their projectionists' union, and to have set up the Cooperative Sound Supply Company which alone was allowed to make sound equipment repairs in St. Louis projection rooms.

October 14th has been set as the date for the appeal hearing asked of the Missouri Supreme Court by the St. Louis Post-Dispatch from jail sentences for contempt of court imposed on staff members for criticizing, in cartoons and editorials, the original decision dismissing the Nick-Brady extortion case.

Rockefeller Column

THREE New York photographers touring the South making a motion picture of Negro education, or lack of it, for the Rockefeller General Education Board, were arrested last weekend at Memphis on suspicion of fifth column activities. They were released Monday after some frantic telephoning to New York.

Arrested were Richard J. Morris, Jr., cousin of Newbold Morris, head of New York's City Council; Roger Barlow and Henwar Rodakiewicz.

Said Chief Will Lee, of the Memphis Police Department, as quoted by United Press: "Why, they are a Communistic setup. One of them told me himself a Negro was as good as a white man. They're down here stirring up the Negroes."

U. S. "Life" Ban Stays

CHICAGO police censors' ban on the United States Government's "Fight for Life" will not be lifted, the police insisting that the film on childbirth that was sponsored and financed by the Federal Government, produced by Pare Lorentz, and distributed by Columbia Pictures, is an unfit subject for theatre audiences.

THIS WEEK IN PICTURES

PUBLICITY men are repetitiously fond of Christmas, St. Valentine's Day, Easter and the Fourth of July. Well in advance of the dates they photograph starlets as Santa Clauses, Valentines and bunnies. RKO was first under the Fourth of July wire with Virginia Dale, the entry having arrived on the art desk at 9:45 A. M., June 18th.

HOLLYWOOD PREMIERE, below. Warner Brothers went all out for the opening of its "All This and Heaven, Too" at the Carthay Circle. In the lobby are Harry M. Warner before a battery of microphones and Bette Davis, star of the piece, with her mother, Mrs. Ruth Davis. Of Miss Davis' performance William R. Weaver reports in his review of the picture on page 44, "It is being said, as usual, that her portrayal entitles her to yet another Academy Award."

THE RKO publicity staff goes to Towne. Meeting the producer of "Tom Brown's School Days" at LaGuardia Field, New York, and undoubtedly entirely unaware of the camera are Rutgers Neilson, Jack Level and Jack Lewis, all of the home office staff.

CONSENT DECREE NEGOTIATORS AT BASIC POINTS OF SUIT SETTLEMENT

Department of Justice and Defense Attorneys Reported Discussing Arbitration Plan; Long Delay Seen Possible

The fourth postponement of the Government's "key" New York anti-trust suit against the majors, granted on Monday by Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard, to June 26th, indicated that continued progress is being made in the secret negotiations between counsel for the eight companies and representatives of the Department of Justice toward finding a basis for a consent decree. With the question of theatre divorcement held in abeyance, arbitration and basic points on other matters are receiving primary attention this week.

Local Buying Emphasized

In addition to the desire to establish a permanent system of arbitration in the industry, the Government wants reforms in distribution and theatre practices. The Department of Justice is firm in its stand on local buying. The companies are conceding nothing and weighing carefully each word of every sentence in the Government proposals.

Basis for the consent decree as being discussed at present is the Department of Commerce suggestions for such a decree and the proposed Trade Practice Code plus certain points required by the Department of Justice.

As a basis for negotiation of an arbitration section, the parties have adopted in principle Section Eight of the Department of Commerce suggestions of this point, but no definite action has been taken.

Arbitration Proposal

The Department of Commerce's proposal on arbitration follows:

(a) A panel of approximately 10 neutral arbitrators for each exchange district shall be designated by the American Arbitration Society. Neutral arbitrators shall not have any past or present connection with the production, distribution or exhibition of motion pictures nor any interest in any theatre, as either landlord, lessor or otherwise. The neutral arbitrators shall be paid on a per diem basis when hearing a case, the amount paid to be attractive enough to assure the services of responsible persons.

(b) Each of the parties in interest shall have the right to designate an arbitrator to hear the controversy with the neutral arbitrator, to advise with him, but to have no vote.

(c) There shall be an arbitration appeal board consisting of three members appointed by the court, each of whom shall be a person of known impartiality and distinction. One member shall be designated by the court as chairman of the board. The jurisdiction of the board shall be to hear and determine appeals.

(d) An exhibitor who has the right to arbitrate under any of the provisions of this decree may require the distributor to arbitrate the controversy, giving notice to the Secretary of the Arbitration Board located within his district. The parties to the controversy shall mutually agree upon a neutral arbitrator from the panel established for the exchange district in which the theatre of the complaining exhibitor is located. If the parties cannot agree on the choice of a neutral arbitrator from the panel within a reasonable time, the chairman of the arbitration board shall select a neutral arbitrator from the panel.

Liquidated Damages Penalty

(e) The arbitrator shall award costs against either party or apportion them among the parties as he may deem proper.

(f) The arbitrator may provide a penalty in the form of liquidated damages for failure to abide by the award.

In order to discourage unwarranted resort to arbitration, the arbitrator shall be empowered to award a sum of money as liquidated damages in favor a respondent distributor when he finds that the exhibitor's resort to arbitration was frivolous or made for the purpose of harassment or vexation.

(g) The maintenance and functioning of the arbitration offices and personnel in each exchange district shall be under the jurisdiction of a board consisting of three members. One member to be a representative of the Department of Commerce, one member to be a representative of the exhibitor's group and one member to be a representative of the distributors. This committee shall employ an executive secretary to carry out under its direction the business management of the arbitration machinery. Among the responsibilities of the committee, it shall be the duty of budgeting the cost of operating the arbitration machinery renting offices, maintaining offices, engaging personnel. Before the entry of the decree the committee shall fix by unanimous agreement the maximum annual cost of arbitration machinery. It will be indicated by an exchange of letters that the maximum cost so fixed is deemed to be adequate by officials of the Department of Justice. Any increase in the amounts so fixed shall be made only after a majority of the companies approve.

(h) The cost of the arbitration machinery shall be met out of a fund made up of (1) a small percentage of the gross receipts of each distributor; (2) a nominal sum such as five or ten cents per picture leased shall be paid by the exhibitor and (3) a reasonable filing fee for each arbitration proceeding to be paid by the filing party.

Long Negotiations Seen

Company counsel, executives and sales managers have participated in discussion on the proposed consent decree. The Department of Justice has been represented by Paul Williams, trial counsel; James Hayes, Robert L. Wright, Robert Sher and J. Stephen Doyle. Thurman W. Arnold, Assistant Attorney General has also participated in the talks and is following closely progress made.

Judge Goddard insisted that he be kept informed of developments so that he could arrange his schedule. On Monday after obtaining an adjournment until June 26th, Mr. Doyle privately informed the Judge of progress of the conferences. Judge Goddard has assigned himself to hear other motions, indicating that settlement conferences are expected to last a considerable period.

Data Sought in Nashville

The Crescent Amusement Company has filed a motion with the clerk of the U. S. District Court in Nashville requesting a hearing in the federal court on June 29th or soon thereafter in the Government's anti-trust case against the Crescent Company and Affiliated theatres and major distributors. The motion requested that the Government be directed in certain circumstances to furnish the defendants with whatever knowledge or information it may hereafter obtain or may have obtained since the filing of its recent bill of particulars.

Missouri Case Motion

Defendants in the damage suit filed by Frank Cassil, Rialto, St. Joseph, Mo., against Dubinsky Brothers and major distributors have filed an application for a bill of particulars and Mr. Cassil has been given until Friday to file the information. Dubinsky Brothers, in addition to the request for more data from Mr. Cassil, have filed a motion to quash the summonses issued in the case on the ground that Dubinsky Brothers were named as a partnership and not as individuals.

Set Trial Date

Federal Judge Ernest A. O'Brien has set July 18th for the opening of the trial of the Midwest Theatres et al against the Co-operative Theatres of Michigan.

BLOCK BOOKING BILL COMMITTEE DELAYS

The probability that action on the Neely anti-block booking bill in Congress would be deferred by a House Interstate subcommittee for at least a month was seen Wednesday night as the result of Congress' recessional for the Republican convention, in Philadelphia, starting Monday, and a desire by some subcommittee members to determine progress of the negotiations in New York for a settlement of the Government's "key" trust suit.

Thus far the House Neely bill subcommittee has not met, due to attention required to national defense legislation, but individual members are understood to have discussed block booking.

Representative Martin J. Kennedy, Democrat, New York, one of the subcommittee, Wednesday paid tribute to film executives who testified at the hearings for their forthright statements and their apparent desire to work out their problems with exhibitors, adding that many of the practices discussed at the hearings could be corrected by the industry itself.

NEW TAX WOULD HIT EVERY THEATRE; FIVE YEAR PERIOD TO START JULY 1

Senate Committee Recommends Amendment Providing Sliding Scale Starting at 10 Cents; $130,000,000 Revenue Seen

Sweeping changes in the Federal admission tax structure to apply a ticket tax to every theatre in the country, running for five years starting July 1st, were unexpectedly recommended Monday by the Senate Finance Committee, after the House of Representatives, last week, had voted to apply taxes only to tickets of 30 cents or more, against the 40 cent minimum ticket exemption which has prevailed.

Independent exhibitors started in midweek to attack the tax on low admissions. See page 15.

A possible revenue of more than $130,000,000 a year for the next five years from all amusements, probably more than half of it coming from motion picture theatres, was immediately forced in Washington on the basis of the broad admission tax provisions of the new defense tax bill as laid before the Senate by its Finance Committee.

Slashing the tax exemption to a point where it is estimated few, if any, places of amusement will escape, the committee wrote an admission tax provision starting at 10 cents.

Back of the broadened admission tax on all amusements, from which it is estimated an additional $112,000,000 a year can be secured, was the desire of the committee to eliminate the increases in tobacco taxes voted by the House of Representatives. Twelve of the 21 members of the Senate Finance Committee are from tobacco-growing states.

Pettijohn Suggestion Welcomed

The anxiety of these tobacco-state members of the committee to find a substitute source of revenue influenced them to welcome at first a suggestion by Charles C. Pettijohn, of the Hays organization and representing the large interests, of a "head tax" of one cent on admissions up to 25 cents, two cents on admissions from 26 to 49 cents and the current 10 per cent scale on higher admissions.

Appearing before the committee at its hearings last week, the general counsel of the MPPDA told the Senators that the House provision for reducing the admission tax exemption from 40 to 30 cents, which it was estimated would bring in additional revenue of $25,000,000, had created in the industry apprehension of admission price reductions which it could not well stand at this time, admission cuts below the House's lowered ticket minimum of 30 cents.

Mr. Pettijohn outlined what he described to be the serious situation in which the film industry finds itself as a result of world conditions, with three-fourths of its foreign business already lost. This, he said, has led to a reduction of more than one-third in the industry's gross income and has placed it in a position where it must look almost entirely to United States audiences for support.

If the exemption is reduced to 30 cents, he said, it is feared that many theatre operators, seeking to avoid the necessity of collecting taxes from their patrons, will reduce their admissions, in some cases below the taxable figure and in others to a point where they could absorb the levy.

The "head tax" which he proposed, however, would place all houses on the same basis and remove the temptation to reduce admissions.

The committee's recommendations, made after Mr. Pettijohn had conferred with Undersecretary John L. Sullivan, Treasury tax expert, was a modification of his suggestion, providing that admissions from 10 to 19 cents shall be taxed one cent, 20 cent admissions two cents and higher admissions at the rate of one cent for each 10 cents or fraction thereof.

The new tax rate would go into effect July 1 and apply for five years, at the expiration of which the exemption from tax would be placed at $3.

For some unexplained reason, the committee wrote into the bill a proviso for restoration of the $3 exemption after June 30, 1945, despite the fact that no Congress can bind a succeeding Congress.

Text of Amendments

The new admission tax provisions of the bill, as reported by the committee, were as follows:

"Section 1700 (a) of the Internal Revenue Code is amended to read as follows, effective July 1, 1940:

"'SINGLE OR SEASON TICKET; SUBSCRIPTION:

"'(1) RATE—A tax on the amount paid for admission to any place, including admission by season ticket or subscription, of the following rates:

"'(A) For the period after June 30, 1940, and before July 1, 1945—

"'Where the amount paid is 9 cents or less, there shall be no tax;

"'1 cent where the amount paid is 10 cents or more and less than 20 cents;

"'1 cent for each 10 cents or fraction thereof where the amount paid is 20 cents or more;

"'1 cent for each 10 cents or fraction thereof of the amount paid for admission by season ticket or subscription, if the amount which would be charged to the holder or subscriber for a single admission is 10 cents or more.

"'(B) For the period after June 30, 1945—

"'Where the amount paid is $3 or less, there shall be no tax;

"'1 cent for each 10 cents or fraction thereof where the amount paid is more than $3;

"'1 cent for each 10 cents or fraction thereof of the amount paid for admission by season ticket or subscription, if the amount which would be charged to the holder or subscriber for a single admission is more than $3.

"'(2) Exceptions.—

"'(A) In the case of persons (except bona fide employees, municipal officers on official business, and children under twelve years of age) admitted free or at reduced rates to any place at a time when and under circumstances under which an admission charge is made to other persons, an equivalent tax shall be collected based on the price so charged to such other persons for the same or similar accommodations, to be paid by the person so admitted.

"'(B) No tax shall be imposed in the case of persons admitted free to any spoken play (not a mechanical reproduction), whether or not set to music or with musical parts or accompaniments, which is a consecutive narrative interpreted by a single set of characters, all necessary to the development of the plot, in two or more acts, the performance consuming more than one hour and forty-five minutes of time. In the case of tickets or cards of admission to any such spoken play sold at the ticket office of theatres at reduced rates the tax shall be based upon the price for which sold.

"'(3) By whom paid.—The tax imposed under paragraph (1) shall be paid by the person paying for such admission.'"

Changes Explained

The report submitted to the Senate explained: "Your committee has changed the tax with respect to admissions. Under existing law admission of 40 cents or less are exempt from tax. Admissions of over 40 cents are subject to a tax at the rate of 1 cent on each 10 cents or fraction thereof. While the House bill did not change the rate of tax under existing law, it exempted only admissions of less than 31 cents. Your committee has provided the following rates for taxing admissions, which will considerably increase the revenue derived from this source over that produced by the House bill.

"Admissions up to and including 9 cents—no tax.

"Admissions of more than 9 cents and less than 20 cents—1 cent.

"Admissions of 20 cents or more—1 cent on each 10 cents or fraction thereof.

"The 1-cent tax will apply to admissions from 10 to 19 cents, both inclusive. An admission of 20 cents will be taxed at 2 cents. Admissions from 21 to 30 cents will be taxed at 3 cents; admissions from 31 to 40 cents will be taxed at 4 cents; and admissions from 41 to 50 cents will be taxed at 5 cents. Admissions over that amount will be taxed at 1 cent for each 10 cents or fraction thereof."

Reverting to the admission tax further in the report, the committee explained that "under existing law, an admissions tax of 10 per cent is imposed except where the amount paid for admission is less than 41 cents. Instead of raising the rate of tax, your committee deemed it much simpler and more feasible from an administrative point of view to decrease the exemption from 40 to 9 cents."

VILLAINS "PURSUE" PARAMOUNT HEROINE

That the German armies might not only capture France, but also Madeleine Carroll was the way Paramount's home office in New York pictured their star's plight this week. It seems that Miss Carroll, trying to visit relatives in the war zone, found herself in Biarritz, not a playground anymore. And her chances, on Tuesday, of escaping Germans depended upon the ability of Paramount's Portuguese representatives to charter a plane in which Miss Carroll might fly from Biarritz to Lisbon. At Lisbon she was scheduled to board the Pan-American Airways Clipper so that she can play the lead in Paramount's "Virginia," which begins production July 8th.

Pleads Not Guilty In Tax Case

Albert I. Mackler, president of Monard Theatre Corporation, which operates the Shubert theatre, Brooklyn, has entered not guilty pleas on behalf of himself and the corporation in Brooklyn federal court on charges of withholding $2,068 collected as admission taxes. Judge Marcus B. Campbell set bail at $500, which was furnished. July 3rd was fixed as the tentative date for trial.

BALABAN SEES BOX OFFICE UPTURN; PARAMOUNT QUARTER NET $1,600,000

Tells Stockholders Theatre Grosses Are Ahead of Last Year; Company's Foreign Revenue Is Off 20 Per Cent

Theatre business in the United States is ahead of last year, according to Barney Balaban, president of Paramount, who told the annual stockholders' meeting, Tuesday, in New York, of a substantial rise in the company's earnings with a $1,600,000 profit for the quarter ended March 30th, and a like net for the second quarter expected.

Reports on Suit and Taxes

Mr. Balaban said "a very helpful and fair attitude" had been taken by both sides in the discussion for an out-of-court settlement of the Government's suit against the majors. The story of the progress in consent decree negotiations is on page 12.

Austin C. Keough, vice-president, in answering a stockholder's question said the Senate admission tax proposal was "fairer" to first run and circuit houses of the type in which Paramount is interested than the House tax. Developments affecting theatre admission tax are reported on page 13.

Highlights of Mr. Balaban's statement included: cash on hand is about $20,000,000; foreign revenue is off 20 percent, though for the first five months of the war it was down 35 percent; the production company is now operating in the black; South America provides only one percent of the company's combined film and theatre gross, and assets total over $30,000,000.

The following directors were unanimously reelected: Neil Agnew, Barney Balaban, Stephen Callaghan, Y. Frank Freeman, Harvey D. Gibson, A. Conger Goodyear, Stanton Griffis, Duncan G. Harris, John D. Hertz, John W. Hicks, Jr., Austin C. Keough, Earl I. McClintock, Maurice Newton, E. V. Richards, Edwin L. Weisl and Adolph Zukor.

The directors will meet shortly to reelect the present officers, headed by Mr. Balaban.

Consideration will be given during the year to a proposal made by a stockholder to reduce the number on the board of directors. The present size was defended on the ground that it facilitates obtaining a quorum for meetings.

In summarizing Paramount's financial position Mr. Balaban said, "Since reorganization in 1935 over $17,000,000 of debt reduction has been effected; interest has been reduced by about $1,800,000 annually; all dividends on the first and second preferred stock have been paid to date; and a common stock dividend of 15 cents a share has recently been declared and is payable July 1st of this year. While paying off such a large amount of indebtedness and paying out dividends in excess of $8,000,000 since reorganization, the company has invested over $10,000,000 in improvements and addition to its properties and those of its subsidiaries, and has now on hand in the parent company and consolidated subsidiaries, approximately $11,500,000 in cash. In addition, non-consolidated companies in most of which Paramount has at least a 50 per cent interest, have about $8,500,000 in cash."

Mr. Balaban pointed out that the 35 percent foreign revenue loss for the first five months of the war and 20 percent since that time was partly due to currency restrictions and loss in foreign exchange.

All of Europe except England has already been dropped out of the reports on consolidated operations. "Great Britain is the most important foreign customer," the president explained. "It has provided more than 50 percent of our foreign business. Paramount has investments in theatre subsidiaries there which owe between £600,000 and £700,000 in obligations in England. Excess cash which may not be brought to the United States can be used to reduce or retire these obligations. A temporary suspension of British operations or of the flow of cash from England to the company in the United States will not materially affect us. This is the present situation. Of course, nobody can predict the future of our English market.

"Paramount's policy over the past years has been one of great conservatism in the handling of its film inventory. Although more than 30 percent of our entire world gross film rentals has come from the foreign market (exclusive of Canada which we treat as domestic business), we have charged only 15 percent of negative cost against the foreign market.

Foreign Revenue Small

"In 1939 the company's film revenue from outside of the United States and Canada represented approximately only 10 percent of the entire gross income from film and theatre operations of the company and its consolidated subsidiaries and the company's share of non-consolidated companies from these sources throughout the world. Therefore, it will be seen that a small improvement in our business in the United States could offset any major additional declines in foreign revenue. The management, however, recognizes its responsibility to so manage its production and distribution department as to make the results of its operations less dependent upon foreign revenues than in the past."

Y. Frank Freeman and his associates at the studio were complimented by Mr. Balaban on the quality of production. "The schedule for the coming season is upon a continuously increased level of entertainment value," he said.

The expense of litigation was pointed out to stockholders. Mr. Balaban explained the "key" New York anti-trust trial brought by the Government against the majors.

"The changes sought by the Government were so fundamental and far reaching, and the consequences so serious, that the defending companies felt compelled to resist them, believing implicitly in the soundness, legality and business legitimacy of the practices and conditions attacked by the Government.

"After the opening statements of counsel, representatives of the Government and of the defendants upon the invitation of the Government, have embarked upon discussions to see whether practical and workable changes in the trade practices of this industry may be arrived at by mutual consent which will make the trial of the Government suits unnecessary, and during the time when these discussions are taking place the trial of the main suit has been suspended. I am informed that these discussions have started with a very helpful and fair attitude on both sides. It, of course, is impossible to predict their outcome.

Comments on Neely Bill

Commenting on the recent Neely block booking bill hearings Mr. Balaban said:

"The hearings were before the full Committee and were thorough, intelligent and fair. We believe that for the first time the utter impracticability of this legislation to produce any good results, no matter how desirable, was fully demonstrated."

The financial position of the company was explained as follows:

"The current and working assets of the Paramount companies in the United States at the present time total something over $30,000,000, an amount approximately equal to all of the current liabilities, mortgages and funded debt of Paramount and its consolidated subsidiaries, regardless of when due. The consolidated companies have anticipated and paid all of their 1940 maturities with the exception of something less than $800,000.

"Domestic theatre business is slightly in excess of that of the same period last year. No decline is expected. In fact, indications point to the contrary. Paramount has maintained its theatres in excellent physical condition and has made and will continue to make necessary improvements. New properties are added whenever the protection of our business or its normal and natural development warrant. The company's earnings for the first quarter of this year after interest and all charges amounted to $1,600,000 which includes Paramount's share of undistributed earnings of non-consolidated companies. The results so far for the second quarter indicate earnings substantially in excess of those for the same quarter of last year and appear to be approaching those for the first quarter of this year."

In answer to a question Mr. Balaban said Paramount would receive about $1,060,000 in dividends from Balaban & Katz this year and that his personal service contract had another two years to run.

Mr. Keough in discussing the proposed admission tax increases pointed out that the Senate bill would affect all theatres and the House measure would be felt chiefly by the advance run theatres. He said the local circuit operators for Paramount would decide what effect the new tax may have on admissions after the bill is enacted.

$10 PER BOOKING

Barney Balaban and Y. Frank Freeman of Paramount took the trade press to luncheon in the Nimrod room of the Hotel Astor in New York, Wednesday, for discussions of candour about the corporation's plans and designs in production, addressed, it appears, especially at elimination of low bracket pictures and enhanced effort and investment in the upper range of product.

Interested participants were Neil Agnew, sales, and Robert Gillham, publicity and advertising.

The most pointed statement of the session was Mr. Freeman's contention that if exhibitors might, by taking thought and promotion, add so much as ten to twenty-five dollars per engagement on the average, many problems, maybe all, would be solved. He insisted that talent costs could not, would not, come down. Incidentally, Mr. Freeman observed that Technicolor typically increased over-all costs of a production about 18 per cent, and where it contributed to the narrative values was worth it.

ALLIED, ITOA LEAD INDEPENDENTS IN ATTACK ON NEW U. S. TAX BILL

Chicago Convention Opens with Petition to Congress to Reject Sliding Scale Proposal; Neely Bill and Divorcement Stressed

Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors Wednesday morning went into their 11th annual national convention, at the Morrison Hotel in Chicago, determined that the motion picture industry must undergo "radical changes," as demanded in a pre-convention keynote by Abram F. Myers, chairman. At press hour, most of the organization's ideas of what to do correctively were still in the hands of resolution moulding committees.

21 States Represented

Jack Kirsch, president of Allied of Illinois and convention chairman, said representatives of independent theatres from 21 states were present. The convention ran through Friday.

At the meeting Wednesday morning national directors of Allied drew up a resolution, which was passed unanimously by delegates, pledging full cooperation to the U. S. Government in solving admission tax problems in its effort to raise additional revenue, but asking Congress "not to depart from the general policy of placing the burden on those best able to bear the burden."

The resolution charged that the Senate tax bill, levying taxes on all admissions over nine cents, was sponsored by Hays organization members and would give special consideration for high admission theatres which already enjoy special privileges in the distribution of film. It was said the bill would place an undue burden on low admission, independent houses whose patrons are in the low income group.

The average admission in independent theatres, Allied claimed, is slightly over 20 cents. The resolution advocated, in place of the proposed measure, a reduction of the present 40-cent exemption level to 31 cents.

High Rentals Discussed

At the first business meeting, Wednesday, a closed session, film rental, distributors' policies and demands for higher admission prices on certain films with percentages "unheard of until now" were considered.

On Thursday and Friday an open forum on the Neely Bill and the proposed consent decree were held. It was reported that unless a trust suit consent decree carried a provision for theatre divorcement, Allied would oppose such settlement.

Consideration was also given to methods of setting up an arbitration system to handle all disputes without the usual attendant publicity, described as harmful.

Mr. Myers in his pre-convention keynote said, "No one denies that Allied is the deciding factor in all the great movements now on foot which will mould the form and guide the practices of the motion picture industry for many years to come.

"Every exhibitor knows that the industry now is in a state bordering on chaos. The situation would be very different had the representatives of the major companies lent an ear to Allied's proposals for fair trade practices and fair arbitration instead of demanding that Allied subscribe to a program dictated by them," Mr. Myers said.

Col. H. A. Cole, president, said in Chicago before the meeting opened that abolition of block booking would be the chief aim of Allied States for the coming year and that theatre divorcement would be another important subject to be considered.

Commenting on the Neely bill Col. Cole said, "The bill is not dead by a long shot. I am almost certain that the subcommittee now considering the bill will report some kind of a measure."

President Roosevelt sent a personal greeting to the Allied convention. The message, addressed to Mr. Kirsch, said, "My hearty greetings and best wishes to all who attend the 11th annual national convention of the Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors in Chicago. I trust that the convention will be a successful one, fruitful of wise counsels and constructive action to promote alike the closely allied interests of the exhibitors and the patrons."

Three-Day Program

Wednesday morning the program included registration, inspection of exhibits and a meeting of the board of directors. In the afternoon the first business session was held, including a "Film Buyers' Convention," appointment of committees, officers' reports and general discussion. The first day of the convention ended at the Colony Club in the evening.

Thursday morning registration continued and guests visited Chicago's Film Row. In the afternoon an open forum and committee reports were scheduled. The day wound up with entertainment and dinner at the Chez Paree.

The Friday business session was scheduled to consider general industry problems. A cocktail party preceded the 11th annual dinner-dance which concluded the convention. Former Mayor James J. Walker was scheduled to be master of ceremonies at the final dinner but he was forced to cancel the engagement.

Among the sales executives scheduled to attend were William A. Scully, Universal general sales manager; William J. Heineman, Western sales manager and L. J. Schlaifer, vice-president and Western sales manager of United Artists.

Harry Brandt's Independent Theatre Owneres of New York, non-affiliated exhibitors' organization, on Wednesday sent a message "To Allied Men." The message said in part, "Allied has a great opportunity. It has within its power to be the guiding light for independent exhibitors. It can, if it rises to its opportunity, map out a program that will be a Magna Carta for independent exhibitors—but only if the proper sort of leadership is at the helm; if it shows a disposition to listen to the thoughts and ideas of other independent exhibitors who are not members of Allied, but who are willing to cooperate and aid any move that will bring better conditions to independent exhibitors."

TEXT OF TAX BILL

Provisions of the new Senate federal admission tax bill, which would levy on all tickets over 9 cents, and which low-bracket application is stirring independents (see adjoining columns), appears on page 13.

The bill this week was recommended by the Senate Appropriations Committee where the amendments incorporating the 10-cent minimum exemption and sliding scale originated.

Brandt Group in New York Hits Senate Proposal

The proposed new taxes on low theatre admissions, said to be endorsed by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners and Distributors of America, and its members, to help the country pay for increased arms, would be "ruinous" to some types of theatres, Harry Brandt, New York exhibitor leader and circuit operator, told a special luncheon of the Independent Theatre Owners Association, of which he is president, at the Astor Hotel Wednesday. At the luncheon by special invitation were many independent theatre operators, not members of the ITOA, and distribution officers of the New York Film Board of Trade.

Double Features Hit

At the luncheon copies of the association's organ, "The Independent," appeared, with a new "Boxoffice Poison" listing. Last year, several stars were named "poison." This year the magazine says: "Producers who refuse to join the fight against double features are feeding poison to the box office, and destroying our industry."

Mr. Brandt said the ITOA had no objection to taxes. "The greatest privilege we can have today," he said, "is to pay taxes—but we feel that reasonably and fairly, the taxes that are being talked about by certain interests in this industry would be ruinous to certain types of theatre operation."

The organization, he said, favored a 10 per cent tax on admissions from 30 cents upward. Most of its theatres charged less, he indicated, and he was "amazed" that the MPPDA had recommended taxes on admissions ten cents and more. "In effect," he remarked, "our taxes then would be more today than during the World War."

The ITOA has asked the House Ways and Means Committee for a hearing, he announced.

The film company exchange men were introduced to the exhibitors individually. Present, with others from their exchanges, were Jack Bowen, of MGM, president of the New York Film Board of Trade; Dave Levy, of Universal; Nat Beier, UA; Max Cohen, Universal; Joseph Felder, of Monogram; Moe Saunders, Joseph Lee, and Harry Buxbaum, of Twentieth Century-Fox; Nat Cohn and Saul Trauner of Columbia; Ben Abner, of MGM; Clarence Eisman, of United Artists; Henry Randel and Myron Sattler, of Paramount; Moe Streimer, of United Artists; Robert Wolff, of RKO.

Harmony Asked

These men will be invited to ITOA luncheons every three months, Mr. Brandt said. They also will be asked to cooperate in solving ITOA problems; and ITOA members will offer to help them.

"There's been too much quarreling, too much name calling; it's resulted in bitterness, in this industry. This is the way it should be, now, with all of us in harmony. We are two vital branches of the industry," the organization president said.

FCC Speeds Television Grants

Taking steps which it said would soon give this country "far more television broadcast stations than any other nation of the world," the Federal Communications Commission Wednesday tentatively approved 23 applications for stations and announced it would pass on 19 more applications shortly. Balaban and Katz Theatres in Chicago received a telecasting permit.

At the same time, the Commission made public new regulations for television broadcasting, issued under its new policy of deferring commercial sponsoring operation but giving encouragement to the development of stations which, when appropriate standards of operation have been perfected, may be permitted to go on a commercial basis.

Only for Research

To that end, the regulations provide that licenses will be issued only for the purpose of carrying on research, "which must include engineering experimentation tending to develop uniform transmission standards of acceptable technical quality." A definite ban is imposed on the making of charges, direct or indirect, for the production or transmission of programs.

Incorporated in the new regulations are provisions designed to guard against monopoly or domination by any single interest, under which no station will be authorized to use more than one channel in Group A "except for good cause shown," and no person (including all persons under common control) will be permitted, directly or indirectly, to own, operate or control more than three stations on channels in Group A or more than one station serving any particular area.

Eighteen of the 23 stations which the commission proposes to license immediately will be authorized to furnish television programs to the public, the remaining five being confined to laboratory research.

Another U. S. Film

The U. S. Bureau of Mines has released another picture for non-theatrical use, rental free apart from transportation charges. It tells the story of alloy steels, is 20 minutes long, is available in 16 and 35 mm, and is entitled, "Alloy Steels—A Story of Their Development."

Dismiss Perfume Suit

Lloyd Church, New York supreme court justice, Wednesday in New York City, dismissed the suit of Caron Corporation, perfume manufacturer, against RKO because of insufficiency of the complaint. The plaintiff had claimed "Primrose Path" disparaged Caron perfume in the picture.

Hart Named Arbiter

Vincent G. Hart, attorney with Friend, Holbrook, Riskind & Hart, has been appointed an arbitrator of the American Arbitration Association to handle motion picture and allied matters. The late Gabriel Hess, who was an attorney for the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, was on the AAA panel in this capacity.

TELEVISION SEEKS FILM TRAILERS

The NBC television station in New York, W2XBS, which has already run trailers on several motion pictures, would like to use more trailers to help show the value of television in film exploitation, according to Arthur Hungerford who handles film arrangements for the station. Film trailers shown over television can help attract patrons to theatres, it was said. NBC would run trailers in exchange for the free use of a few shorts, Mr. Hungerford said.

The trailers already telecast, all in connection with New York openings, were on "Golden Boy" and "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" (Columbia) and "Irene" (RKO). In connection with the premiere of "Edison the Man" (MGM) in the Oranges two special television programs were held.

Wehrenberg-Kaimann Circuits Merged

The Fred Wehrenberg and the Clarence Kaimann circuit of 25 St. Louis neighborhood theatres were combined this week, in one of the biggest theatre mergers in St. Louis in two decades, and one of the biggest in exhibition since the Department of Justice started, a few years ago, to look into over-expansion by large circuits who were "gobbling-up" little ones by the score. Time was, in the pre-trust suit days, when a merger of 50, 100, even 200 theatres was not unusual.

For the Wehrenberg interests, with 12 houses in south St. Louis, and the Kaimann interests, with 13 in the north of town, one direct effect will be better film booking arrangements. For the competition, which is Franchon and Marco-St. Louis Amusements, it means relegation, for the first time, to second place in St. Louis theatrical operations, on the basis of the number of houses operated.

Shorts for Television And Newsreel Theatres

Kodachrome Screen Classics, organized a month ago under the direction of Stan Barnett, is now producing 16 mm color shorts for newsreel theatres and television purposes. A deal has been concluded with NBC and the first production "The Waltz of the Flowers" was televised Friday night.

Mr. Barnett said that his company is the only organization making films especially for television. The subjects, which run about 10 minutes, also play at the Rockefeller Center and the Newark Newsreel theatres. After newsreel theatre and television distribution the films are turned over to Walter O. Gutlohn, Inc., for non-theatrical distribution.

At present one short is filmed each month, but Mr. Barnett said that the schedule probably would be increased in the near future. The second subject, "Jefferson and Monroe," was filmed at Monticello and at the University of Virginia. Irving Deakin is chief commentator for Kodachrome Screen Classics.

RKO Asks Cut In Allowances

A reduction in the claimants' requests for $3,100,000 in allowances for services in the RKO reorganization to a maximum of $600,000 was asked Tuesday at a hearing before Federal Judge William O. Bondy by Thomas K. Finletter, special attorney for the company.

Following this hearing Floyd B. Odlum, head of Atlas Corporation, amplified his statement favoring theatre divorcement as reported on page 9.

Atlas Claim Attached

The Atlas request for $875,000 and 100,000 shares of common stock was attacked by Mr. Finletter, who said Atlas was not entitled to its expenses because it had been interested mainly in "protecting its tremendous investments in RKO." He characterized Mr. Odlum's offer to accept the whole amount in stock as "speculative in value."

After paying $600,000 in fees RKO would have a cash reserve of only $77,000, according to Mr. Finletter. Mr. Odlum said the $77,000 cash reserve would be in addition to a $1,000,000 fund set aside to pay dividends for the following year. He added that Atlas was asking only for "out-of-pocket" expenses paid solely in the capacity of proponent of the reorganization plan.

Mr. Finletter enumerated all the claims and said he would file a brief recommending the amounts to be allowed in each case. Counsel for the claimants defended their petitions, in some cases claiming the applications had been reduced to a minimum.

Martin Gale, attorney for the SEC, told Judge Bondy the SEC estimate of RKO's financial position was "optimistic" because it had not taken fully into consideration the possible effect of the war. The SEC had recommended a maximum allowance total of $600,000.

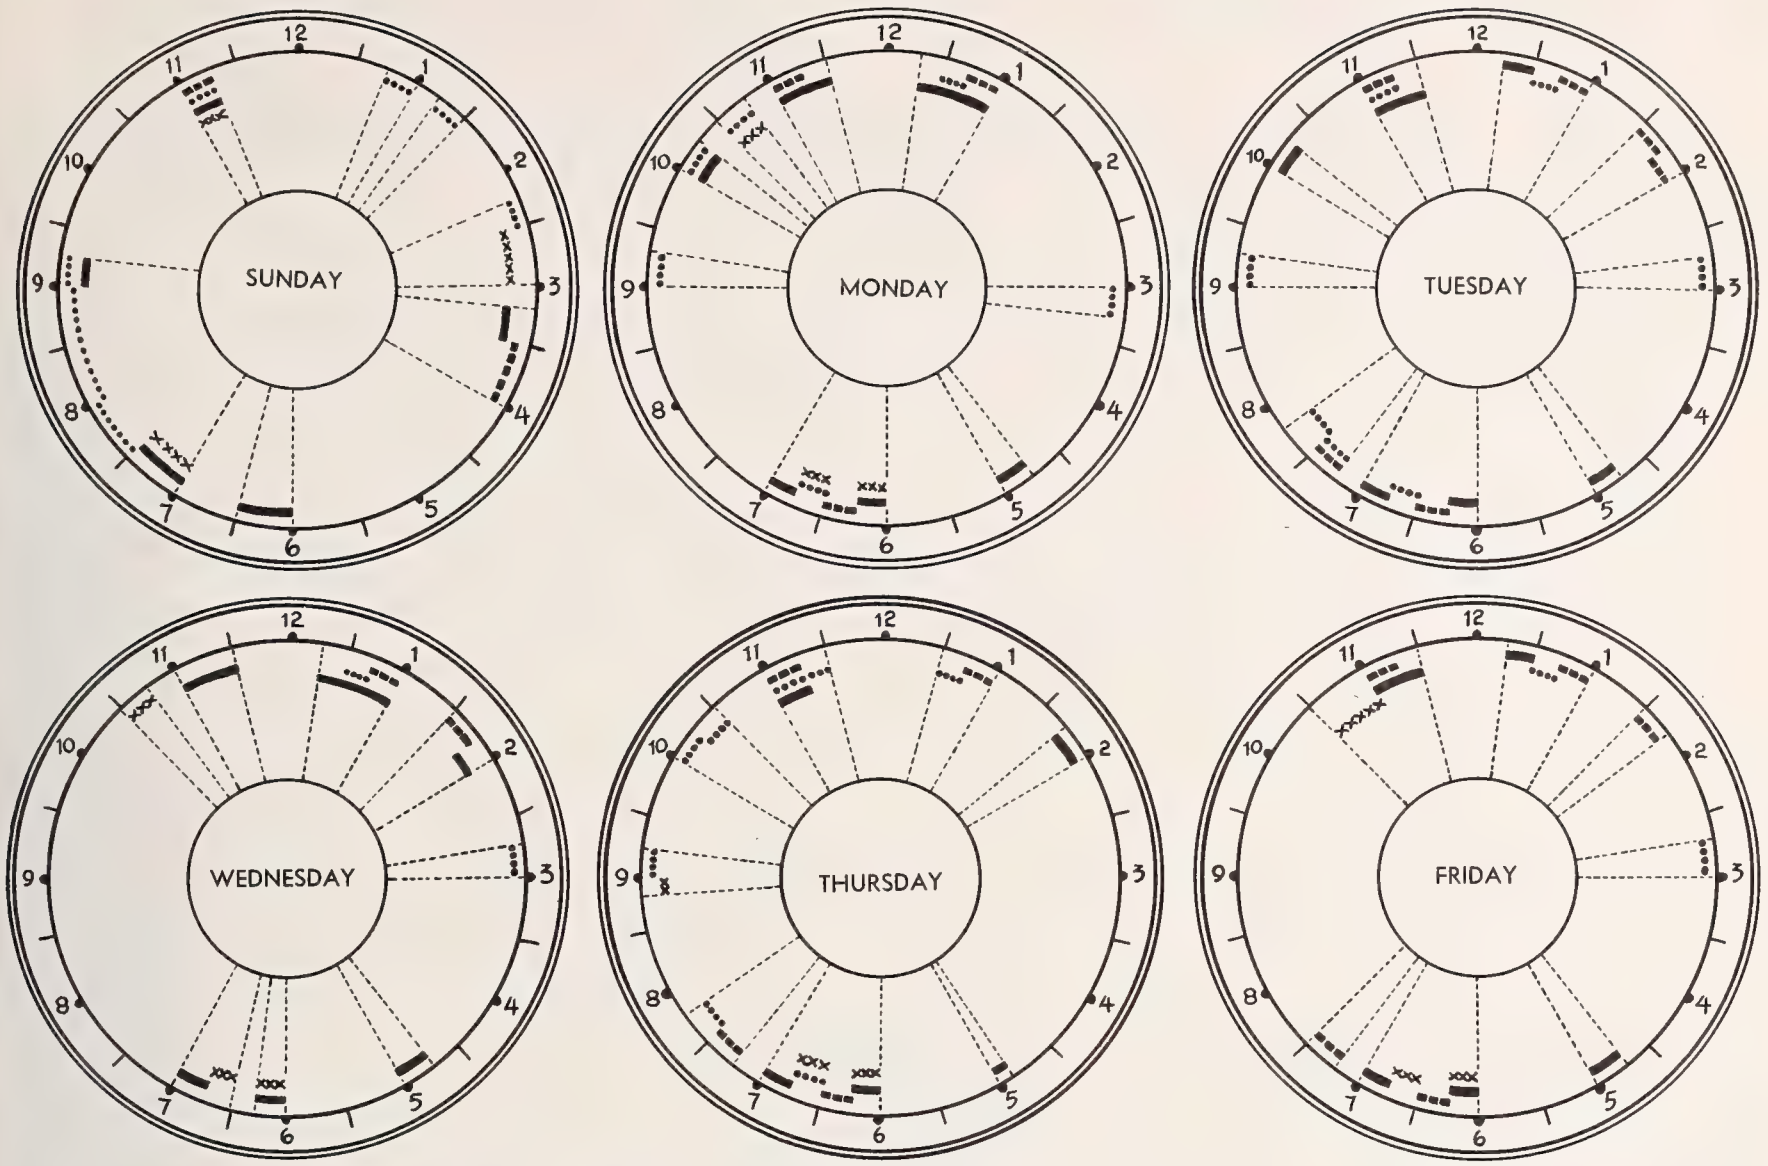
Exchange Lists RKO Stock

RKO's new common stock and first preferred stock were admitted to the New York Stock Exchange list and to dealings on Wednesday. At the same time the old RKO common stock and debentures were stricken from the exchange list.

Eastern Declares Dividend

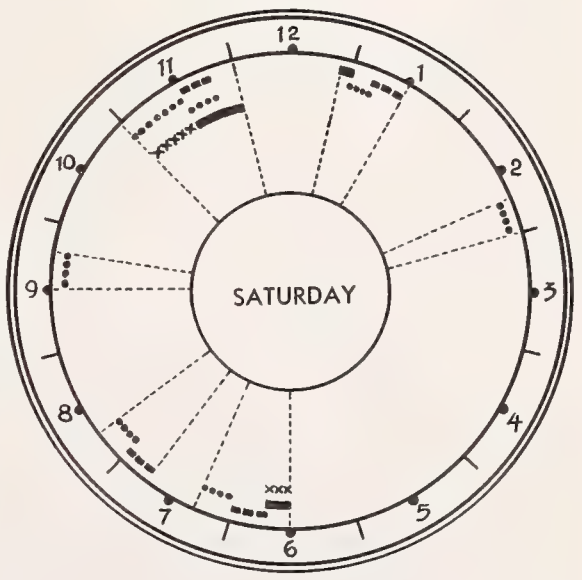
Eastern Theatres, Ltd., of Toronto, Ont., Can., and a subsidiary of Famous Players Canadian Corp., has declared a dividend of 3½ per cent on preferred shares for the half year ending June 30.

British Film Licenses



Prior import licenses for all products not hitherto requiring them, will be necessary for permission by the British Board of Trade, the United States Department of Commerce announced last week. Motion picture film comes under the new order.

Open "Geste" in Ontario



"Beau Geste," long held up by the Ontario Board of Censors at the request of the French Government, has opened at the Imperial in Toronto. The feature was about to open at the Uptown there last Labor Day when it was withdrawn by the board.

Settle Albany Strike

A film truck strike in Albany was settled over the weekend, ending a situation in which bookers and salesmen had to deliver and pick up prints.

War News and Show Hours

THROUGH the last hectic fortnight of war, exhibitors have been noting remarkable day-to-day fluctuations in box-office attendance, from new lows to moderate highs. Many insist the radio is keeping the customers at home to listen.

The accompanying diagrams cover the week of June 9–15, for the hours between noon and midnight, denoting the time covered by news reports and commentators.

As was noted by the HERALD last week, there has been a sharp upturn in the radio audiences' attention to the news broadcasters and commentators. Now from the offices of T. C. Streibert of WOR come figures showing sharp increase in the use of sets. Taking the average of sets in use in the eastern and north central sections for 1937, '38 and '39, the increase for the first five months of 1940 has been: January, 2.9%; February, 4.6%; March, 5.7%; April, 14.6%; May, 10%. New intensities of attention are being recorded for June. WOR's checking as of June 7 recorded an increase of 66 per cent for the 11:00 A. M. Transradio report alone.

FM Broadcasters Open N. Y. Office

An office to handle promotion of public and industry interest in frequency modulation radio has been established in New York by FM Broadcasters, Inc. Dick Torrance, a former member of the WOR publicity staff, heads the new office as promotion manager. John Shepard III, head of the Yankee Network, is president of the FM radio group.

On Monday 150 radio engineers and executives heard a special FM broadcast at Riverhead, Long Island. Programs were picked up from the station at Alpine, N. J., owned by Maj. Edwin H. Armstrong, inventor of the wide-band FM system, and from stations in New England. Maj. Armstrong and Frank A. Gunther, chief engineer of the Radio Engineering Laboratories of Long Island City, were speakers. Maj. Armstrong said, "No matter how exaggerated an estimate may be of the next three years of FM progress, it will be exceeded."

A move will be made at the annual convention in August of the National Association of Broadcasters to broaden membership requirements to include FM stations, and perhaps television and international short wave stations.

FM applications have been filed with the Federal Communications Commissioner by KMBC, Midland Broadcasting Company, and WDAF, Kansas City Star, both of Kansas City. KMBC officials would like to be on the air June 20th with their new FM transmitter. Thus far only a limited quantity of FM receivers have been sold in the area.

Radio Neutrality Asked in Congress

Maintenance of strict impartiality, in dealing with the war situation, was demanded Wednesday of the United States radio industry, by Representative Karl E. Mundt (Rep., S. D.) in Congress.

Defending the air industry against charges of monopoly, and commending the record of the stations, in presenting matters of national interest, Congressman Mundt urged that "opinionated observers" be eliminated, lest they create a public sentiment not in the best interests of the country.

Investigation, which he has made into the interpretation of war news, he said, "leads me to feel that a large part of the radio industry is alert to the necessity of maintaining radio on a high plane of impartiality."

ASCAP GOING AHEAD WITH PLAN TO AID SMALL STATIONS, HIT NETWORKS

Society Cuts Rates Up to 50 Per Cent for 550 Independents, but Raises Royalties for Networks

The American Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers—collector of royalties for the public performance for profit of members' music—announced, formally on Tuesday, that it would proceed with its original intentions of slashing rates drastically for individual broadcasting stations while considerably increasing rates for the networks.

Representatives of all branches of the radio industry were scheduled to meet Friday at the Waldorf-Astoria, New York, to discuss the new ASCAP contract and plans for the expansion of Broadcast Music, Inc. The executive boards of BMI, National Association of Broadcasters, Independent Radio Network Affiliates and a representative of the National Independent Broadcasters were to meet in joint session.

Effective January 1st

ASCAP's new radio performing license, effective January 1, 1941, was mailed Wednesday to owners and operators of broadcasting stations and "to every important advertising agency in the United States."

It was prepared after analysis by the Radio Committee, following months of first-hand contact in the field.

John G. Paine, general manager of ASCAP, in a covering letter, high-lighted the following features:

The license becomes effective January 1, 1941, for a period of five years. Approximately 350 individual stations will get a 50 per cent reduction in 1941, compared to 1939 and 1940; approximately 200 more will get a 33⅓ per cent reduction; "and with very few exceptions, not a single individual station in the whole United States will be asked to pay a larger percentage than they paid in the past."

The plan sets up four groups, classifying stations into percentage brackets of three per cent, four per cent, and five per cent, with chains scheduled at seven and one-half per cent. "Regardless of the fact that 1940 is a better year," Mr. Paine said, "ASCAP is using 1939 figures for the classifications. Thus, if 1939 figures put a station in the three per cent group, and 1940 figures will put it in the four per cent group, that station will nevertheless be put in the three per cent group."

Small-Station Rates Cut

Under the classifications, group one station will pay $12 a year for sustaining, plus three per cent. This covers those stations which gross under $50,000 a year from the sale of time and facilities. The three per cent is figured after regular rate card discounts and deductions. The letter stated, "as a practical illustration, the stations which gross $25,000, after the discounts and deductions outlined in the license, will pay $12, plus $750; or a total of $762." Under the old rates, these charges would have been not less than $1,350.

Stations in group two cover those grossing more than $50,000 and less than $150,000. These get a reduction from five per cent to four per cent, as well as a 25 per cent cut in their sustaining fees. In addition they will have the opportunity to recoup their sustaining fees. Group three stations cover those grossing in excess of $150,000. They will pay the same sustaining fees as are presently in effect, plus five per cent on all business other than networks. This group also has the opportunity for recoupment of its sustaining fees. Group four covers the chains. These will pay seven and one-half per cent. Percentages in all groups are figured after regular rate card discounts and other deductions covered in the licenses.

A violent reception was accorded the new ASCAP schedules, when their first tentative details were disclosed by ASCAP's directors in March, to the organized radio industry, exemplified by the National Association of Broadcasters.

A "100 per cent" increase over present fees is how Neville Miller, president of NAB regarded the new schedules. And he charged that the schedules now being paid by the broadcasters represented a 900 per cent increase over those paid in 1931 to the Society.

Battle Lines Formed

Charging that the broadcasters were paying $5,000,000 yearly to the Society and that "this is five times as great as paid by any other industry," Mr. Miller and the broadcasters gave support to Broadcast Music Inc., which the association had set up "to supplant ASCAP as a music source for radio, screen and stage." He became head of BMI; Merritt E. Tompkins became its general manager; and a campaign for members, which to date is said to number 300 stations, was pursued.

Scheduled negotiations of the Society with the NAB on April 15th, fell through and the final draft of the ASCAP contract was delayed many weeks. Many NAB members joined BMI. But ASCAP claimed "300" radio stations had approved the rough draft of its new pact as announced in March.

And both sides girded for a battle, the climax of which will be reached on January 1, 1941.

ADVERTISERS AID SOUGHT BY BMI

Calling upon advertisers and their agencies to aid broadcasting to free itself from complete reliance on the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, Sidney Kaye, counsel for Broadcast Music, Inc., told a meeting of radio company representatives in New York this week that the radio industry would never accept a deal with ASCAP which did not also provide for the encouragement of new sources of music independent of the latter organization.

Mr. Kaye said the advertiser must recapture the program material which sells the goods, and reported that the networks were gradually cutting down on ASCAP music so that the transition to BMI songs in January would not startle the public. Only 22 per cent of commercial air time is devoted to music, Mr. Kaye said, and the proportion is growing less.

According to Mr. Paine, on Wednesday, the Society found through its first hand contact in the field, that "a tremendous majority of station owners agreed on the essential fairness of the (new) percentage plan," adding, "They approved its continuance because the sustaining fee is their only fixed charge, witn ASCAP gambling with them on the percentage." He also said that their contacts showed that "the vast majority" of the stations wanted clearance at the source, and that ASCAP would cooperate by putting it into effect with the new license.

"The survey made an intensive analysis of the amount of time given to sustaining and commercial programs, and their use of music; and numerous other points.

Stresses "Desire to Cooperate"

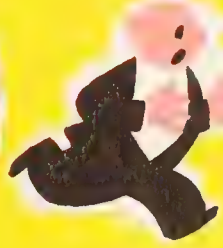
"We know the stations' problems, as never before," said Mr. Paine. "We know our music isn't played on every program, and we know what programs play our music. Our percentages, based as low as three per cent, after liberal allowances for discounts and other deductions, are proof of the pudding, of our desire to cooperate with the radio industry. This, in face of the fact that statistics show that the public is more music minded than ever, and that the use of music is constantly increasing, with American music, of which we have a rich reservoir, being stressed more strongly than ever before.

"'Complete availability' on all our resources, past, present and future, for the term of the license, is the basis for ASCAP's fees, rather than fluctuating charges for the fluctuating use of material. Station owners realize more definitely than ever the economies effected in overhead by this policy, which eliminates complicated negotiatoins with publishers, song writers, estates, lawyers, etc., for the use of each American and foreign composition."

The license grants for the five year period, beginning January 1, 1941, the following broadcasting rights to all of ASCAP's music, past, present and future:

Rights to the catalogues of the music publishing members, many of whom were said to have been in business for more than 50 years; and rights to the music written and composed, and to be written and composed by present members of ASCAP.

Further rights cover the works written by deceased members of ASCAP and its affiliated foreign societies. Other rights mentioned in Mr. Paine's letter cover music to be written by new members, following their admission to ASCAP; a large library of new arrangements of old compositions; and the rights to the catalogues of the foreign societies of England, France and other countries which have reciprocal affiliations with ASCAP.



Sales Losses Cited

Quoting statistics, Mr. Paine said "The music industry's gross and net have suffered heavily since the advent of radio, notwithstanding the steady increase in the use and creation of music. This is not stated as a complaint, but as a fact, which must be faced by radio as well as ASCAP. If the music industry and its creative talent are to continue to serve the needs of radio users throughout the country, it is vital that they be allowed to live. Not so many years ago a song hit was one that sold 1,000,000 copies or better. Many sold as high as 3,000,000 copies. Phonograph records enjoyed the same large sales. Additional revenues were received from player piano rolls, and other sources. Today a song 'hit' is one that sells 250,000 copies. Yet, in spite of these facts, some people still advance the argument that radio advertises music.

LONG RANGE COMMITMENTS CUT BY HOLLYWOOD IN ECONOMY DRIVE

Flexibility in Product Schedules and Piece Work Basis for Talent Sought; Labor Wage Increases To Be Fought

from HOLLYWOOD BUREAU

Warfare in Europe reverberated in Hollywood this week as long range commitments became the exception rather than the rule, overhead was further trimmed, staffs were pared again and producers embarked on a general policy of making no further contracts with unions which would increase costs.

With almost every studio embarked on a program of watchful waiting—to study future events in Europe and lowered domestic grosses—production programs are so arranged that less than the announced number of pictures may be made. This is indicated in the increase of percentage pictures being prepared and the growth of unit production companies which will deliver "one or more" pictures to major distributions, both moves being designed for flexibility of schedules.

No drastic "purges" or cuts in staffs have been made recently, personnels having undergone two major prunings since last September's outbreak of war in Europe but many contract option adjustments have been made.

Talent Contracts Affected

Lower bracket employes, who suffered heavily during the two major parings effected since September, have not been affected greatly by the new cuttings-down since the invasion of Belgium, Holland and France by the Germans.

Heavier sufferers in the new moves were in the production, direction, writing and acting talent. Readjustments of many contracts came at option time, new contracts being written without the usual stipulated wage increases found in the original personal service pacts.

An increase in the number of week-to-week and picture-to-picture deals is reported, and those without an immediate assignment in prospect on the week-to-week pacts go off pay until the studio finds some work for them. New checkup procedures have been established at some studios in the interests of efficiency and economy.

The statement of the producers' unwillingness to enter into any contract with labor organizations which would increase production costs was made at a meeting of producer and Screen Writers Guild representative who resumed negotiations on a collective bargaining agreement. Led by Y. Frank Freeman, Association of Motion Picture Producers president, and Mendel Silberberg, head of the producers' lawyers committee, the producer negotiators announced to the writers' delegation that increases in production costs were impossible at this time, because of conditions at home and abroad.

On the other hand, the Society of Motion Picture Film Editors, which previously demanded wage increases for the workers in its jurisdiction, agreed, at a meeting of the board of directors, to postpone all pay raise requests until the conditions requiring stringent economies by the studios pass.

Still confronting the studios, however, is the matter of the ten percent wage increase granted last November and December to the IATSE crafts, locals of three international unions in the basic studio labor agreement, and other members of the Conference of AFL Studio Unions. Moving Picture Painters Local 644 received a 15 percent wage increase at that time.

Producers To Test Arbitration

These wage increases are still to be subjects of discussions between the unions and the producers, and final decision on their continuances is to be left up to arbitration in case no agreement on their revocation is reached by both sides.

Attempts of the conference of AFL Studio Unions, now headed by Vice Chairman J. W. Buzzell in the enforced absence of William Bioff, now in a Chicago jail, to consider the wage increase revocation question "closed" and to open discussions for adjustment of working conditions, have met with failure thus far. The producers have said that the wage question is by no means closed, that they will abide by the original agreement to submit the matter to arbitration if they cannot agree with the unions.

Business of Mr. Freeman elsewhere and the preoccupation of Mr. Buzzell with other labor activities—he is also executive secretary of the Los Angeles Central Labor Council—have prevented meetings thus far on the working conditions phase. It is reported that adjustment of working conditions, as demanded by the unions, and the recognition of other small AFL units which since have aligned themselves with the conference, will cost the studios much more than the ten percent wage increase.

It is upon the question whether IATSE and the other conference members will allow revocation of their wage increases, or whether the arbiters so decide, that the raises granted other crafts hinge.

Chances are good, however, that many of the points of discussion may be held over until fall when Bioff, having been commended for his "honesty and integrity" by the IATSE international convention at Louisville, will return to Hollywood. He probably will have to conduct negotiations with the producers between sessions of his trial in federal court on two counts of income tax evasion. The case will come up on the September docket for setting of trial.

Writing and directing talent, especially the former, are the classes more widely affected by the week-to-week or picture-to-picture trend. Excellent example of the change in policy is 20th Century-Fox, where, a recent survey revealed, relatively few writers were on a term contract basis. The remainder were doing "piece work."

Universal, in the interests of economy, is perusing the voluminous pile of stories left to it by the Laemmle regime, and weighing them for modernization and production. Paramount has dropped its "B" picture group, and Harold Hurley, the executive producer of this division, left the lot. He is negotiating an outside production deal with a major release.

Samuel Goldwyn, "holing in" pending settlement of his dispute with United Artists, has amicably terminated the contracts of Sam Wood, director, and Edwin Knopf, story editor and production executive. Other talent—Gregg Toland and Rudolph Mate, cinematographers, and Walter Brennan, actor—has been loaned out. Mr. Goldwyn's contract with director Archie Mayo is the subject of a court dispute, Mr. Mayor having brought suit in Los Angeles Superior Court seeking clarification of its terms. The director wants the court to stop Mr. Goldwyn in the latter's announced intention of sending him to England to direct a picture which would star David Niven, if the star can be "borrowed" from England's military forces.

Numerous other changes have taken place. MGM has failed to extend the contract of Edwin L. Marin and let out two junior publicity department members. Warners dropped one publicity man and took on two others—Jay Chapman and March Lachmann.

Monogram has cut its publicity department to the bone.

Yet with the changes already made and the shifts that may come, the number of productions before the cameras this week rose to 48, as work on the new season's schedule began and the old season's product neared completion.

High Budget Films in Work

Seventeen of those in work are high budget productions, two of which started last week. MGM finished "Boom Town," with Clark Gable, Spencer Tracy, Claudette Colbert and Hedy Lamarr, last week and took it to the cutting rooms.

Hal Roach, in the midst of shooting "Captain Caution," added $300,000 to the budget of the sea story, to make a total of $1,050,000. RKO started the untitled Charles Laughton-Carole Lombard picture, and Edward Small "The Son of Monte Cristo."

Columbia is working on its two biggest pictures—"The Howards of Virginia" and "Arizona." MGM is in the final shooting weeks of "Strike Up the Band," Mickey Rooney-Judy Garland vehicle. Also shooting there is "Escape," Norma Shearer-Robert Taylor film.

RKO also has "Lucky Partners," Ginger Rogers-Ronald Colman piece, also in work. Small has been shooting for weeks on "Kit Carson," outdoor film with Jon Hall heading the cast. Twentieth Century-Fox, having finished "I Married a Nazi," has "Brigham Young" and "The Return of Frank James" on the sound stages. Universal's entry in the high budget bracket is "Spring Parade," Deanna Durbin picture, while Warners has "The Man from Fleet Street," "City for Conquest" and "The Letter."

There is virtually no activity in production for the states right market, a condition caused by lack of funds for continuing this market and the rise in production costs through union contracts and other causes.

Sam Katzman, one of the last active in this field, is now an associate producer at Monogram.

PRESIDENT GETS CLOSE ATTENTION

So interested in developments on the international scene were workers of Hollywood and thereabouts last week that everyone near a radio listened to President Roosevelt's speech of last Tuesday.

The telephone company reported a 50 per cent reduction in calls during the period the President spoke.

Columbia Broadcasting System estimates that 48,000,000 persons throughout the nation listened to the broadcast, carried by all chains.

CARNIVAL SHOWS HURT BUSINESS

The playing of 16 carnival shows in Philadelphia in the last month is blamed for the unusual drop in theatre grosses there in that period. In addition to the tent shows, the Ringling Brothers circus was also a competitor for a week in that period. The carnival shows, which were banned in Philadelphia in the previous administration, are back and doing a flourishing business in many sections of the city and cutting into the grosses of neighborhood houses.

It is pointed out that last year motion picture theatres contributed most of the nearly $1,000,000 in amusement taxes paid into the city treasury. The only revenue Philadelphia receives from the carnivals is a $100 license fee, the same as film theatres. However, the amusement tax on admissions from which the city derives the largest portion of its amusement tax revenue is not levied on carnivals.

HOBLITZELLE'S PLAN TO "HELP THE ALLIES"

Last week 25,000 persons attended a "Help-The-Allies" rally at Fair Park, Dallas, where the Texas Centennial was held and heard speakers present resolutions to do everything in that direction short of war. These were adopted and sent to the national government. Prominent among sponsors of the rally was Karl Hoblitzelle, president of the Interstate circuit.

Some weeks ago Mr. Hoblitzelle conceived an idea for an anti-fifth column picture to be shown in his theatres which was adopted by the March of Time and now is in the making. More than a year ago Mr. Hoblitzelle and John Moroney, legal counsel for the circuit, prepared a film on the bill of rights which was shown all over the circuit.

Presently a Star Spangled Banner film is being shown at the start of every show in every one of the nearly 150 theatres of the circuit. The film, with suitable scenes depicting the words of the national anthem, resolves itself into a community sing at each show.

Plans are now underway for a Kate Smith "God Bless America" short which is to succeed the Star Spangled Banner film.

Warners' "All This" At Radio Music Hall

Warner Brothers' feature, "All This, and Heaven, Too" will open at the Radio City Music Hall July 4th. Though the picture's showing at other houses in key cities has induced special higher price and showing policies, it was said that the Music Hall's regular policy would be maintained.

The premiere of the picture on Thursday, June 13th, at the Carthay Circle, Hollywood, drew $1,000 more than the opening of "Gone With the Wind," Dave Fred, house manager, reported. A special corps of 200 police handled a crowd of 15,000.

The picture is scheduled to open next Thursday at the Orpheum, New Orleans, at a three-a-day policy with $1 the top price for evening reserved seat.

Heidt and Giveaway Two Weeks at Loew's

Loew's State in New York, first theatre to play Horace Heidt and a tiein with his "Pot o' Gold" air giveaway, continued the act this week for a second week. Heidt's airshow has been attacked by exhibitors as unfair competition.

The engagement advertises a giveaway of $100 to any person attending the performance Tuesday night when his name is called on the $1,000 Tums stomach-pill radio broadcast, the broadcast requiring the person whose name is selected to be at home when the telephone rings announcing his selection. If the individual is not at home he does not get the $1,000.

In connection with the Heidt show at Loew's, Stella Unger had the orchestra leader on the air Wednesday night on her "Your Hollywood Newsgirl" program over WEAF in New York.

Drop Foreign Films

The Art Cinema, managed by Gabe Rubin, has discontinued its foreign film policy because of lack of product.

'Democracy' Film Pressure Group Fades, Dissolves

Film Audiences for Democracy is dead. Its voice, "Film Survey," has also expired.

"Lack of support, lack of funds" were the reasons, according to Edward Kern, formerly its executive secretary and onetime a publicity agent for foreign pictures.

According to Mr. Kern, the organization, which was formed of two pressure groups, the Associated Film Audiences, and Films for Democracy, "always operated on a shoestring" and never received sufficient money from the groups, most of them "liberal" and some of them "red," from whom it expected support.

Film Audiences for Democracy was not "red," Mr. Kern insisted, this week, recalling the charges made by MOTION PICTURE HERALD and Motion Picture Daily that its support indicated a Communist bias—charges never disproved by the organization or by its president Dr. Henry Pratt Fairchild, of New York University.

Mr. Kern was found a-gardening at his home in Manhattan. He is currently resting.

What the organization "accomplished," Mr. Kern claimed, is this: that it stopped production by Twentieth Century-Fox of "Siege of the Alcazar"—"and we were called Reds then," he said; that it created an audience for Walter Wanger's "Blockade"—and "if it hadn't been for us, the picture would have been a flop;" that it forced Paramount News to issue its picture of the Chicago "Memorial Day Massacre;" and that it made Paramount's "Our Leading Citizen" a "terrible flop."

Associated Film Audiences was the forerunner of the group Mr. Kern recalled. It began in 1937 publishing "Film Survey." He was chairman and "did all the work;" the list of prominent "liberal" educators and writers on the executive committee were "sympathizers," Mr. Kern indicated.

Films for Democracy and Associated Film Audiences merged in May, 1939, becoming Film Audiences for Democracy.

The latter had been formed several months earlier, with impressive fanfare, an imposing list of educators and writers, several of them supporters of Soviet Russia's "industrial democracy." It was going to make pictures with "social content;" it would "portray America truthfully." It would use Hollywood talent with similar viewpoint; and it would finance the pictures with the help of the educators, the writers and many more whom it would approach.

By the time of the merger, the production plans were dropped. Samuel Rodman, its executive secretary, and reputed Leftist campaigner, became "part" of the new group, but dropped active participation. Dr. Henry Pratt Fairchild, of New York University, its chief, became president of the merged group. Dr. Ned H. Dearborn, of the old group and also of New York University, went to the executive committee of the new. Dr. Robert KP. Speer, of the old, became treasurer of the new group.

Films for Democracy, which was going to produce several pictures a year, became in the new setup an expansion of the Associated Film Audiences. The group "merely hoped," Mr. Kern says, to point out to the several hundred possibly sympathetic club, church and labor organizations it had listed for mail approach—that certain pictures were "harmful to labor," "reactionary," etc., and hoped that, with their audience support and financial support, it could carry on, and also show the producers the "right way."

Mr. Rodman, the one time secretary, not to be found in New York this week, was said to be in Arlington, Va., where it was indicated he had some sort of "government job." Arlington is a U. S. Naval wireless center.

Films for Democracy and Associated Film Audiences, at the outset, received voluble approval in certain quarters in the industry and also drew support from motion picture departments of certain New York newspapers, Leftist magazines and radical groups generally.

Actors' Ban Proposed For Benefit Shows

A proposal that performers earning less than $100 weekly be banned from giving free services at benefits in New York has been submitted by the Theatre Authority to the actor unions. The move is designed to prevent the excessive appearances at benefits of night performers and musical comedy choruses. The rule is now enforced in Chicago.

A Theatre Authority committee, composed of Jean Hersholt, representing the West Coast authority, Alan Corelli, executive secretary of the Authority, and Blanche Witherspoon, executive secretary of the American Guild of Musical Artists, this week met in New York with Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont to discuss aid by performers for the American Red Cross.

Phonovision Public Show

Phonovision, "nickel-in-the-slot-movie" industry being promoted by Frank Orsatti, Hollywood talent agent, and Sam Sax, former Warner executive, displayed its machines to the public for the first time at Jack Dempsey's Broadway Restaurant, New York, on Wednesday evening. Mr. Sax, using the old Edison Studio, in the Bronx, is expected to begin production of special shorts for Phonovision shortly with "name bands," among whom are reported to be Abe Lyman's, Clyde McCoy's, and Ozzie Nelson's. The company's offices are at 1 East 54th Street, New York City.

306 Loses Injunction

The New York projectionists' local, 306, lost an injunction suit against the Paradise Pictures Corporation, operators of the Belmont Theatre, in that city, when New York Supreme Court Judge Carroll G. Walter ruled on Tuesday that the corporation was not a member of the Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York, and that, hence, the association's contract with the local did not bind the corporation.

The judge also vacated a temporary injunction gained by the union in 1937.

U. S. Release for "Convoy"

Michael Balcon, English producer who made "A Yank at Oxford" for MGM and has been producing for Associated British, will send his most recent film, "Convoy," to the United States. Releasing details have not been completed.

Summer Closings Delayed Pending Receipts Trend

Summer closing schedules for the most part have been held up pending study of box-office trends resulting from the expected war industrial developments in the next few months. Because of the national preparedness program factories which have been idle may be operating again shortly for armaments and other supplies, it is expected.

Circuit Plans

Paramount and Warners will follow their usual practice of closing several houses for the season, it was said, but the specific situations are still being studied. Loew's does not plan to close any of its New York City theatres but still has the out-of-town situation under consideration.

RKO will close six theatres for the Summer as compared with seven last year. The Alden, in Jamaica, L. I., will remain open, while the Orpheum, Kansas City; Palace, Chicago; Colonial, Dayton; Albee, Providence; Shubert, Cincinnati, and Strand, Syracuse, will be closed.

The Brandt circuit will close seven houses more than last year, Harry Brandt, head of the circuit, said, but he did not reveal the exact number. More than half of the nine theatres in New Jersey, Staten Island and Brooklyn which comprise the Rosenblatt-Welt circuit will be closed for the Summer season, Leon Rosenblatt, said. An executive of the Century circuit, New York, said that business was off but that no closings were scheduled.

Six Bronx houses of Consolidated Amusement Enterprises will be closed, Laurence Bolognino, circuit head, said. They are the Avalon, Fleetwood, Oxford, Ascot, Kingsbridge and Jerome. The Cocalis circuit has closed the Empire, Rahway, N. J. This theatre operates on a weekend policy during the Winter. The Wilson, Brooklyn, a Randforce house, has been closed. On the other hand, the Playhouse in Lake Mahopac, N. Y., a former legitimate stage theatre, will be reopened with a film policy.

No Canadian Closings

There has been no intimation of the closing of any theatre in Canada for the Summer although the few legitimate houses have been darkened as usual.

There is no indication that theatres are to be closed in New Orleans. Using air-conditioning, exhibitors there are ignoring weather conditions, although some houses on the Mississippi Gulf Coast are planning longer daily operating hours for vacations.

In Atlanta, the Capitol, Lucas & Jenkins unit, has dropped vaudeville for the Summer, continuing with two features. The Roxy also is abandoning stage shows for the season, adopting a policy of second run films. The Paramount is expected to close.

John Danz's Roosevelt theatre in Seattle has been closed for the Summer; the first time in several years that any downtown Seattle theatre has suspended operations. Quiet business, booking difficulties and union demands are said to be responsible.

The Franklin in Thompsonville, Conn., has closed. Warners usually close the Tremont, Ansonia and the Circle, South Manchester, Conn., but no date has been set.

The Quimby and Grand, Zanesville, Ohio, units of the Schine circuit, recently acquired from Zanesville Theatres, Inc., have closed for the Summer. The three other Schine houses in Zanesville will remain open.

The Pantage, Birmingham, a Welby house, has closed for the Summer, as is customary.

All This and Heaven Too

(Warner Brothers)

Nineteenth Century Tragedy

Twice on Thursday of last week "All This and Heaven Too" went on trial before Hollywood witnesses in no mood to be entertained. An afternoon audience of press representatives depressed by a series of films featuring European oppression lost itself in this tale of 1847-48 and wept with Bette Davis. An evening audience no less and possibly more affected by contemporary wars and rumors of wars duplicated the scriveners' reaction.

One hundred and forty minutes long, $1,850,000 wide, this Warner Brothers production of Rachel Field's real-life novel represents the Burbank studio in an "all out" display of might. Previewed, premiered and publicized on a scale matching its production budget, the picture is a challenge to box office apathy.

Of Miss Davis' performance it is being said, as usual, that her portrayal entitles her to yet another Academy Award. Of Barbara O'Neil's enactment of the secondary feminine role similar comment is heard. Charles Boyer, who has somewhat less than opportunity for exercise of his romantic talent and is dead of his own hand following commission of a murder before the picture ends, is being called more actor and less matinee idol than previously, while others in the large cast are receiving praises of the kind which translate into cash money through the wicket.

Miss Field's story, vouched for as an authenic account of incidents in the life of her great-aunt, concerns the experiences of a French governess who entered the home of a member of King Louis Philippe's peerage (Paris, 1847) and took charge of his four children, neglected by their mother because of an emotional barrier which had arisen between her and their father. The children turned to the governess for mothering and their father was as strongly attracted. The frustrated mother made the lives of both intolerable by persecution and espionage, finally tormenting the husband into a rage in which he kills her. Political conditions impelled the King's cabinet to seek exoneration of the guilty man through forcing him to testify that his relationship with the governess had been illicit—extenuation in that area and era—since in saving him they might save themselves, but he declined to do so, finally committing suicide as a way out for both.

Hal B. Wallis, executive producer, with David Lewis as associate, set a new high for his studio in the number of sets erected for the picture, which required 67. Casey Robinson, who wrote the screen plays of "Dark Victory" and "The Old Maid," put Miss Field's book into film format. Anatole Litvak, who directed Mr. Boyer in "Mayerling" and "Tovarich," turned in here a work pronounced by Hollywood experts superior to these.

Previewed at the Carthay Circle theatre, Hollywood, on the day when Paris fell and to an audience depressed by these tidings and others but made to forget them momentarily in rapt and often tearful appreciation of the picture.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

Produced and distributed by Warner Brothers. Jack L. Warner in charge of production. Hal B. Wallis, executive producer. David Lewis, associate producer. Anatole Litvak, director. Screen play by Casey Robinson. Book by Rachel Field. Photographed by Ernie Haller. Edited by Warren Low. P.C.A. certificate No. 6089. Running time, when seen in Hollywood, 140 minutes. Release date, June 28, 1940. Adult audience classification.

Tom Brown's School Days

(RKO-Radio)

Scholastic Comedy Drama

Thomas Hughes' novel depicting in terms of one boy's experiences the introduction of student government at Rugby by Dr. Thomas Arnold in the early 19th Century has been produced by Gene Towne and Graham Baker with fidelity to place and period, yet in such manner as to make the boys seem as so many young men from the state university. A mixed audience invited to a preview of the film at Los Angeles Ambassador theatre found it extraordinarily satisfying screen material and said so in unaccustomed unanimity when it was over and lights went up.

In common with no other boys' school picture, save "Boys' Town," which it resembles in no other particular, this production has earnestness and character development rated above prankery and sports as scholastic objectives. It is tinctured with no romantic campus caperings nor is war or other external element dragged in to create a hoopla finale. On the contrary, it presents a spectacle of prep school students learning by trial and error, by discipline and resistance, to be men. It has strength, depth and power.

Sir Cedric Hardwicke as the head master and Jimmy Lydon as "Tom" dominate the acting department with Freddie Bartholomew, Billy Halop and Hughie Green close up. Direction is by the British Robert Stevenson, making his American debut, from a screen play written by Walter Ferris and Frank Cavett in Collaboration with the producers. The production measures up to its title in every respect.

Previewed as above noted.—W. R. W.

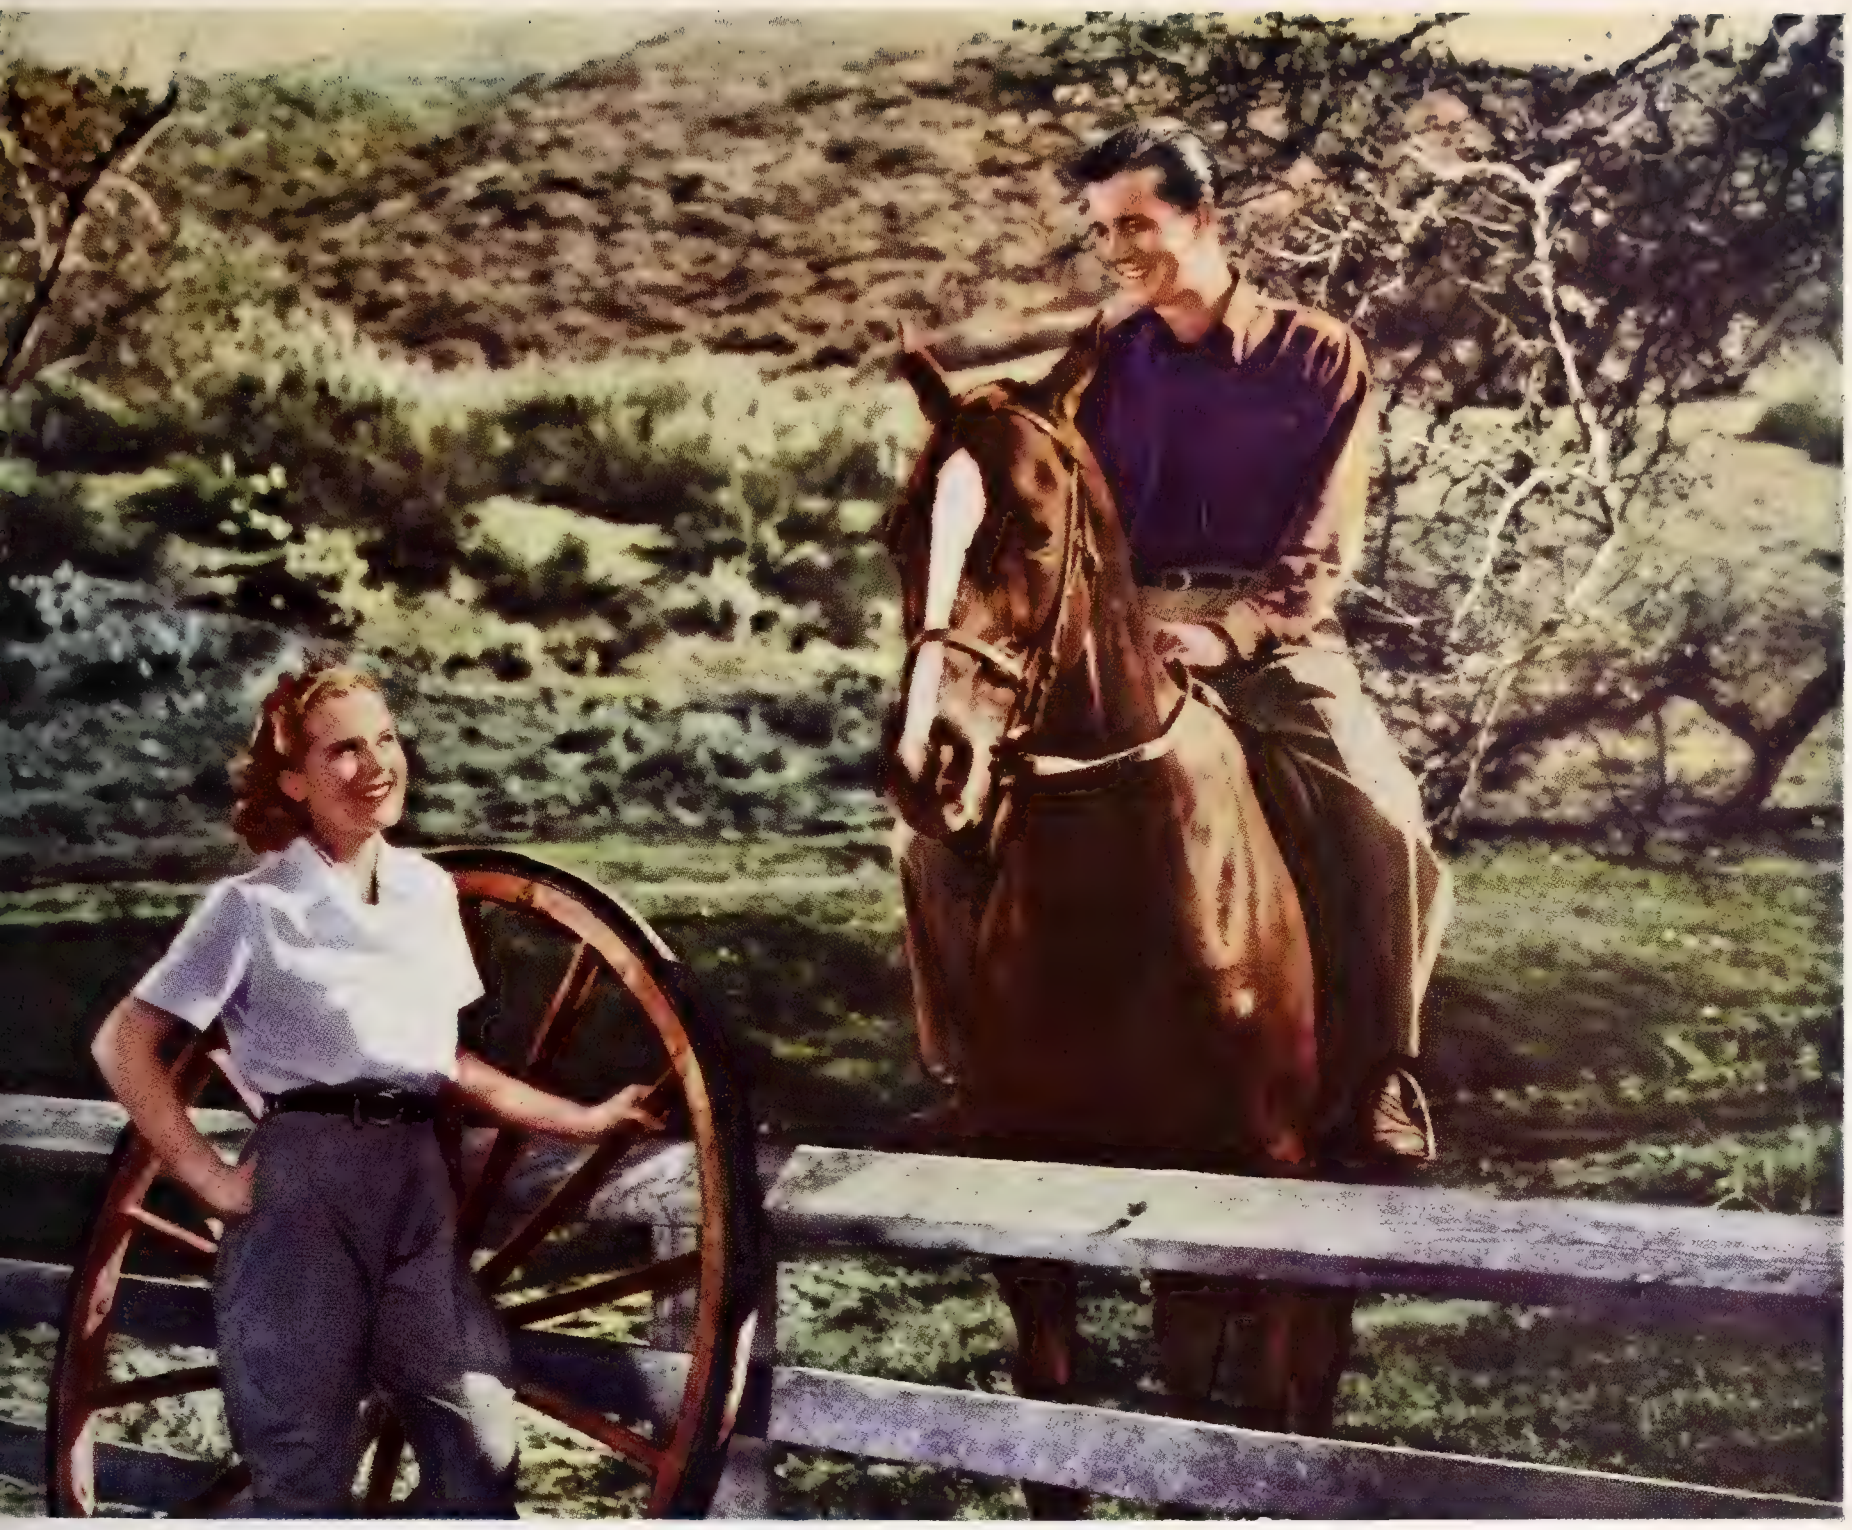
Queen of the Mob

(Paramount)

Melodrama

The third picture to be based on J. Edgar Hoover's book, "Persons in Hiding," Paramount's "Queen of the Mob" parallels closely at least part of the real life of the late and notorious "Ma" Barker, who spawned a gang of criminals. In this the chief character is "Ma Webster," played by Blanche Yurka, noted stage actress, in her second motion picture role. Her first was some years ago in the "Tale of Two Cities." "Ma Webster," her three sons and another criminal are shown throughout the picture robbing banks, kidnapping for ransom, murdering and alternately fleeing from justice, while her fourth son, who never engaged in any of her criminal activities, lives a quiet life with his wife and child.



The efficiency of the FBI in tracing down the criminals is carefully and methodically told, and the criminals are slain with the exception of "Ma," who is taken alive.

Supporting Miss Yurka are Ralph Bellamy and Jack Carson as G-Men, Richard Denning, James Seay, Paul Kelly and William Henry as her sons, Jean Cagney, J. Carrol Naish, Hedda Hopper, Billy Gilbert and others.

Horace McCoy and William R. Lipman wrote the screenplay and James Hogan directed this Edward T. Lowe production.

The Captain Is a Lady

(MGM)

Comedy Drama

Humor as provided in story and character delineation, sentiment and action are all to be found in full measure in this offering. One of the less pretentious screenplays on the MGM schedule, written by Harry Clork and based on the play by Rachel Crothers and the novel by Louis Forsslund, it sustained the interest of a preview night audience composed of regular theatre patrons as well as press and professional attendants.

The story is that of a retired sea captain who goes with his wife to live in a home for "Retired Ladies," his adventures there and the results of his actions undertaken to raise the money with which to procure a place in the home for his wife originally.

Action in full measure stems from scenes in which the captain's former ship is driven on a reef during a storm, and his efforts to get it off. Comedy comes from the characterizations of Helen Broderick, Billie Burke, Marjorie Main, Cecil Cunningham and Clem Bevans. Sentiment derives from the love demonstrated by the captain, enacted by Charles Coburn and his wife, seen as Beulah Bondi. Virginia Grey and Dan Dailey, Jr., provide romantic interest. Frederick Stephani produced with Robert B. Sinclair directing.

Previewed at Fox Wilshire theatre, Beverly Hills, to the reaction noted.—WALTER SELDEN.

Produced and distributed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Director, Robert B. Sinclair. Producer, Frederick Stephani. Screen play, Harry Clork. Anne of Windy Poplars

(RKO Radio)

Family Entertainment

Depicting, as did the book, the triumph of sweetness and light over malice and envy, Cliff Reid's presentation of the L. M. Montgomery novel of like title is in the mode and manner of the book. There has been no streamlining of the plot, no modernizing of story, and reliance is upon appeal to sentiment and emotion throughout. Subject and treatment are thus in contrast to most of contemporary product.

Anne Shirley, as "Anne Shirley," is persecuted by the "Pringle" family, social and civic overlords of Pringleton, where she goes to teach school. By persistent friendliness, consistent kindness to her persecutors and a general championship of the gentler virtues, she wins not only the community but the "Pringles" to her support during a school-year marked by a sequence of small incidents of large significance.

The direction by Jack Hively and the screen play by Michael Kanin and Jerry Cady are in consonance with the book from which the film is derived.

The Lone Wolf Meets a Lady

(Columbia)

"Mike Lanyard" Melodrama

The fabled "Mike Lanyard" of the Louis Joseph Vance stories is once again on the prowl in an entertaining melodrama. The plot is similar to previous "Lone Wolf" films, the story revolving around a necklace.

The cast is competent and contains many well known names. Jean Muir, after a period on the stage in the east and allied matters, is the girl in the case. Eric Blore plays "Lanyard's" butler again and most of the comedy is centered around him although Fred Kelsey, "Inspector Crane's" stooge, comes in for his share. The inspector is played by Thurston Hall. Also there are Victor Jory, Roger Pryor and Warren Hull.

Warren William as the central Vance character carries an air of being able to meet any situation and the audience responds with complete confidence in him. The direction has been ably handled and even though there are few suspects, and most of them are cleared before the climax, it is not until the actual denouement that most audiences will have guessed the right person.

Two murders are committed—Roger Pryor as "Pete Rennick" is the first and Victor Jory as "Clay Beaudine" is the second. Both sought to steal the necklace, which, incidentally, proves to be an imitation, a fact on which the plot depends.

Reviewed at the Globe theatre, New York. A fair size early afternoon audience were well disposed towards the film and laughed at Eric Blore at the right places.—PAUL C. MOONEY, JR.

Produced and distributed by Columbia. Producer, Ralph Cohn. Director, Sidney Salkow. Screen play by John Larkin. Story by Wolfe Kaufman and John Larkin. Based upon a story by Louis Joseph Vance. Assistant director, William Mull. Photography, Henry Freulich. Editor, Al Clark. Art direction, Lionel Banks. Sound, George Cooper. P. C. A. Certificate No. 6187. Running time, when seen in New York, 71 minutes. Release date, May 30, 1940. General audience classification.

Pop Always Pays

(RKO Radio)

Slapstick Farce

Reaching back to the pie-throwing school of farce for its comedy technique, "Pop Always Pays" features Leon Errol, Dennis O'Keefe, Adele Pearce, Walter Catlett and Marjorie Gateson. Indicative of the humor is the situation in which Mr. Errol sits on a pie.

The screen play by Charles E. Roberts, based on a story by Arthur Beckhard, concerns a business man who has promised his daughter's fiance $1,000 as soon as the latter has saved the same amount. Resultant complications follow, designed along humorous lines.

From the Lee Marcus side of the studio, the picture was produced by Bert Gilroy and directed by Leslie Goodwins.

Previewed at the RKO Hill Street Theatre, Los Angeles, where the audience reacted favorably for the most part.—W. S.

New Moon

(MGM)

MacDonald-Eddy

The second screen version of the operetta with music by Sigmund Romberg and book and lyrics by Oscar Hammerstein 2nd, Frank Mandel and Laurence Schwab, this stars Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy. In the 1930 version, also by MGM, Grace Moore and Lawrence Tibbett appeared in the leading roles.

Produced and directed by Robert Z. Leonard, the picture's cast includes, in addition to its stars, Mary Boland, H. B. Warner, George Zucco and Grant Mitchell. The screen play, by Jacques Deval and Robert Arthur, remains unchanged in basic outline from that of the original operetta of the young French aristocrat who renounces his claims to nobility in order to further the cause of the French Revolution in New Orleans, where he goes as a bond servant.

He helps other bond servants escape by capturing a vessel, with which they embark on a career as privateers. They capture a boat containing the young landowner, portrayed by Miss MacDonald, are wrecked and set up a new society on the island where they land.

Previewed at the Village Theatre, Westwood, where the familiar melodies and their rendition were well received, while some uneasiness was evident at the length of the film and its narrative subject matter.—W. S.

The Man from Tumbleweeds

(Columbia)

Western

Cleaning up an outlaw-infested town by forming a band of rangers hand picked from a state pen to do the cleaning is the rather odd twist to this original screen play by Charles Francis Royal. It is another in the "Wild Bill Saunders" series starring Bill Elliott and packs a lot of action into an hour's running time.

Elliott is the tall, lean and strong type of western star, fast on the draw and ready of fist that makes for plenty of fighting, but there is one angle that most directors overlook or ignore and that is the unchanged appearance of the combatants after a scrap. It is especially noticeable here, when, after what is meant to be a furious fist fight, the fighters emerge unscratched and breathing normally. An audience composed mostly of boys and men appeared to enjoy the fight, but ha ha-ed the unmussed fighters when it was over. Otherwise the picture is swiftly paced and pleased the customers.

Elliott is called upon to clean up the town of "Gas Light," which is under the domination of an outlaw named "Kilgore." He suggests to the governor of the state that prison inmates be used to form a "rangers" outfit under "Wild Bill's" leadership with a chance for parole as a reward. The governor agrees with the suggestion and the cleaning up process is started.

A Fugitive from Justice

(Warners)

Comedy-Melodrama

The story of "A Fugitive from Justice" deals with the efforts of an insurance company investigator to keep alive a gang leader who is insured for $1,000,000. The plot is complicated by the fact that the police want the leader, dead or alive, preferably dead, and that a rival gang chieftain, desirous of power and also of the insured man's girl friend, is out to murder him.

Roger Pryor is the investigator, aided by a dimwitted stooge, played by Eddie Foy, Jr. The cast includes Lucile Fairbanks, Sheila Bromley, Morgan Conway and John Gallaudet.

Alex Gottleib wrote the script from an original story by Leonard Neubauer. Terry Morse directed.

Passport to Alcatraz

(Columbia)

Spy Melodrama

With each day's headlines carrying news of sabotage and espionage in this and other countries Columbia has taken a timely screenplay by Albert DeMond and produced a still more timely spy melodrama dealing with the bogus passport racket used by foreign powers to smuggle their agents into this country.

As an indictment of the false passport racket which enables enemy aliens to enter the United States and conduct their espionage and sabotage activities "Passport to Alcatraz" presents Jack Holt as the investigator assigned to work with the government.

Worming his way into the confidence of the gang, "Hollister" attempts to learn who is the master mind behind the spy ring. After some melodramatic adventures the saboteurs are brought to justice.

Cecilia Calejo and Noah Beery, Jr., offer what little romance there is to the picture while Maxie Rosenbloom supplies the comedy relief. The picture was directed by Lewis D. Collins.

The Carson City Kid

(Republic)

Rogers' Western

Roy Rogers is the titular gentleman of this bronco opus and the admirers of his versatility in or out of the saddle should be anxious to see his latest endeavors.

George "Gabby" Hayes offers his loquacious characterization of a frustrated sheriff and a surprise bit of casting has Bob Steele, usually found riding in the interest of law and order, offering "heavy" interference.

The "Kid" is on the hunt for the murderer of his brother and his sleuthing technique earns him the reputation of being a local bad man. The trail leads to the saloon headquarters of "Jessup" and the "Kid" palms himself off as a trigger man for the bar room baron. "Warren," who has been rolled in a crooked poker game, ransacks the "Jessup" safe, is caught and is about to be tried as the "Carson City Kid." The real "Kid" finds the safe loot, which contains evidence of "Jessup's" identity as the murderer of the "Kid's" brother, rescues "Warren," gets his man and also a bride.

ease while manicuring the lawn, and a canine ball player. Other out of the ordinary exhibitions are the wax work miniatures, as practised by a mother and son from New Orleans and a visit to a Florida roadhouse, which is decorated throughout with bottle caps to execute some attractive and striking designs. The entire display should be a spot of interest and entertainment for any program.—Running time, nine minutes.

Going Places, No. 77
(Universal)
Dude Ranch Visit

The up and coming vacation enterprise, known as dude ranching, is the material for this newest Going Places miniature. The various bits of recreational activity in such a setting are inspected and include several colorful sequences from bronco busting to a barn dance festivity. The program is varied and is enhanced by some superlative glimpses of outdoor locations. The excursion should prove a refreshing item on any program and should cause a considerable increase in dude ranch business, if this sample of the life is any indication of the attractiveness of such a vacation.—Running time, 9 2/3 minutes.

The Naughty Nineties
(Universal)
Those Good Old Days

Old timers whose entertainment memory dates back to the original times for this musical resurrection of the good old days of the "naughty nineties," will find a great deal of sentimental amusement in this song and dance screen chromo. The younger set should like the historical piece also for there is enough comedy and modern talent, anachronistically included, to entice their interest. However, it is the rendition of the old time song favorites by a quartet of singing waiters that is the highlight.—Running time, 18 minutes.

Sport of Gliding

The art of gliding, which was a step in the development of the modern aeroplane, has in recent years become an increasingly popular sport and the gliding contest held at Elmira, N. Y., annually attracts followers of the sport from all over the country. A Pathe camera crew has also gone to the gliding contest at Elmira as this subject attests. It is an interesting subject of the ingenuity of amateur sports enthusiasts in designing their streamlined kites and in the manner they handle them. Produced by Frank Donovan.—Running time, 9 minutes.

Stray Lamb
(RKO Pathe)
Reelism

Probably the best way to identify this subject is to call it a "cartoon" with live creatures, a lamb, St. Bernard dog, eagle and a mountain lion. The St. Bernard is the protector of the lamb but in the moment when the dog's back is turned the eagle swoops down and carries the lamb to its eyrie. The dog follows and rescues the lamb only to be faced with an attack by a "hungry" mountain lion. The lion, however, disappears up the mountain in lieu of fighting and the dog carries the lamb safely back home. It is an unusual subject.—Running time, 10 minutes.

The Chewin' Bruin
(Vitaphone)
Looney Tune Interlude

This is a tall tale spun from Looney Tune lore about a great, big bear which is just crazy about chewing tobacco. Well, sir, this bruin fairy fable reports the adventure of an old trapper who goes out on the hunt and has his most trouble keeping the bear bait from snatching his rough-cut. The huntsman finally bags his prey but according to the finale it would seem that, even when mounted, the stuffed bruin head can roll a mouthful and expectorate it with deadly aim. The entire pen and ink fantasy is conjectured in such good spirits that even the ladies, who have definite aversions to the masculine practice of tobacco chewing will find this animal demonstration of the vice most entertaining.—Running time, seven minutes.

Charley Chase Comedy

Numerous complications ensue, especially when his real wife walks into her own home as the guest of the boss. Neither Charley, his wife nor the waitress reveal their true relationship to the boss until matters become so complicated that the truth comes out.—Running time 18½ minutes.

The Egg Hunt

Color Cartoon

"The Egg Hunt" is a satirical cartoon of a professor with a cockney accent giving a motion picture lecture of his adventures while searching for a dinosaur egg in Asia. Of course his dialogue and the pictures on the screen continually differ leaving the audience as bewildered as the subject.—Running time, 7½ minutes.

Andy Clyde Comedy

Slapstick comedy is the keynote of Andy Clyde's latest venture in two-reel subjects. Andy is fired from his job when his brother-in-law insults the boss. A vacation trip is planned with Andy doing all the work while the domineering relation gives the orders. The hunting trip nearly ends fatally with Andy's life constantly at stake due to the negligence of his partner.—Running time, 16 minutes.

Cinderella's Feller
(Vitaphone)
Juvenile Boy Meets Girl

The fairy tale classic of boy meets girl, lass loses slipper, etc., is recast or rather cast down to juvenile proportions and this moppet rendition of fictional romance is recounted charmingly. The youngsters keep faith with the spirit and matter of the courtship myth. "Cindy" is still the household drudge, who is transformed into a ravishing beauty through the magic of the good fairy. The ball runs off according to tradition with the renovated slavey wowing the prince until the fatal tolling of the midnight hour breaks the charm. However, the royal swain is smitten hard and hunts up his dream lady through the clue of her discarded slipper. The finale finds the pair united to pursue a fairy tale future of living happily ever after. Juanita Quigley, a plump but pleasing little miss, and Scotty Beckett, a self assured youngster, play the love leads. During the course of the royal ball, a round of talented juvenile singing and dancing entertainers is displayed. Gay coloring in keeping with the idyllic mood of the fable and some sprightly musical numbers combine to add considerable sparkle to the kiddie cutups. Adults will be enchanted by the youngsters, especially an unidentified sprite in a rabbit costume, and the younger element in the audience will more than likely draw vicarious enjoyment from the proceedings.—Running time, 19 minutes.

One of the few magazines ever put out personally by a motion picture star or featured player, to give news of his activities to his fans, is being published by Smiley Burnette, film companion of Gene Autry, No. 1 cowboy star in the MOTION PICTURE HERALD-FAME poll of exhibitors.

Burnette, who does right well on personal appearance tours of his own, puts out an eight page paper, called "The Westerner," which ties in his affairs, those of Autry, news of Republic studio activities, and of Burnette fan clubs.

Now preparing for its third edition, the publication, a monthly one, is edited by Albert Ardmore, the deep voiced comedian's publicity man, and published nominally by the Smiley Burnette Enterprises, headed by W. R. Mattox, executive manager.

Issue No. 2 contains news of Burnette's northwest personal appearance tour, a review of Republic's "Gaucho Serenade," in which Autry and he appear, as well as comments on other Republic product, personal correspondence from "Frog" to fan club members, a "pen pal" corner, some ads and a contest in which readers are asked to tell what photographs of Burnette are associated with what Republic pictures.

Done in a breezy style, the magazine has met with instant acclamation from Burnette and Autry fans, according to Ardmore.

Now comes a new honor to Burnette. This week he was elected "honorary mayor" of Studio City, where his enterprises headquarter. He succeeds to the gavel held for four years by Hugh Herbert, also of the films, and takes his place with Autry, Andy Devine, Bob Burns and other "mayors" of valley communities.

Holding Chaplin Stills

Publications of stills from Charles Chaplin's forthcoming "Production No. 6" will be withheld voluntarily by Liberty and Look magazines, officials of those publications informed Charles Schwartz of Schwartz & Frohlich, counsel for Mr. Chaplin, last weekend, after disclosing that a number of stills were in their possessions. The magazines agreed not to publish the stills before obtaining Mr. Chaplin's permission or until such time as the pending action against Life has been decided. A preliminary injunction restraining Life from publishing the stills was granted by the federal court last week.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

OUR MANAGER'S ROUND TABLE department of exploitation has received much of merit in the line of press agentry from managers in the field for Twentieth Century-Fox's "Lillian Russell," but little so delectable as the "Lillian Russell" dinner put on in the Maine Woods Room of the Old Bookbinders Restaurant on Walnut Street in Philadelphia, a duplicate of the dinner given for Lillian Russell by the fabulous "Diamond Jim" Brady in the very same room in 1905, and supervised by the same Jack Griffin who was maitre d'hotel of Bookbinders for the original dinner of 35 years ago.

In 1905, and in 1940, they had canapees a la Russe and Creme Vichyssoise, and Crab Flakes a l'Americaine Dessosse, flamble a la Diamond Jim. Then steaming Lobster au Butter Sauce, with Colossal Asparagus sauce Maltaise and Potatoes Bookbinder, and Medaillon de Foie Gras with real Champagne Jelly, and Salade d'Endives et Mache, Brandied Peaches a la Lillian Russell, flambees au kirsch, Petit Fours, Friandises, Cafe des Princes, Amantillado Sherry, Neilly Prat Cinzano, Dubonett, Meursault Gauite d'or 1926, Chateau Mouton Rothschild 1925, Champagne Charles de Cazanove Grand, Vin Monarque 1928. All of which boils down to FOOD!

The dinner at Bookbinders was in observation of the Stanley-Warner campaign for the opening of "Lillian Russell" at the Stanley theatre. Participants testified that it upheld the grand reputation of Diamond Jim as the feeder of the day. His reputation reached its height at his dinner for America's "No. 1 Glamour Girl" of 1905 theatricals. She was the original "Ooomph Girl" of the Movies.

Behind the guest-of-honor place at the 1940 Bookbinders' dinner sat the 1940 press agents' idea of a "reincarnated" Lillian Russell, in the person of Miss Martha Schoeninger, of Philadelphia and thereabouts. Behind the beauteous Miss Schoeninger, on the wall, rested the huge picture of La Russell that used to hang in the green room of the local Keith's theatre, where the actress was playing, when Diamond Jim drove from Broadway for his Bookbinders' "Lillian Russell" dinner.

Nellie, her friends called her out in her native Iowa, where she was born as Helen Leonard. On Broadway, Nellie (Helen) Leonard, now stage-named Lillian Russell, glittered with diamonds and rubies, from her $3,900 pink corsets, to her $1,900 gold-plated and emerald-studded bicycles for her Central Park pedaling, to chinchilla coats that cost upwards of $30,000, $200 negligees and $700 lacy fringes—all figures were supplied by Stanley-Warner-Fox Philadelphia exploitation managers, and were not certified, at least by us.

Twentieth Century-Fox's Lillian Russell, of course, is Alice Faye, and the publicity says they shrunk Alice from a normal 26-inch waist to 20 inches, by means of whalebones, to match the hour-glass Lillian's midriff, adding that the studio supplied Alice with two "rats" to build up a pompadour strong enough to support the voluminous hats worn by the original Lillian.

"Miss Russell," they added, "married four times in her wanderings. That was two too many times for puritanical Hollywood. Miss Faye must get by with Don Ameche and Henry Russell," the publicity adding the World War I note that, "During the World War she enlisted 10,000 U. S. Marines."

Danton Walker reports an item which belongs to the Department of Unintentional Humor, being a New York World's Fair announcement that "a model cathedral made from 50,000 burnt matches" will be exhibited on "Bright Idea Day for Children," June 29th.

NBC's home radio studios in New York have an "Official Separator of Stiff-Bosomed Dress Shirts and Shiny Bald Heads." Sound waves bounce all over the place when they hit stiff-bosomed dress shirts, causing quite a reverberation for the sensitive microphone. Bald-headed men are shockingly poor at absorbing sound, while hirsute individuals will tangle up the most athletic sound wave.

When a radio studio audience arrives to sit in at a broadcast, the "Official Separator of Stiff-Bosomed Dress Shirts and Shiny Bald Heads," unknown, of course to the arriving audience, directs some of each to the left, some to the right, scattering them about the studio to get a balance.

There's not much future in the job, though.

Dear Sir:—

Undoubtedly you have heard of marriages being perform on stages of local movie theater's. I am a young man of twenty two years of age, and would like to get married. Due to financial difficulties and other difficulties it has been very hard to get together a few dollars to get married.

The girl that I am engaged to has to go through the same task like myself. Also, she is Irish. I am sure you would like to see two people get a fresh start in life by having a wedding performed on your stage.

My girl and I are swell dancers—maybe—after we are married, we could go in show business. If I don't hear from you within a week, I am going to write to Loew's State up the street.

Respectfully yours,

86 WARNER SHORTS FOR 1940-41; COLUMBIA HOLDS FINAL REGIONAL

Four Meetings Conclude Sales Convention Season; Sears Emphasizes American Themes in New Warner Product

The list of product to be made by the ten large American companies was completed this week when Warner Brothers gave the line-up of 86 short subject releases for 1940-41 at its second and final convention held Monday to Wednesday in Chicago.

The sales meeting season ended with the Columbia regional over last weekend in Atlantic City; the Empire Universal convention in Toronto and the fourth and final Republic regional, held in New York City.

A summary of the features and westerns to be produced by the ten companies in the coming season starts on page 38 of this issue of MOTION PICTURE HERALD.

86 Short Subjects From Warner Brothers

Norman H. Moray, Warner short subjects sales manager, announced Monday at the convention in Chicago held at the Blackstone Hotel that 18 two-reel and 68 one-reel productions would be made for the 1940-41 program at the Burbank studio. More than half the shorts will be in color. Jack L. Warner, vice-president in charge of production, will supervise short subject production.

Warner Brothers announced that the new season's short subjects would receive feature picture production treatment, with the increased use of star names, leading directors, writers and technicians.

The short subject list:

Two reels in color.

Three American Cavalcades: "Songs of America," "The Fall of the Alamo" and "The Unknown Soldier"; three Musical Comedy Featurettes: "Under Western Stars," "The Mississippi Showboat" and "Here Come the Girls."

Two reels in black and white:

Three Elsa Maxwell Blue Ribbon Comedies: "The Lady and the Lug," with "Slapsie" Maxie Rosenbloom, "Riding Into Society" and "Throwing a Party"; nine Broadway (diversified) Brevities: "Ed Sullivan's Hollywood Review," "Kiddie Revue," "Ice Follies," "Sockeroo," with Maxie Rosenbloom; "Those Minstrel Days," "The Dog in the Orchard," "Service with the Colors," a Damon Runyon comedy with a name cast and "In Old Mexico," with top musical stars.

One Reel Subjects

The list of one reel shorts is as follows:

Six Hollywood Novelties: "Shark Hunting," with Howard Hill, famous archer; "History Repeats Itself," Radio Rogues; "Mexican Jumping Beans"; "Trouble in Store," Arthur Bryan; "The Boar Hunt," with Howard Hill and "Miracle Makers," the first screen appearance of the Cyclotron, invented by the Nobel Prize winner, Dr. Lawrence of the University of California; ten Melody Master Bands: to feature name orchestras and Hollywood personalities, the latter to include Dick Foran and his Buckaroos; Jane Wyman and her Swing Debs and Dennis Morgan and his Collegians. The bands include Phil Harris, Skinny Ennis and Matty Malneck, and four others; ten Sports Parades in color: One reel subjects "based on thrilling action in the world of sports."

Cartoons to be produced by Leon Schlesinger: 26 Merrie Melodies in color and 16 Looney Tunes, one reel black and white animated cartoons featuring Porky Pig.

American Theme Stressed

Gradwell L. Sears, general sales manager, in his address to the convention stressed the effect of the foreign situation on the subject matter of the new season's product and praised the cooperation received from American exhibitors.

"Realizing the almost complete loss of the foreign market, the Warner feature product for the coming season is based almost entirely on the themes of Americana," Mr. Sears said. "More than 90 per cent of next season's features from this company will be based on varied but typical American background material. Six top budget films with American themes include "Santa Fe Trail" and "The Sea Hawk," both starring Errol Flynn; "High Sierra," Paul Muni; "They Died with Their Boots On," "Montana," "Calamity Jane," Bette Davis, and "Sam Colt, Trigger Man." All of these and others on the program are in line with Warner's policy of action pictures."

Mr. Sears also said that exhibitors have already helped the industry absorb foreign losses in the domestic market by granting extended playtime for worthwhile productions. The cooperation on "All This, and Heaven Too" was cited as an example.

"Despite the fact that we had already closed over 11,000 contracts for the showing of this feature, more than 200 exhibitors have already agreed to play this film on the special and roadshow engagements at advanced prices which we have set up for it," he said.

Charles Einfeld, director of advertising and publicity, said, "the keynote for next season in the motion picture industry should be stronger cooperation among all its divisions. The only way to conquer the many new problems facing not only this industry but this country as a whole, is through the abandoning of selfish interest so far as is possible."

Sears Drive Winners

Carl Leserman, assistant sales manager who presided at the convention Monday while Mr. Sears was detained in New York, announced that southern and west coast districts, headed by Ben Kalmenson, won first and second places in the Sears Drive.

Checks were presented by Mr. Leserman to Mr. Kalmenson, Fred Jack, southern district manager; Henry Herbel, West Coast district manager, and the following branch managers in the two territories, in the order of their finish: From the south, Ralph McCoy, Atlanta; Doak Roberts, Dallas; J. O. Rohde, Oklahoma City; John A. Bachman, Charlotte; and L. Conner, New Orleans. From the west coast: Wm. F. Gordon, Salt Lake; W. E. Callaway, Los Angeles; Wm. Shartin, Seattle; Vete Stewart, Portland; Al Shmitken, San Francisco; and Earl Bell, Denver.

Third place in the Drive was won by the eastern district sales force, who received their checks at the company's Pittsburgh convention.

It has been reported that Warner films will be sold in the coming season on the following minimum base: four at 40 per cent; eight at 35 and eight at 30, with the rest of the program on a flat rental basis. Policy has not been announced on "The Man Who Came to Dinner" and "The Life of John Doe," both of which will be sold separately.

WESTERNS HELD "ALWAYS POPULAR"

. . Bert Gilroy, producer of "Prairie Law," RKO film starring George O'Brien which opened Wednesday at the Central theatre on Broadway, said that he believes that westerns will be popular as long as the motion picture is an entertainment medium.

"While musicals, sophisticated comedy, gangster stories and homespun yarns have led the popularity parade at various times and then faded out," Mr. Gilroy said, "the westerns have retained their box-office draw since the first day they were flashed on the screen in the early days of the silent era."

Joseph McConville, foreign sales manager, said, "We must not consider the foreign market a lost cause at this point despite the fact that blitzkrieg seems to be the order of the day. The foreign offices will carry on in spite of the seeming insurmountable difficulties of today."

A. Montague, general sales manager, in explaining the new season's product, said, "'Idea pictures' based on headline events and produced to reach a majority of small town theatres, will supplement Columbia's important program of major productions set for the coming season."

Columbia also plans "Streamlined Westerns," which will emphasize comedy, as well as romantic interest and fast action. Columbia will offer Charles Starrett cowboy productions and "Wild Bill Hickok" westerns.

Exhibitor Gives

Martin Quigley,
Motion Picture Herald:

I suppose you get hundreds of letters from exhibitors all over the country complaining about business conditions, union situations, tough film business policies, and a million and one other headaches connected with our business. In the past I as well as the rest of my fellow exhibitors had or thought I had plenty to complain about, until I read the daily newspaper headlines not only for those men who are valiantly fighting for their homes but thousands of non-combatants, Women, Old Men and Children, helplessly floundering in search of refuge, food, medical attention, clothes and many small comforts that will help to make their "Innocent Lives" bearable.

I suddenly realized that I didn't have a care in the world, in comparison I was a very lucky man, and then I was thrilled with the thought that I could help those unfortunates through the American Red Cross.

As a result of this personal analysis and in appreciation for all the privileges granted me and mine in this Blessed Country of ours, I am turning over my gross receipts of Tuesday and Wednesday, June 25th and 26th, to the American Red Cross. I will further endeavor to assemble as many name attractions as possible to appear on our stage. It is my earnest wish that the house record will be shattered, and a new high gross will be reached for this worthy cause.

They are welcome to every dollar, and may these dollars help to alleviate some of the hardships and ease some of the pain the innocents are experiencing.

In closing, I wish to go on record to the effect that the American Red Cross may call on me at any time during the present conflict for the use of my theatre and all its facilities, and they will find me more than willing to do anything in my power to further this splendid cause.

AARON BINKOW,

Zeidman Sets Deal

A deal has been closed between Zeidman International, Inc., headed by B. F. Zeidman, and Select Attractions, Inc., for the release in the United States of Mr. Zeidman's "Leopard Men of Africa."

RCA, Circuit Sign

The Augusta Amusement Company, five-theatre circuit in Augusta, Georgia, has signed a sound service contract with RCA.

6,338 Aided By Relief Fund

The Motion Picture Relief Fund extended aid to 6,338 cases, including 15,845 individuals, with expenditures of $345,430 during 1939, Jean Hersholt, president of the Fund, said in New York this week. The expenditures were almost $80,000 higher than the $268,266 spent during 1938. Income, exclusive of funds received from radio broadcasts which are kept in a special fund, fell short of expenditures by several thousand dollars, Mr. Hersholt said.

Expect 75 Per Cent Increase

The first four months of 1940 indicate that expenditures this year may run about 75 per cent ahead of 1939, he said.

The Will Rogers Memorial Fund has agreed to aid the Relief Fund by donating $100,000, which will be turned over to the Cedars of Lebanon Hospital in Los Angeles for a permanent endowment of 10 beds.

The Fund is supported mainly by an assessment of one-half of one per cent on those earning $100 weekly or more. However, only the Screen Actors Guild and the Film Editors enforce this resolution. With the rest of the guilds and unions, the matter is left to the members. In nine studios where a survey was taken, of those who were under contract at salaries over $100, those contributing totaled 2,098 while 640 did not. The Republic and Walter Wanger studios contributed 100 per cent and almost the entire roster of the Universal studio contributed.

Mr. Hersholt said that he is advocating an increase of the assessment to one per cent, but he does not think it likely that the increase will be adopted. He has been renominated for the presidency for the fourth year and will be unopposed at the annual meeting June 25th.

The Fund has received $570,000 from the Gulf Oil-Screen Guild radio program, but this money is kept separately to provide a home for aged persons formerly connected with the industry. Mr. Hersholt believes that if the contract is renewed and an additional $390,000 assured it will be possible to start building the home. The option must be exercised before July 1st.

Mr. Hersholt's contract with his own radio sponsor has been renewed until January 1, 1942. Among the provisions in the contract is permission to appear on the Screen Guild radio show at any time and the requirement that the show originate from New York at least six weeks each year.

Heads Relief Division

George Schaefer, president of RKO, has accepted the chairmanship of the Motion Picture Division of the Greater New York Men's Committee in the nationwide campaign for $3,000,000 for relief of refugees of The Netherlands, now being carried on by The Queen Wilhelmina Fund, Inc.

Hendrik Willem van Loon is national Fund chairman, and Leon Fraser is chairman of the Fund's national executive committee. Of the $3,000,000 some $800,000 is being sought in metropolitan New York, including $500,000 which will be solicited by the Men's Committee.

MUSICIANS TO TRY 'COOPERATION' NOT 'FORCE' TO GAIN REEMPLOYMENT

American Federation Closes 45th Convention after Electing Petrillo President; No Action on Philadelphia Strike

With no industry-shaking moves, the American Federation of Musicians, on Friday, June 14th, concluded its 45th annual convention which had begun on Monday in Indianapolis. Next year's convention will be in Seattle.

The Federation refused to aid the Philadelphia Local 77's strike against the Warner circuit; advised its executive board to cooperate "if feasible" with other entertainment industry unions to bring reemployment of musicians in theatres; and elected James Petrillo, head of the Chicago local, and members of the executive board, as president.

Other Officers Reelected

Mr. Petrillo succeeded Joseph N. Weber, president for 40 years, who resigned at the convention's opening because of illness. Federation officers reelected were C. L. Bagley, Los Angeles, vice-president; Fred W. Birnbach, Newark, secretary; and H. E. Brenton, Boston, financial secretary.

The officers were named to the executive board; and, with them, Chauncey A. Weaver, Des Moines; Oscar Hild, Cincinnati; A. C. Hayden, Washington; John C. Parks, Dallas; and Walter M. Murdoch, Toronto.

The refusal of the convention to call Warner Brothers "unfair" was in response to a resolution advocated by the Philadelphia Local 77, which has been on strike for six months against the circuit's Philadelphia theatres. The resolutions committee reported it unfavorably. The Philadelphia delegates charged "intimidation" and were answered by Mr. Weber's notation that a general strike would affect thousands of musicians; whereupon the convention backed the committee.

Almost the last act of the convention was to adopt a resolution to "consider the feasibility of engaging in meetings with allied crafts of the theatre industry, for the purpose of increasing employment" of musicians in theatres. This was regarded as meaning conferences with the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, an agreement with which is in effect.

Modification of that agreement, in a resolution which stated in part that it "does not in any way conform to conditions as they exist today," was referred to the executive board which was to decide whether presidents of the two internationals should confer on modification.

Other resolutions passed favored a third term for President Roosevelt; pledged a purge of fifth column elements; asked that symphony orchestra players become beneficiaries of the Social Security Act; opposed revision of the Wagner Labor Act; urged Congress to suppress all subversive activity; favored the Neely anti-block booking bill; called for standard contracts beween agents and musicians, and urged a guarantee of a certain amount of employment per year to the musicians by the agents.

The federation rejected a resolution assailing the American Society of Composers, Authors, and Publishers, and another which would have empowered locals to insist on stand-by orchestras in theatres presenting stage shows occasionally.

It also attacked the Department of Justice anti-trust prosecution of labor unions, and heard a report on the present state of television.

Central Casting Corporation Strike Swings Sword Over Hollywood

Production in Hollywood faced paralysis and its clearing house for 7,000 extras, the Central Casting Corporation, was virtually halted in operation Monday night when 47 of 50 office employees walked from their jobs, answering a strike call by the recently organized American Federation of Labor Office Employee's Local 20978.

The strike followed refusal, two weeks ago, of the corporation's manager, Howard Philbrick, to negotiate with the union. Upon advice of the producers and their attorneys, he had told the union that it must obtain certification by the National Labor Relations Board as the collective bargaining agency for the corporation's office workers before he would deal with it.

The strike occurred at the peak of Monday night activities. It forced studios to call extras directly. This in turn brought a threat by the union that it would picket studios which made such calls, call out their office workers, and prevent other AFL workers from entering. On Tuesday, the Paramount lot was picketed.

Backing of the other AFL unions in the industry and of the Screen Actors Guild for the office local was secured Monday night at a meeting of the AFL Labor Council delegates. However, on Tuesday the Actors Guild told extras to take jobs at all studios, including Paramount, which was charged by the office workers' union with directly calling extras.

Producers' representatives and union leaders met on Tuesday and Wednesday, to settle the affair. J. W. Buzzell, vice-chairman of the Conference of American Federation of Labor Studio Unions, and Joseph Touhy, business agent for the studio drivers' union, conferred with E. J. Mannix, of MGM, representing the studios.

The office workers' union is reported asking the casting corporation for a closed shop, a $75 minimum weekly wage for casting directors, and a $25 weekly wage for clerks and stenographers.

Projectionists Local In New Campaign

Conferences on a drive to completely unionize New York theatres, were reported this week in that city between officers of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and its projectionist affiliate, the strongest in the country, New York Local 306 (known as the "Sam Kaplan union").

At the Alliance's recent Louisville, Kentucky, convention, the Local asked for aid in such a drive. Its rival in the New York metropolitan area is the Empire State Motion Picture Operators Union, with which it has quarreled for years, and mergers with which have been reported likely and then disavowed. The Empire union has closed shop agreements with approximately 35 houses, mostly in Brooklyn, and belonging to independent theatre operators and circuits. The two unions cross-picketed each other at several neighborhood houses in recent weeks but this feud ended two weeks ago.

Last week, the two unions completed an agreement, involving interchange of union cards and new assignments for union operators, and clearing the way for acquisition by the RKO circuit of 11 Bronx and upper Manhattan theatres, from the Cocalis circuit. The former has a 306 contract; the latter had an Empire contract.

Besides voting on acceptance into membership of the projectionists working in the Cocalis houses, the membership of Local 306 this week approved new wage agreements with the Skouras and Randforce circuits.

Actors' "One Union" Plan Is Considered

The "one big union" plan, submitted to the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, parent actors' union, some weeks ago by a New York accountant, Bernard Reis, is now being considered by the executive bodies of those unions.

First to recommend adoption or rejection will probably be Actors' Equity, whose economy and efficiency committee this week was mulling the plan, preparatory to reporting its findings to the Equity Council next Tuesday.

Executive bodies of the Four A's unions must consider the plan first, before the international board of the parent organization acts.

The plan, in rough exposition, would enforce administrative economies such as the elimination of offices and officers of various unions; and would provide one membership card for all actors, eliminating duplicate and triplicate payments now made by some actors.

Officials of the Four A's and of Equity were reluctant this week to disclose specific recommendations of the plan, which has long been sought by the actors.

Extras Protest Court Defeat

Class B extras of the Screen Actors Guild this week were protesting the defeat last week in Los Angeles Superior Court, of an attempt to gain them voting power in the Guild equal to that possessed by the Class A members. Superior Judge Charles D. Ballard ruled against them, remarking, "I cannot see that the Class B members were deprived of any constitutional right."

WAR MAY BRING BRITISH PRODUCERS TO CANADA

Korda Writer Indicates Move from Britain Is Possible; Sutro Feature In Work

by COLIN R. HAWORTH in Montreal

The possibility, even probability that the film industry of Great Britain, due to the growing stress of war, may move, lock, stock and barrel, to Canada cropped up in Montreal during the week, coincident with the arrival in this city of several men prominent in the British film world. Support, too, is lent to the possibility by the fact that one British company has some of its working staff here already and is prepared to start shooting on a picture July 1st.

Sherriff Acting for Korda

The move started with the arrival in Montreal of R. C. Sherriff, author of "Journey's End" and co-worker with Alexander Korda, in Hollywood. Mr. Sherriff admitted he was in Canada on behalf of Mr. Korda, to ascertain what steps might be taken toward establishing a production center in the Dominion.

"It is now almost impossible to make pictures in England," Mr. Sherriff said. "Not only is there the wartime disruption of things generally, but other uses are being found for most of the studios around London.

"Yet it is realized that the entertainment industry is important in wartime. I do know that Mr. Korda plans to make some pictures in Canada, and I think he will try something that will show the basis of Canadian development."

Discussions on the making of British films in Canada were not entirely new, Mr. Sherriff said. Mr. Korda had spoken to the late Lord Tweedsmuir, Governor General of Canada, about the matter and had Lord Tweedmuir not met his death, he might have been prevailed upon to take up the pen that made him famous as author John Buchan to do the writing for such pictures, according to Mr. Sherriff.

Meantime Mr. Sherriff is contacting film people here to get details of production facilities.

Banks Arrives

The day after Mr. Sherriff made this announcement, last week, Monty Banks arrived in Montreal en tour with his actress wife Gracie Fields. He asserted that he was contemplating making one or two pictures in Canada, directed by himself and starring Miss Fields. Discussing the possibility of a wholesale emigration of British picture-producers to Canada, Mr. Banks said Canada had certain definite potentialities that might act as a lure to the British industry.

"Canada is a big country and it already has a reasonably sized home market—enough anyway to gross production costs," he said. "In addition, you have here the great American market right next door and Europe and Australia are only a few hours by plane in either direction. The only problem remaining is the organization of such a move."

Mr. Banks thought the financing of a film industry in Canada would present little trouble but asserted some arrangements would have to be made with the government first to establish customs regulations.

The start of a film industry in Canada by himself or any other British studio would, Mr. Banks thought, require only about $2,000,000 to build a studio and start production. 'Big name' British stars—and possibly American ones, too—would be used to get things under way and as time progressed home talent could be developed within the country. He felt a new industry in Canada would be able to draw on both the British and American studios for technical men.

Sutro To Make Feature

Meanwhile, with people in England and Canada discussing the subject of removal to the Dominion, one British company was preparing to shoot. Ortus Films Limited, of London, headed by John Sutro, have one man in Canada at present, John Seaborne, preparing to use Canadian cameramen to start shooting a western on July 1st. It will be the first feature picture made in Canada in three or four years. The picture, according to Mr. Seaborne, has no working title as yet but will be "a modern life story." He said contracts were being discussed with some top-flight British stars but names could not be announced as yet. Directing the picture for Mr. Sutro will be Michael Powell, who did "U-Boat 29" and a number of other pictures lately. Mr. Seaborne will act as film editor and Emerick Pressburger has written the story. William Gillett is production manager.

Work in Canada on the film, which is to be about 80 per cent exteriors, will be done by two units, one covering Canada from Winnipeg to the Maritime provinces, under Mr. Powell and a second working from Winnipeg to the west coast under Mr. Seaborne. Mr. Powell, who was in Canada a few months ago looking over the situation will be leaving England shortly with his crew and equipment. Meanwhile Mr. Seaborne is rushing west with a small crew borrowed from Associated Screen News in Montreal to shoot the opening ceremonies of the Trans-Canada Highway at Jasper, Alberta, on July 1st. It will be a sequence of the picture.

Another person in Canada seems interested in the possibility of a movie industry here but has had little time to engage in the matter as yet. He is director John Farrow, presently Chief of the Naval Information Service of the Canadian Government at Ottawa.

Monogram Pictures of Canada, Ltd., Toronto, has taken out a Dominion company charter with an authorized capital of 50,000 no-par-value shares. For some years Monogram product has been distributed in Canada by Regal Films Limited.

Edward A. Golden, in charge of Monogram distribution, in New York, said this week that the company is considering its own distribution organization in Canada. A decision is expected to be reached in the near future, he indicated. In the event it is decided to proceed, the Regal Films deal will be discontinued.

CANADA WAR OFFICE IN CIRCUIT QUARTERS

Famous Players Canadian Corporation has leased 5,000 square feet of floor space in the Capitol Theatre, Ottawa, to the Canadian Government for an annual rent of $4,500 for use by the Canadian War Department for the duration of hostilities. The Government has been compelled to rent numerous premises for official purposes.

New Nickel Movie Company in Field

Another company this week entered the field of production of 16 mm. films for automatic, coin operated projectors. The company is Telefilm, Inc., organized in Hollywood with a capital of $75,000 and with Joseph A. Thomas, president; Peter Gioga, vice-president; Peter Commandini, secretary-treasurer, and Harold Spina, in charge of production and music departments. The company will start production of a series of three minute subjects featuring name bands shortly.

Movietrola's Plan

Movietrola, coin-in-slot film device, plans to use complete three-minute sequences from current features and identify the pictures from which the sequences are taken, Emile Hollander, president of Movietrola, said this week, in answer to charges made by independent exhibitors that the new machines would compete with theatres. He said that the showing of sequences would operate as a sort of institutional trailer.

Slot Machine Taxes

A member of the Philadelphia city council said this week that a special ordinance will be introduced in the council to provide a license fee for the movie machines. He said that it would probably be considerably higher than the $10 yearly license fee exacted from pin ball games and similar automatic machine devices.

A new city ordinance in Columbus, Ohio, regulating exhibition gives the municipality jurisdiction over any place where motion pictures or televised pictures are shown. The ordinance applies to coin operated machines and increases the yearly fee from $1 to $25.

A new Detroit ordinance authorizes the mayor to issue an annual license for movie machines at a fee of $10 each.

Durland Promoted

L. F. Durland has been appointed a salesman for the southern Missouri territory by the Universal exchange in Kansas City where he had been a booker. I. Daynosky, former manager of the Regal Theatre, St. Joseph, same state, replaces him in the exchange.

Reduce Theatre Levy

Assessments by New York City on the Broadway Theatre were reduced by $1,620,000 recently, covering the period from 1933 to 1940. Supreme Court Justice McLaughlin ordered the cuts.

ARGENTINA BANS PARTISAN FILMS AS NAZIS SEEK PROPAGANDA OUTLET

Efforts to Gain Foothold on Screen Bring Legislation Designed to Maintain Strict Neutrality Policy

"Many Argentine Nationalists and Fascist and Nazi leaders are expected to be involved in the investigation of the explosion of two bombs aboard the British steamer Gascony at Buenos Aires, Argentina, last week. The police have found explosives in the house of a Nationalist and have arrested five young reserve officers of the Argentine Army because of their alleged connection with fifth column activities. . . ."

From a dispatch to the New York Times from John W. White in Montevideo, June 17th.

by NATALIO BRUSKI
in Buenos Aires

Legislation enacted by the Argentine Congress on June 8th and designed to maintain strict neutrality in the European conflict has caused repercussions in the cinema industry here because of the restrictions imposed. It is interpreted as meaning that no film which places either the Allies or Germany in an unfavorable light may be shown.

Restriction Protested

In general the measures which have been taken by the Government have not been well received by the Argentine press or by public opinion because of their dictatorial trend although strict action to put down the fifth column activities which lately have taken on alarming proportions in all parts of the country was generally conceded to be necessary.

The effect of the new regulations on the cinema industry is not quite clear yet and there are a number of contradictory factors which have not been interpreted by Government authorities.

The legislation, while not directly mentioning the motion picture, contains the clause: "It is forbidden to publish, circulate or diffuse, by any means whatsoever of any manifestations which affect the neutrality of the Argentine nation in her relations with any of the warring nations; and anything that may be qualified as being contemptuous to their Governments, political regimes, chiefs of State, or officials or that in any way perturb internal order, compromise the integrity of the country or its institutions, social peace or the friendly relations of the Nation with other countries."

Banning of New Films Seen

From the commencement of the war, newsreels have inserted a notice requesting the audience to refrain from jeering or cheering when war scenes were depicted and although occasional brawls have been reported, the showings, up to the present, have been without noteworthy incident. Recently there was talk of banning the showing of any war scenes in newsreels.

Films such as "The Mortal Storm" (MGM) and "I Married a Nazi" (Twentieth Century-Fox) would be banned automatically under the new legislation because they are direct attacks on the Nazi regime.

The greater number of motion picture patrons are sympathetic to the Allied cause and do not want German propaganda films. A serious riot in one of the larger theatres in the cinema district in the center of Buenos Aires was caused recently by the showing of "The Siegfried Line," a feature that dealt with the Nazi regime and is essentially German propaganda.

The night the film opened German partisans began cheering, clapping and shouting "Heil Hitler" with the first scene. Soon the house was divided into two opposite groups which applauded or jeered, according to their sympathies. The demonstration grew, the house lights were put on and then the affair started in earnest with some of the audience rushing out to the exits in a panic while others took advantage of the cleared space in order to better engage their opponents. The riot squad was called and a number of the rioters were rushed to the police station.

The Police Inspector of Theatres suggested that the film be withdrawn and the exhibitor complied.

Passed by Censor Committee

The Censorship Committee which is supposed to deal with affairs of this sort, and to whom exhibitors must apply for permission for the release of any picture, was duly aware of the nature of the film and knew that it was liable to cause disturbances, especially in view of the fact that only a few days before an Argentine cargo steamer had been torpedoed and sunk by a German submarine.

It was this same committee which before the war banned the showing of the Warner Brothers' film "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," a short time before it was scheduled to be shown. The picture was never released locally although it was shown in neighboring republics, including Uruguay, where thousands of Argentine holiday-makers saw it in the summer months.

For a long time the efforts of the Nazis in Buenos Aires to gain a foothold for propaganda in the cinema industry were in vain as the German Embassy could not find anyone who would consent to distribute the films which were sent here from Germany. At last, Nicolas Di Fiore, a local exhibitor of Italian extraction, undertook the showing of films which the German Embassy provided.

Plans were soon underway and about two months ago, a theatre called "Cineac" was opened in the center of the city. It shows only short subjects and newsreels, mainly of German origin. The Ufa newsreel is the principal feature and the lobby display of advertising is blatant propaganda with huge placards filling the entrance. It has been announced that shortly another theatre for the showing of German films is to be opened in the downtown district.

Attacked by Newspaper

The anti-Nazi German newspaper Argentinisches Tageblatt, published daily in Buenos Aires and which is carrying out a vigorous campaign against the present Nazi regime has charged that Di Fiore gets the films free from the German Embassy and that the Embassy also purchases 200 tickets daily for the "Cineac." It was Di Fiore who booked the "Siegfried Line" at the Renacimiento theatre where the riot occurred.

The danger of further extension of Nazi influence in film distribution has thoroughly alarmed local exhibitors, distributors and the public in general.

Daily the post office authorities seek out and destroy secret radio transmitting sets used by the Germans. The thousand sailors from the scuttled "Admiral Graf Spee" have been divided into groups and sent into the interior of the country where they have obtained jobs secured for them by their fellow countrymen in Argentina.

A few weeks after the outbreak of hostilities in Europe, a finely turned out evening newspaper, El Pampero, made its appearance in the streets of Buenos Aires and it has had an enormous sale. Financed by the Nazi party it is said to be run at a loss of 100,000 Argentina pesos a month, as it carries very little advertising and is sold to the newsboys at two cents, who in turn sell it at 10 cents. Other newspapers are sold to the newsboys at four or five cents.

Warners, MGM Records Made

The outstanding picture in May in Buenos Aires was Warners' "Lives of Elizabeth and Essex" with Errol Flynn and Bette Davis. It proved again the drawing power of Miss Davis here and bettered the record set up by "The Old Maid," another Warner production. Another successful hit was Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Broadway Melody of 1940."

108 BRITISH FILMS FOR 1939-40 QUOTA

The percentage of quota films released in England during the quota year ended March 31, 1940, totalled 25.78 per cent, according to figures released by the Board of Trade in London.

During the year there were registered 108 British features with a total footage of 715,984. Of these 20 productions counted for double quota and six for triple. A total of 399 foreign features were registered with an aggregate footage of 2,615,803.

Film Course Postponed

The four-year motion picture course planned by New York University will not be started this Fall, according to Dean Maxwell McConn, who said the course, which would cover all phases of motion picture activity and lead to a decree, may be started in 1941. At present NYU gives several courses in films but the proposed addition to the curriculum would mean a complete picture department.

Censors Must Pay Own Way

The Maryland Censor Board may not use excess fees to pay for more expensive quarters, the state Law Department has ruled, after the Baltimore Association of Fire Underwriters ruled that the headquarters of the board, in that city, be moved because of fire hazards created by storage and showing of films.

Lapidus To Be Honored

Jules Lapidus, promoted by Universal from branch managership in Pittsburgh to the Eastern district managership, will be feted on Monday in the William Penn Hotel by the Pittsburgh Variety Club. Harry Kalmine and John Harris head the banquet committee.

Screen Theatre's 35th Birthday is Celebrated

Harris and Davis Opened Pittsburgh House in 1905

THE 35th anniversary of what is claimed to be the first theatre in the United States devoted exclusively to the motion picture was observed this week in all the houses of Harris Amusement Companies of Pittsburgh. The theatre at 433-435 Smithfield Street, Pittsburgh, opened on June 19, 1905, under the sponsorship of the late State Senator John P. Harris and his brother-in-law, Harry Davis.

Eight years before that date Mr. Harris and Mr. Davis showed "Lumiere's Cinematograph" at the Avenue theatre in connection with vaudeville. In 1897 and until 1905 films were used only as an extra added attraction, a novelty.

Eugene LeMoyne Connelly in a brochure written for the Harris Company on the occasion of the anniversary, explained how the name was made up for the all-motion picture theatre.

"To me fell the task of coining a new name," he said. "My suggestion was that the price of admission and the ancient Greek word for theatre—odeon—be combined to form a name, using the slang term nickel for five cents. The combination Nickelodeon was so euphonious that in some quarters it has stuck to every kind of moving picture show even to this day."

Used Remodeled Store

The original theatre of 35 years ago is described by Mr. Connelly in his article "The First Motion Picture Theatre":

"The Nickelodeon was a remodeled storeroom, the remodeling consisting largely of the installation of a white linen sheet, some opera chairs, a crude phonograph, a lot of stucco, burlap and paint, and a myriad of incandescent lights. This re-converted storeroom under its slangy appelation—Nickelodeon—was a tremendous success from the very beginning. Its total capacity was 96 seats. Nevertheless it entertained the amazing average daily number of 7,000 patrons. Eight o'clock in the morning was the opening hour and it never ceased to grind out its films until midnight. In this run of sixteen hours there were seats for 6,144 people. The entire program consisted of one or two reels of film running for a period of 12 to 20 minutes, and the audience, therefore changed practically every quarter hour. There were no reserved seats and a nickel was the uniform price. In a day's run 1,000 people would stand."

The success of the Nickelodeon was so great that others immediately were opened. In Pittsburgh some 15 were opened within a short time.

Mr. Connelly explained that the original owners realized the value of the new theatre, and immediately started other theatres in other cities. One of these was opened at Eighth and Market Streets, Philadelphia; another at Main and Water Streets, Rochester, New York; one at 1223 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia; another at Main and Division Streets, Buffalo; still another at 1205 Market Street, Philadelphia, another at Ninth and Market in the same city and one on Euclid Avenue in Cleveland.

Even though the whole show ran only 15 minutes there seems to have been a double bill on the first opening day. One sheet cards outside announced "Poor but Honest," which was probably a serio-comic, and "The Baffled Burglar," a comedy. In front of the box office were the words "showing continuously." Next door to the theatre was a penny arcade which advertised automatic vaudeville and admission free.

The projection machine did not arrive in time for the opening of the first Nickelodeon on June 19, 1905, and a machine was borrowed for a week from George W. Dawson who had shown films in various parts of the country.

There were no rewinds. The film was run into a bag hung in front of the machine. There were no fire shutters or protection of any kind on the machine.

The Harris Amusement Company, headed by Frank J. Harris, now operates 20 theatres, 17 in Pennsylvania; two in Ohio and one in Michigan.

[The assumption that the Pittsburgh Nickelodeon was the first screen theatre is practically correct, in that this house and its spectacular success set in motion the "nickelodeon wave" which gave the motion picture an independent access to the market, and the opportunity to become an institution instead of a vaudeville "turn." This was put into the records and tradition in the writings of the editor years ago. Meanwhile the fact also remains that Thomas L. Tally, opened the Electric Theatre, devoted entirely to the motion picture, at 262 South Main street, Los Angeles, April 16, 1902, and advertised that opening in the Los Angeles Times. There were, on the Pacific coast notably, also in Australia, other very early screen theatres, none of them directly connected with the main stream of development which arose from the Pittsburgh show. —TERRY RAMSAYE]

A. J. Balaban Builds Theatre; Has Stage Presentation Plan

A. J. Balaban, brother of Barney and John Balaban, who has been retired for some time is active again in the industry. He was in Chicago this week in connection with the building of a new theatre.

Mr. Balaban has discussed with W. G. Van Schmus, managing director of the Music Hall and Center theatres, an idea for a new type of theatre stage presentations. The plan is one of several being considered for the Center theatre. It was reported that Mr. Balaban's type of stage show would use live talent but all other details have been withheld.

FILM HISTORY QUIZ HELD BY HARRIS

The Harris circuit on Monday night held a quiz program in its theatres as part of the 35th anniversary week activities. Patrons in the company's houses were asked questions concerning the history of the motion picture. Winners received cash awards. Other special programs were also held in the celebration of the establishment of the first regular motion picture theatre. Each theatre of the circuit used a special campaign to tell its patrons about the anniversary.

Reade Building Four Theatres

Walter Reade, head of Walter Reade Theatres, is constructing four theatres in New York and New Jersey at an approximate total cost of $1,000,000.

Three of the four houses will be patterned after colonial type structures of the Reade operated Community theatres in Toms River and Morristown, N. J., and Hudson and Saratoga Springs, N.Y.

The three units of early American design scheduled to get under way following approval of plans and specifications are: a two floor 1,800 seat house which will be located on Franklin Avenue, Hempstead, L. I.; a playhouse consisting of auditorium and balcony with a seating capacity of 1,200 on Franklin Street, Garden City, L. I., and a 1,000 seat single floor house on Brunswick Avenue, Trenton, N. J., for the RKO Theatres Corporation. Each of the houses will be known as Community Theatres.

The fourth in the group of new houses will be a one floor theatre of modern design with 1,000 seats and will occupy the present site and replace the Trent theatre on Warren Street in Trenton. It will be built in association with the RKO Theatres Corporation.

Warner Cleveland Shifts

Following are shifts in personnel in the Warner Cleveland zone: Don Reilly, formerly assistant manager at the Hippodrome in that city has been made manager of the State Theatre, Lima, Ohio; Clarence Sletz, formerly manager of the State, is now manager of the Ohio Theatre, Sidney; Bunny Somers, former manager of the Ohio, resigned. Also, Guy Ellis is the new assistant manager at the Hippodrome, Cleveland; and Tony Laurie has become assistant manager at the Variety, same city.

Acquire 14 Houses

Carl Floyd and L. A. Stein, who recently formed a partnership, Floyd Theatres, Inc., have taken over the operation of 14 theatres in southern Georgia and Florida. The new company unites the houses of the Stein and Mullin circuits.

Tracy Receives Degree

Spencer Tracy has received a Doctor of Dramatic Arts degree from Ripon College in Wisconsin, his alma mater.

Reorganization of Majestic Near

The Majestic Radio and Television Corporation's new reorganization plan as presented to Federal Court Judge John P. Barnes, in Chicago, seems assured of approval, according to Leo T. Norville, attorney for the Majestic. The plan was presented to Judge Barnes on June 10th by Mr. Norville, who said the necessary majority of creditors and stockholders had approved and accepted the new plan. Judge Barnes set a hearing for Saturday, June 22nd.

New Company To Be Formed

Under the plan a new company would be formed bearing the same name. It would have 80,000 shares of authorized preferred stock and 1,500,000 shares of new one cent (correct) par value common stock. It would also have a funded debt of $165,000 consisting of new five per cent ten year debentures, which for the first four years would pay interest only if the earnings covered such interest.

The three companies would underwrite the debentures are Allied International Investing Corp., Allen B. Dumont Laboratories, Inc., and the Automatic Products Corp., all of New York. The combines fees would be 82,500 shared common stock. In addition Allied International and Automatic Products claims against Majestic would be given special consideration by receiving an additional 150,000 shared of common for their claims.

At previous hearings Judge Barnes was informed that the underwriters would take up any of $165,000 debentures not disposed of in the regular manner.

All creditors with the exception of the two receiving special treatment would then obtain one share of preferred stock for each $10.00 of claims. Old company stockholders would be entitled to subscribe at 30 cents a unit to 30 cents worth of debentures and one share of the new common stock.

At the April 27th hearing before Judge Barnes the SEC objected to the proposed plan on the grounds that it was not feasible and failed to meet the standards of fairness required by the law.

The Davega Stores, holders of approximately 30 per cent of stock has not agreed to the plan.

Minority creditors and stockholders at previous hearings admitted that liquidation probably would not yield more than five or ten cents on the dollar.

Zenith Enters FM Field

Commander Eugene F. McDonald, Jr., president of Zenith Radio Corporation, in Chicago, this week reported to stockholders, in the annual report, that production of frequency modulation receivers will soon start by the company.

Application has also been made for a commercial frequency modulation broadcasting license. Experimental broadcasts have been conducted from the frequency modulation station which the company operates atop the Chicago Towers club in that city.

In his report Commander McDonald also pointed out that for the seventh consecutive fiscal year the company has operated at a profit.

Rochester Summer Theatre

The Rochester City Council has endorsed stage plays in that city's parks, adding summer opposition to the local theatres. There will be a private stock company, the city to receive from it five per cent of the proceeds. The company's season begins July 8th.

Davidson, as Educational Trustee, Approved by Court

James A. Davidson's appointment, as trustee for Educational Pictures, Inc., was confirmed recently, in New York, by Federal Judge Edward A. Conger.

The Judge overruled objections to Mr. Davidson, by some creditors. He called Mr. Davidson "impartial."

The creditors' application to oust Mr. Davidson was based on his former employment tby Grand National Pictures, a subsidiary of Educational.

Expanding Agency Staff

Lou Irwin is expanding his talent agency staff to concentrate on development of new talent. Recent additions to his staff include Mrs. Else Von Koczian, former story editor and literary scout for Universal in Europe, who assumes charge of the story department; Ted Wilk, formerly of Film Daily, who joins the talent department, and Phil Gersdorf, who left the Twentieth Century-Fox publicity department, to take charge of publicity and advertising for the agency.

Music for Kansas City

The city council of Kansas City, Mo., has appropriated $18,350 to furnish free music during the summer by a 33-piece Municipal band, a 73-piece symphony concert orchestra and a smaller band of 30 pieces. The two larger groups will each play once a week until July and August when they will play four times a week; the smaller band will play once a week throughout the summer.

OBITUARIES

Maurice Moscovitch, of Yiddish Theatre, Dead

The Yiddish stage star, Maurice Moscovitch, who at 47 years of age learned English and then used that language on the stage and on the screen, died in a Hollywood hospital on Tuesday after an operation. He was 68 years old.

Mr. Moscovitch had appeared in character roles in the films, "Winterset," "Lancer Spy," "Suez," "Love Affair" and "Susannah of the Mounties." His latest role, an elderly music teacher in RKO's "Dance, Girl, Dance," was left uncompleted by his death.

Before his first film appearances, in 1936, Mr. Moscovitch had been a star of the Yiddish theatre. His last stage appearances were in New York, in 1930, in which appearances he spoke English.

He was born in Odessa, Russia, in 1871. His real name was Masskoff.

George Fitzmaurice Dies in Hollywood

GEORGE FITZMAURICE

George Fitzmaurice, noted screen director, died June 13th at the Good Samaritan Hospital in Hollywood after an illness of several months. He was 55.

Mr. Fitzmaurice entered the motion picture in 1914 with Pathe, where he became a scenario writer, editor, cutter and production manager at $35 a week.

Wrote "Perils of Pauline"

That year he gave Pearl White a job with Pathe and began writing and supervising the production of "The Perils of Pauline."

Born February 13, 1885 in Paris of Irish parents Mr. Fitzmaurice studied art and literature there before coming to New York and Pathe. Soon be became a director.

He directed such players as Barbara La Marr, Nita Naldi, Sybil Carmen, Elsie Ferguson, Rudolph Valentino, Richard Bennett, Montague Love, Jed Prouty, Lionel Barrymore, Bert Lytell, Dorothy Mackaill and Milton Sills.

One of his best known pictures was "Mata Hari," with Greta Garbo. He also directed "On with the Dance," "The Dark Angel," "Peter Ibbetson," "The Barker," "Lilac Time," "Love Mart," "Tiger Rose," "Sailor Beware," "The Locked Door," "Raffles," "Lady Virtue," "The Unholy Garden," "Strangers May Kiss," "As You Desire Me," and "Suzy," in 1936, his 75th production, with the late Jean Harlow, Franchot Tone and Cary Grant.

IN COURTS

RCA Monopoly Charged In Broadcasting Case

RCA Manufacturing Company and other recording companies were charged with seeking to obtain a monopoly on the broadcasting of records by Joseph Hartfield, attorney for station WNEW, New York, during the argument Monday of an appeal before the circuit court of appeals from a federal court decision which restrained WNEW from broadcasting RCA records without a license.

Mr. Hartfield claimed that many small broadcasting stations would be forced to close down if they were compelled to pay licensing charges. The lower court had ruled that Paul Whiteman, RCA artist, could restrict the use of his recordings and the RCA had a similar right if its contract with Whiteman so stipulated.

Joseph MacKay, attorney for RCA, asked the court to rule that a recording company may specifically limit the use of records on sale to non-commercial purposes regardless of the position taken by the recording artists.

Dismiss Voice Suit

The $200,000 damage suit brought by Adriana Caselotti against Walt Disney, Walt Disney Productions, Ltd., and RCA Manufacturing Company, Inc., was dismissed this week by Peter Schmuck, New York supreme court justice. He ruled that the plaintiff had no cause of action. The suit charged the defendants with the sale of records of the plaintiff's voice, used as "Snow White" in "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," without her permission.

Sues for NRA Tax

Paramount Pictures, Inc., this week filed suit in federal court in New York against the United States. Paramount sued for the refund of $36,500 in capital stock taxes paid under the National Industrial Recovery Act. The suit attacks the constitutionality of the Act and claims that the taxes paid for the year ending June 30, 1933, were illegally assessed. Paramount asks for the return of $16,000 paid by itself, $18,000 paid by Paramount Pictures Distributing Corporation and $2,500 by Parager Corporation.

Rules Against Loew

The U. S. Board of Tax Appeals has ruled that the Commissioner of Internal Revenue was correct in finding a deficiency of $7,200 for 1936 income of David L. Loew. Mr. Loew contended the Internal Revenue Bureau was in error in not allowing six exclusions of $5,000 each in addition to the three exclusions of $5,000 each which were allowed. The dispute arose over Mr. Loew's transfer of property in 1936 to nine separate trusts which were ruled to be subject to gift taxes.

Letter Suit Rehearing Denied

A petition of Adler Sign Letter Company for a rehearing of a decision of the United States court of appeals in Chicago adjudging the Adler notch-flange changeable letter in infringement of this type of letter manufactured by the Wagner Sign Service, Inc., was denied June 15th by the appeals court. The higher court upheld the U. S. district court's decision regarding this type of letter a few weeks ago. At the same time the higher court upheld the notched-flange decision it upheld the Adler rights to the lug-type changeable letter.

The denial of a rehearing, unless the U. S. supreme court accepts the case for review, closes litigation over changeable advertising equipment begun early in 1938.

SEARS ROEBUCK COUPON PLAN TO BE EXTENDED

Philadelphia Test Reported To Have Aroused Interest; Eastern Pennsylvania Next

by M. H. ORODENKER
in Philadelphia

The Sears Roebuck merchandise coupon film theatre giveaways, coupons of one, two and five-cent denominations accepted as cash for anything sold by the mail order and chain stores, will be extended to theatres in eastern Pennsylvania within the next month. The profit-sharing coupon plan is being tested in Philadelphia, where the experiment started June 3rd at six independent neighborhood houses. Robert F. Bogatin, Philadelphia attorney and former exhibitor, who heads the plan's sales corporation, claimed that while the giveaway is not creating any furore among moviegoers, there is a definite enthusiasm which is building increases in patronage at the participating theatres and a corresponding increase in local sales.

Interest Seen Gaining

“The experiment is proceeding,” said Mr. Bogatin. “It didn't 'burn up' on its introduction to patrons, but the houses are showing a steady improvement. All parties concerned are satisfied with the first results and we are convinced that this is a practice that will build. As patrons accumulate coupons, their interest in the plan heightens.”

Theatres in Philadelphia offering the coupons include the President, Hollywood and Alden, with Mondays the coupon day; the Southern, with Monday and Tuesdays the coupon days; the Lawndale, giving coupons with each admission on Wednesday and Thursdays; and every Monday and Friday at the Castle.

Mr. Bogatin said that since the plan started here, he had been in receipt of inquiries from exhibitors in other cities, and while his organization is not ready as yet to institute the plan on a nationwide scale, it is expected that within a month, the profit-sharing coupons will be introduced in at least ten houses in eastern Pennsylvania, including houses in Reading, Bethlehem and Scranton. The first out-of-town house to use the plan is the Park in Highland Park, Pa.

Skepticism at First

The biggest problem in getting the plan across to patrons is in making them realize that there is no “catch” attached to it, he said. Patrons at the participating houses at first were skeptical, but once they realized they could get what they wanted with the coupons, and nothing was to be forced on them, they began to show interest in the giveaway.

At the Sears offices here, officials said it was too early to gauge the success of the plan in terms of increased sales and mail orders. All the coupons are keyed and identify the theatre. However, the store officials are optimistic. In several instances, budget accounts have been started at Sears stores with the coupons, but for the most part it is believed that patrons are accumulating their coupons in much the same manner as done with cigarette and soap profit-sharing coupons.

The coupons, redeemable at any Sears outlet throughout the country, can be used as payment or part-payment on a charge account or for a COD order upon the delivery of merchandise, in making store purchases or in ordering by mail. The regular advertised Sears prices are charged on all merchandise bought with the profit-sharing coupons.

The participating exhibitor buys the coupons at face value, distributing them as he sees fit, while Sears provides for all the advertising and promotional accessories, which include trailers, heralds, valances, 30 x 40 and 40 x 60 sheets, the regular Sears catalogs, and regular newspaper advertising.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

BEWARE, SPOOKS: Joe E. Brown, Mary Carlisle—This is not as good as Brown's usual pictures. However, the audience seemed to get some fun out of it, especially near the end. It drew well, doubled with "Dr. Cyclops." Running time, 68 minutes. Played June 4.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

HIS GIRL FRIDAY: Cary Grant, Rosalind Russell, Ralph Bellamy—Amusing and very fast. Low gross. Played June 9-10.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MR. SMITH GOES TO WASHINGTON: James Stewart, Jean Arthur, Claude Rains, Edward Arnold, Eugene Pallette, Thomas Mitchell, Guy Kibbee—A very fine picture but did no business. Didn't do business we anticipated.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

TOO MANY HUSBANDS: Melvyn Douglas, Jean Arthur, Fred MacMurray—Here is a clever comedy. Farfetched but lots of fun and pleased to good business. Running time, 83 minutes. Played June 2.—B. C. Brown, Temple and Vernon Theatres, Viroqua, Wis. General patronage.

TOO MANY HUSBANDS: Jean Arthur, Fred MacMurray, Melvyn Douglas—A good comedy that should have been cut about 10 minutes in the latter scenes, as it would then have been A1. Fair business.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

First National

ANGEL FROM TEXAS, AN: Wayne Morris, Rosemary Lane, Eddie Albert, Jane Wyman, Ronald Reagan—Any picture that Wayne Morris is in is just a waste of running time for us. The cast works hard but have nothing to work with. Just blah blah. Supposed to be a comedy but it failed to materialize. Skip it. Running time, 69 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

DR. EHRLICH'S MAGIC BULLET: Edward G. Robinson, Ruth Gordon, Otto Kruger, Donald Crisp—Fine picture but not the type that sells tickets in our town. Running time, 106 minutes. Played May 28-29.—S. E. Bower, Desert Theatre, Hawthorne, Nev. Mining, CCC, Marine patronage.

ESPIONAGE AGENT: Joel McCrea, Brenda Marshall, Jeffrey Lynn—"Ye Gods and little fishes!" That's about all you can say after running this thing. It's a sad case, indeed, when a studio takes a big star like Joel McCrea and teams him with an unknown girl in a story so weak it can't move. Jeffrey Lynn is absolutely wasted. Miss Marshall is not even pretty and if I'm any judge she'll never be box office. Warner Brothers have done very poorly for Brenda in her first picture. A nice hair-do would have helped a lot. I'm hoping to see a changed girl in "The Sea Hawk." This film had a good title but even that didn't draw them in. If possible, pass it up. Running time, 83 minutes. Played January 11.—Dean Deaver, Elkton and Drain Theatres, Elkton and Drain, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

FIGHTING 69TH, THE: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, George Brent, Jeffrey Lynn, Dennis Morgan, Alan Hale—The best war picture I've seen. Very timely in presentation another advantage. Cagney and O'Brien have a good following here. The acting is excellent and the scenes very realistic. Played May 12-13.—Felix H. Tisdale, Ritz Theatre, Brantley, Ala. Small town patronage.

FOUR WIVES: Lane Sisters, Gale Page, Eddie Albert, Claude Rains, Jeffrey Lynn, Dick Foran, Frank McHugh, May Robson—I played this with "They Came By Night" and there is no doubt about the fact that this is the one that drew a very good crowd. Audience reaction to the humor was excellent and most comments were very good. These homey films go over well here right now. I would like to see this series continued. Personally, I think this one is just as good as "Four Daughters" and is very definitely funnier in general. I am waiting now for "Four Mothers," "Four Divorcees," "Four Grandmothers," "Four Angels," etc. Running time, 99 minutes. Played May 24-25.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

OLD MAID, THE: Bette Davis, Miriam Hopkins, George Brent, Jane Bryan—This was definitely "box office" here. Bette Davis is splendid, especially as she grows older. More than one could be heard sniffling after the show was over. Any picture that can do this to an audience must be a good one. I haven't seen "Gone with the Wind" yet, but Vivien must be pretty good to get the Academy Award after Bette Davis' "Dark Victory," "The Old Maid," "The Private Lives of Elizabeth and Essex" and "Juarez." By all means play "The Old Maid," if you haven't already. Running time, 95 minutes. Played January 4.—Dean Deaver, Elkton and Drain Thetares, Elkton and Drain, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

THREE CHEERS FOR THE IRISH: Priscilla Lane, Dennis Morgan, Thomas Mitchell, Alan Hale—Our patrons enjoyed every minute of this picture. The laughs came so fast that many of the jokes were lost. The audience never stopped laughing from the start to finish and went out laughing. Running time, 101 minutes. Played May 18-19.—S. E. Bower, Desert Theatre, Hawthorne, Nev. Mining, CCC, Marine patronage.

'TIL WE MEET AGAIN: Merle Oberon, George Brent, Pat O'Brien, Geraldine Fitzgerald—Boy, what a swell picture. Heavy, yes, but a delight to any audience. This company's product has not been so good with us this season, but we can heartily recommend this offering. The musical score is exceptionally well done. Running time, 98 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

TORRID ZONE: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Ann Sheridan, Andy Devine, Helen Vinson—A good action comedy that pleased. No records broken but played to a satisfied audience. Running time, 92 minutes. Played June 2.—B. C. Brown, Temple and Vernon Theatre, Viroqua, Wis. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ANOTHER THIN MAN: William Powell, Myrna Loy, Virginia Grey, C. Aubrey Smith, Ruth Hussey, Tom Neal, Patric Knowles, Sheldon Leonard—It's surely good to have our old Bill Powell back again. He and Myrna are perfect together. The story is so exciting that the audience never once loses interest. I'm sure no one in our audience guessed the murderer. Virginia Grey stands out. Full house. Running time, 102 minutes. Played March 21.—Dean Deaver, Elkton and Drain Theatres, Elkton and Drain, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

BABES IN ARMS: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Charles Winninger, Guy Kibbee, June Preisser—Personally I heartily disliked this one. However, a very large audience enjoyed it immensely and that's what counts in this business. Mickey and Judy are "box office" together. Running time, 97 minutes. Played January 20.—Dean Deaver, Elkton and Drain Theatres, Elkton and Drain, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

CONGO MAISIE: Ann Sothern, John Carroll, Rita Johnson—Played on Bank Night. A good program picture, not as good as "Maisie." No extra draw on account of the picture. Played May 15.—Felix H. Tisdale, Ritz Theatre, Brantley, Ala. Small town patronage.

DR. KILDARE'S STRANGE CASE: Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore, Laraine Day—Good. Alas, however, the story offers little new by way of development. Unless they get a real good story man on the job, this series is bound to lose its B. O. strength. The gags are all alike. Played June 5-6.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

DR. KILDARE'S STRANGE CASE: Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore, Laraine Day—One of the best Kildare pictures we have run. I would say give this your best dates as it will do extra business. Running time, 77 minutes. Played June 5-6.—Lester Booth, Bailey Enterprises, Stark Theatre, Toulon, Ill. General patronage.

EDISON, THE MAN: Spencer Tracy, Rita Johnson, Gene Lockhart, Charles Coburn—In a class by itself. Spencer is always a good bet at the box office and that means his pictures have what it takes to please both patrons and the exhibitor. Running time, 107 minutes. Played May 26.—B. C. Brown, Temple and Vernon Theatre, Viroqua, Wis. General patronage.

FAST AND FURIOUS: Ann Sothern, Franchot Tone, Lee Bowman, Ruth Hussey—Very amusing and exciting. Average draw. I would suggest that Metro establish two stars as "Joel" and "Garda" and leave them in those parts if they wish to continue this series. Franchot Tone is through here. On the other hand Ann Sothern is gaining more and more in popularity and will soon be a big star. Running time, 73 minutes. Played March 17.—Dean Deaver, Elkton and Drain Theatres, Elkton and Drain, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

FORTY LITTLE MOTHERS: Eddie Cantor, Bonita Granville, Rita Johnson, Judith Anderson—Swell picture but no draw. Very poor trailer on it. Running time, 90 minutes.—E. C. Arehart, Strand Theatre, Milford, Iowa. Lake and tourist patronage.

FORTY LITTLE MOTHERS: Eddie Cantor, Bonita Granville, Rita Johnson, Judith Anderson—Ouch, was this a washout? It was. Cantor miscast and the surprising thing is that Metro released it. Just a rambling no good picture and no box office at all.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

GHOST COMES HOME, THE: Frank Morgan, Billie Burke, Ann Rutherford—There isn't enough plot to this feature to make a fair one-reel comedy and one sure way of cheating your patrons is to show it. Running time, 79 minutes. Played May 17.—S. E. Bowery, Desert Theatre, Hawthorne, Nev. Mining, CCC, Marine patronage.

GHOST COMES HOME, THE: Frank Morgan, Billie Burke, Ann Rutherford—Slightly above average comedy. Coupled with "Man from Dakota," this gave a good account of itself. Morgan's roles become just a little tiresome after a while but for Morgan fans this picture is plenty OK. Running time, 79 minutes. Played May 31-June 1.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

GONE WITH THE WIND: Clark Gable, Vivien Leigh, Leslie Howard, Olivia de Havilland, Hattie McDaniel—The distributor got 70 per cent and we are still trying to raise the money to pay off the advertising costs on this picture. Played May 20-21.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

GONE WITH THE WIND: Clark Gable, Vivien Leigh, Olivia de Havilland, Leslie Howard, Hattie McDaniel—Well, it blew in and blew out again and with it went a pledge "never again." No comments needed on the picture itself, but plenty could be said concerning the lopsided percentage arrangement. Business very good but with the extra expenditures in connection with the showing we were left holding the well known sack. Even so, the fact that we played it has some advertising value for house policy. Running time, 228 minutes. Played May 5-6.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

GREAT WALTZ, THE: Luise Rainer, Fernand Gravet, Miliza Korjus—They didn't go for this one. Classics and costume pictures are out for this situation. —Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

I TAKE THIS WOMAN: Spencer Tracy, Hedy Lamarr—Just a swell show that was panned so much by the critics that our public was afraid of it. Result, no business. This is a good picture that pleased all who saw it but they were few and far between. Running time, 97 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

I TAKE THIS WOMAN: Spencer Tracy, Hedy Lamarr—Very unusual role for Tracy, but our patrons like him no matter what the picture. This proved to be better than we had hoped for after reading reports and criticisms. On the whole, our patrons liked it, and business above normal for mid-week. Running time, 97 minutes. Played May 22-23.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

I TAKE THIS WOMAN: Spencer Tracy, Hedy Lamarr—I'll take Tracy in anything and Lamarr has several fans for her beauty. This was a swell picture and business was OK, considering the "Wind" playing only ten miles away. Running time, 97 minutes.

Played May 19-20.—Felix H. Tisdale, Ritz Theatre, Brantley, Ala. Small town patronage.

JUDGE HARDY AND SON: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden—Good business and good picture. Mickey is my favorite because he is always a hit at the box office. The Southern lass in the picture smeared the drawl of the South. Give it your best date. Played May 5-6.—Felix H. Tisdale, Ritz Theatre, Brantley, Ala. Small town patronage.

MAN FROM DAKOTA: Wallace Beery, Dolores Del Rio, John Howard—Not the best of Beery's pictures but even so, where he is favorite, this one will click at the turnstile. Business swell and as our patrons like this star, this picture proved very satisfactory. Running time, 79 minutes. Played May 31-June 1.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

NINOTCHKA: Greta Garbo, Melvyn Douglas, Ina Claire, Bela Lugosi—Boy, oh, boy, let's have more of Garbo the comedienne. That girl has but to roll her eyes and look sour or talk in her deep, sober voice and the laughter is so loud that the dialogue can't be heard. We had a large crowd. All this talk about the title keeping people away was junk as far as this spot was concerned. Please, Metro, before you put Greta back in the old rut with "Madame Curie" give us another "Ninotchka." The first half of the picture was best. Running time, 110 minutes. Played February 15.—Dean Deaver, Elkton and Drain Theatres, Elkton and Drain, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

NORTHWEST PASSAGE: Spencer Tracy, Robert Young, Walter Brennan, Ruth Hussey, Isabel Jewell—We had full houses for both shows. Why? Oh, a fine title, big stars, color. Yes, but what did they think after they came out. I doubt if it could be printed. Personally, I had read the book and wasn't expecting much. There is about 60 minutes too much of tramping through swamps. Spencer Tracy is as good as he could be under the circumstances. Robert Young's role could have been omitted for the better. The only bright spot was Isabel Jewell, and she was swell. Here's hoping the second half of the book remains unfilmed. I don't know how much longer large audiences are going to come to a picture and get a letdown like this. Running time, 126 minutes. Played April 13.—Dean Dever, Elkton and Drain Theatres, Elkton and Drain, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

NORTHWEST PASSAGE: Spencer Tracy, Robert Young, Walter Brennan—Superb photography, excellent acting, exciting story and plenty of thrills make this film seem very real. The first night we had fairly good business. The second night the crowd was quite slim. I think it was one of those cases where the film drew so well that everyone traveled miles to see it before we had it. All comments were greatly in favor of this picture. Running time, 126 minutes. Played June 6-7.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

SHOP AROUND THE CORNER: James Stewart, Margaret Sullavan, Frank Morgan—An interesting little picture that will not interest farmers. It is more or less a class picture, so my college trade liked it quite well. The humor is quite subtle but it is there in good doses. I did not have a good crowd because of bad competition but I do not think it was the picture's fault. Running time, 100 minutes. Played June 8.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

SUSAN AND GOD: Joan Crawford, Fredric March, Rita Quigley, Ruth Hussey, Bruce Cabot, John Carroll—Splendidly done. The ladies seemed to enjoy it but the men were divided. A picture for class patronage. Running time, 117 minutes. Played June 9.—B. C. Brown, Temple and Vernon Theatres, Viroqua, Wis. General patronage.

TODAY WE LIVE (reissue): Joan Crawford, Gary Cooper, Robert Young, Franchot Tone—Picked this one up, a reissue, and did not make film rental. I guess too old and the print very poor. No value for entertainment at this late date. Running time, 100 minutes. Played June 1.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

WATERLOO BRIDGE: Robert Taylor, Vivien Leigh—A thrilling picture, starting with an earlier British war episode as a starter and winding up with an innocent girl who went wrong in order to live but too innocent and pure to carry a successful marriage into a family who only knew honor and virtue as the essense of an honorable life. Miss Leigh is simply a sweet girl but buffeted by war's cruelties and distress of direst poverty. Her acting is superb throughout and she is a star of the first magnitude and will continue to shine as such. Robert Taylor is excellent and is assured as a leading man of ability and talent. The supporting cast was all good and played their several parts well. Running time, 103 minutes. Played June 6-12.—William Noble, Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

Paramount

BISCUIT EATER: Billy Lee, Cordell Hickman—Very good picture if you can get them to come in and look at it. Dog lovers will like it fine. The kid actors are very good. Running time, 80 minutes. Played June 7-8.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

BUCK BENNY RIDES AGAIN: Jack Benny, Eddie "Rochester" Anderson, Andy Devine, Ellen Drew—Good picture; good business. "Rochester" was very good and my customers said they had never laughed so hard before in years. Running time, 85 minutes. Played June 5.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

BUCK BENNY RIDES AGAIN: Jack Benny, Ellen Drew, Eddie "Rochester" Anderson, Andy Devine—Picture plenty good but the draw very disappointing. Running time, 87 minutes.—E. C. Arehart, Strand Theatre, Milford, Iowa. Lake and tourist patronage.

DISPUTED PASSAGE: Dorothy Lamour, Akim Tamiroff, John Howard—We got many favorable comments on this picture. Dorothy proves that she doesn't need a sarong to be alluring. Also that girl can act. She is very popular here. Akim Tamiroff is perfect as the old doctor. John Howard will be one of our big stars in the future. The crowd could have been larger. Parts of this picture did drag, however. Running time, 99 minutes. Played February 8.—Dean Deaver, Elkton and Drain Theatres, Elkton and Drain, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

DR. CYCLOPS: Albert Dekker, Janice Logan—I doubled this with "Beware, Spooks" and it drew quite well. The audience seemed to like the unusualness of this, although the acting could have been better. It certainly is a trick color triumph from the technical standpoint and it held interest all the way through here. Fantasies like this go over very well in this college town. Running time, 77 minutes. Played June 4.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

DR. CYCLOPS: Albert Dekker, Janice Logan—So absurdly impossible, it defeated its own purpose. For the most part, our patrons did not care for this one. Even color did not help this much. Business fair. Running time, 77 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

DR. CYCLOPS: Albert Dekker, Janice Logan—Kept juggling this around and finally played on Bank Nights to the biggest gross we ever had on those nights. Running time, 77 minutes.—E. C. Arehart, Strand Theatre, Milford, Iowa. Lake and tourist patronage.

FARMER'S DAUGHTER, THE: Martha Raye, Charles Ruggles—A very good feature that was enjoyed by our patrons. Played on the same program with Fox's "Viva Cisco Kid." Running time, 62 minutes. Played May 24-25.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

GERONIMO: Andy Devine, Preston Foster, Ellen Drew—Good picture, good and gruesome. Liked by older children and the men but the women found it too much and the kiddies were frightened. Just why producers think sickening situations come under the head of entertainment, I don't know. Business just fair. Running time, 90 minutes. Played May 17-18.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

LIGHT THAT FAILED, THE: Ronald Colman, Watler Huston, Ida Lupino, Muriel Angelus—Didn't draw but those who came seemed interested. Running time, 99 minutes. Played May 24.—S. E. Bower, Desert Theatre, Hawthorne, Nev. Mining, CCC, Marine patronage.

MAN ABOUT TOWN: Jack Benny, Dorothy Lamour, Eddie "Rochester" Anderson, Edward Arnold, Binnie Barnes—"What a man, Rochester" was on the lips of every man after seeing this hilarious comedy which concluded our 1939-40 season. To say that "Carmichael's" friend, "Rochester," stole the show from Mr. Benny and his fellow workers is putting it mildly. He just ran away with it judging from the reactions of our group. However, it is one of Benny's best and if his future vehicles equal this, there will not be any room for complaining as far as we are concerned. Of course, the boys here were also pleased with the glamour girl episodes which were so capably directed by Leroy Prinz. Running time, 85 minutes. Played April 27.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

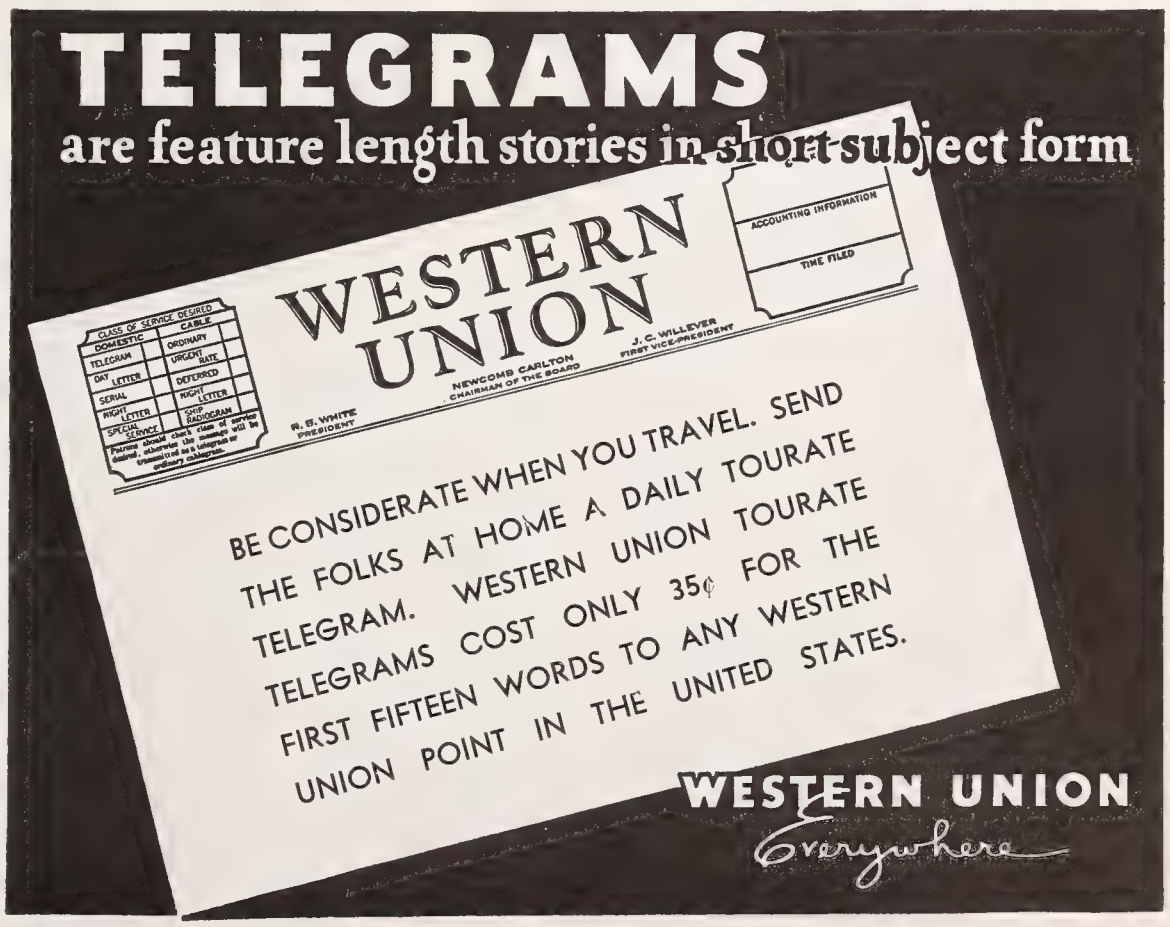
OPENED BY MISTAKE: Charles Ruggles, Robert Paige, Janice Logan—While this picture didn't draw, still it proved good entertainment and those who did attend were well satisfied. Running time, 68 minutes. Played May 31.—S. E. Bower, Desert Theatre, Hawthorne, Nev. Mining, CCC, Marine patronage.

REISSUES: HORSEFEATHERS: Marx Brothers; THE JUNGLE PRINCESS: Dorothy Lamour, Ray Milland, Akim Tamiroff, Lynne Overman; NO MAN OF HER OWN: Clark Gable, Carole Lombard; THE PLAINSMAN: Gary Cooper, Jean Arthur, James Ellison; WAIKIKI WEDDING: Bing Crosby, Bob Burns, Martha Raye, Shirley Ross—We went to town on these play-backs and reissues from Paramount.—E. C. Arehart, Strand Theatre, Milford, Iowa. Lake and tourist patronage.

ROAD TO SINGAPORE: Bing Crosby, Bob Hope, Dorothy Lamour—What patrons want these days is a darnded good laugh and they get plenty of 'em in this swell comedy with music. Nice business, too. Running time, 83 minutes. Played May 19-21.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

SHOWDOWN, THE: William Boyd, Russell Hayden—The best in the Hopalong series we have played. But our patrons never have warmed up to these pictures and this was no exception. Business below normal. Running time, 63 minutes. Played May 24-25.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

WOMEN WITHOUT NAMES: Ellen Drew, Robert Paige—Disappointing at the box office but really good entertainment. Played June 4.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.



Republic

DARK COMMAND: John Wayne, Claire Trevor, Walter Pidgeon, Roy Rogers—As good as any. Better than many. This is fast, robust entertainment with enough love motivation to keep the women happy. Business just fair, however. Our folks liked Roy Rogers. Played June 7-8.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

DAYS OF JESSE JAMES: Roy Rogers, George "Gabby" Hayes—The only thing wrong with this picture they should have had Gene Autry and Smiley Burnette.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

IN OLD MONTEREY: Gene Autry, Smiley Bur-

nette, George Hayes—Lots of action and the children liked it but the grown-ups were just mildly entertained. Played to a poor crowd, although it was double billed. Our patrons don't seem to like double bills and that might in some part account for the poor turnout. Running time, 72 minutes. Played May 21-22.—S. E. Bower, Desert Theatre, Hawthorne, Nev. Mining, CCC, Marine patronage.

JEEPERS CREEPERS: Weaver Brothers and Elviry, Roy Rogers—Very good of its type. Roy Rogers is fine. Played June 7-8.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MONEY TO BURN: James, Lucile and Russell Gleason—A series that is O.K. Plenty of good, homey situations. Always a laugh and that's what it takes to bring them back these troubled times.—Leslie F. Smith, Mayer Theatre, Westmoreland, Kansas. Rural patronage.

SOUTH OF THE BORDER: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—I wish I had played on Sunday-Monday. Autry is the best box office doctor yet as long as "Frog" is with him. I hope they never part. Best business since "Jessie James." I increased prices but it didn't keep anybody away I don't think. Running time, 70 minutes. Played May 31-June 1.—Felix H. Tisdale, Ritz Theatre, Brantley, Ala. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

ABE LINCOLN IN ILLINOIS: Raymond Massey, Ruth Gordon, Gene Lockhart, Mary Howard—One of the truly outstanding productions of the year but it proved a box office dud for this situation. There is no reasonable explanation for this, excepting the fact that patrons want lighter film fare. We still insist this is a grand picture. Running time, 110 minutes. Played May 12-14.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

ABE LINCOLN IN ILLINOIS: Raymond Massey, Ruth Gordon, Mary Howard—A picture everyone young and old should see. Truly a masterpiece in every detail. Needs promotion. Should be used during school term and tied in with school activities. Played May 29-30.—Leslie F. Smith, Mayer Theatre, Westmoreland, Kansas. Rural patronage.

BACHELOR MOTHER: Ginger Rogers, David Niven, Charles Coburn—I played this late owing to same being taken out last fall on account of an epidemic in my Village but my patrons seemed to enjoy it very much and we need good comedies to get them to forget these terrible world conditions. Running time, 90 minutes. Played May 23.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

BULLET CODE: George O'Brien, Virginia Vale—A good western. Moderate gross. Played May 21.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HUNCHBACK OF NOTRE DAME, THE: Charles Laughton, Maureen O'Hara, Edmond O'Brien, Alan Marshal, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Walter Hampden, Thomas Mitchell, Basil Rathbone—What a letdown! This is one of the poorest and dreariest movies I have ever seen. Everything, even the buildings and clothes, look artificial. Maureen O'Hara is lovely. Laughton grunts and wabbles through this. Sir Cedric Harwicke is good. Why do they have to turn out poor works like this. This should be the last time that the "Hunchback" is made. A large crowd was very disappointed. Running time, 119 minutes. Played March 19.—Dean Deaver, Elkton and Drain Theatres, Elkton and Drain, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

IRENE: Anna Neagle, Ray Milland, Billie Burke, Roland Young, May Robson—One of the most satisfying, refreshing pictures we have ever run. Good photography, good sound. Audience reaction splendid. Gasoline circuits, "the gypsies," nicked us on this one. A 5c show this time, sit on the lawn, chiggers, etc., but the mill folks go for it. The majors better get busy. Played June 2-3.—Leslie F. Smith, Mayer Theatre, Westmoreland, Kansas. Rural patronage.

PINOCCHIO: Disney Feature Cartoon—Treated this exactly the same as "Snow White." My share of the gross lacked $5.00 of paying my cash outlay for advertising. The biggest bust since Charlie Chaplin's "Gold Rush." Picture well done. Very beautiful. Parents came, sent the children in and they sat outside. The kids couldn't take the villains. Many walkouts. Played May 10-13.—Leslie F. Smith, Mayer Theatre, Westmoreland, Kansas. Rural patronage.

PRIMROSE PATH: Ginger Rogers, Joel McCrea—This production has entertainment value. Enjoyed by everyone; fair business. The title is misleading but the Rogers and McCrea appeal is there. Running time, 93 minutes. Played May 24-25.—J. P. Semyan, Liberty Theatre, Lilly, Penna. Small town patronage.

SWISS FAMILY ROBINSON: Freddie Bartholomew, Thomas Mitchell, Edna Best, Terry Kilburn, Tim Holt—An excellent picture and good box office. The storm and shipwreck scenes are all especially well done. Whole cast great. Played May 24-25.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SWISS FAMILY ROBINSON: Freddie Bartholomew, Thomas Mitchell, Edna Best, Terry Kilburn, Tim Holt—A very good production of a very widely read book that just didn't seem to bring them in. Good fishing, fine weather and too many "gypsies." Should be run during school term. Played May 19-20. —Leslie F. Smith, Mayer Theatre, Westmoreland, Kansas. Rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BLUE BIRD, THE: Shirley Temple, Spring Byington, Eddie Collins—Box office appeal was lacking. This film has good color scenes, although I can't say as much for the story. This picture must have been produced for its color photography. Running time, 83 minutes. Played May 28-29.—J. P. Semyan, Liberty Theatre, Lilly, Penna. Small town patronage.

BLUE BIRD, THE: Shirley Temple, Spring Byington—Very beautiful picture, thoroughly enjoyed on its two day run by nice houses of empty seats. The kids came but try to make film rental on small town kid patronage. Not for this town but maybe you'll have better luck. Running time, 81 minutes. Played May 7-8.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town patronage.

EVERYTHING HAPPENS AT NIGHT: Sonja Henie, Ray Milland, Robert Cummings—The best of the Henie pictures. The skating is less than usual but it is lovelier than ever. Milland and Cummings are both popular here. The crowd wasn't very large. Running time, 77 minutes. Played March 14.—Dean Deaver, Elkton and Drain Theatres, Elkton and Drain, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

FREE, BLONDE AND TWENTY-ONE: Lynn Bari, Joan Davis, Henry Wilcoxon—An average program picture; brought fair returns. The story is interesting and will please any audience. Running time, 67 minutes. Played May 30.—J. P. Semyan, Liberty Theatre, Lilly, Penna. Small town patronage.

GRAPES OF WRATH, THE: Henry Fonda, Jane Darwell, Charley Grapewin, Dorris Bowdon, John Carradine, O. Z. Whitehead, Eddie Quillan, Zeffie Tilbury—This is undoubtedly a magnificent production. If things go on like those depicted in "The Grapes of Wrath," it is high time the public in general knew about it. This should be shown to all the bigwigs in Washington. As far as entertainment goes, this isn't anything to boast about. No one could enjoy a movie that is all misery. In these troubled times people want to forget their worries and see something funny. I heard one man say "There's enough trouble without seeing things like that." All in all this is a worthwhile production. It was a huge draw here. Running time, 128 minutes. Played June 1.—Dean Deaver, Elkton and Drain Theatres, Elkton and Drain, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

GRAPES OF WRATH, THE: Henry Fonda, Jane Darwell, John Carradine, Dorris Bowdon, Charley Grapewin—This one slipped at the box office. It was built up pretty heavy at the key runs and those who wanted to see it so badly were in the mood to see it at the first runs. Running time, 128 minutes. Played May 21-22.—J. P. Semyan, Liberty Theatre, Lilly, Penna. Small town patronage.

GRAPES OF WRATH, THE: Henry Fonda, Jane Darwell, John Carradine, Dorris Bowdon, Charley Grapewin—No business for us on this. Though beautifully done, it is nevertheless not entertainment. Rather the patron returns home unduly depressed and of a mind to stay there next time. Played May 19-20. —L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

GRAPES OF WRATH, THE: Henry Fonda, Jane Darwell, John Carradine, Dorris Bowdon, Charley Grapewin—Grand show, grand reception, grand business. Everyone wanted to see this one and the house staff kept busy all three nights. We were particularly pleased by the comments of patrons. Picture is not entertainment in the accepted sense but the presentation of the problem is made in such a manner as to prove decidedly interesting. Running time, 128 minutes. Played May 9-11.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

JOHNNY APOLLO: Tyrone Power, Dorothy Lamour, Edward Arnold, Lloyd Nolan—A fine picture, Regretably low gross, however. Played June 2-3.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MAN WHO WOULDN'T TALK, THE: Lloyd Nolan, Jean Rogers—Okay picture, lacking much of the suspense of the Muni version but still a good production withal. Small draw. Played May 28.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

ON THEIR OWN: Spring Byington, Ken Howell—Fair picture; fair business. Running time, 63 minutes. Played June 4.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SHOOTING HIGH: Jane Withers, Gene Autry, Marjorie Weaver—Weak story but stars held it up and it got by. Okay box office. Played May 24-25.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

STAR DUST: Linda Darnell, John Payne, Roland Young, Charlotte Greenwood—Very good. Linda Darnell and John Payne are outstanding and a good team. Played May 29-30.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

STAR DUST: Linda Darnell, John Payne, Charlotte Greenwood, Roland Young—Offered as "Exhibit A" in what our patrons consider entertainment. Business away above normal for mid-week and the folks got their money's worth. And to Fox, let's have more of Charlotte Greenwood. She's still got what it takes to entertain. People commented a great deal on her swell performance and expressed the hope she would be in future releases. Why not have her in "Linger Longer Letty?" Running time, 85 minutes. Played May 29-30.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

VIVA CISCO KID: Cesar Romero, Jean Rogers—This is the second "Cisco Kid" picture we have played and they are very good. Drew extra business. Played with "The Farmer's Daughter." Running time, 65 minutes. Played May 24-25.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

United Artists

HOUSEKEEPER'S DAUGHTER, THE: Joan Bennett, John Hubbard, Adolphe Menjou, William Gargan—Very, very good. With several changes this could have been a perfect picture. Parts of it were uproariously funny. Others weren't. Hubbard won't go far, I'm afraid. The publicity department should take a bow for their work with this one. A good crowd attended. Running time, 80 minutes. Played February 1.—Dean Deaver, Elkton and Drain Theatres, Elkton and Drain, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

HOUSEKEEPER'S DAUGHTER: Joan Bennett, Adolphe Menjou—Nothing extra. Joan Bennett is beautiful but I made extra exploitation that helped. Played May 26-27.—Felix H. Tisdale, Ritz Theatre, Brantley, Ala. Small town patronage.

KING OF THE TURF: Adolphe Menjou, Dolores Costello, Roger Daniel—A nice little picture played on Bank Night with no kick. Good race and good acting. Played May 22.—Felix H. Tisdale, Ritz Theatre, Brantley, Ala. Small town patronage.

REBECCA: Laurence Olivier, Joan Fontaine, George Sanders, Judith Anderson—A good picture to small business and the exchange knows a partial reason, at least. With the bad break we got on this one we certainly can't feel very happy over the engagement. Played May 26-27.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Universal

DESTRY RIDES AGAIN: Marlene Dietrich, James Stewart, Mischa Auer, Charles Winninger, Brian Donlevy, Una Merkel, Irene Hervey, Billy Gilbert, Jack Carson—Here's one that was made for small towns. Marlene sure made a comeback. She's the same as she used to be, when she was box office. A few more rough and rowdy pictures like this and Dietrich will be back on top. For a week after the picture the whole town was humming the tunes from it. One criticism I have is that there is quite a noticeable difference in the ages of Stewart and Dietrich. And what's this I hear about Robert Stack being Dietrich's next leading man? Surely Universal won't make such a mistake as that. He was Deanna Durbin's leading man in "First Love" and looks about 18. The next thing we'll be hearing is that some studio is co-starring Mickey Rooney and May Robson in a torrid love drama. A few of the schoolboard didn't appreciate this one. But we had two full houses and have no kicks coming. James Stewart as "Tom Destry" is fine, too. Running time, 97 minutes. Played May 2.—Dean Deaver, Elkton and Drain Theatres, Elkton and Drain, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

FIRST LOVE: Deanna Durbin, Robert Stack, Helen Parrish, Lewis Howard, Leatrice Joy, Eugene Pallette, June Storey—A fair picture but a bit wishy-washy.

A little action would'nt have hurt this. Not very pleasing. Crowd small. I believe "It's a Date" will be better. Running time, 84 minutes. Played February 24.—Dean Deaver, Elkton and Drain Theatres, Elkton and Drain, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

HAWAIIAN NIGHTS: Johnny Downs, Constance Moore, Mary Carlisle—A nice musical picture. The picture was good. Played on Bank Night to good business. Played May 29.—Felix H. Tisdale, Ritz Theatre, Brantley, Ala. Small town patronage.

IT'S A DATE: Deanna Durbin, Kay Francis, Walter Pidgeon—Very good but it failed to equal our regular double feature business for the week-end. We ran it single bill. It cost as much but did barely two-thirds as well as usual double bill gross. Deanna splendid. Played May 31-June 1.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

LITTLE ACCIDENT: Baby Sandy, Hugh Herbert, Richard Carlson, Florence Rice—When will producers get wise to the fact that the public does'nt want baby stars. No draw. Running time, 65 minutes. Played March 24.—Dean Deaver, Elkton and Drain Theatres, Elkton and Drain, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

MY LITTLE CHICKADEE: Mae West, W. C. Fields, Joseph Calleia, Margaret Hamilton, Dick Foran—This one is really hot! Again Universal takes two players given up by Paramount and stars them in an unusually successful picture. Who said Dietrich and West were box office poison? Just play "Destry" and "Chickadee" and find out for yourself whether they're poison. They may have been under Paramount but not under Universal. Margaret Hamilton was very funny and so was the girl in the saloon who told Fields her troubles. It went over big to a large house. Running time, 84 minutes. Played May 26.—Dean Deaver, Elkton and Drain Theatres, Elkton and Drain, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

Warner Brothers

BRITISH INTELLIGENCE: Boris Karloff, Margaret Lindsay—Had a poor crowd and they didn't seem interested in the picture. Running time, 62 minutes. Played May 21-22.—S. E. Bower, Desert Theatre, Hawthorne, Nev. Mining, CCC, Marine patronage.

INVISIBLE STRIPES: George Raft, William Holden, Jane Bryan, Humphrey Bogart—A good picture but we seem to get too many gangster pictures from this company. Running time, 82 minutes. Played May 22-23.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

PRIVATE LIVES OF ELIZABETH AND ESSEX, THE: Bette Davis, Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland—The color was beautiful but seemed overdone. Bette Davis is perfect as usual. Errol Flynn doesn't seem to be very popular here. Olivia de Havilland wasted. Anyone could have done what she did. I don't blame her for blowing up with the studio over roles like these. If they would let her, Olivia would be a star in her own right. An unusually small audience didn't enjoy this much and I overheard several very unfavorable comments. Small towns won't get anything with this. Running time, 106 minutes. Played January 27.—Dean Deaver, Elkton and Drain Theatres, Elkton and Drain, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

ROARING TWENTIES, THE: James Cagney, Priscilla Lane, Humphrey Bogart, Jeffrey Lynn, Gladys George—A very fine picture. Studded with stars, authentic, interesting. Everything that makes a good picture. The sound was extremely poor with this one. That took quite a bit out of the picture since Miss Lane sings several old favorites. A small audience seemed to enjoy it. Played January 13. Running time, 106 minutes.—Dean Deaver, Elkton and Drain Theatres, Elkton and Drain, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

TEAR GAS SQUAD: John Payne, Dennis Morgan, Gloria Dickson—Good action picture which pleased average business. The singing cops in the glee club pleased. Running time, 58 minutes. Played June 2-3. —E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

VIRGINIA CITY: Errol Flynn, Miriam Hopkins, Randolph Scott, Humphrey Bogart, Alan Hale—Here was a fine picture that not only the top stars but the whole cast did a fine job. This type of picture is what the small towns go for. The comment of the general public was that this was a better picture than "Dodge City." Running time, 115 minutes. Played June 9-10.—Lester Booth, Bailey Enterprises, Stark Theatre, Toulon, Ill. General patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

HECKLER, THE: Charley Chase—The best comedy that Chase has ever made. Just a good short that will help build up any program. Running time, 19 minutes. —A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

INSIDE THE FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION: Washington Parade, No. 3—Good.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

OILY TO BED, OILY TO RISE: Three Stooges—This one is a dandy and will certainly be enjoyed by any theatre audience. The Stooges really are funny in this one. Running time, 18½ minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS, No. 7: Wardrobe Designers—Strictly a woman's fashion page, so be careful where you set it. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

TEACHER'S PEST: Charley Chase—A very good two-reel comedy. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

MGM

ALFALFA'S DOUBLE: Our Gang—Good.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

BIG PREMIERE, THE: Our Gang—Average Our Gang comedy.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

DOOR WILL OPEN, A: MGM Miniatures—This is a Carey Wilson "What Do You Think?" It is concerned with a pianist and how an open door helped him twice in difficult situation. It is definitely different and has some fine classical piano music in it. It is for the class trade. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

FORGOTTEN VICTORY: Passing Parade, No. 11—Splendid piece of screen variety. MGM short subjects are always good.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town patronage.

HOME ON THE RANGE: MGM Cartoons—A very clever little cartoon that will help any program. Excellent. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

HOME ON THE RANGE: MGM Cartoons—A very, very cute color cartoon that won immediate audience applause. I think the calf and rabbit in this one could be used again. Scenic effects are excellent. Running time, eight minutes.—W. Varick Nevine, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

MENDELSSOHN'S WEDDING MARCH: MGM Miniatures—Very good for your class nights or any time when you want to please the music lovers. Nice color.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PEACE ON EARTH: MGM Cartoons—Excellent.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SERVANT OF MANKIND: MGM Miniatures—Very good. Running time, one reel.—S. E. Bower, Desert Theatre, Hawthorne, Nev. Mining, CCC, Marine patronage.

WHAT'S YOUR I. Q.?: Pete Smith Specialties—Good stuff. Holds interest.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

XXX MEDICO: Passing Parade, No. 12—An outstanding short in any program. Tops in production. Do not waste it. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Paramount

AQUA-RHYTHM: Grantland Rice Sportlights—Fine.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

BLUE BARRON AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Headliners—Good musical act. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

HUMAN FISH: Grantland Rice Sportlights—More underwater doin's at Silver Springs that furnish better than usual entertainment. Running time, 10 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

KICK IN TIME, A: Color Classics—Amusing.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

NOT SO DUMB: Paragraphics—Good animal short. Watch the man fight the lion. It's thrilling. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

WAY BACK WHEN A NAG WAS ONLY A HORSE: Stone Age Cartoons—Average black and white cartoon from the Stone Age series. Running time, seven minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

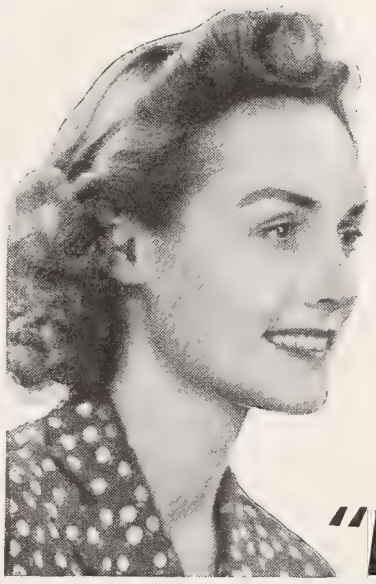
RKO

AQUAPOISE: RKO Pathe Sportscopes—Fast and peppy sports reel.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

DOG LAUNDRY: Walt Disney Cartoons—Pluto and Donald Duck in typical rib tickling antics that bring out the laughs in a big way. Running time, eight minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

HUNTING HOUNDS: RKO Pathe Sportcopes—Okay. Bears close similarity to a Paramount reel, however.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

INFORMATION, PLEASE: No. 2—We find these shorts to be very interesting, but the boys seem to feel that the recording is poor. All were glad to see Mr. "Shakespeare" Tunney. Running time, 10 minutes. —J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.



MARCH OF TIME, No. 11: U. S. Navy-1940: We certainly played this one new. I didn't even know what it was about until it hit the screen. It is concerned with U. S. defense and is very timely. Some of the scenes in it we only had had in our newsreel a few days before. There is so much talk about defense lately that you would do well to advertise this issue in good style. As always, it is very well put together. Running time, 20 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

MOLLY CURES A COWBOY: Ray Whitley Comedies—This is really a good entertainment.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MR. DUCK STEPS OUT: Walt Disney Cartoons—This Disney cartoon is not quite up to snuff. From any one else, it would be good, but from Disney it is below par. The jitterbugging is expertly done, but humor is too absent. Running time, eight minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

MUTINY IN THE COUNTY: Edgar Kennedy Comedies—Good for some laughs with slow burn Kennedy caught in a fix that seemed to tickle our patrons. Running time, 18 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town patronage.

Mr. McEvoy has been in the industry for 33 years, first in exhibition, then in distribution, with Robertson-Colé, Pathe and RKO, where he was eastern sales manager, until a few months ago when he took on sales direction in the mid-west.

Mr. McEvoy will be associated in Select with Joseph Plunkett, who is in charge of production; Charles Kranz, also in sales; George S. Jeffrey, as sales representative and assistant to Mr. McEvoy, and Al O. Bondy, special representative in the west.

Select is about to release "Leopard Men of Africa," made by Dr. Paul L. Hoefler, and for 1940-41 promises two musicals with Michael Bartlett and June Knight; four features with Harry Lauder and Patric Knowles; two to be made by Zeidman International, and "Cavalcade of Youth."

AMPA Considers Union Approval

Whether to "recognize and encourage" the Screen Publicists and Advertisers Guild was a main topic at the last meeting of the season of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, at Jack Dempsey's Restaurant, New York, on Thursday. Members had been asked to ballot on a resolution by the directors, favoring the organization, "welcoming it to the industry," and declaring that "good relations between the two organizations would be of much mutual advantage."

The Guild was organized several months ago to unionize advertising and publicity workers in the New York home offices of the motion picture companies. Several weeks ago it voted to affiliate with the Screen Publicists Guild of Hollywood, the constitution of which is being changed to make it a national organization. It is also preparing a closed shop contract, which it will present to the film companies.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

Looking At It From This Corner

What with the members getting all haired up about it on a following page, seems there is enough of a cross-section of opinion to indicate that emphasis on war news is chasing more customers away from the ticket-window than bringing 'em in. There may be something to what Vic Gauntlett adds, in offering that perhaps folks might not mind the news so much if the Allies scored a few runs themselves.

* * *

At that, admen are trying to offset the war jitters with "soothe" copy. For instance, in one of his ads on "Our Town", for use by Loew's Theatres, Oscar Doob invites the public to "take a two-hour vacation from this frenzied world", the copy also pointing out the absence of "bombs or bombast" in the picture. For "Doctor Takes A Wife" at the New York Roxy, "come in and laugh" copy was also prominent.

Wouldn't be at all surprised to see the present trend lead to a general lightening of all theatre copy. That should please the customers. Certainly couldn't hurt the boxoffice.

It's all right to pat the opposition on the back publicly, providing the "big hand" reacts favorably for the lad who does the patting. That would be illustrated by Howard Waugh's four-column advertisement in Memphis, congratulating the visiting Ernie Emerling and the local Loew-men, Bob Kilgore and Cecil Vogel, for their campaign on the reopening of Loew's Palace. The ad, incidentally, was also directed to "Brother Orchid", currently playing at Warners. Theatremen who like to learn more about how these things should be done are requested to take a look at the reproduction in this week's layout.

The local Press-Scimitar thought enough of the gesture to feature it editorially. Prominently mentioned were Waugh, his theatre, his attraction.

The continuing job he has been doing in Hot Springs as general publicity chairman of the Chamber of Commerce membership drive is indicated by the impressive newspaper mention given W. Clyde Smith, Malco city manager in the resort center. Smith's devotion to community causes has been told here before as an instance of how the theatreman can cooperate civically for the benefit of his own situation.

The Round Tabler's current efforts are set forth here as further proof.

The numerous comments from members on our recent "pass" editorial were hardly as gratifying as the manner in which readers accepted the gentle reproof. On most every hand, there was evidence of an immediate tightening up, especially where theatremen confessed to a laxity in this direction.

No further argument is necessary to impress the fact that motion picture entertainment is the best buy in today's market. "Where else can the public get so much for so little?" is the question that every manager should ask himself when reaching for the pass pad.

Another Malco-man to earn a salute is Hiram Meeks, for the snappy four-page weekly tabloid news he has been getting out to publicize his attractions. Much of the cost is underwritten by outside advertising. Distribution is handled by Boy Scouts throughout the trade territory.

"The folks eat it up around here," the manager writes.

Round Tablers who speak easily before audiences might give some consideration to the increasing list of theatremen now serving local radio stations as motion picture commentators. Currently, Stanley Lambert, at the Rialto in Racine, Wis., is doing so well at it that the station has the Warnerman tied up for the same when the program is sponsored commercially.

It's a 15-minute daily broadcast, the Round Tabler writing his own copy and continuity. Plugs for all the local Warner houses are included.

Man-Bites-Dog Department: A Chicago newspaper endorsement campaign for a popular 5-cent cigar pictures Marlowe Conner at work on one of the cheroots and saying nice things about it. "The first time I was so prominently on the receiving end for something we usually try to promote for theatre tieins," writes Conner.

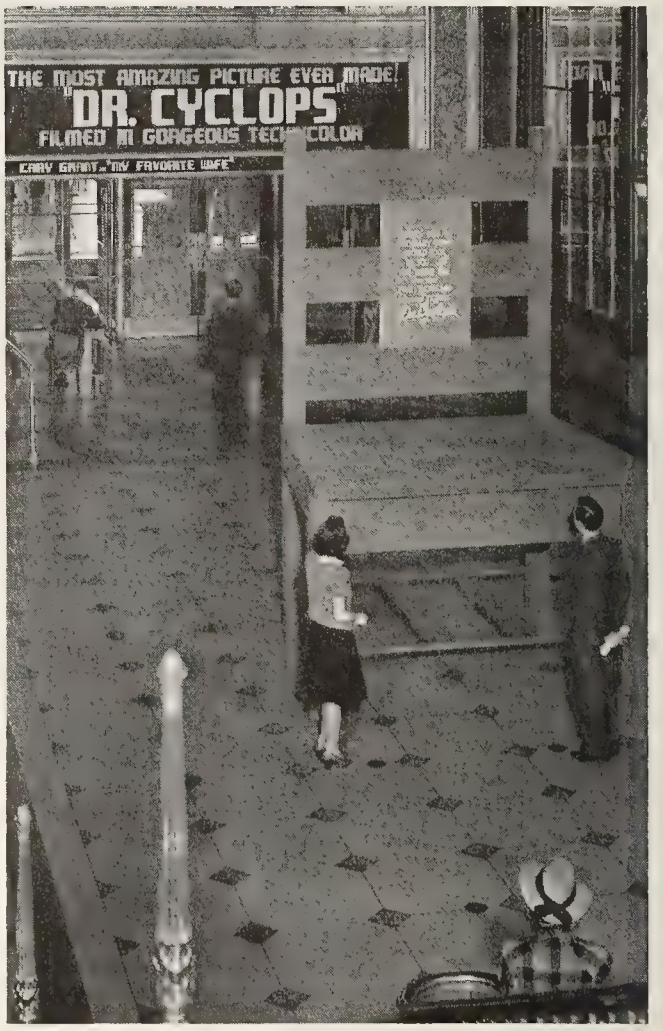
Round Table In Pictures



To stress the "gossip" angle in "Our Town", Manager Ev Steinbuch and Publicist Joe Longo arranged the unique lobby display shown above for that date at Loew's State in Cleveland Ohio. Miniature homes and offices were featured, from which conversation balloons protruded, each tied directly to action in the picture.

Gigantic lobby setpiece, designed by Round Tabler Francis Deering for his date on "Waterloo Bridge" at Loew's Theatre, in Houston, Tex. featured risers on steps leading up to balcony on which were caricature cutouts of Vivien Leigh and Robert Taylor. Risers carried excerpts of picture comments from leading New York papers.

Street bally arranged for "Lillian Russell" by Bob Ungerfeld at RKO Proctor's, in Newark, N. J., consisted of full-size figure of the actress with cutout face, mounted on a platform in front of theatre. Through tieup with cooperating photographer, women were invited to pose behind figure with their own faces showing through cutout. Similar figure of Diamond Jim was available for the men. Patrons were given receipts and asked to come back a week later for finished photo.

As a means of building up interest in advance of opening of "Dr. Cyclops" at the Warner Theatre, in Erie, Pa., Manager Ken Grimes planted a chair approximately 15 feet high in his lobby before and during run. Appropriate tiein copy read: "Here's how an ordinary chair would look to you if you were one of the thousand astonished victims of 'Dr. Cyclops'."

THEATREMEN EXPRESS OBJECTIONS TO FEATURING OF SPOT WAR NEWS

Majority of Replies to Round Table Inquiry Reveals Less Demand in Larger Cities; Patrons Favor Newsreels

by A-MIKE VOGEL

The paying public goes to theatre to get away from war. Patrons resent any intrusion in the program of featured "hot" news via radio tieins or aggressive theatre exploitation. They prefer, if at all, the pictorial shots of the newsreels to illustrate war happenings already reported in the newspapers and on the air.

This is the majority opinion of theatremen queried by this department on their handling of war news.

Equally articulate, and no less emphatic, is the lesser group that finds war news as important as any other unit of the program, and to be featured as such, the "hotter," the better. These theatremen claim that any playing down of war events would result in boxoffice losses.

Situations of theatres had somewhat to do with the replies, with less interest in the war news noted by theatremen in the larger cities where patrons had opportunity to keep better informed through frequency of newspaper editions and radio broadcasts.

Should War Be Soft Pedaled?

The Round Table's inquiry asked whether or not members held that "spot" war news was of sufficient boxoffice importance to be built up with radio promotions, lobby war bulletins, etc. The theatremen were asked if they regarded war news as competition to be met in attracting patrons who otherwise might remain at home to listen to the radio, to read the latest newspapers. The inquiry also set forth that in view of the wide newspaper and radio war coverage, was it or was it not the theatre's part to "soft-pedal" on behalf of patrons who sought relief in motion picture entertainment.

Bell Finds Public Disinterested

The largest number of answers subscribed to a "soft-pedal" view. Ray Bell, for instance, championed the theatre as a distinct escape from the echoes of war. The Washington Loew's Theatres ad head finds the public now seeking relief, has made a complete turnabout from previous demands for "war news and more of it and the bloodier the better."

"The radio," says Bell, "has more than doubled its airing of war news. What the human mind cannot conceive from these ether bombardments, it can visualize from the mass of coverage in the press. By the time the public sees it on the screen, it's 'old stuff.' There's too much grief in the air and it is natural for all to want to escape it. The nearest and most inexpensive form of escape is the movies, of course, as they always have been.

"We have removed from our lobbies and our ads all emphasis on war news. We are stressing the fact that in our houses, Washingtonians can find real entertainment."

As emphatic as Bell, in agreement, Marlowe Conner recommends that theatres be of real service today in stressing the importance of entertainment rather than war news, which the manager of Warner's Avalon, Chicago, claims is of little interest to patrons who look for their late information from the radio and newspapers.

"This war is a war of anticipation. Public interest is more on what is going to happen next than upon what has already happened. By the time we get the news on the screen, something else has happened to capture the public interest."

Other Comments Similar

Playing down happenings of war with reservations in favor of "spot" news, is supported in Washington, Indiana, where Kal Kalberer finds little interest in the run-of-the mill war shots, notably among women patrons. He does see an interest in major events, such as the surrender of the Belgians or the entrance of Italy into the fray, which were announced from the stage. Kalberer throws in with Bell and Conner on "escapism" in saying:

"Personally we feel that people who patronize the Indiana want to get away and rightfully from this horror. It has done enough to keep people away from the theatres, so why feed them more of it when they pay their money to be entertained instead of worried."

While advocating "soft-pedaling," Ed Fitzpatrick at Loew's Poli, Waterbury, Conn., is of the opinion that while people come to theatre to get away from the war, there is sufficient interest in the European conflict to make it worth while for him to point up his entire program in conjunction with the hot "spot" news. This the Loew's Poli manager in Waterbury does by following the radio broadcasts immediately with an announcement of the theatre's newsreel highlights plus a plug for the rest of the show. Fitz concedes that some extra business comes from those who relish the "horror" shots but hardly enough to change his advertising approach directed to the pleasanter aspects of his program.

In casting a fairly decided vote for "soft-pedaling," from Sharon, Pa., Warnerman Pat Notaro recognizes the not inconsiderable segment of his public which goes for war shots.

"There are patrons who come especially to see these pictures and I hear them remark that it is much more impressive to actually see these happenings taking place than to just read or hear about them. I don't believe we should give the war shots the same treatment as March of Time or other outstanding short subjects, but the public should be told we are showing them. I like to think of my theatre as a place where people can relax and be entertained and still keep abreast of the war news."

Says War News Non-Competitive

Lou Hart takes a similar "middle of the road" view in venturing that patrons look to the newsreel for a pictorial view of the "spot" news brought to them by the radio and newspapers. Thus, the Gloversville Schiner feels war news is not to be regarded as competition, especially in his situation where the radio broadcasts war happenings outside of theatre hours. In not overselling the war news, Hart "offers the patrons who are tired of it, a chance to forget, thus covering it as fully as we should without alienating either side of our patronage."

Familiarity of community likes and dislikes only can inform a manager of what to publicize in war news, is the opinion of Gus Lampe, RKO-Schine Syracuse city manager, in finding that intelligent promotion of the big "spot" news makes for boxoffice, while conventional advertising of the usual does not.

From Utica, Warnerman Arnold Stoltz inclines to the same view in noting that "a theatre's duty is to give each town what it wants when it wants it." And in Houston, Texas, Loewman Francis Deering also bases his stand on local demands, "handling and advertising the news as we always have, as an important part of our program with no particular emphasis on war."

Pincus Abandons Stage Broadcast

The success of Gil Brown's war news broadcasts from the stage of the Irvin, Bloomington, Ill., detailed in last week's issue, is paralleled by the adverse reaction accorded the same promotion by Charlie Pincus at the Centre, Salt Lake City. Pincus tied in with KYDL for a nightly five-minute program, staged elaborately with a special setpiece and lighting. Publicity over the station was vast, but, according to Charlie, patrons did not acclaim the service, coming to the theatre to get away from the war news on the radio and in the newspapers, they told the Round Tabler. The tie-in lasted two weeks.

As concerns the newsreel shots, the theatreman found that exclusive shots or events of high interest previously publicised had a ready audience and were distinctly worth

SPONSORS QUESTION WAR BROADCASTS

Advertisers who rushed to sponsor radio war news broadcasts are beginning to question the advisability of their move, according to the New York Times. Sandwiching of "commercials" between reports unfavorable to Allies' prospects are not working out too well, the story credits an advertising manager as saying.

On the other hand, the advertising executive is said to believe that the value of straight entertainment programs has been enhanced, as people are anxious to forget the war at certain times.

Soriero Ties Evening Classes to Crafts Exhibit in Lobby

To reach the students of the Los Angeles Adult Evening Schools during his date on "Lillian Russell", plus an advance buildup on the coming "Edison, the Man", at the United Artists, Tom Soriero reports a first-time tiein with the school organization for a week's lobby exhibit of arts and crafts turned out by the various classes of the project. Arrangements were made to announce the display in all of the evening classes, with mention of the feature attraction, which, according to Soriero, brought in appreciable extra business on "Russell". Midweek of the display, "Edison" was plugged with signs placed around the exhibit stressing that many of the articles shown were made possible only by the Edison inventions.

Some seven schools took part in the proceedings, contributing examples of weaving, colored photography, water colors, fashion drawings, metal craft, leather, bookbinding, pottery, molding, and ceramic sculpture. Many of these items were purchased by patrons to be delivered after the exhibition, which was limited only by the amount of space available in the theatre.

Conner Ties Schools To "Virginia City"

The proclamation stunt usually tied into City Hall, was directed toward a school hookup by Marlowe Conner on "Virginia City" at the Avalon, in Chicago. Mimeographed proclamations were made up and distributed to classrooms in all neighborhood schools.

Teachers cooperated in choosing one boy from each class to be marshal of Virginia City in recognition of good work or class deportment. In addition to the honors, the students were guests of the theatre on opening day of the picture, teachers building up the hookup by making personal announcements at the time of presentation. Proclamations were good at the theatre for admissions.

For general attention, Conner used a "gold brick" hunt, wherein 100 "bricks" made up two by four, cut to size and painted gold were first displayed a week in advance in the theatre lobby with copy asking patrons to be on the watch for them all over town on opening day of picture. Bricks were then scattered everywhere on the night previous, window displays were arranged with his local papers in publicizing the tiein.

Murphy Concentrates on Love For "Million B.C." Date

Stressing the love angle in "One Million B.C.," Frank Murphy at Loew's State, in Syracuse, built special ads around this theme, using such lines as "What was love like one million years ago?," "How did your ancestors make love?," "Was there oompth?," etc., etc. Rotagravure break was landed in advance with Carole Landis in bathing suit pose, dramatic sketch on WFBL with full picture and theatre plug and special display was used in the library of the University of Syracuse.

On "Forty Little Mothers," novelty imprinted paper diapers were distributed to newspaper and radio personnel, in addition to department stores and office buildings for bulletin boards and streamers were pasted to soda fountains throughout the city in advantageous spots. Special lobby display consisted of a 40 by 60 with real diaper and large pin on figure of baby with comment by Cantor: "As long as this baby is around, no actor is safe, see," etc.

Baseball Trophies Awarded By O'Donnell to School Team

Cashing in on the publicity given to the local Colby College baseball team, Manager Jim O'Donnell at the Haines Theatre in Waterville, Maine, arranged for a "Baseball Night" at his house at which special gold baseballs were awarded to the players. Trophies were on display in leading store week ahead with appropriate tiein copy, stunt was plugged in school paper and newspapers and Jim also circulated special flyers at the college campus and around town. School band and cheer leaders were on hand to lend color to the affair and the presentation of the baseballs was made by Mayor Dundas, also good for art and stories.

Lands Much Publicity On Whiteman's Personal

For the personal appearance of Paul Whiteman and his band at the Columbia, in Sharon, Pa., Round Tabler Pat Notaro promoted station WPIC for plugs daily a week ahead on their "Name the Melody" program, also devoting a full half hour of Whiteman recordings on their "5.30 Club" program. Also arranged by Notaro was a backstage interview over the air carrying plug in radio column for the bandmaster.

Through tieup with local five and ten chain, Whiteman was on hand to autograph records in return for which they ran large ad and gave a full record counter display to the date. Contest angle was brought in by cooperating jeweler whose ad carried cut of the King of Jazz and a list of scrambled song titles, on which guest tickets were awarded.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Friary Records Voices

In conjunction with his theatre's 16th anniversary, W. Harold Friary at the M&P Fields Corner, in Dorchester, Mass., promoted a Recordio from a local hardware company and planted it in his lobby, where patrons were invited to hear how their voices sound to their friends. Hal reports the stunt as being very popular with the customers.

Warnerites Stage "Russell" Dinner

The Philadelphia Warnerites turned back the calendar some 35 years for "Lillian Russell" at the Stanley, on a promotion that duplicated a special dinner served locally in 1905 to Diamond Jim Brady and the fair Lillian, herself. The same restaurant that had prepared the fabulous feast for the famed guests at the turn of the century, was enlisted to make up the same menu, to partake of which some 250 locals were bidden on the tiein arranged by Ev Callow and Manager Al Reh for the night before opening. What made the hookup more newsworthy was the presence of the chef who had created the original dinner, in addition to the press, local celebrities acquainted with Miss Russell, civic heads and 50 others invited on a contest over WCAU. These were winners on a tieup that sought letters from locals relating to incidents in their lives pertaining to and knowing of the legendary star. Contest was run nightly on a wine program.

Principals Dress In Character

As accompanying street ballyhoo, the program's commentator, dressed in character, with a young woman, costumed as Miss Russell, were picked up at a downtown hotel in an old-fashioned Alexandra coach drawn by two white horses and driven by liveried coachman. After the dinner, the principals were transported back to WCAU for a broadcast before returning to the hotel. The program had to do with "Russell" incidents concerning the star and some of the guests. Throughout, and at the finale, next day's opening of the picture was adequately plugged.

The event was made much of in the papers by the restaurant which put on the party at no expense to the theatre. As to be expected, the unique gathering was vigorously publicized in all of the dailies with feature stories and comment by the leading columnists.

McKibbon Distributes Photos For "If I Had My Way" Date

Discovering that he had about 100 photos of Gloria Jean left from a previous engagement, Russ McKibbon used these advantageously for "If I Had My Way" at the Royal, Guelph, Ontario, by tying in with a leading restaurant for their distribution. Restaurant invited patrons to order a special Gloria Jean sundae, star photo given with each order. To plug the tiein, Russ arranged for a banner display running across the entire restaurant, lead copy reading "If I had my way I'd have a" etc., etc.

"Rebecca" date brought the distribution of imprinted napkins and grocery bags, transportation company permitted sniping on all busses and through tieup effected with circulating libraries, tinted bookmarks with art work were made available.

Teaser Campaign Aids Swett on "Husbands"

Teaser heralds were distributed in advance of "Too Many Husbands" at the Comique, in Camden, Maine, with Manager Al Swett carrying gag "reward" copy on back page. One hundred dollars was offered to every woman with two legal husbands at the same time and a lesser reward of ten dollars to anyone who could sit through the picture without laughing; another teaser consisted of snipes which were spotted around town, copy reading: "Have you heard about the girl with Too Many Husbands?"

Also to be noted is the weekly movie column conducted and by-lined by Swett. Called "Hollywood Happenings," theatreman manages to incorporate plugs for current and forthcoming attractions.

Joad Newspaper Contest Set by Corker on "Grapes"

Reporting on a tieup with his local daily, L. & J., city manager Moon Corker details a "Do You Know the Joads" contest which broke several days ahead of his opening on "Grapes of Wrath" at the Palace, in Athens, Ga. Each day a photo of some member of the characters in the picture, accompanied by a story giving details, playdates, etc., was run, contestants being required to clip the photos from the paper each day, attach them all on a slip of paper and then write 150 words on "The Joads Trek Across the Country." Cash and theatre tickets were given as prizes to winners.

Since the picture opened on the morning the newspaper was to announce the book had been awarded the Pulitzer prize, Corker contacted the editor, who ran a page-one story, inserting a one-column by three-inch announcement, that the picture opened that day. Taking advantage of all possible publicity given to the Pulitzer prize announcement, Moon also contacted station WGAU for theatre and playdate mention. Tieups were made with all book stores and libraries which gave window space and counter cards. All theatre ads in bold type announced: "Yesterday it was a book, voted the Pulitzer prize, etc., and today a great motion picture."

Still another feature to attract pedestrians was a junk truck loaded with junk household wares which was appropriately bannered and driven by the city streets.

Patriotic Shorts Booked On "Americanization Day"

Tying in with the recent observance of "Americanism Day" in Decatur, Ill., the Lincoln Theatre booked a special show consisting of Warner patriotic short subjects, according them a feature film buildup. AP wires and newsreel cameras covered the day's events, which included an outdoor ceremony of the Oath of Allegiance to the Flag, followed by the playing of the "Star Spangled Banner." Former heads of the American Legion, Boy Scouts and the two remaining members of the Grand Army of the Republic, which found its start there, participated in the ceremonies.

Following the open-air activities, the program at the theatre started, consisting of "Declaration of Independence," "The Monroe Doctrine," "Porky and Old Glory," etc.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Benefit Show Held by Irwin For "Edison the Man"

On "Edison, the Man" at the Lyceum Theatre, in Duluth, Minn., Round Tabler George D. Irwin put over a benefit ticket sale arrangement with local church club. Large quantities of tickets were sold through word-of-mouth advertising and extra newspaper publicity obtained by the club was garnered in spots otherwise not available to the theatreman.

Exploitation Briefs Here & There

Heralds in the form of voting ballots were distributed by Arnold Stoltz at the Avon, in Utica, N. Y., for "Typhoon." Headed "Democrat or Republican," copy followed with "You'll want to vote on this issue: Whom do you select as your companion on a desert isle?" Boxes at left were available to vote for wives, best girls, mothers-in-law, or Dorothy Lamour, and followed by title, cast, playdates, etc.

Ahead of "His Girl Friday," E. R. Erickson at the Rhodes, in Chicago, had two lads dress as internes carry a stretcher about town on which was planted a dummy. Banner on either side read: "He laughed himself sick," etc., etc.

Full-page of co-op ads was promoted by Johnnie Broumas at the Orpheum Theatre, in Connelsville, Pa., for "A Child Is Born," each merchant's ad containing appropriate tiein copy. In addition, as a teaser, small cards were distributed with copy, "Take a tip, see," etc., etc.

Local drug store was promoted by Chuck Shannon for an entire window of baby products in connection with his date on "A Child Is Born," at the Warner Boulevard, in Pittsburgh. Muslin cut to diaper size was imprinted with title letters and strung conspicuously about the store, and for atmosphere attractive baby pictures were featured in addition to scene stills with tiein copy.

Ahead of "Grapes of Wrath" at Schine's Kentucky, in Lexington, Round Tabler Wally Allen had a lad on streets carrying a copy of the book in one hand and card in the other reading: "Now see it at" etc., etc. Another ballyhoo used by the theatre was for "Virginia City" when men dressed as Indians and Rangers paraded busy streets with back banners carrying appropriate tie-in copy.

Bill Freise, Rivoli Theatre, La Crosse, Wis., arranged with the local Ediphone offices to have a display of old and new Ediphones sent from Milwaukee for a lobby display as part of his campaign on M-G-M's "Edison, the Man." Freise also ran a quiz contest over a local radio station offering prizes for correct answers to questions concerning the picture.

As part of his campaign on "Waterloo Bridge," Jack Simons, Loew's, Hartford, Conn., had a man patrolling one of the city's busiest bridges with a banner reading. "This is not Waterloo Bridge," and giving playdate and picture credit.

Effective and easily filed away for reference purposes are the monthly calendars of his various shows, which are distributed by J. B. Clements, at the Egyptian Theatre, in Sioux Falls, S. D. Tinted a different color each month, measuring approximately three by eight inches and printed on heavy coated stock, Clements lists his attractions.

Further Opinions Favor War News

advertising widely including the use of radio spot announcements.

"We are convinced that people want to see war scenes on the screen as they did in the last war and we are cashing in on it at the boxoffice. Managers who are of the opinion they are rendering a service to their patrons by offering red hot war news should be advised that patrons do not want it."

Pincus' findings are seconded by J. R. MacEachron, of Malco's Paramount, in Jackson, Tenn., who, at the beginning, also tied in his radio station for announcements that the theatre news contained scenes of the latest war happenings. Upon investigating, MacEachron discovered that women patrons "were horror-stricken," informing the manager they "did not care for any more war pictures." Since then, the theatreman lists "war news" in small letters along with his other shorts.

Radio Tiein Found Lacking

Arriving at a similar conclusion after early experiment, Vic Gauntlett voices the experiences of various Evergreen circuit managers. Assuming that people were remaining at home listening to radio reports, Gauntlett tells of an attempt to buck this "competition" by direct tieins in various northwest situations, including the screen, for announcements of important war events.

"The result was that it did not increase patronage at all," the circuit ad head notes, "and in many instances patrons got up and left the theatre."

The circuit is not now advertising war shots on the assumption that those who follow the war in "all its grim and horrible details" prefer the radio for the latest happenings.

"Duty to Keep Patrons Educated"

Round Tablers who take the other side, are equally emphatic with Moon Corker, L & J, Athens, Ga., city manager, disagreeing with Hart by calling radio "our chief competitor and we should not give them the satisfaction of giving out this news exclusively."

"It is our duty to keep patrons educated to the happenings in Europe. Students here at the University are keenly interested in every move that is made abroad and I sincerely believe that a good bit of our business comes from people who want to see the news."

War shots should be "played up to the skies," stresses George Laby, of the Victory, Holyoke, Mass., in pointing out that since the newsreel ranks with the best of short subjects, the former is to be given the same advertising attention.

"We get numerous phone calls daily asking if we are showing certain war scenes. The fact that we get calls is sure sign that these timely shots should be advertised so that this information will be available."

Morris Rosenthal is another advocate of vigorous advertising treatment for the more sensational war shots which the Bridgeport Loewman sells strongly in newspapers and lobby display. Through a check of passersby, Rosey found that announcements out front of some special war event brought more comment than ordinarily.

NEWSPAPE

The Loewdown On The Movies

By FRANK FAN

TUOBANRUT!

Pardon me! I'm still on my ear—after seeing "Turnabout" at good old, happy Loew's!

What a joy to hear people laugh! What a blessing to be able to find something to laugh at!

I notice that the loudest haw! haws! are coming from the married couples.

"Turnabout" is a stork-comedy that pokes fun at quarreling husbands and wives;—even as you and I!

* * *

Thorne Smith, who wrote "Topper," whipped up this new batch of rib-tickling.

Don't let the war get you down—see "Turnabout" for that let-down feeling.

LOEW'S

ADVERTISING ON LATE DATINGS

(Right) The star cuts spotted by Bob Paskow for quicker attention to the double bill at Warners' Stanley, Jersey City, were set in gentle curves for greater fluency in visualizing both features. The "Love-and-Laugh" line of type served to point up the comedy and romance.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger (†) symbol indicates picture is of the 1939-40 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

THE CUSTOMERS EXPECT

ASSUMING that history can be recognized when it happens, this summer of 1940 may be expected to go into the annals of historians as the time of the Great Uncertainty.

The United States, and all parts thereof, in varying degrees of consciousness appear to be trying to make up their mind or minds, about everything.

Everything and everybody are on trial, in some manner, and while the charges vary they are basically on issues of social efficiency.

The Great Uncertainty is full upon the motion picture industry, too, everywhere except among the customers. They still expect the motion picture to be entertainment, and there is still no evidence at all that they want from it education, culture or instruction in social consciousness. They go out in free hours to buy "a good time" and, if the pictures appear to promise that, the pictures get the pastime money. The lures of other amusement enterprises, and factors of comparative price compete.

Hollywood is finding itself sore beset, because it has not been these several recent years devoting itself precisely at the service of the customers.

The problem of the masters of the movies has not been to make good, for a long time. It has rather been to maintain a status and a system, which has a magnificent and effulgent history of success behind it rather than in it.

All the way from the box office to the courthouse there are many manifestations that all manner of readjustment will be had.

It is only a technicality, and a dusty one, to say that the anti-trust trial has recessed. It is vigorously in progress. It is merely that it is progress between litigants in conference in the Bar Association building uptown in New York instead of under ritual procedure in the United States court in Foley Square, downtown.

OF considerably more immediate importance to the exhibitor and his customers, however, is the motion picture itself, the flow that must be had to keep the institution of the theatre functioning, to hold its public.

Pertaining to that there are tidings of encouragement. Hollywood is not admitting it out loud, but exploration of the production state of mind for the last fortnight reveals that there is, along with the alarms and economic consequences of the war, the dawn of a realization that there will have to be pictures made entirely for the market.

This happily means that there are not now apparent so many high pitched projects for pictures for the glorification of their makers. There may be promise that the next two years will not see the like of those multi-million dollar projects intended to dazzle the world with personal triumph.

And, incidentally, while Hollywood is making no announcements, it is considered in most production offices that such war-tinged material as is on hand will be more than enough. No more is to be acquired or planned for a while.

"In policy outlook, we are living from day to day, wondering, and mostly of the notion that this is no time to plan anything but careful entertainment," one important producer puts it.

POLLING "ELMER"

YOU will remember that when the New York World's Fair decided to "bury the gardenia" and get the appeal right in among the great common people, the publicity department invented and presented 'Elmer."

"Elmer" was the hypothetical typical-American, hail fellow, genial, a sucker for sentiment, fond of popcorn, and with a merry "Hello Folks," for everybody. He was such a hit the publicity department had to put out a road version and so there were two Elmers, alike as peas in a pod. But the first "Elmer the Great American" was Mr. Leslie Ostrander of Brooklyn, a professional model.

This week we decided to interview this "Elmer" as a one-man poll of the American cinema taste—"movies" to "Elmer."

"Brother, this is just show business. I would expect a little something for that—terms, Brother—it usually runs about $25—take it up with your firm, Brother—a little something—I've had $5,000,000 worth of publicity, Brother."

We shall never know what Elmer liked on the screen. Perhaps he's not the typical American, after all. But he's certainly a New Yorker—from Brooklyn.

MR. DAVID SARNOFF'S RCA is out this week with a "camera type" radio receiver, about twice the size of a brick. This suggests the possibility of a sound picture system with antennae replacing the loud speakers and broadcasting to each patron personally wired for sound. That would eliminate theatre acoustic problems.

WHILE THE WORLD is making so much stupendous news, pressures are also extruding some especially choice minor bits of rare quality. From a day's papers this week:

BELFAST—A British MP says: "The moment Ireland declares for Britain, Northern Ireland must be ready for the duration of the war to clasp Eire's outstretched hand.

(After that they'll be on their own again.)

BERLIN—Chancellor Hitler on the victory: "In humility we thank God for His blessing."

(Remember 1914 and the Kaiser's "Gott mit uns"?)

TOUL—The Cathedral of Toul, in Lorraine, damaged in artillery combat, is being repaired by German engineers.

(What will the Nazi's pagan gods think of that?)

BERLIN—The fashionable westend is posted with notices promising penalties in conscripted war service for women who wear trousers.

This Week in the News

Taxes, Admissions and the Public

CATAPULTED practically overnight into making an immediate decision on increasing or decreasing admission prices, as a result of new admission taxes, thousands of exhibitors subject to the swiftly enacted Federal tax of 10 per cent on tickets priced over 20 cents, had decided by midweek to add the new levy to their box office prices, thereby, in effect raising prices (as of Monday, July 1) two cents on tickets priced between 21 cents and 30, three cents on tickets between 31 cents and 40, etc., to raise for the National Defense Act, an additional $60,000,000 a year above the $20,000,000 collected annually up to now from taxed tickets over 40 cents (see page 13).

"Preparation of the public for the increase" was the key problem of the week in exhibition.

Accredited representatives of some 1,200 theatres in California, Nevada, Washington, Idaho, Oregon and Alaska, members of the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners, largest "regional" exhibitor organization in the country, called upon the distributors on Wednesday to employ the newsreels (Movietonews, News of the Day, Paramount News, RKO Pathe News, Universal Newsreel) to lend their aid in order "to get the fullest cooperation from the theatregoing public."

The exhibitors' organization outlined to the distributors suggestions for material to be placed in four or five newsreel issues, to show, principally, the necessity for the tax in its application to more armaments, more battleships, more soldiers.

Joseph Bernhard, director of Warner Brothers Theatres, in New York, said, Wednesday, "The collection of the tax is a patriotic obligation to help make the people defense-conscious."

The National Defense Tax Bill, as signed Tuesday by the President, estimates additional taxes of $60,000,000 from admissions —compared with additionals of $34,500,000 from cigarettes, $46,300,000 from fermented malt liquors.

"Ramparts'" Armistice

THE March of Time's camera crew was on location, last Friday, in the vicinity of New London, Conn., shooting final , final shots for "Ramparts We Watch." Cameras were still grinding on scenes depicting the signing of the Armistice in World War I when word arrived of the Armistice in World War II.

Eighteen months in the making, remaking, editing and reediting, the first feature from March of Time was announced, Wednesday, by the editors of Time and Life as "now ready for release." No release date was mentioned.

Moving, up to recently, with no great speed, the producers have been accelerating of late to ride in on the nation's interest in national defense, to market the story of American history in the war period of 1914-18.

The picture will reach exhibitors and their public without a single player screen credit, unprecedented; there's not a star or featured player in the cast. Most of the 1,400 of the cast are native New Londoners, of the city in which most of the footage was shot.

Radio's Responsibility

IN THESE TIMES of international crisis the responsibilities of radio are very great. No amount of insistence upon the right of the freedom of speech will save the day for radio unless the public interest is served through a service which is fair, impartial, intelligent and accurate.

Freedom of speech in a medium so universal as radio does not entail a license for glib and gabby commentators to indulge in dramatic recitations in the guise of news reports. There has been an increasing amount of incidents of this character in the recent critical weeks. Even Mr. H. V. Kaltenborn, of distinguished reputation as a radio commentator, has lately been heard in forensic and imaginative harangue in periods when he was supposed to be presenting the news and offering reasoned comment thereon.

The American theory of free speech implies a responsibility and an accountability devolving upon those who would exercise it. Radio is not free to disseminate rumor, gossip and unverified report and then proceed nonchalantly to let the whole matter vanish into the thin air without correction and re-statement when the truth is learned.

No newspaper or magazine which even pretends to character, reputation and responsibility knowingly publishes unverified rumor and report. Neither does it fail to publish a correction when a mis-statement has been discovered. Yet no newspaper or magazine has more than a fraction of the circulation which radio enjoys. Hence, radio's responsibility is far greater.

Yet, the ether waves are crowded with wise guys, pretending an insight into important affairs about which they actually know nothing. With an absurd posturing they tell all—"confidentially". Developments which gravely affect the welfare of humanity the world over are played with obviously for emotional effect as preface to a ringing pronouncement about some commercial product.

Editorializing and news reporting are two distinct publication practices which must be kept separate and distinct if the end result is to be fair and legitimate, on the radio and elsewhere. The full force of this evident truth is in nowise altered by bastardizing efforts which, unfortunately for the clarity and understanding of the public mind, are on the increase on the air and in print.

Radio as a disseminator of conceited and opinionated harangues under the guise of news reporting is on exceedingly dangerous ground. If it becomes the victim of an increasing burden of restrictions, it will have this current abuse to thank for it.

Freedom of expression implies a sense of responsibility to the public weal. To ignore that responsibility inevitably leads to a condition which tends to destroy it.

A Local "Low"

BOX OFFICE grosses at theatres in and around Hollywood dipped during the past week to a two-year low, touching nearly 40 per cent under normal, and this in the face of general conditions that are at least satisfactory, aided and abetted by spurt after spurt in emergency aviation business nearby.

Investigating on the theory that the community table-talks box office grosses like Iowans estimate corn crops and Wall Street talks dollars, our Hollywood Bureau staff pursued inquiries among those realists of show business, the theatre cashiers. Their answer, almost in chorus: "Just a bunch of unattractive pictures."

HEARTS AND HANDS ACROSS THE SEA

MOTION PICTURE HERALD esteems it an honour to record and transmit this profoundly sympathetic reaction and response of an American exhibitor to the great trial and ordeal of humanity in the war "over there".

—THE EDITOR

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:

It has occurred to me that Motion Picture Herald can render a great service to the exhibitors of England.

I have in mind the young children of theatre managers who are being evacuated from England. I feel sure there are enough theatre managers in this country who would gladly take care of these children in their homes here through the duration of the war. I would like to see you sponsor such a plan.

I am a man of moderate means but my wife and I would gladly take care of at least one and possibly two children. I know if my two children had to be evacuated from this country, I would somehow feel better to know that they were in the home of a fellow theatre manager than in the home of some person whose profession I know nothing about. I somehow feel the exhibitors of England must have this same bond of friendship.

Radio and the War

PLANS for such federal control of U. S. broadcasting as may be necessary in the national defense program are being drafted by the Federal Communications Commission in cooperation with other government agencies and will shortly be submitted to President Roosevelt for approval. (F.C.C. Chairman James L. Fly conferred with the President at the White House Wednesday on subjects believed to be mainly on the coordination of broadcasting and communications under the national defense program).

A special board, entirely independent of the National Defense Commission, is expected to rule the air waves, members consisting of the Navy, War and State Departments, the FCC and possibly one or two other agencies.

Washington emphasizes that there is no intention at this time of taking over broadcasting and that the efforts of the new board will be directed principally to coordinating communication.

"Men and Dust"

THE National Committee for People's Rights—"dedicated to the defense of people's rights, civil and democratic"—is the latest group to engage in the "people's rights" documentary film business, entering through the Tri-State Survey Committee, which is distributing, through Garrison Films, a film entitled "Men and Dust," an abbreviated sort of "Grapes of Wrath" about miners.

"Men and Dust," running 16½ minutes, was made to "expose" silicosis and tuberculosis conditions in the lead and zinc mining area of Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma. It is intended for showing in theatres where the Garrison documentary releasing company can get bookings as well as for non-theatrical release.

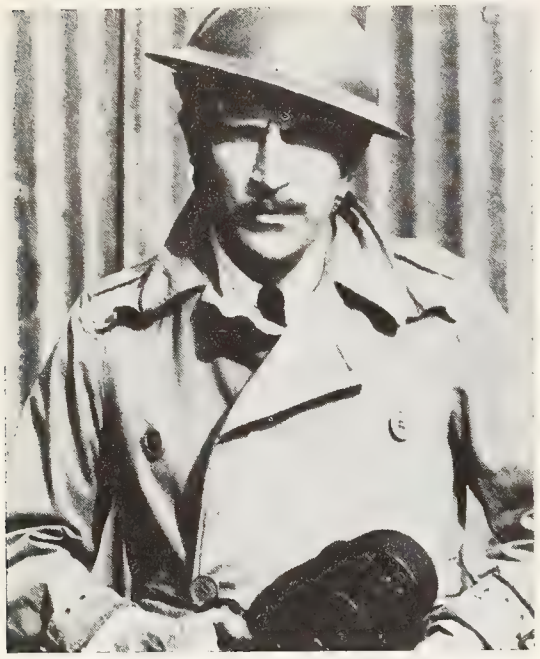
One Sheldon Dick and Mrs. Dick shot the picture in the mine area.

"Snow White" vs. Mars

TESTS are now in progress to determine whether a special Walt Disney re-issue program is the escapist show to combat war-news weariness in American theatregoers. The Disney show proposed includes "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," "The Three Little Pigs," "Ferdinand the Bull," "The Ugly Duckling" and a Donald Duck cartoon. "Snow White" was pulled from circulation last year, long before saturation, and was supposed to be returned last winter.

Last week the first trial of the special Disney program was held in Stamford, Conn. A second test will be held in Meadville, Pa., described as "an average American town." After a third trial in a Western city, a decision will be made on whether or not the reissue program should be nationally released.

Some 53,000,000 in the U. S. are reputed to have seen "Snow White." It would seem that there is room for millions more.



Army Cooperation

A MONTH ago the United States Army summoned Hollywood studio heads to a "secret conference" to discuss ways which could be used in motion pictures to stimulate enlistment, offering to place military facilities and equipment at the disposal of producers, gratis. A check made in Hollywood, Wednesday, revealed Warner Brothers as the only company so engaged.

Warner color shorts, "Young America Flies" and "Service with the Colors," in Warners' historical series, are the first two to be filmed with the new Army cooperation, to be brought in at a cost of about $45,000 each, compared to an estimated $70,000 which they would have cost otherwise.

U.S. ISSUES NEW TICKET TAX RULES, OWNERS PASSING LEVY ON TO PUBLIC

Exhibitors Subject to New Tax on Admissions Over 21 Cents; Must Have Tickets by Monday When Fiscal Year Starts

Caught in probably the shortest period on record—seven days—between Congressional enactment of an admission tax bill, last weekend, and date of actual application, on Monday, July 1st, the United States Treasury, on Tuesday speeded through rules and regulations for new tax operations for exhibitors, even before actual Presidential signature was affixed to the bill, for adoption by exhibitors at 12:01 Monday A. M. The President signed the bill late Tuesday.

Majority of Theatres Affected

Thousands of film theatres, running by far into the majority of the country's 15,000 houses which heretofore were not subject to Federal ticket taxation, come under the new law which reduces the minimum tax exemption from 40 cents to 20 cents. The tax is ten per cent, one cent on each ten-cent ticket charge over 20 cents. Ten- and 15-cent theatres, in the minority, will not be taxed. Those charging more than 40 cents, and which have been subject to the tax, comprise but a few hundred.

The House of Representatives had approved a bill reducing the minimum exemption from 40 cents to 30 cents. A Senate Finance Committee then approved a one penny tax in virtually all admissions—stipulating a nine-cent minimum ticket exemption.

House and Senate conferees finally settled their differences by agreeing to a 20 cent minimum exemption, and, on Saturday afternoon, June 22d, both houses voted the bill.

Sixty millions in additional revenue will be collected annually from all amusement tickets—most of it from movie tickets—for the five-year life of the measure, a total of $300,000,000 for armaments and national defense against the growth of European totalitarians. The new tax will bring to the Government a three hundred per cent increase over the $20,000,000 annual ticket tax revenue averaged in late years.

Faced with little opportunity to give any lengthy consideration to the source of collection, i.e., whether it should be the theatre itself or the customer, a large number of exhibitors and circuit operators decided immediately this week to pass the levy on to their patrons.

In order to preclude any dissatisfaction among customers by first absorbing the tax themselves and then finding it necessary, because of economic conditions, to later pass the tax on to patrons, most exhibitors are expected to charge the tax to the patron at the outset.

It is felt in many exhibition quarters that theatre business at this time does not allow for any admission price reductions, which would, in effect, be the case if the owner absorbed the tax.

It is believed by owners that by pointing up the tax as a national defense measure, the general public will accept the additional payment at box offices as somewhat of a patriotic duty.

U. S. Formulates Rules

Exhibitors whose admissions—of more than 20 cents—will be taxed under the new Defense Revenue Act, effective Monday, will be required immediately to arrange to secure new tickets, printed in according with U. S. Treasury regulations, the Bureau of Internal Revenue disclosed.

Under the regulations, in all instances where practicable, new tickets must be provided, but where this cannot be done immediately, tickets on hand may be overprinted or overstamped, by rubber stamp, or otherwise, to show the established admission price and the tax.

Section 1702 of the Internal Revenue Code specifically requires that the price at which every admission is sold shall be printed, stamped or written thereon, and requires also that in every case where the established price of admission is changed to adjust it to the new tax law, either new tickets will have to be printed or tickets on hand overprinted or overstamped telling the established admission and the amount of the tax.

Furnishing New Forms

Where the established admission price is not changed, however, and is to include the tax, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue will permit, for a limited time until properly printed tickets can be obtained, the use of tickets now on hand without showing the established price and the tax due under the new law, provided the manager or proprietor of the theatre keeps conspicuously posted on the door or entrance or near the box office of the theatre one or more signs properly stating the prices of admission and, in the case of each price, the tax due and the total sum of different admissions.

New forms will be furnished exhibitors by the Internal Revenue Bureau for the theatre's reports of all admission taxes collected, on which the exhibitor will be required to show separately the taxes taken under the new act, that is, on admissions from 21 to 40 cents, inclusive, so that accurate records may be kept of the revenues derived from the new law.

Some in the theatre supply business believe that where large stocks of "old" tickets are on hand for sale to exhibitors, these can be overstamped to give effect to the new tax, although they admit that this is an expensive procedure.

Theatre owners were advised this week by organization leaders, P. J. Wood, head of Ohio's Independent Theatre Owners, being typical, to make a careful record of the closing numbers on all tickets in their box offices at the close of business Sunday, June 30th, on the eve of the changeover, so that they will be in a position to have the proper beginnings of a report to the Government when they make their first monthly statement and tax payment to the Internal Revenue Bureau.

Exhibitors were urged to place their books and records in such order as to preclude any possibility of fines or prosecutions by the Government for failure to comply with the law. Intentional evasion, of course, makes an owner subject to a fine of $10,000, or imprisonment, or both, with costs of prosecution, and a penalty equal to the amount of the tax evaded.

The extension of the new admission tax is accomplished by the following provisions in the new revenue law:

"Section 1700 (a) (1) of the Internal Revenue Code is amended by striking out 'until July 1, 1941, is less than 41 cents' and inserting in lieu thereof 'until July 1, 1940, is less than 41 cents, and after June 30, 1940, and before July 1, 1945, is less than 21 cents' and by striking out 'is less than 41 cents, until July 1, 1941,' and inserting in lieu thereof 'is less than 41 cents until July 1, 1940, and is less than 21 cents after June 30, 1940, and before July 1, 1945'."

All told, the House spent less than an hour in considering the conference report, the only reference to admissions during the brief debate being by Representative Allen T. Treadway (Rep., Mass.), ranking minority member of the Ways and Means Committee, who expressed appreciation that a compromise was reached.

"When I first saw the Senate bill," Mr. Treadway told the House, "I was astounded that they proposed to tax admissions of 10 cents or more and that all the proposed tax increase was taken off cigarettes and tobacco. Without seeming to be unduly critical of the Senate, I think that was a serious mistake. Imagine taking the increase off cigarettes and making up the revenue by taxing a small admission fee for a child going to a movie.

"We were able to compromise on that and raise the exemption to 20 cents, which is much more preferable. The 20-cent bracket, according to the statistics furnished us, will bring in $60,000,000 additional revenue over the present law, which provides for a 40-cent exemption.

The House agreed to the conference report without a record vote, while in the Senate, after little more than 15-minutes' discussion, it was adopted by a vote of 45 to 21.

$22,000,000 from Admission Taxes In 1939-40, $80,000,000 in 1940-41

Heading toward an expected $22,000,000 total tax for the fiscal year near ended, U. S. admission tax collections of $1,791,096 in May brought the total for the first 11 months to $20,242,313, an increase of $2,262,000 over the $17,979,541 received in the corresponding period a year ago, it is shown by the monthly report of the Internal Revenue Bureau, as released in Washington Friday. Estimates of the return from the new tax are placed at $60,000,000 a year additional—see adjoining column.

The May collections were nearly $210,000 under the April total of $2,000,902, and nearly $700,000 under the March figure of $2,390,932, Bureau records showed, but were $185,000 above the $1,605,988 secured in May, 1939.

For the first five months of the calendar year, receipts reached $9,522,228, some $1,857,000 above the $7,664,967 collected in the corresponding period last year.

Segregated figures for the Third New York (Broadway) District revealed a general decline in all admission-tax categories, with total receipts dropping from $590,147 in April to $511,700 in May. However, they were still ahead of the May, 1939, total of $492,012.

U. S. AND MAJORS TELL COURT THAT OUTLOOK POINTS TO CONSENT DECREE

Fifth Adjournment of Trial Granted When Attorneys Report Progress; Arbitration, Clearance, Buying Considered

The United States and the major motion picture company defendants in the Government's "key" anti-trust prosecution in New York are moving progressively toward a consent decree settlement, incorporating therein a system of trade practice regulation, and providing for arbitration, and clearance, overbuying, block booking and blind selling adjustments. Both sides assert that, in negotiations to date, nothing stands in the way of a final accord.

The clock on the left wall of Courtroom 1306, in Federal Courthouse, Foley Square, New York, had just ticked 10:32 on Wednesday morning when a bailiff's gavel tapped for "order-in-the-courtroom," signalling the arrival of the Judge of the day, Henry Warren Goddard.

With the formal legal pronouncement of the business before the court disposed of, a Special U. S. Assistant Attorney General walked to the bar to petition for the Government. He was the middle-aged, yet baldish J. Stephen Doyle, who addressed this petition to the arm-folded Jurist:

> "The Government, with the consent of the defendants, is requesting an adjournment [of the U. S. vs. majors trust trial] to July 1.
> "Conversations have continued each day at the Bar Association and it is believed that definite progress has been made.
>
> "The subject matter in the plan of the Department of Commerce has been discussed in detail and subcommittees have been formed to consider specific subjects and to draft proposals with respect thereto.
>
> "Nothing has arisen to indicate that a final accord cannot be reached.
> "The purpose of this motion is to afford additional time to continue these conversations."

"Motion granted," answered Judge Goddard, in a tone more sonorous than his usual, and with that came the fifth adjournment of the trial that opened in the same courtroom on Monday morning, June 3rd, continued for three days, and was then interrupted when U. S. Attorney General Thurman Arnold authorized his assistants to open negotiations with the defendants for a possible settlement, Mr. Arnold apparently capitulating on his previously adamant demands for circuit divorcement. In the three-week interim, the negotiations have continued, with a week-to-week trial adjournment by Judge Goddard.

Wednesday's statement to the court by Assistant Attorney General Doyle brought the first open admission that there have been no serious "hitches" in the negotiations. It was the first indication that the negotiators—counsel of both sides, and corporate and managing executives of the majors—had progressed to the point where subject matter could be relegated by the committee-of-the-whole to more compact sub-committees, for special, concentrated attention of the basic points for a decree.

The sub-committees:

CLEARANCE—Robert L. Wright, assistant attorney general, for the Government; Richard Dwight, Twentieth Century-Fox and Austin Keough, Paramount, for the majors.

BLOCK BOOKING AND BLIND SELLING—Robert Sher, assistant attorney general and John F. Caskey, Twentieth Century-Fox, and Joseph M. Proskauer, Warners.

ARBITRATION—Robert Sher, assistant attorney general and Edward C. Raferty, of United Artists, and Mr. Keough.

OVERBUYING AND UNFAIR TRADE PRACTICES—Paul D. Williams, assistant attorney general, and Joseph H. Hazen, Warners; Bertram Shipman, RKO and Mr. Raftery.

Although Mr. Doyle's petition to Judge Goddard for postponement mentioned that "the Department of Commerce plan" had been discussed during the consent decree conversations, it is known that the negotiators also have given much attention to the industry's own trade practice program, which was formulated in April, 1939, after lengthy negotiations between exhibitors and distributors, and which failed of enactment after Attorney General Arnold decreed that it was not acceptable to the Government because it did not embrace all of the changes demanded of the industry in the Government's bill of complaint in the trust action.

Presented Last April

The Department of Commerce plan mentioned by Mr. Doyle was presented by that Department to the Department of Justice, last April, as a basis for settling the trust suit. Highlights of that plan have been published variously since then, especially those pertaining to a proposed form of arbitration. The Department of Justice at that time rejected the plan because it contained no provision for divorcement. With Mr. Arnold's decision to hold divorcement in abeyance, as a separate issue, his staff again has turned attention to the Commerce proposals. The proposed arbitration structure was detailed in MOTION PICTURE HERALD on June 22nd, page 12.

Although it is apparent that the main board of negotiators have agreed in principle to the manner of approach, to the point where specific subjects now are being treated by the sub-committees, much work is still to be done before amicable solutions to the problems in hand are reached.

The negotiators are meeting three hours daily, on the second floor of the Bar Association Building on 44th Street, only a few doors west from the headquarters of the Hays organization, near Sixth Avenue. Nine-forty five, sharp, each morning, finds Government and film counsel spreading notes and records and data and documents atop the oval table in conference chambers, where the session continues to 1:00 P. M.

Suits in the Field

The future course of the present consent decree negotiations in the "key" New York case is expected to determine whether the suits brought by the Government against circuits in the field will be dropped.

Meanwhile, no trial dates for the Government's suits in Nashville, Oklahoma City, and Buffalo Federal courts have been set. The defendants in Buffalo and Oklahoma have filed answers, allowing setting of trial dates.

It was further said in New York that if the consent decree establishes a comprehensive system affecting circuits, the suits pending against those circuits might be dropped, the suits' only purpose being the establishment of "proper" practices.

However, one other case, the contempt proceedings by the Government against the Balaban and Katz circuit, and Paramount, in Chicago, for violation of a 1937 consent decree, would probably not be affected, it was noted. A special master in that city has already found the circuit and Paramount guilty; but hearings on the exceptions to the report by these defendants have been postponed until September because Government and defense attorneys were busy in the New York case.

"PRESS AGENT" FOR JUSTICE DEPARTMENT

Though the majors have had Steve Hannagan, New York press agent, as their press relations director for more than a year, the Government itself did not assign a "press agent" until Monday. He is James Hayes, special assistant to Thurman Wesley Arnold, in charge of the anti-trust division of the U. S. Department of Justice. He is supposed to issue statements to prevent spreading of mere "rumors".

Big Debt Contracted By Actors' Union

When the actors of America, united for once, repulsed the "invasion" of their jurisdiction last summer, by George Browne's International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees—"the stagehands"—they also contracted big debts in the fight.

The Associated Actors and Artistes of America (the "Four A's") parent actors' union, which fought for the actors at the American Federation of Labor conclave, in Atlantic City, was said, this week, at New York headquarters, to owe between $30,000 and $40,000 to some of its unions (Screen Actors Guild and Actors Equity being the largest creditors), and it is reported to owe thousands elsewhere in legal fees.

NEW ALLIED 'INFORMATION BUREAU' TO CHECK MAJORS' POLICIES, PRICES

Members To List Sales Data on Cards To Be Classified at Headquarters; Double Features Are Attacked

Delegates to the national convention of Allied States Association of Exhibitors, returned this week to their theatres, from the convention hall in the Morrison Hotel, Chicago, with details of a national "bureau of information," through which independent owners and Allied members are to clear information, to be disseminated to all, on existing and changing policies of distributors, current rental prices, percentages being charged, movement of product, the progress of distributor sales, and such. The idea, basically, is to protect exhibitors from certain product-selling and rental-charging practices and to give exhibitors in one locality the opportunity to demand the same treatment as that accorded exhibitors by distributors in another; also, to keep exhibitors apprised of operating and business building trends of other sections.

Consent Decree Anticipated

Realization of the aim of a ten year drive seems to be in the offing for the exhibitors when terms of a consent decree in the government suit become known, delegates thought. Solution of block booking and divorcement may also be solved by a settlement of the suit. it was believed. Delegates attending the convention all radiated optimism and expressed the hope that a consent decree would be signed soon.

It was generally understood that Abram F. Myers, general counsel for the Allied, had been conferring with the Government attorneys prosecuting this suit and had given them the views of Allied on the matter.

Discussion of buying policies, always a prolonged and serious topic at Allied conventions, was briefly discussed as the delegates were told that the consent decree might touch on these matters.

Thursday, the second day of the meeting members heard Marvin Lowenthal, young Chicago exhibitor and law student who explained the problems of double and triple feature programs confronting Chicago exhibitors. He asked the national association to seek a solution of this problem and asked for aid in combating what he termed "the greatest evil confronting the independent exhibitor today."

Double Features Discussed

Mort Goldberg, head of the G C S circuit in Chicago and an attorney explained alleged monopolistic practices of some of the distributors and told the delegates he believed that if the distributors were in earnest the double and triple feature program could be eliminated.

Mr. Goldberg told the delegates that, in his opinion, if a producer or distributor felt that a picture shown on a triple or double bill would hurt his product, the distributor could take action by refusing to sell to the exhibitor who indulged in this practice.

Charles L. Casanave, general manager and vice-president of National Screen Service, explained the new accessories setup.

The setting up of a national bureau of information with headquarters in Philadelphia was one of the most important steps taken at the convention.

The board selected to operate this bureau includes Arthur Howard, Independent Exhibitors of New England, John Rossiter of the Indiana Exhibitors Association; Sidney Samuelson, New Jersey and Pete Wood, Ohio.

The bureau will operate in this manner: Cards will be sent the exhibitor members of the Allied asking for the following information:

The policies of the distributor—if the product this year was sold on a flat or percentage basis and for less, more or the same amount as the previous year;

If the product is having a more rapid sale, to determine if this is caused by a cheaper price or a better product;

Unit meetings will be held to survey the product situation in their territories and the resultant information will then be sent to the headquarters of the Bureau in Philadelphia.

All matters vital to the exhibitors will be discussed at these unit meetings and again the information will be sent to the bureau.

The information thus received will be compiled in statistical form and disseminated to the members of the Allied, so each exhibitor will have a complete and comprehensive report.

Col. Cole called the new information bureau "a wall of resistance against the distributors and producers."

Basically the avowed purpose of this bureau, as set forth by the Committee, will be the elimination of alleged discriminatory practices against exhibitors in different sections of the country. One serious problem Allied overcame in this matter, was the assurance that complete anonymity will be maintained, inasmuch as the cards will not bear the name of the sender. The plan is expected to be in operation within two weeks.

The closing day, Friday, was a closed ses-

"Economic Slavery"—KIRSCH

In sequel to the Allied States Association convention in Chicago, Jack Kirsch, as president of the Illinois organization, on Wednesday issued the following document:

An Open Letter to the Leaders of the Industry:

It is contended that there is no monopoly in the industry, and anybody who differs with this opinion is criticised as being destructive, and ungrateful to the business from which they make a living. We want you, the leaders of the industry, to judge the situation in Chicago and decide whether there is a monopoly or not.

There are hundreds of thousands of Chicagoans not attending motion pictures, who formerly did so. This is due to double-features and triple-features. The idea of triple-features and additional short subjects may sound ridiculous. However, in one section of Chicago there were, as of Sunday, June 16th, 18 theatres showing three or more features on every program. Business has been so bad that 17 independent theatres, regardless of divergent interests, decided to eliminate the third feature, effective Sunday, June 16th. However, the Belmont theatre, owned by Balaban & Katz, with a seating capacity of 3,257, ran three features against the independents' two features. The Belmont theatre gets all the pictures before all of the seventeen theatres. The Belmont theatre ran a show lasting five hours. The features were "Rebecca," "House Across the Bay" and "Viva Cisco Kid."

Hollywood producers and New York distributors contend that with the loss of the foreign market American exhibitors must take up the slack, and good pictures should be played for extended playing time. The independent exhibitors of Chicago are willing to play good pictures for extra days, but how can they run five-hour shows and gross any money. Furthermore, how can you expect people who might want to see a great production like "Rebecca" to sit in a theatre seat for five hours. The mere thought of it is enough to keep a patron away from the theatre! Is a five-hour show, including "Rebecca," good booking?—particularly in view of the fact that it is first-run in the entire district. Would you say there is no monopoly, when one firm prevents three hundred theatres from exhibiting pictures in a manner which will not keep people from the theatres? We are not belligerent; we definitely want to be constructive; but, it is most difficult to operate theatres under this form of economic slavery.

We have no right to expect Hollywood to turn out a sufficient number of good pictures for this "automat" type of operation. After all, the independents do not have enough theatres to pay their interest charges with candy money.

If the leaders of this industry cannot correct such a devastating abuse and waste of product we would at least appreciate public utterances of condemnation of this policy on their part.

June 22, 1940.

President, Allied Theatres of Illinois, Inc.

Triple Feature Policy Attacked

sion. At this meeting Mr. Myers explained the latest phases of the government suit and the Neely Bill.

The delegates were told also on Friday about a Balaban & Katz bill in Chicago which had three features, "Rebecca," "House Across the Bay" and "Viva Cisco Kid." Jack Kirsch, convention chairman and president of the Allied Theatres of Illinois, said that if Balaban & Katz dropped their double and triple feature program, 90 percent of Chicago exhibitors would adopt a single feature policy within 24 hours.

Tax Bill Attacked

One of the first resolutions to be approved by the convention condemned the new admission tax bill, since approved by Congress in compromise form, as weighing too heavily on the small exhibitor. It was charged that the proposed ten per cent flat admission tax was sponsored by the MPPDA and Spyros Skouras.

On the closing day, the convention received a four-page telegram from Mr. Skouras in which he denied the charges and this, in turn, was met with a resolution characterizing it as "lacking in sufficient logic and fact to merit any reversal of our previous action,"

Other resolutions included:

An attack on the so-called "drive racket" of distributors wherein a cash award is offered to salesmen who "high pressure" exhibitors into overbuying;

A pledge of full cooperation to the government by offering the use of members' screens to inform the public of national defense plans;

A resolution to send a committee comprised of Sidney Samuelson, Roy Harrold, and Ray Branch to call upon the distributors and producers to request the elimination of the practice of making 16mm. films available to the public;

Condemning the double and triple feature bills and asking the producers to cease making inferior films which can be shown on this type of program;

Banquet and Cocktail Party

The convention closed Friday evening with a cocktail party followed by a banquet in the Terrace Room of the Morrison Hotel where James J. Walker, New York's ex-mayor, presided as toastmaster and guest of honor.

The banquet was opened with a prayer by Most Rev. Bernard J. Sheil, Auxiliary Bishop of the Archdiocese of Chicago.

The guests at the speakers' table were: James J. Walker, toastmaster; Jack Kirsch, Allied Theatres of Illinois president and convention chairman; Col. H. A. Cole, president, Allied Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors; Abram F. Myers, Allied general counsel; Sidney Samuelson, executive board member; Nathan Yamins, executive board member; Ezra Stone, radio and motion picture star; Henderson Ritchie,, RKO; William F. Rodgers, MGM, general sales manager; William Scully, Universal general sales manager; Edward Golden, general sales manager, Monogram Pictures; John A. Malloy, publisher, Chicago Herald-American; and Ann Marsters, movie editor, Chicago Herald-American.

Other guests of honor were James Petrillo, new president of the American Federation of Musicians, and Thomas Burke, head of the Chicago Theatrical Janitors' Union.

"The motion picture industry may soon be called upon to produce more patriotism for this country than it ever has in the past," said Mr. Walker in his opening address.

The first speaker introduced by Mr. Walker was Col. H. A. Cole, Allied national president, who briefly reviewed the history of Allied and welcomed all to the banquet.

Edward A. Golden, general sales manager for Monogram, pleaded for unity and cooperation in the motion picture business. He said, "Our industry today, as never before, has a tremendous place in the world, and this is no time to indulge in grumblings of discontent. Let's all live by the right rule, the regulations that make for a better living for all concerned." In conclusion he proposed a toast to Al Steffes, who was home ill in Minneapolis.

Municipal Court Judge J. M. Braude, representing Mayor Kelly, who was absent from the city, spoke of the influence of movies on the youth of the nation.

Rodgers Asks Cooperation

William F. Rodgers, MGM general sales manager, said "remember that this industry has been good to all of us, and it will continue to be so. As long as we have closer cooperation there should be no necessity of being on either side of the fence." "I assure you," he earnestly continued, "that I pledge my complete desire and ability to cooperate with you exhibitors at all times."

Mr. Myers said, "In spite of all the cries you hear from the industry, this business will survive and people will remain in this business that have been in it and there is a bright future on the horizon."

The toastmaster himself, James J. Walker, with his captivating talent for saying the right things at the right time kept the audience in a gleeful mood all evening.

Mr. Walker said that he was one of the first organizers of the MPTOA, back in 1920. In 1919 as State Senator he introduced the bill permitting the showing of Sunday movies in New York. He also told of the early struggles of the independent exhibitor and recited instances of difficulties he encountered in the first days of organization of the MPTOA.

The final speaker was Jack Kirsch, Allied Theatres of Illinois president, who thanked his staff and members of the various committees for their efforts.

Philadelphia will be the convention city for Allied next year.

Joseph Cohn Wed

Joseph H. Cohn, son of Jack Cohn, vice-president of Columbia, was married on Saturday, June 22nd, to Jewel Hart, Broadway stage actress and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. Schwartz of New York. Ferdinand Pecora, supreme court justice, officiated.

NORTHWEST ALLIED CONVENES JULY 10TH

Northwest Allied will hold its annual convention at the Nicollet Hotel, Minneapolis, July 10th and 11th. The meeting will be followed on July 12th by the annual golf tournament of the Twin Cities Variety Club. At the convention appointment of a successor to Al Steffes, president, who is on leave of absence because of illness, will be discussed.

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Connecticut met on Monday, and the Allied Theatre Owners of that state on Tuesday, in New Haven. New season product, national taxes, the war situation, and unusual buying conditions were discussed.

The Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York will elect officers in that city on July 3rd.

Monogram to Coast in Year

W. Ray Johnston, president of Monogram, said Monday in Hollywood that his company had plans under way for the transfer of its headquarters to Hollywood from New York within a year. The foreign department will continue to function in New York.

Mr. Johnston's statement followed reports current in Hollywood that he would take personal charge of production. He emphasized that the contract of Scott R. Dunlap, vice-president, is for complete charge of production.

Six More in Top Brackets

Monogram announced this week that instead of the four high-budget features previously set, six additional pictures would be given top budget allocations. Three will be made in color. The total still remains at 50 productions for 1940-41, including three series of eight westerns each.

"The reason for the spurt is that Monogram's income has been derived chiefly from the American market whereas other studios have depended on the foreign revenue to such a degree that they are now cutting schedules," Mr. Johnston said.

The ten specials include "The Ape," from the stage play by Adam Hull Shirk; "Under Northern Lights," with music by Charles Wakefield Cadman; "Freckles Comes Home," by Jeannette Stratton Porter; "Hoosier Schooldays"; "Gypsy Cavalier," in color; "Sign of the Wolf" and "Trail of the Yukon," by Jack London; "Her Father's Daughter," by Gene Stratton Porter; "Black Stallion" and Leona Dalrymple's "College Sweetheart," both in color.

Virginia MPTO to Pass Along New Tax

At the mid-summer convention of the MPTO of Virginia held at Hotel Chamberlin, Old Point Comfort, last weekend, a resolution was passed to add to the present admission price the new national defense 10 per cent ticket tax. Practically every theatre in Virginia was represented at the meeting.

Ed Kuykendall, president of the MPTOA, spoke on his recent trip to the coast. He foresaw a shortage of product and also told of the new opposition expected from the slot-machine movies. He said that 20 to 30-minute "featurettes" were being planned for these machines.

The meeting was opened by William F. Crockett, president, who introduced Mayor Bickford, of Hampton, who delivered a speech of welcome. Colonel Robert Barton, MPTO counsel, told of the activities of the legislative committee during the past general assembly.

Out-of-state guests included: William Sussman, Fox eastern sales manager; Edgar Moss, Fox district manager, Philadelphia; Ted O'Shea, Metro district manager; Carter Barron, Loew's district manager, Washington, and Jack Cohen, of National Screen.

The board of directors voted to hold the mid-winter convention in Washington, D. C., some time between January 15 and February 15. A. Frank O'Brien, of Richmond, was named chairman of the convention committee.

The convention closed with a banquet.

HOLLYWOOD CONSIDERS 3-DIMENSIONAL SOUND

Studio Engineers Discuss Use and Costs; Universal to Try New Sound for One Film

"Three dimensional" sound which will make its screen debut at the roadshow release this fall of Walt Disney's "Fantasia," based on music recorded by Leopold Stokowski, may also be used by Universal for one film on its 1940-41 program. The other major companies, according to reports, are not planning any picture using the new method for the coming season.

Erpi Sound Demonstrated

Latest in the series of demonstrations designed to acquiant the film industry with stereophonic reproduction was held Thursday, June 20th, at Hollywood's Pantages Theatre.

The program was the same as that given in New York's Carnegie Hall some months ago, reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD April 13th.

Using a three channel system, the presentation used four sound tracks on a 35 mm. film, with special projection and amplifying equipment. As sponsors of the demonstration, the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences was represented by president Walter Wanger, who gave the opening address.

Stressed in both Mr. Wanger's speech and that of Electrical Research Products' president, T. K. Stevenson, was the fact that stereophonic sound, if and when adopted, would not render obsolete existing theatre and studio equipment.

Filled to capacity with production representatives from major studios, the theatre also received bursts of applause for the renditions offered. In addition to demonstrating the "binaural" qualities of the system, enabling the hearer to tell from what part of the stage the action is coming, the method demonstrated ability to give more faithful total shadings and range.

In reproduction, the film passed through four light-beams, one for each track, the fourth being the "control track." Each beam then passes into its own photoelectric cell from which an electric current, representing the original sound source, flows through amplifiers to the loud speakers.

Bernard Brown, Universal sound chief and winner of the 1939-40 Academy sound recording award, said that the company was considering the use of the new sound system for one film. He expressed the opinion that the binaural sound would grow fast once it had been started. If the film is made, it will be released, like Disney's "Fantasia," on a roadshow basis.

A "stereophonic effect" will be used on musical numbers in "Spring Parade," the next Deanna Durbin picture, and also on the next Gloria Jean film.

"The Great Ziegfeld" and "Romeo and Juliet" (MGM) also required, in certain runs, special projection equipment, according to Wesley Miller, assistant to Douglas Shearer, MGM recording director.

Costs Estimated

Jack Durst, West Coast representative of International Projector, pointed out that present projection equipment could be converted, if the need arose, to a two channel system at a cost ranging between 50 and 75 percent of the original exhibitor's investment in his sound system.

However, for a three-channel system, as used by the Bell Telephone-Erpi method, greater difficulty and expense would be experienced by the exhibitor and the studio, Mr. Durst said. The cost of the system as demonstrated by the Telephone Company in New York and Hollywood was estimated at $30,000. But it was said that the price would be substantially lower for theatres.

John K. Hilliard, chairman of the theatre sound standardization committee of the Research Council and Paramount sound department head, at the recent Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatres Owners convention said, "Since added equipment is involved in the application to the theatre of stereophonic sound, it would appear that at best considerable time will elapse before any production could be generally released in this manner. Undoubtedly from time to time more stereophonic demonstrations will take place, and it is quite probable that in special cases productions may be so recorded for a very restricted release."

No Obsolescence Seen

"However, no immediate wide scale production of this type is planned because of insufficient experience on the subject." Mr. Hilliard continued. "For those interested from the standpoint of current equipment problems, we can safely say that any equipment currently or recently purchased can be utilized as part of any future stereophonic installation by an addition to, rather than a substitution for, this original equipment. In other words, the new development will not make current equipment obsolete."

Major Nathan Levinson, Warner-First National recording executive and vice-chairman of the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, believes, "We will have no general use of binaural recording until we actually get what today seems impossible, the real third dimensional picture."

Major Levinson, who as Pacific Coast representative of Western Electric was instrumental in securing the entry of Warners into the field of talking pictures, said binaural sound was "still a stunt." Its value in certain musical sequences, he pointed out, must be admitted, although such numbers as the "Dark Eyes" sequence in "Hollywood Hotel" made with the Raymond Paige orchestra demonstrate what a one channel system can do.

Believing that "if we're ever going to use it, let's do it right and use three channels," the Major explained that while sound costs on a feature picture today do not represent more than four per cent, use of the new system would more than double that figure.

"Under the present set-up of the Research Council," he added, "no one company would be apt to use the system without other companies doing the same. Through the basic committees, each studio has a minimum of six representatives on the Council. No single studio would be likely to act on such an important development without taking advantage of this representative cross-section of opinion."

John Aalberg, RKO Radio sound head, said that while the advantages of stereophonic sound for musical numbers were unquestioned, there seemed to be no need for binaural sound in the realm of dialogue on the screen. Mr. Aalberg believed that in all probability there would be a two channel set-up before a three in theatres, if and when the new system made its advent, pointing out that with all sound heads now made for two sound tracks, getting a two speaker set-up for stereophonic sound would merely mean a duplication of existing amplifiers and speakers.

Warners Set 11 Top Pictures for Summer

Warner Brothers have scheduled 11 of the "most important productions" for national release this summer, Gradwell L. Sears, general sales manager, said this week on his return to New York after attending the company's sales convention at the Blackstone Hotel in Chicago. In addition these features will get increased advertising budgets, he said.

The films are "All This, and Heaven Too," with Bette Davis and Charles Boyer; "The Man Who Talked Too Much," George Brent and Virginia Bruce; "My Love Came Back," Olivia de Havilland, Jeffrey Lynn; "Ladies Must Live," Wayne Morris, Rosemary Lane; "They Drive by Night," George Raft, Ann Sheridan, Humphrey Bogart, Ida Lupino.

"Moon" as Single Bill

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "New Moon," starring Nelson Eddy and Jannette MacDonald, will play a single feature policy in virtually all double bill first run situations throughout the Loew circuit. Single bill programs so far have been set for Rochester, Columbus, Kansas City, Syracuse, Louisville, Indianapolis, Akron and Providence, all normally double spots.

Remodel Preview Theatre

W. B. Gullette has remodeled his Preview theatre, projection room at 1600 Broadway, the improvements including private cutting rooms, storage vaults, and a special interlocking system for continuous 16 mm. and 35 mm. projection. A new Simplex sound system has been installed and the projectors equipped with high intensity light sources. The installation was made by National Theatre Supply Company and the theatre was designed by Robert R. French.

FCC GIVES PARAMOUNT GROUPS FOUR TELECAST PERMITS, RCA TO GET THREE

DuMont Stations in New York, Washington Licensed; B. & K. and Paramount Studios Plan Construction

The struggle between certain motion picture interests and the radio industry for control of television entered a new phase this week following the announcement by the Federal Communications Commission that it would approve 23 applications for television stations, including four program stations controlled wholly or in part by Paramount Pictures. The National Broadcasting Company was given only three such stations.

Four Paramount Stations

Paramount, through its half interest in the Allen B. DuMont Laboratories, Inc., has already been the most active film company in the television field. The new statement of policy from the FCC announced stations for Television Productions, Inc., Paramount Hollywood subsidiary headed by Paul Raibourn, Paramount television chief, and Y. Frank Freeman, vice-president in charge of studio operations; for Balaban & Katz, Chicago, Paramount's principal theatre partner, and also DuMont stations for Washington and New York.

In addition to the 23 applications which the Commission said would be granted, 19 others are now receiving consideration. Five of the 23 to be granted are for experimental purposes and research, the other 18 will be authorized to furnish programs for the public.

The stations, arranged by key cities, which will be permitted to televise regular programs, and their frequencies follow:

NEW YORK:
National Broadcasting System	50- 56 mc
Columbia Broadcasting System	60- 66 mc
Bamberger Broadcasting Service	96-102 mc
Allen B. DuMont Laboratories	78- 84 mc
CHICAGO:
Zenith Radio Corporation	50- 56 mc
Balaban and Katz	60- 66 mc
National Broadcasting System	84- 90 mc
LOS ANGELES:
Don Lee Broadcasting System	50- 56 mc
Television Productions	78- 84 mc
Hughes Tool Company	60- 66 mc
WASHINGTON:
Allen B. DuMont Laboratories	50- 56 mc
National Broadcasting System	60- 66 mc
SAN FRANCISCO:
Don Lee Broadcasting System	50- 56 mc
Hughes Tool Company	60- 66 mc
PHILADELPHIA:
Philco Radio and Television Corp	66- 72 mc
WCAU	84- 90 mc
CINCINNATI:
Crosley Corporation	50- 56 mc
ALBANY, N. Y.:
General Electric Company	66- 72 mc

Many of the stations listed already are operating.

The new permits will go to Bamberger Broadcasting Service (WOR) in New York; Balaban & Katz and NBC in Chicago; Television Productions (Paramount) and Hughes Tool Company in Los Angeles; DuMont and NBC in Washington; Don Lee and Hughes Tool in San Francisco, and WCAU in Philadelphia. Don Lee is affiliated with the Mutual network and WCAU with CBS.

The five research stations proposed are those of Radio Corporation of America at Camden, N. J.; Philo T. Farnsworth, Fort Wayne, Ind.; Purdue University, West Lafayette, Ind.; Allen B. DuMont Laboratories, Passaic, N. J., and Iowa State University, Iowa City.

Of the 19 applications yet to be considered, four are those of present licensees—General Television Corporation, Boston; Iowa State University, First National Television, Kansas City, Mo., and Radio Pictures, Inc., New York, and the remaining 15 are for new stations proposed by the Boston Edison Company, Boston; R. B. Eaton, Des Moines, Iowa; Travelers Broadcasting Service Corporation and WDRC, Hartford, Conn.; Midland Broadcasting Company, Kansas City; Earl C. Anthony, May Department Stores and LeRoy Jewelers, Los Angeles; Milwaukee Journal, Milwaukee, Wis.; Kansas State College, Manhattan, Kans.; Metropolitan Television, Inc., New York; National Broadcasting Company, Philadelphia; Henry Walczak, Springfield, Mass.; Grant Union High School, Sacramento, Cal., and KSTP, Inc., St. Paul, Minn.

The new FCC regulations specify, in an effort to guard against monopoly or domination by any single interest, that no station in the group of program stations except for "good cause" may operate more than one channel and no one group will be permitted, directly or indirectly, to own, operate or control more than three program stations, nor more than one in a given territory. Television networks, such as are in use in radio, are not banned, for that is the only way television could be brought to the whole country, but will be subject to strict control by the FCC.

The apparent conflict between the fact of four stations variously affiliated with Paramount and its subsidiaries and partners and the announced policy of limiting licenses to three stations for a single group may be explained by a technical assumption of diverse interest between Paramount and DuMont. The Paramount-DuMont relation has never been precisely defined and it is commonly said that Paramount has "about a half interest in DuMont." This might or might not be control.

Up to the present the Government body has only signified its intention of approving the applications listed above. The companies have not yet received official notice or details of the permit.

Mr. Raibourn of Paramount, DuMont, Television Production and Majestic Radio and Television Corporation, said the film company's future plans in television could not be discussed until the FCC gives details on the new licenses which may be expected within a week or two.

Paramount's avowed interest in television is to protect its theatre properties and as insurance for the future, it was said. The ultimate aim of the film organization's television activities would logically be perfection of television for theatres and control over that phase of the medium. The Radio Corporation of America demonstrated its large screen (4½ by 6 feet) television this winter and has announced a 9 by 12 feet image for sometime this summer.

The DuMont company, Mr. Raibourn said, is doing work on projection for large screen television but though "work is being done" there is "nothing to get excited about" as yet.

RKO Has Interest

RKO has an indirect interest in television through the Radio Corporation of America which is a large stockholders in the film company. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Twentieth Century-Fox have a connection with the Baird television company which showed large screen television last Summer in New York City. Other picture companies are also watching television developments.

WOR which has been assigned television channel No. 6 for New York has not yet selected a site for a television transmitter, according to J. R. Poppele, chief engineer. However, it was said that WOR engineers and executives have followed the growth of television closely and will immediately submit the station's television plans to the commission. The granting of a construction permit and a license is contingent upon the FCC's approval of the applicant's program of research and development.

The 42d floor and roof of 444 Madison Avenue, New York City, has been leased for a three year period by WOR for its FM transmitter.

The DuMont company, with a temporary 50 watt transmitter installed on the 42d floor of 515 Madison Avenue, has begun tests to study the field intensity of its television signals. The regular 1 kw station is expected to go on the air in the Fall.

Following the unsettled condition in television caused by the FCC failing to give it commercial standing, the actors unions interested in the question of television jurisdiction have decided to postpone action. A settlement of the television situation has been put off by the discussions to merge all the theatrical unions into "one big union." The parent organization, the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, may consider a reorganization plan this Summer.

COMMISSION ISSUES FM REGULATIONS

Initial regulations for the operation of frequency-modulation broadcasting stations were issued this week by the Federal Communications Commission, paving the way for commercial operations in the high-frequency channels. The FM order was made a month ago and the story appeared on page 15 of the May 25th issue of MOTION PICTURE HERALD.

FM frequencies have been divided into three groups, one for service in towns with a population less than 25,000, one for towns over 25,000 or areas of less than 3,000 square miles with that population, and the third for service of areas in excess of 3,000 square miles. Unlimited operation is permitted but three hours of broadcast during the day and three at night are required; two hours a day must be given to programs which are not rebroadcast.

To guard against monopoly or domination, it is provided that no person or interest shall, directly or indirectly, own, operate or control more than one FM station except where it can be shown that the ownership of other stations would not result in any suppression of competition. It is provided, however, that, in cases where more than one station is owned or controlled by any interest, the ownership or control of more than six stations will be considered to constitute a concentration of control inconsistent with the public interest.

Court Approves Reorganization For Majestic

Paramount, through its half interest in the Allen B. DuMont Laboratories, acquired indirectly this week an interest in the Majestic Radio and Television Corporation with the approval of the reorganization plan which gives control of the manufacturing company to DuMont.

Seven Directors Approved

Federal Judge John P. Barnes sitting in the United States District court in Chicago on Monday approved the new reorganization plan for the Majestic Radio and Television Corporation.

The seven directors selected and whose names were submitted to Judge Barnes, who approved, were:

Allen B. DuMont, president of the Allen B. DuMont Laboratories.

Walter G. Scott, management engineer and at present acting general manager of Majestic.

Curtis Franklin, of the Allied International Investing Corp. and Automatic Products Corp., with DuMont underwriters of the new stock issue.

Elmer C. Upton, Balaban & Katz Comptroller in Chicago.

Park F. McMahon, of the Majestic creditor's committee.

Paul Raibourn, acting treasurer Paramount Pictures and director and treasurer of the DuMont Company.

Richard Rex Perkins, who had been attorney for Claude Roth, trustee of Majestic during the reorganization.

In addressing the court attorneys pointed out that at the present time there were 446,183 out of 550,000 shares accounted for. Of this total 175,000 shares are owned by the Davega Stores Corporation, one of the creditors which did not approve the new plan.

Approval of the plan was obtained from stockholders of 242,228 shares which according to Leo T. Norville, Majestic attorney comprised nearly 90 percent of the small stockholders.

Mr. Scott told the court that in his opinion, which he said was backed by 25' years of plant management engineering, the present plan, based on a yearly business of $1,500,000, with a working capital of $300,000, would bring a return of four to six percent or approximately $90,000 yearly.

As to television Mr. Scott said he thought it would be perhaps two or three years before it is sufficiently developed to be available for the market on a large scale.

The only immediate objection to the reorganization plan was made by Edward M. Burke, attorney for RCA which has a claim of $22,000 against Majestic. Mr. Burke told the court he believed the Majestic should pay this amount before the new basic licenses were granted to the new company by RCA.

William R. Crawford of the New York law firm of Searle, James and Crawford representing some of the creditors who approved the plan, read a telegram from E. C. Anderson, head of the RCA license division wherein Mr. Anderson informed Mr. Crawford that the license necessary to Majestic if it continues to operate would be granted subject to three conditions:

Receipt by RCA of a balance sheet before the license is granted;

Proof that Majestic received the $165,000 from sale of debentures as stated in the reorganization plan.

That the licensing of RCA basic patents to Majestic will not relieve the old corporation of the liability of the old debts.

'AMATEUR TELEVISION' AT $300 DEVELOPED BY RCA

Inexpensive Iconoscope Placed on Sale to Make Possible Home-Built Transmitters

Television has been made available to the 55,000 American radio amateurs and other experimenters with the development of an inexpensive television camera "eye" tube by the Radio Corporation of America, that company claimed this week The new tube will sell for slightly less than $25, making it possible for an amateur to build a complete television transmitting and receiving system for about $300.

Would Extend Field

Amateur television at relatively low cost, it was said, will bring the new medium to thousands of communities which will not have large commercial stations for some years. As in the case of the growth of radio, television "hams" or amateurs are expected to make notable inventions and improvements in the new form of communication and entertainment.

The new development is not a direct threat to theatres because the amateurs, like professional television stations, can not operate on a commercial basis. Indirectly the public interest aroused in television by amateur activity and improvements made by these individuals may hasten the day when television, like radio, will bid for the time and attention of the theatre-going public.

The new low-cost tube is described by RCA as "a smaller, much simplified version of the more familiar 'iconoscope' television camera tubes used in television studio cameras." The small tube is used in a system which transmits 120-line pictures. This compares with the 441-line television images used by RCA-NBC for regular operations. An image of about 1½ inches square which may be enlarged at the receiver several times is transmitted. RCA said the pictures are "remarkably clear and sharp, equivalent to newspaper half-tone reproduction."

In the research and development work on the new low-cost tube RCA collaborated with the American Radio Relay League, amateur organization.

DuMont Television Plans

The new television station being erected in New York by the Allen B. DuMont Laboratories, Inc., Paramount affiliate, will use two systems of transmission when operations begin next Fall. According to present plans, programs will be broadcast first on a standard of 625-lines with 15 frames per second, the system favored by the DuMont organization, and repeated on the 441-line with 30 frames per second, the standard used by RCA-NBC. The DuMont television sets can receive pictures on both standards.

DuMont will no longer lease sets to bars, restaurants and hotels. Mark B. Lajoie, general sales managers, said that production is so far behind sales that this action is necessary. It has been reported that DuMont production has tripled and a sales promotion campaign is planned.

Facilities for increase in production of DuMont television receivers will be available when the reorganization plan of the Majestic Radio and Television Corporation is approved. Under the plan, which was submitted Tuesday to Federal Judge John P. Barnes in Chicago, DuMont participates in the underwriting of a new stock issue and obtains control of the company's operations. Court acceptance of the plan is expected at a hearing scheduled for June 22nd. A majority of creditors and stockholders approved the plan, though it was opposed by the SEC and minority creditor groups.

Television Group Formed

Television Engineering Company, Inc., was incorporated at Dover, Del., to deal in television. The capital is 200 shares of no par value. The principal office of the company is the Capital Trust Company, Dover. The incorporators were Solomon H. Feldman, Frank T. Francis and Levering H. Gilpin of Washington, D. C.

Latham Joins American Television

Gene W. Latham, former metropolitan sales manager of the Allen B. DuMont Laboratories, Inc., has been appointed general sales manager of the American Television Corporation.

Victor E. Olsen, E. Thornton Rice, Jr., and Henry A. Bell, Jr., all formerly with the DuMont company, have become district representatives for American Television.

The company also announced that it "has entered production of its line of popular-priced sight-and-sound sets for the home to be distributed under the trade name of Videor."

RKO, COLUMBIA REPORT NET OPERATING PROFITS

Nine Months Net $341,348 for Columbia; Strong Quick Asset Position Shown

Net profits of $535,088 for the first quarter of 1940 were reported this week by RKO, and a net of $341,348 for nine months ended March 30th was reported by Columbia.

Universal Credit Increased

A $1,000,000 increase in Universal's revolving credit with two New York banks and an extension of the credit agreement for one year from next October 13 has been reported to the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The credit, with Commercial National Bank and Irving Trust Company, now amounts to $2,500,000. On August 1 it will be increased to $3,500,000 and continue at that amount until next March 1, when it will revert to the present amount for the remainder of the agreement period. If the additional $1,000,000 is used by Universal it will be at the same rate of interest as for the original credit. If not used, Universal will pay one-half of one per cent interest on the $1,000,000 in addition to the interest for the original credit.

Retirement of 12,750 shares of Universal eight per cent $100 par value preferred stock, with purchases made out of surplus, was also disclosed in the SEC report.

GTE Stock Purchase

Acquisition in April of 400 shares of General Theatres Equipment Corporation capital stock by R. B. Larue, New York, was reported by the Securities and Exchange Commission from Washington.

The semi-monthly summary of the SEC showed also the transfer by H. Bayard Swope, New York, CBS director, of 1,000 shares of Columbia Broadcasting Class A common stock from direct ownership to the Keewaydin Corporation to be held for his benefit.

Columbia's Earnings

The net profit of Columbia Pictures Corporation for the nine months ended March 30, 1940, some $341,348, was after the deduction of a special reserve of $300,000 for possible adjustments incident to war conditions. This compares with net loss of $80,158 for the corresponding 1939 nine months period.

The statement said, "Columbia continues in a strong net quick asset position." Current assets as of March 30th last were approximately $12,477,000 and current liabilities of $1,611,000, making a net working capital of $10,866,000.00.

"While the corporation recently announced its production program for 1940-41 and plans to make many important pictures," it "is endeavoring to maintain such control over its production activities as is possible with the object of being able to adjust same to changes which may be necessitated by the present disturbed world-wide economic conditions."

RKO's Statement

RKO reported Friday, June 21st, a net profit for the first quarter of 1940 of $535,088 after all charges, including provision for Federal income taxes and for dividends on the preferred stock of a subsidiary.

RKO's profit for the quarter before provision for depreciation and income taxes amounted to $1,148,402. The following deductions were made: depreciation, $364,329; income taxes, $174,535, and provision for dividends for the period on Keith-Albee-Orpheum 7 per cent preferred stock in the hands of the public, $74,450, leaving net profit of $535,088.

The statement for the quarter follows:

	13 Weeks ended March 30, 1940
Profit before provision for depreciation and income taxes	$1,148,402.43
Depreciation (other than depreciation on studio properties and equipment charged to film costs)	364,329.08
	$ 784,073.35
Provision for income taxes	174,535.00
Net profit before providing for dividends on preferred stock of a subsidiary company in hands of public	$ 609,538.35
Provision for dividends accured during period on preferred stock of subsidiary company as above	74,450.25
Net profit for period	$ 535,088.10

Figures estimating the cash receipts of the RKO parent company for 1940 at $375,000 and current expenses at $400,000 were submitted Thursday, June 20th, to Federal Judge William Bondy, in New York, in a joint affidavit of O. R. McMahon and Garrett Van Wagner, assistant treasurers of RKO. The estimated totals, which refer only to the holding company and not to operating subsidiaries, was filed to obtain a drastic cut of final allowances in the parent company's reorganization proceedings.

The new RKO company had a total of $2,092,645 in cash at its inception, the affidavit states. Estimated receipts will be derived mainly from Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corp., RKO Orpheum Corp., Pathe News and the Palace Theatre & Realty Co., it said.

Reorganization Expenses

According to the affidavit, no net amounts of cash are anticipated in 1940 from RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., the producing subsidiary. Current expenses are computed at $150,000 for reorganization expenses aside from fees and $250,000 for salaries, taxes, rentals and other disbursements for the parent company.

The affidavit points out that certain subsidiaries are not allowed by their charters to pay dividends to the holding company and that $769,020 in dividends on preferred stock must be met in 1940 by the holding company. Only K-A-O and Pathe are expected to increase their earnings during the year, the affidavit added.

Some 20,000 direct mail pieces were mailed to Oklahoma City residents calling their attention to the feature pictures booked for Standard theatres in the month. Cooperative advertisements appeared in local newspapers and spot announcements have been used over radio stations KTOK and KOCY.

Little Hope Seen For Mexican Aid

by JAMES LOCKHART
in Mexico City

American distributors in Mexico regard as scant the prospects that the proposition made to President Lazaro Cardenas by the production section of the national motion picture workers union for foreign distributors to come to the aid of the domestic industry will have success. The union claims that the industry here is dying for lack of nourishment and they would like the Government to force foreign distributors to pay 25 per cent of their yearly profits to finance the home industry.

The Plan

Foreign distributors would, under the plan, pay in cash to help Mexican producers, purchase made-in-Mexico pictures or directly produce themselves. The distributors would be permitted to keep the rights to the pictures they finance.

The union said foreign distributors were making between $1,333,333 and $1,666,666 a year in Mexico.

Indications are that Mexico will attain a low water mark in production this year, for the lull that began early in the year has become even more so, and now production is almost at a standstill. This is a presidential year, and it is not expected that there will be much change until after the elections, July 7th.

Financing Film on Disputes

The Mexican Government, it is reported, will finance production of a film by which it intends to demonstrate that Mexico always gets the worst of it in international arbitration of disputes. The case of Clipperton Island, in the Pacific, which the King of Italy, as arbiter, awarded to France, is to be featured. It is to be remembered that Mexico has turned down Secretary of State Cordell Hull's demand for arbitration of the oil dispute.

A Mexican distributor has taken delivery of 20 pictures that were made in Czechoslovakia before that country joined the Hitler circuit. The films were shipped to Mexico from France.

Einfeld Presses Americanism Drive

A plea to spread the gospel of Americanism by talking Americanism to all the people whom they contact was made by Charles Einfeld, Publicity Director for Warner Bros., to managers of the Warner Bros. circuit at a zone meeting in the Blackstone Hotel in Chicago Monday.

"Go out and talk to the leaders in your communities," Einfeld said. "Tell them about Americanism, and above all do all in your power to fight with all facilities at your control the insidious propaganda that is being disseminated in this country today. In this way, and in this way only can we do our part to combat the foreign menace in our midst. Remember," he continued, "if we talk about America and the advantages of being an American, we do our share to insure a permanent American way of living for all of us."

From the Wisconsin managers it was learned that steps to eliminate double features were under way in that state. A majority of exhibitors, it was said, has agreed to eliminate dual bills at the conclusion of the summer season.

SENATORS SNIFF FOR ALIENS IN RADIO, RAKE OVER OLD CBS DEAL

Chief of Counsel for Columbia Broadcasting Answers Charges about Paley Transactions with Paramount

A warning to the Federal Communications Commission to take steps to guarantee that alien and "fifth column" groups do not obtain control of any broadcasting company in the United States was issued by members of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee at a hearing in Washington last week on the nomination, by President Roosevelt, of Thad H. Brown for a second term as one of the commissioners.

Conditions of the sale in 1932 of a half interest in Columbia Broadcasting System owned by Paramount Publix Corporation to certain officers of CBS and to the network were given sharp attention by Senator Charles W. Tobey (Rep., N. H.) who alleged that the CBS finances had been irregularly handled by a half-dozen "insiders." Ralph F. Colin, general counsel for CBS, issued a statement of denial replying to Senator Tobey's charges in behalf of William S. Paley, president of the radio chain, and other officers.

Stock Ownership Unknown

Aliens, under the law, are prohibited from owning more than five percent of the stock of any broadcasting company but the testimony showed that the FCC has not kept watch on stock ownership and does not know who has large blocks of stock.

The FCC, it was reported, did not learn of the CBS-Paramount transaction of 1932 until details were put into the record by its own staff during the radio monopoly hearings last year. Chairman Burton K. Wheeler (Dem., Mon.) asked if any National Broadcasting Company or Radio Corporation of America stock is owned by aliens. Commissioner Brown explained that the Communications Act does not permit alien ownership of more than five per cent of the stock.

"I think that is something the commission should watch very carefully and see that stock doesn't get into the hands of foreign groups," Senator Wheeler declared.

"That is very important," Mr. Brown agreed.

Senator Wheeler said the FCC should ascertain whether holders of broadcasting stock are the actual owners and not a cover for other interests, possibly alien, and severely criticised the commission for its apparent failure to assure itself that the law was being obeyed.

Members of the commission suggested that the Communications Act should be amended to prevent any stock at all falling into the hands of aliens and indicated that such a step might be taken in the near future.

Paramount Deal Traced

Paramount purchased with common stock a half interest in CBS in 1929 and under the terms of the sale it agreed to repurchase its stock at stated periods. In March, 1932 Paramount sold its half interest back to William S. Paley and associates for $5,200,000. Paramount's last payment, $4,036,000, was made the same week the stock was sold back to CBS and its officers.

On the subject of the Paramount deal with CBS and the subsequent ownership of the stock which brought up the alien and "fifth column" question Senator Tobey cited excerpts from the recently published report of the commission's monopoly committee. He asked Mr. Brown why CBS' licenses were renewed after it became known that in 1932, as a result of the purchase of stock owned by Paramount-Publix with funds from the CBS treasury, a half-dozen stockholders profited materially while a dozen minority shareholders were not permitted to participate in the deal.

Senator Tobey named Isaac D. Levy, Leon Levy, Jerome H. Louchheim, Jacob Paley, Samuel Paley and William S. Paley as beneficiaries of the deal, the last-named allegedly making a profit of $1,000,000.

Commissioner Brown explained the FCC had not learned of the transaction until 1939 and further pointed out that the commission felt that nothing could be done about it. He said the FCC was concerned solely with the question of whether a licensee gives proper service and it held that Columbia Broadcasting System was doing so. In this position Mr. Brown was supported by Chairman Wheeler and Senator Matthew M. Neely (Dem., W. Va.), incidentally sponsor of the block-booking and theatre divorcement bills.

Denied by Counsel

The answer to Senator Tobey's charges was made for CBS in New York by Ralph F. Colin, the network's general counsel. He said, "Charges made by Senator Tobey with reference to transactions in 1932 by William S. Paley, president of CBS, and other directors of the company are false. I acted as counsel for Mr. Paley and the other stockholders of CBS in 1932 transactions and I am personally familiar with all of the facts. Senator Tobey's charges result either from the deliberate and malicious intent to injure Mr. Paley and his associates, and CBS, or from ignorance of the facts and rash statements despite such ignorance."

Mr. Colin explained, "In 1932 half of the CBS stock, 63,250 shares, was owned by Paramount Publix Corporation and the other half of the stock was owned by fewer than 30 individuals." Individual CBS stockholders who owned more than 95 percent of the stock which was not owned by Paramount bought 49,094 shares of the stock at $82.21 a share, he continued. CBS at the same time bought for its own treasury the remaining 14,156 shares of CBS stock held by Paramount at the same price per share. Mr. Colin said, "Senator Tobey is in error in stating that the stock at that time had a market value of only $35 per share. At that time the stock was not dealt in on any market and accordingly it had no 'market value.'"

Mr. Colin continued by explaining that 24,328 of the shares purchased by the individuals from Paramount were resold to a syndicate at the same price per share. He concluded:

"Neither Mr. Paley alone nor in association with his directors used a single dollar of company funds for their own personal benefit. Company funds were used to reacquire its own stock for its own treasury and the wisdom of that acquisition has been proven by the fact that the stock acquired even at present depreciated market values, is now worth many times the price paid for it. And the profit made by Mr. Paley and his associates has resulted from their efforts on behalf of the company and the increase by reason thereof in the value of its stock over the value at the time of their original investment."

NBC Statement Questioned

In addition to his charges in the CBS matter at the hearing Senator Tobey questioned Mr. Brown on NBC transactions. Again referring to the FCC monopoly committee report Senator Tobey pointed out that it showed that the National Broadcasting Company had a $1,171,763 loss on bad financial investments not connected with broadcasting. When Mr. Brown could not explain how those losses were incurred, the Senator demanded that details be furnished for the record.

The Senator then took up the question of high-priced transfers of stations and called attention to the fact that NBC paid Col. Frank Knox, appointed by President Roosevelt last week to be Secretary of the Navy, and the Chicago Daily News, $625,000 for a half interest in station WMAQ, whose physical properties were valued at $44,726.

Commissioner Brown explained that the excess over the physical property valuation was undoubtedly good-will, circulation and other intangibles, and called attention to the fact that the legal division of the FCC had rendered an opinion that the commission could not withhold approval of a transfer simply because the consideration seemed unreasonable.

Also at the hearing Senator Tobey attacked Mr. Brown for his testimony regarding a fracas a year ago at the "Golden Horseshoe" in New York. Details of what he described as a trivial incident were given by Commissioner T. A. M. Craven who, with Commissioner Brown and Norman S. Case, was at the cabaret, where the group met a party entertained by Donald Flamm of station WMCA. At the close of the hearing Senator Tobey again assailed Mr. Brown, declaring that in his judgment he was not entitled to confirmation for a second term on the FCC.

Following the hearing the Senate held an executive session but failed to reach any decision and postponed the matter until after July 1st. Despite Senator Tobey's objections, it was reported in Washington that the President's reappointment of Mr. Brown would be approved.

My Love Came Back

(Warner Brothers)

Comedy of Situation

Olivia de Havilland's first film since "Gone With the Wind," made a Hollywood preview audience forget war and the Republican convention for 85 minutes on Monday night to laugh repeatedly and applaud performances and situations which have in them no hint of world conditions or problems. A film that can do this is a hit by current Hollywood computations.

Walter Reisch's story adapted by three screen playwrights has to to do with a girl violin student studying at an academy on a scholarship which an elderly patron secretly pads, with principally kindly motives, and of the complications which ensue when his business associate, who shares the secret, falls in love with the girl. Later on the patron's son and daughter also learn of it. All three draw their own conclusions and proceed accordingly. The plot is of the kind the continental producers make sordid, but this treatment is not.

Music has part in the picture, classic and swing varieties coming into conflict, but it is not a musical in the accepted use of the term. It is a comedy of situation, produced by Wolfgang Reinhardt and directed by Kurt Bernhardt, and the performances of Miss de Havilland, Eddie Albert, Charles Winninger, William Orr and S. Z. Sakall elicited particular approval from the preview crowd.

Previewed at Warners' Hollywood theatre to the most uniformly pleased and generously applausive audience recently recruited in the production community—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

Cross Country Romance

(RKO)

Trailer Romance

Exploitable as marking the return of Gene Raymond to pictures, likewise as a comedy without burden or significance of any kind to detract from amusement, this Cliff Reid production starts in New York, heads west through Omaha to Salt Lake City, back to Omaha, west again to 'Frisco and off aboard ship China bound. All but the last lap are negotiated by motor-drawn trailer, in and out of which a masquerading heiress and a young man devoted to medical research encounter adventures of one kind and another, run-of-road variety, ending their journey married.

The film, which reminds of "It Happened One Night" without duplicating it, is from a novel by Eleanor Browne prepared for screen by Jerry Cady and Bert Granet. Frank Woodbury directed.

Millionaires in Prison

(RKO Radio)

Comedy

RKO's "Millionaires in Prison" tells of the regeneration of five millionaire convicts, brought about by another convict played by Lee Tracy, who is the advisor of the institution's inmates. Heavy stress is laid on comedy, virtually none on romance. Almost 95 percent of the action takes place within the walls of the prison.

Howard Benedict was the associate producer, under Lee Marcus. Ray McCarey directed from a screenplay by Lynn Root and Frank Fenton, who adapted a Martin Mooney story.

Supporting Tracy are Raymond Walburn, Morgan Conway, Truman Bradley, Virginia Vale, Cliff Edwards, Paul Guilfoyle, Thurston Hall and Chester Clute.

Untamed

(Paramount)

North Woods Melodrama

Showmen who hold with the theory that a public surrounded by heat, humidity and the discomforts associated with same are of a mind to flock to the theatre which offers them escape into the opposite variety of climate have here (release date is July 26th) a film as full of snow and ice and gale, dog sledges and snowshoes, as any provided in years—and in Technicolor.

Equipped with such names as Ray Milland, Patricia Morrison and Akim Tamiroff for billing purposes, the production is by Paul Jones with George Archainbaud directing. Sinclair Lewis' name is a billing factor available also, the work deriving from his novel, "Mantrap," by way of the screen play by Frederick Hazlitt Brennan and Frank Butler.

Author Lewis' novel was a treatment of the so-known eternal triangle, heroine of which was of a temperament and disposition suggesting the title. The present version has had the corners of the triangle adjusted for general attendance purposes and the girl is now the young wife of a North Woods guide as heroic and noble as the young city doctor with whom she falls in love and vice versa.

Nobility characterizes the principals throughout, death of the guide solving the romantic equation suitably following heroic bringing of needed medicines to a stricken community.

Naval Melodrama

Naval melodrama is, in general, sure fire entertainment fodder for the picturehouse patron. This British specimen, which has as generous a measure of action and thrills as the fruitiest, has the added factor that it is set against a background of the present war. Its conviction is assisted by the collaboration of the British Admiralty.

The work of the British Navy in convoying the merchantmen of the seven seas is dramatized with a personal yarn to give it flavor. Submarine attacks, aircraft defense, and a particularly well staged fight between a German warship and a British cruiser, are included. There is a plethora of shot and shell and an absence of flagwaggery and bombast.

Clive Brook who is called upon to be little more than Clive Brook in a Captain's cap is the main character in the personal yarn which is about a naval captain and a junior officer who, having previously walked off with his wife, is then drafted to his ship. With a most unorthodox and mutinous chivalry the lieutenant dispatches a destroyer and a seaplane to save her from death by torpedo but eventually expiates all his social and service errors by losing his life under circumstances of extreme heroism during a battle.

The film was very warmly received in London by a hot afternoon trade show audience who gave it enthusiastic applause at the close. There was recognition of the fact that if it exploited the war it did so in the interests of entertainment without stressing any particular horror.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

Wagons Westward

(Republic)

Western Melodrama

Using the Cain and Abel theme Lew Landers has taken the original story by Joseph Moncure March and Harrison Jacobs and has produced another hard fighting, swift riding western melodrama.

Of prime importance is the exploitation value of the cast headed by Chester Morris who plays the dual role of twin brothers, one a law-enforcing government agent, the other a murdering stage coach robber. Anita Louise is the dance hall girl in love with the law-breaking brother and Ona Munson plays the role of her sister. In supporting roles are Buck Jones as the politically influenced and racketeering sheriff, George "Gabby" Hayes as the constant companion of the government agent, and "Big Boy" Guinn Williams as an outlaw.

"Tom Cook," an outlaw leader, is captured by a government agent. In an effort to round up the rest of the gang "Tom's" twin brother is sent to pose as the outlaw. Their resemblance is so great that he is able to return and take over the leadership of the gang and not until the climax of the picture does the gang realize they have been tricked.

Stagecoach War

(Sherman-Paramount)

Western

Up to par with the best of Harry Sherman's Hopalong Cassidy productions for Paramount release, "Stagecoach War" is a historical western, laid, unlike many previous offerings, in the era before the railroads cut through the West. The film has more action, a more substantial story and more music, aptly interpolated, than many of the previous Cassidys.

With William Boyd, MOTION PICTURE HERALD-FAME exhibitors' poll money making western star number two, again playing the lead, and being supported again by Russell Hayden and Britt Wood, the picture's cast includes Julie Carter, Harvey Stephens, J. Farrell MacDonald, Rad Robinson, The King's Men and others. Lesley Solander directed from a screenplay by Norman Houston and Harry F. Olmsted, based on the familiar Clarence E. Mulford characters. Joseph W. Engel was associate producer.

Hot Steel

(Universal)

Romantic Melodrama

Blending romance and action Universal has produced another in the Richard Arlen-Andy Devine series, this time a melodrama of the steel industry with Peggy Moran and Anne Nagel in supporting romantic roles.

Under the directorial guidance of Christy Cabanne the story is told in and around a giant steel mill where the stars have roles of furnace men.

"Frank Stewart" (Richard Arlen) discovers a new steel formula and the plant manager uses strong arm methods to secure the invention for himself. Anne Nagel portrays the part of "Rita Martin," the flirtatious wife of a steel maker who is killed under circumstances which bring about "Stewart's" arrest. Eventually "Stewart" proves his innocence and wins the hand of "Bebe Morrison" (Peggy Moran).

Ben Pivar was associate producer and William Sickner was in charge of photography.

Private Affairs

(Universal)

Comedy and Romance

"Private Affairs" is anything but private and the accent is on comedy. Its general outline concerns the "black sheep" of a Boston Back Bay family who returns to Boston in a business way after some 20 years as a board boy in a New York brokerage house. His return brings to the fore the old family conflict in both a business and social sense for his daughter is also about to become a "black sheep" by marrying out of her social strata. The mood is light and the comedy lighter.

The "black sheep" are played by Roland Young and Nancy Kelly. Abetting these two are Hugh Herbert, who plays a Scotch taxi driver and Young's valet in the Herbert manner, but subdued. Cummings is a young lawyer and suitor of Miss Kelly. On the other side of the fence are Montague Love, head of the "Bullerton" family, Herbert Stanley, wealthy but dullish socialite and, of course, Back Bay in general.

"Amos Bullerton," looking every inch a gentleman, but only a board boy on Wall Street is visited by his daughter, who lives with her grandfather in Boston. She is engaged to a socialite, but loves "Jimmy Nolan." Through his daughter, "Amos" meets a stock operator who hires him to run his Boston branch.

With a cab driver who has attached himself to the party "Amos" arrives in Boston but the "Bullerton" name fails to improve the stock business. With the operator becoming impatient "Amos" and "Jane" throw a party and by a ruse old "Noble Bullerton" attends. The stock business booms but "Amos" learns that "Gilkin" plans to flood the market with a certain stock to weaken the price. "Amos" connives with "Angus," "Jane" and "Jimmy" to keep "Gilkin" from reaching New York, which results in a whirlwind comedy climax and a happy ending.

The Leopard Men of Africa

(Select Attractions)

"Believe It or Not" Exposé

The macabre title of this screen expedition derives from the discovery of a strange cult of the Dark Continent which makes a fetish of the spotted cat native to that land. The practitioners ape the object of their devotion in their dress and manner, and carrying the comparison to extremes, the black savages cultivate an appetite for human flesh.

A printed foreword to the film explains that, because of the nature and difficulty of much of the filming, an enacted reproduction of the proceedings had to be manufactured instead of photographing the original in its natural setting. Exhibitors, handling the subject, should find a plentiful supply of combustible showmanship cues in retailing this "believe it or not" account. Gory scenes of human torture and encounters with animal killers lift the film above the children's hour classification.

The expedition is headed by Dr. Paul L. Hoefler, whose previous African adventures found film publicity in "Africa Speaks." The perils that befall the Doctor's party as it proceeds in its search for the "leopard men of Africa" would seem to be clippings from a chapter play including encounters with wild beasts and equally uncongenial natives, a plague of locust, a landslide and an earthquake. Familiar sequences of wild animal life and drum beating and dancing natives follow routine lines of newsreel reporting.

Land of the Six Guns

(Monogram)

Western

The illegal transportaion of cattle from Mexico to the U. S. serves as the theme for this Jack Randall western. The cattle cross the border through a tunnel that has its outlet on property bought by Randall and he is accused when the process is discovered. Trapping the gang responsible and turning them over to the sheriff becomes Randall's problem.

Supporting Randall are Glen Strange as his pal "Manny," Louise Stanley, George Chesebro, Steve Clark, Frank La Rue and Kenneth Duncan. The film was directed by Raymond K. Johnson from an original screen play by Tom Gibson.

The film has several fist fights with Randall as one of the participants each time and a general gun battle at the climax.

Dr. Christian Meets the Women

(RKO Radio)

Quackery in River's End

Exploitation addressed to the feminine side and promising that this picture exposes fake weight-reduction practices is indicated procedure in behalf of this Stephens-Lang production in the Dr. Christian series, generally pronounced best of the sequence by Hollywood preview witnesses. (If one of these may speak parenthetically for himself, off the record, he'll tell the men among you that the film gives voice to your views on the subject.)

In this number the ladies of River's End go in for reduction, by diet, pill and exercise, under direction of a traveling "professor" who operates, with two assistants, on a racket basis. Illness follows, caused by the treatments, and when "Dr. Christian" attempts to expose the racketeer the ladies decline to listen. Near-death of one of them, plus the physician's discovery that the racketeer has been dispensing a drug legally obtainable only by prescription, brings the village back to normal state.

The screen play is an original by Marion Orth, William Stephens producing and William McGann directing.

The Last Alarm

(Monogram)

Tracking Down the "Firebug"

Fire eaters, both professional and amateur, should sit up in their theatre chairs with active tension, as the sound of the sirens screams through the sequences of this tidy, exciting thriller. Concerned with fire fighters, each reel of the film answers to the alarm call and through the clever clipping of newsreel shots the spectator slides down the firehouse poll into action and goes zooming through the streets at a whirlwind pace.

J. Farrell MacDonald, veteran character actor, plays the principal part of fireman number one, and not only proves his worth to the department in detecting a dangerous firebug but gives a simple and sympathetic portrayal as well. Polly Ann Young, looking unmistakingly like her more famous sister, and Warren Hull enact a sub-plot of romance. William West has given the proceedings a directional pace that matches the nature of the narrative.

"Jim Hadley" is retired from the fire force because of age regulation but gets back into harness when his best friend, who is also ready for retirement, loses his life in a blaze begun by a lunatic pyromaniac. With the assistance of his daughter and her fiancee, an investigator for a fire insurance company, "Hadley" tracks down the "firebug." The reward for this service is "Jim's" nomination as honorary fire chief and the satisfaction of knowing that he is again needed for useful work.

(Vitaphone)

Creditable Color Parade

A quartet of scientific sequences is combined into an entertaining and instructive whole for this newest reading of Mechanix Illustrated. The opening item concerns airports and particularly the new New York airdrome, La-Guardia Field. Explained in detail are the various devices to insure safe and sane field landings for the ships. Following this are some glimpses of modern streamlined designing from trains down to refrigerators. Another topic, and the most detailed and interesting one of the collection, is the footage devoted to an inspection of various devices used to test manufacturers' product for the sake of consumer protection. Final item in the Mechanix material is a demonstration of the latest method of utilizing in fire fighting the waterless, frozen air extinguisher.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Interesting Oddities

that he can sketch blindfolded, an enterprising family from the middle west with a talent for turning ordinary sea shells into attractive knick-knacks and a hobbyist whose passion is the manufacture of tiny wagons. Although the material is predominantly mechanical in nature, the displays are all of the out of the ordinary interest and should be of particular interest to hobby clubs.—Running time, nine minutes.

Going Places, No. 78
(Universal)
Curacao, Port of Call

The picturesque insular spot, Curacao, is the port of call in this newest travel trek from the Going Places excursions. In addition to the usual sightseeing experiences, the journey to the Dutch possession in the Carribean section of the Western Hemisphere becomes important from the international viewpoint in view of the fate of the island's mother country, Holland, as the commentary ominously points out. Besides the political motif, visit material includes sights and sounds of the island's harbor life, contrasting views of old and new world modes of living and a brief view of governmental and judicial procedure in Curacao. Splendid camera work enhances the importance of the miniature.—Running time, nine minutes.

Swingin' in the Barn
(Universal)
Rustic Musical

Audiences with a liking for a well seasoned display of vaudeville turns, with everything but trained seals, should find this demonstration of talent much to their collective liking. The numbers include a cracker box musical ensemble, a cowboy tenor, a swing quartet of vocalizing sisters, a hill billy soprano, an acrobatic team, a pair of rope twirlers and a background of dancing boys and girls. The acts are all talented in their own fields and when put together on the same bill the collection makes for a diversified and fastly paced program.—Running time, 19 minutes.

Bringing It Home
(Strand Film - Anglo American)
War Documentary

Sponsored by an established British cocoa and chocolate firm this concise and vigorous effort uses the short subjects field to trace a pattern of the work of the British Navy in convoying merchantmen and bringing in the nation's food. It is a stirring and quietly noble little film, with both persuasiveness and spectacular sweep in it. The shipboard passages, taken on a destroyer on duty, have the tang of the sea about them. The sponsorship is quite unnoticeable save in the main lead and Patric Curwen's commentary has a friendly flavor. A sound subject for audiences both sides of the Atlantic.—Running time 20 minutes.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

Zooland Shoulders Arms
(Clive Films - Ace Distributors)
Animal Novelty Featurette

This is an animal film with a difference. Its director-producer Widgey Newman, ardent zoologist, has translated the London Zoo and its fauna into a wartime fantasy. Animals are, in general, safe entertainment pabulum for every brand of audience and the animals here, a wide range, from the better known elephant and lion to the blinturong and the okapi, are both interesting and appealing. There are some amusing passages from animals which are natural comickers. There is no reason why its appeal should be limited to its country of origin.

Center of the nonsense is a precocious chimpanzee, yclept George, who organizes his fellows in the Zoo on a wartime basis. There are radio appeals from George, the Parrot House cast as the Ministry of Information, high pitched interjections from the maribou stork, a herd of mountain goats as an armored flying column, the penguin as ARP warden, and so forth. It is all good natured, inconsequential and effervescent, completely without subtlety, but refreshing whimsy for all that.

The camera work of John Miller seems to have been most painstaking and W. J. Trytel's musical background is pleasant.

Shown in London to an exclusive audience which included H. G. Wells, Lord Asquith, the president of the CEA, a distinguished gossip columnist and but three or four trade critics, the film was obviously accepted without effort or pawky criticisms, kept the assembly on its toes even after a repast which had included homard a l'Americaine, Caneton d'Aylesbury and strawberry melba.—A. F.

A Clive Picture. Distributed by Ace Distributors, Ltd. Written, produced and directed by Widgey R. Newman. Camera, John Miller. Music, W. J. Trytel. Running time, when seen in London, 38 minutes. General audience classification.

HOLLYWOOD ON MARITAL STATE

Hollywood, through the medium of its personalities and its various and myriad publicity corps, has expressed its collective opinion on most matters on every available opportunity. Columbia's "Too Many Husbands" is shortly to be followed by "He Stayed for Breakfast" and Warner Brothers add "The Bridegroom Misbehaves" and "My Love Came Back" in addition to its earlier "Four Wives".

Completing the roundup on marriage, marqueewise, are Universal's "Honeymoon Deferred", "First Love" and "I'm Nobody's Sweetheart Now".

A NEW UNIVERSAL PICTURE

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

(Notes on this page were mailed from London June 13th. Both the Paramount and RKO home offices in New York said on Wednesday that production plans announced by Mr. Rose and Mr. Sistrom were still in effect as of that moment.)

Carry On

David Rose, managing director of Paramount, declares that as far as British production is concerned, he is adopting Herbert Morrison's slogan: "Go to it!" He is determined to carry on with making films in this country to the fullest extent possible, and he is now completing plans to make British pictures on a big scale.

"We have a valuable industry," says Mr. Rose, "and we want to protect it as much as possible. We certainly cannot protect it by closing down on activity. It is not only a question of money, but of policy. Paramount will go ahead on production here and if we are half way through a film and it is destroyed—well, it seems likely that a lot of other things will be destroyed at the same time, and we shall all be affected alike."

One of the first of these pictures will be "Hatter's Castle." A. J. Cronin's initial novel. This is to be made for Paramount release at the Worton Hall Studios, Hounslow. Production starts immediately.

I. Goldsmith, producer of Cronin's "The Stars Look Down," is to act in a similar capacity.

He has as associate on "Hatter's Castle" Jim Williams, who was responsible for the script of the earlier film.

William Sistrom, executive producer who is to be responsible for RKO Radio's recently announced British line-up, is due in this country from New York.

Mr. Sistrom's programme, includes one or more features starring Danielle Darrieux, one or more Michele Morgan productions, and the making of the remainder of the "Saint" series in Great Britain. The producer delayed his return to this country in order to finalize details on story material and technical matters pertaining to the new features. Each of the new productions will be made on a scale to warrant world distribution.

With the recovery from illness of Clive Brook work has now recommenced vigorously on "Freedom Radio" which Mario Zampi is producing and Anthony Asquith directing at Sound City for Columbia release. Brook's leading lady and co-star is Diana Wynyard.

Meanwhile concern is felt at the possible effect of the intervention of Italy into the war, an the Two Cities Unit. Not only is Zampi Italian, but so are a considerable number of his staff. So far—three days after Italy coming in—none have been interned.

TITLE CHANGES ON WAR THEME FILMS

Because of adverse box office reaction to titles indicating war pictures, Twentieth Century-Fox and Republic have announced title changes. The former has changed "I Married a Nazi" to "The Man I Married," and Republic has changed "The Refugee" to "Three Faces West."

Republic also has decided to turn out light entertainment in view of the war news. The studio has temporarily shelved "Lady from New Orleans," heavy drama, as its next big film, and will make "Hit Parade of 1940."

Formby on Cycle

One of George Formby's earliest successes was in a motor cycling comedy, "No Limit," which was written around the International Tourist Trophy races which used to be held annually in the Isle of Man. Now Britain's Box Office Champion Number One, revives his old love in "Spare a Copper" in which he is a war reserve policeman.

The film calls for much motor cycling and includes not only speedway races but a "wall of death" sequence. Formby who is an ardent motor cyclist will "do his stuff" in earnest in the film. John Paddy Carstairs directs and Michael Balcon is producer for Ealing Studios.

Fyffe as Captain

After an extended spell filming on the Mediterranean seaboard, the Gainsborough unit which has been shooting background material for "Neutral Port," has returned to London. Much suitable material was secured, mainly in and around the harbour and dockside, but the worsening of the war situation made the latter period difficult. Work is now in full swing in the studio where a dockside setup has been built to match the location passages.

Will Fyffe stars as captain of a ship which is torpedoed by the Germans and who in revenge takes over and navigates a German vessel. With him in the film are Hugh McDermott, Dennis Wyndham, Wally Patch, Leslie Banks, Yvonne Arnaud and Phyllis Calvert. Marcel Varnel directs.

Pascal in Devon

Back from the rustic county of Devon, where they have been shooting exteriors, the Pascal unit making Shaw's "Major Barbara," has gone on location in London. A lesser unit has been shooting in Sheffield, Yorks.

In Devon, Pascal used Dartington Hall as an extended location. The Hall which is a modern school run on community lines, and one of the outstanding social and educational enterprises in Britain, has all that might be looked for in filming the social experiment conceived by Shaw. It has a farm, timber mills, workshops, textile factories, lime washed cottages, etc. Many evacuee children from London are stationed there.

Wendy Hiller, Robert Morley, Marie Lohr, David Tree, and others were "shot" there by cameraman Freddie Young.

Stuart Life

Shooting is now concluded on Jack Raymond's film life of Leslie Stuart, "You Will Remember" which he has been making at Worton Hall for Grand National release. The film was shot "back to front" in order to release Robert Morley and Emlyn Williams as soon as practicable. Scenes depicting the childhood of the twain were the last to be shot.

The Stuart film will be followed almost immediately by "The Man Who Lost Himself" in which Leslie Howard will be the star.

Elsewhere, at the Twickenham Studios, another Grand National picture is being made,—"Under Your Hat" in which Cicely Courtneidge and Jack Hulbert are translating their stage success into film terms. Maurice Elvey directs.

RKO Near East Company

The new RKO Near East Company has been granted a corporate charter by Delaware, capitalization being $10,000, par $100. Listed as the company's principal office is the Prentice-Hall, Inc., at Dover, in that state; and listed as the company's incorporators are Robert H. Dann, of Scarsdale, New York; George Mucknic, Long Island; and Gordon E. Youngman, New York.

Armour to Portugal

Reginald Armour, European manager for RKO, plans to establish new headquarters in Lisbon, Portugal. Mr. Armour, who has been in the United States for home office conferences and to attend the RKO annual sales convention, left for Lisbon, last week. His headquarters heretofore have been in Paris.

British Abandon Purchase Tax for Admissions Levy

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

The Cinematograph Exhibitors Association after a lengthy discussion Tuesday, decided against additional taxation in the form of a purchase tax. It is expected the chief form of the tax will be an increased theatre duty. The group abandoned the idea of a percentage of receipts on the ground that it would perpetuate the present rental situation.

A subcommittee has been appointed to continue a study of the most practicable arrangements for an increased admissions scale. The organization is expected to advise the Government of its fear that exhibitors are unable to bear any further financial burdens. No legislative action is likely until after July.

The Customs and Excise representative, Sir Wilfred Eady hearing the industry argument against the tax, an argument propounded on economic as well as ethical grounds, asked the delegation if they would suggest an alternative. This was politely but forcefully declined presumably on the grounds that an alternative would be tantamount to an admission of justification. But it was made equally clear that any scheme involving the exemption of set admission increases from the theatre tax would be impossible.

Economic Complications

So, too, did the industry delegation emphasize the economic complications of the theatre tax which helped kill Simon's excise tax. It explained how the sixpenny seat, at present tax free, would have to be raised in order to pay the distributor the extra charged by him to pay the purchase tax. Because the tax on seats above sixpence starts at three halfpence, the exhibitor would be compelled to put up the price to eightpence in order to recoup a halfpenny to help pay the tax. And so on up the admission scale. In any case an increase would kill trade for the public would not pay the increase. Already cinemas on the south and east Coast of England have dropped over seventy-five percent of their revenue. And they will not be the only ones affected. It is true that in some districts picture houses are flourishing, but conditions vary and no generalization can be justified—certainly no generalization of tax imposition.

Inevitable Increases

Admission increases however are probably inevitable in the near future. It is clear they will be subject to the entertainments tax and to any other taxes imposed by the Treasury. Kenneth Nyman—out of the fight since March, on account of serious illness—has offered a formula which he considers would so reorganize the industry as to make survival possible. He suggests a shilling minimum admission for all first run houses, that bars which operate on distant halls on a first run basis should be relaxed, and that in return for this first run house relaxation of distance bars, subsequent run halls should have the time bars extended to three months or more.

Nyman believes the public will pay more to see what they cannot see elsewhere for months, and that the later run houses will be able to avoid flops and thus increase their business. The distributor would benefit accordingly.

LEE SEES NO CANADIAN MOVE

Reports that leaders of England's film production were contemplating transferring the British industry to Canada in the face of the war, are beginning to show little basis of fact. Alexander Korda, one of London's "key" producers, will continue producing in Hollywood, despite stories of his interest in developing a British industry in the Dominion.

Arthur Lee, for years a distributor of British pictures in the U. S., returned to activity this week, in New York, as U. S. representative of Associated Talking Pictures and Grand National Pictures, Ltd., both of London. He said "The majority of England's producers are not contemplating a move to Canada." They will continue producing in London despite such handicaps as may arise, he added.

Dismiss Complaint Against Trailer Firms

William Mancuso's $250,000 damage and monopoly suit against a number of accessory firms was dismissed Tuesday in New York Supreme Court. Justice Peter Schmuck ruled, however, that the plaintiff might amend his complaint and renew the suit.

Defendants were National Screen Accessories, Inc., National Screen Company, Inc., Exhibitors' Poster and Supply Company, Inc., Advertising Accessories, Inc., Charles Casanave, Harry Schlitt, Samuel Braum, and Herman Robbins.

Mr. Mancuso had charged a monopoly of trailer services in New England, and alleged a breach of contract with the American Display Corporation, in which he was to receive 15 per cent of proceeds of that company's sale to Advertising Accessories.

Warner Patriotic Programs

The entire Warner Brothers Theatre circuit will play one of the company's patriotic two-reel color subjects in their July 4th programs, Joseph Bernhard, general manager of the circuit, said this week. The list of subjects, from which the theatres will select their programs, are: "Give Me Liberty," "The Song of a Nation," "Declaration of Independence," "The Man Without a Country," "The Romance of Louisiana," "Sons of Liberty," "Lincoln in the White House," "Under Southern Stars," "Bill of Rights," "The Monroe Doctrine," "Old Hickory" and "Teddy the Roughrider." The playing of the "Star-Spangled Banner" is a part of the daily program in all Warner theatres.

Muth in Madrid

Russell Muth, Movietone News European director, who had headquarters in Paris, is in Madrid lining up the newsreel's coverage in the Spanish zone. William Murray, stationed at The Hague, who was not heard from in 10 weeks has reached Amsterdam.

Downing in New Post

John A. Downing, RKO home office representative, has been appointed office manager of the Boston exchange of which Ross Cropper is manager.

Million-Dollar Industry War Effort in Canada

A wide campaign has been launched by the film industry in Canada to raise a $1,000,000 fund through the sale of 25 cent war savings stamps in lieu of admissions to all theatres throughout Canada for a special performance Monday night, July 15th, at 10 P. M. The drive is sponsored by the Canadian Picture Pioneers.

Entire Industry Cooperating

The special performance was originally scheduled for Sunday, July 14th, but was changed to avoid a controvery with the church, ministers having questioned the advisability of the Sunday show, even for patriotic reasons.

J. J. Fitzgibbons, vice-president of Famous Players Canadian Corporation and O. R. Hanson, president of Empire-Universal Films, Ltd., were in Hollywood this week to obtain active cooperation of producers and stars.

The general campaign is in the hands of W. M. Gladish. Clair Hague, head of the Pioneers, is vice-chairman of the campaign.

Films furnished without cost by the U. S. industry in keeping with the promise made by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America to N. L. Nathanson, president of Famous Players Canadian, last week, will be used for the special performances.

Benefits Held

A benefit show was held June 20th in the Orpheum theatre, Vancouver, B. C., for the aid of Vancouver's Air Supremacy Drive. The goal of the drive is the purchase of 10 training planes for the Royal Canadian Air Force. Total receipts from the show were turned over to the fund. Theatre, electricity, stage performers, orchestra, usherettes, doormen, stage and engineering crews all contributed their services.

The gross receipts at the Empire, St. John, N. B., for one full day, June 20th, were contributed to the Imperial Order, Daughters of the Empire Bomber Fund. Included were receipts for tickets bought June 20th but not delivered until later. The fund is being raised to buy and equip a giant bombing plane for use in defending England, Wales and Scotland.

Members of the Toronto Operators Union have offered their services to the Canadian Government in any technical capacity for which they are fitted in the war effort without remuneration in their spare time.

A committee of the Toronto local of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees has been organized for the national service.

Realign Circuit Divisions

The Rocky Mountain division of National Theatres, of which Rick Ricketson is manager with headquarters in Denver, has taken over Fox West Coast operations in Butte, Great Falls, Lewistown and Billings in Montana. Under the new setup, the division is now a single unit from Mexico to Canada. Hall Baetz has been appointed Salt Lake City district manager, taking over territories formerly supervised by Fred Glass and Dick Dickson. Mr. Glass has returned to Denver as assistant to Mr. Ricketson while Mr. Dickson has returned to Southern California.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

A FEW WEEKS before Hitler's hordes marched into Paris, this department reported that an enterprising exhibitor in Paris, faced, like all others, with empty balconies—as provided by government regulation to prevent balcony casualties from air raids—placed life-sized wax dummies of famous persons of old and contemporary history in the balcony seats to give the appearance of full capacity. The idea must have spread.

Just before the Nazi soldiers bombed and later occupied Paris, word arrived in New York that other French exhibitors were buying wax dummies and using them in their theatres.

The manager of one Paris cinema, perturbed because there was a decided falling off in customers, decided he would have to do something about it.

He tried running double features and even hired a doorman and dressed him in an Admiral's uniform, but although the new employe ballyhooed the film attractions loud and long he didn't pull in many extra customers.

If there was just some way he could fill up his theatre, so this manager thought, everyone would think his show-place was very popular, and human nature being what it is, would want to get in. Even dummies would help out and that gave him an idea.

He scoured the second-hand shops of which Paris has thousands and was lucky enough to find a set of human replicas that had seen better days in a wax-works. He offered a flat price for the lot and carted them back to the theatre. Without tipping off any of his customers he sat the figures about the theatre in strategic positions so anyone standing at the back would think they were regular patrons intently watching the celluloid drama unwind. He hoped the rumor would get out that his theatre was getting more popular.

On the day the dummies went back into public life, so to speak, the manager stood at the back of the theatre to watch the effect.

When the lights went up, one patron was a little surprised to discover that he had been sitting next to Napoleon. The Little Corporal wore the familiar dress uniform and the famous forelock hung down across his forehead.

Another patron was a little miffed because the figure beside him refused to get up and let him by. He peered closer and saw that he had indeed been in distinguished company. The likeness was that of Premier Laval.

Better luck was the lot of the man who discovered he had been sitting beside the distinguished Mistinguette, complete to her beautiful legs.

Even though the first customers were a little shocked, when the cat was out of the bag, it became an amusing game to see whom they'd draw as seat mates. And business was much better. We said business WAS better.

Radio must have its shudders. Featured on the "Johnny Presents" CBS program the other Friday night was a song, "The Pessimistic Character with the Crabapple Face," sung in a sketch called "Callous Corpse."

Anna Bell Ward, of the Kentucky Wards, is a lady who gets around—but gets.

The striking, blonde Anna Bell, who knows Washington on the inside, and the motion picture industry on both inside and outside, is secretary, treasurer and assistant general manager of the Elliott-Ward theatres in the south, of the Nelson Amusement Company, Somerset Amusement Company, Versailles Amusements (which name, we assume, will be altered when Hitler gets around to it), and Sterling Amusement Company, all in Kentucky, and of the Dearborn Theatre Company and Westland Amusements, which reach out into Indiana and Ohio, respectively.

Miss Anna Bell is an author, too, writing about Guatemala, in a book about to be published, and also is in Hollywood production, with George Weeks, in Phoenix Productions, new. She has quite a long finger in Kentucky politics, is noted as a traveler, and only this week became vice president of the Chicago Industrial Gas and Engineering Company, at Chicago. Anna Bell does get around.

Luncheon brought Mr. Wilcox and Mr. Hudson to reminiscing about old mutual friends, with the reminiscing centering for a while around the old First National days. Mr. Hudson asked Mr. Wilcox how Hope Williams might be doing these days, in Mr. Wilcox's native London. "Splendid," replied the Britisher, who then asked about this and that old First National associate of Mr. Hudson's.

NEWSREEL WAR SCENES GET THEATRE ATTENTION

Theatre Operators Take Steps to Determine Audience Preferences on War News

Many exhibitors are finding it advisable to decide whether they should continue war-horror sequences in newsreel releases. Sectionally opinion is divided about as much as general opinion is divided on the position of the country in connection with World War II.

Loewenstein Urges Full Use

The full horror of war as depicted by newsreels will be shown, for example, to the Oklahoma patrons of Morris Loewenstein, of Oklahoma City. Mr. Loewenstein, who also is president of the Oklahoma Theatre Owners, Inc., said it had been the practice of many theatres to cut the reels, but since the national MPTOA protested recently against cutting U. S. war defense newsreel sequences, this has been changed, at least in his territory. "It is being done," he explained, "in order that we may do our part in keeping the public fully informed."

In Texas, the Hoblitzelle-O'Donnell Interstate Circuit will "censor" newsreels, expunging horror-footage at least for the circuit's Majestic, Palace, Rialto, Melba and Mirro theatres in Dallas. The reason: Patrons, mostly women, want escape from the conflict.

In many places of late exhibitors have found it necessary to keep out of newsreels in their theatres scenes of controversial nature. The Ambassador theatre in St. Louis, for example, withdrew portions of a newsreel showing Hitler and Mussolini, following an unexpected demonstration in the audience. At one show, an American Legionnaire attacked a patron in a seat next to him for not joining in the open demonstration against the dictators.

In the Texas-Interstate action, "horror-scenes" will be made available, however, at the Capitol and the Tower, the remaining two of the circuit's local operations. "We have definitely ascertained that most of our patrons, especially women, want complete escape from the war when they attend a movie," explained Raymond Willie, assistant general manager of Interstate in charge of Dallas houses. "At the same time," he added, "we don't want to fail in our public duty. Disturbing as some of the newsreel sequences are, many still want to see the truth."

Light Subjects Wanted

In Des Moines, a study by the Tri-States Circuit shows that the theatregoing public there is showing a definite reaction against heavy dramatic pictures, executives noting an increased demand for lighter subjects in this emergency. The circuit has under way a poll to determine whether patrons want war scenes in newsreels.

Chicago will have an anti-Nazi theatre, sponsored by Herb Elisberg, formerly supervisor of the local Essaness Circuit. On July 1st, he will take over the Sonotone, rename it the Studio and show anti-Nazi and anti-totalitarian foreign subjects.

In an effort to find out what the majority of theatre patrons prefer in regard to showing of war newsreels and special short subjects on fifth columns and on preparedness, the army, navy and air corps activities, Walter B. Shuttee, general manager of Standard Theatres Corporation of Oklahoma City, is taking a poll of audiences.

Girls have been placed in the lobbies of downtown Standard theatres to query patrons as they leave the houses. On the first day of the poll last week, 1,084 answers were secured, from both men and women. The poll was taken between 1 and 5 p. m. and 7 and 10 p. m., thereby getting both matinee and evening patrons' opinions.

"Personally I want to see war newsreels and short subjects pertaining to military activities, but I wondered whether the majority of theatre patrons felt as I did," Mr. Shuttee said. "If the poll, when completed, shows that the majority do not want to see war films we will try to eliminate them or at least cut out the worst part of newsreels so that our theatre patrons can be entertained without the sobering effect of war newsreel shots to offset their entertainment."

The questions asked of patrons are: 1. Do you want to see war scenes in newsreels? and, 2. Do you want to see special short subjects pertaining to fifth column, preparedness, army, navy and air corps activities?

War Scenes Favored

Totals are kept on men and women separately. The first day men voted 144 for and 32 against the showing of war scenes in news reels, a ratio of more than 4 to 1 for. The women voted 216 for and 164 against the showing of war scenes in newsreels, a ratio of about 3.5 for 2.6 against, revealing that women are less in favor of seeing war newsreels than men. On the second question, pertaining to war subjects in shorts, the men voted 134 for and 33 against, maintaining the same ratio as on the newsreel question for the men. The women voted 269 for and 93 against the showing of war subject shorts, a ratio of almost 3 to 1 in favor of them. The figures must be studied in the light of the fact that the number of answers from women were more than twice as many as those from men. There were 742 answers from women and 342 only from men reflecting the predominance of women over men as theatre patrons in Oklahoma City first-run theatres.

In addition to the lobby poll, 1,000 self-addressed one-cent postcards will be distributed to persons on the street and in downtown business places asking the same questions.

Mr. Shuttee said he was of the opinion that some patrons might feel they were obliged to answer "yes" when queried in person in order to not appear "unpatriotic."

NEW YORK OPERATORS MERGER OFF; SETTLE ST. LOUIS 'BLITZKRIEG' STRIKE

Empire Negotiations Abandoned but Circuit Increases Are Won; F. & M. Accedes to Demand for Suit Dismissal

Projectionists' unions in New York and St. Louis starred on the labor news stage this week. The New York Local 306, strongest in the country, unsuccessfully resumed attempts to absorb its rival, the Empire State Operators' Union. Local 306 also began negotiations with members of the Independent Theatre Owners Association on summer wage scale reductions, and secured new wage agreements with the Randforce and Skouras circuits. The St. Louis Local 143 won wage increases and the dropping of a suit against it by the Fanchon & Marco circuit, after closing 27 houses last week with a two day strike.

27 Theatres Closed

Three major theatres of the city, the Fox Ambassador, and Missouri, and 24 neighborhood theatres were closed. Hundreds of patrons at the three large theatres secured refunds.

The operators walked out after F. & M. rejected a demand that its $200,000 damage suit filed last December against eight officers and members of the union and a $75,000 suit against the receivers of the union be dismissed. End of the strike came Friday afternoon June 21st when F. & M. acceded to the demands and also signed new contracts with the union, extending to June 21, 1943, for wage increases.

The suits were the outgrowth of picketing of the F. & M. theatres last winter after the union charged that preference had been shown operators allied with the John P. Nick faction in the union.

Stipulations filed by the company in the courts in St. Louis not only provided that the two damage suits be dismissed, but that two injunction suits enjoining the union from picketing the theatres also be dismissed.

The new wage contract calls for a 5 per cent wage increase for the operators, effective September 1st, a two and one-half per cent increase the second year and another similar raise the third year. The latter increases are to be effective only if other St. Louis theatres also grant it.

Shutdown Threatened

Coincident with the operators' strike against the circuit, there came last week an announcement from Fred Wehrenberg, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of St. Louis, that the 65 members of the association might have to close their theatres this summer because of poor business, and a wage dispute with the union. He asserted that his own chain of 25 houses in the neighborhoods had given the operators their required two weeks' notice.

The association has asked the union for a horizontal reduction of $10 per week. The union has a contract until September 1st, wages under it varying from $45 to $75 per week, according to house size.

The union has said it would accept a five per cent reduction during the summer, if it could be assured of a new three year contract with the association's members, to take effect after September 1st. The new contract, it was said, would provide for restoration of the summer slash, and would grant three annual wage increases, similar to those in the Fanchon and Marco agreement.

Merger negotiations between the New York Local 306, projectionists' union and the Empire State Motion Picture Operators' Union, its only rival, have been temporarily abandoned. The Local 306 for some time has been trying to absorb its rival. Abraham I. Kindler, president of Empire, said that his union in September might acquire contracts with 40 independent theatres now employing Local 306 members. Changes in the ownership of these house would overcome the obstacle presented by the long-term contracts which Local 306 holds, it was said.

Local 306 officials last week indicated willingness to consider individual requests by members of the Independent Theatre Owners Association, for wage reductions this summer.

Members of the Local last week approved the new wage scale agreements with the Randforce and Skouras circuits, which provide for a six-year settlement of wage scales, under the present ten-year agreement. A 5 per cent increase is retroactive to September 1939; there is a similar increase set for September, 1941; and a third, also 5 per cent, for September, 1943, to run to the same month in 1945. The agreements also give a two-week vacation with pay.

Petrillo Keeps Post

James Petrillo, elected two weeks ago president of the American Federation of Musicians at its Indianapolis convention, will retain his presidency of the Chicago local. By acclamation, at a special meeting last week, the Chicago local asked Mr. Petrillo to continue.

Another Bioff Plea

William Bioff, leader of the IATSE and other American Federation of Labor studio unions, this week again moved for freedom from the Chicago House of Correction, in which he is serving the remainder of a 1922 six-month jail term.

His attorney, Walker Butler, filed an application in Chicago Criminal Court, for a writ of habeas corpus, charging that the complaint failed to list a legal offense.

AFM Gives Aid to Local 77

The Philadelphia musicians' union, Local 77, was granted an additional $2,500 on Tuesday by the American Federation of Musicians to continue its fight against the Warner Brothers theatre circuit, which is expected to preclude the possibilities of an early settlement of the impasse which started last December. Earlier in the year, the Federation gave the Philadelphia union $7,500 for strike benefits.

U. S. Hears Industry Petition to Exempt White Collar Class from Labor Act

Representatives of the motion picture industry will be given an opportunity to present their views as to the proper definition of executive, professional and administrative jobs under the Fair Labor Standards Acts at a hearing called for this week by Philip B. Fleming, administrator.

At hearings in April the organized industry, through the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, proposed definitions which would exempt from the requirement for payment of time and one-half for overtime thousands of "executive workers who, in addition to other qualifications, receive salaries of at least $50 per week," administrative "employees who receive a minimum of $30 a week" and professionals who are "engaged in work predominantly intellectual" and receive $200 a month or more.

Representatives of the wage-hour division were in Hollywood this month making an investigation of job classifications in the studios, preliminary to the hearing, which will be the last of a series at which the definitions, as applied to various industries, are being reviewed.

When the wage-hour division was first set up, representatives of the producers journeyed to Washington to ask for rulings on some 600 classifications which they contended should be exempt. The former administrator, Elmer F. Andrews, refused to make such rulings and suggested that the producers get together with the unions on classifications.

Definitions issued by Mr. Andrews were so restrictive as to lead to complaints that many jobs were put under the act which should be exempted, leading to a heavy burden in the payment of overtime wages. As a result of those complaints, the administrator agreed to re-open the matter and clarify the definitions.

The Screen Publicists and Advertisers Guild unanimously adopted a resolution condemning the House of Representatives for approving the Smith admendments to the National Labor Relations Act and for adopting "its anti-union stand." The Guild demanded that the Senate "reject all such anti-union legislation now pending or in the future, and that it conduct itself with an eye to the interests of labor, and not to labor's employers."

CIO Reentrance Into Hollywood Scene Is Charged

cisco. Offices of the RCA in the RCA Building, Radio City, New York, and at 64 Broad Street, same city, were picketed. The strike was called by the American Communications Association, a CIO union, after the company, the union charged, refused to renew a contract which expired on June 13th, and after 125 members had been suspended by the company for attending a one half hour meeting last Thursday. The company pressed executives and other employees familiar with the technique of radio transmission, into service this week.

Pickets of the union, parading in front of the RCA Building this week, carried signs which called "Dave" Sarnoff unfair. Mr. Sarnoff is president of the Radio Corporation of America.

Charges CIO Organizing

J. W. Buzzell, vice-chairman of the Conference of American Federation of Labor Studio Unions, executive secretary of the Los Angeles Central Trades and Labor Council, and representative of labor in the negotiations to settle the office workers' strike against the Central Casting Corporation, this week charged that the CIO was "seeking a back door into the film industry" by organizing the Screen Office Employees Guild in the studios.

Studios continued to use their extras in Hollywood this week, despite the office workers strike. Meanwhile, producers' representatives and those of the American Federation of Labor Office Employees Local 20978, which called the strike last Monday night continued to meet almost daily, with the sole point still at issue reported to be the disposition of casting directors, whom the local wishes to include in the office workers' category.

The Screen Actors' Guild notified its members that it recognized the strike at Central Casting, but that it did not recognize a strike at any studio; hence, that extras could walk through any picket lines which the office workers' union would establish at the studios. The union threatened, last week, to picket studios which called extras' home directly.

At the weekend, a tentative agreement had been reported, the producers agreeing to a union shop, and union wages, but still balking at the inclusion of casting directors. J. W. Buzzell, vice-chairman of the Conference of AFL Studio Unions, and executive secretary of the Los Angeles Central Labor Council, represented the union at the negotiations. However, Mrs. Elma Goodwin, president and business representative of the local, said no agreement signed by Mr. Buzzell would stand, unless ratified by the local's membership.

The National Broadcasting Company is reducing its television department. More films and less of the more expensive dramatic shows will be televised and, in connection with the change, engineers are being shifted to other departments while a few of the members of the staff are to be dropped.

BOOK REVIEW

AN INTRODUCTION TO PUBLIC OPINION. By Harwood L. Childs. John Wiley & Sons, Inc., New York. 151 pages. $1.75.

This compact little volume of published lectures by Dr. Childs, who is Associate Professor of Politics at Princeton University, voices discussion material that is as pertinent as any news copy on "Fifth Column" exposes but unfortunately for the general run of readers the Doctor's dissertation lacks the punch of press presentation. Except for two practical chapters on such current discussional topics as the publicity performances of the press agentry divisions of the World's Fair and the propaganda practices of the German government, the greater part of the study is theoretical in nature and handling and smacks of an academic atmosphere.

Although the tone and treatment of the topic of what constitutes public opinion and how it can best be formulated in a democratic environment is cloaked with an aura of professorial dissection, the research, considered in its own field, is a well constructed, reasoned and documented study which should appeal to sociological and philosophical elements of a reading public.

One of the best chapters, if not the most readable in the light of current events, is the study made of the part played by propaganda in the promotion of dictatorial governments, especially the Hitler regime. In considering the more optimistic and beneficial performances of propagandizing, Dr. Childs pays some nice, neat paragraphs of applause for the publicity parade emanating from Flushing Meadows.

The book is supplemented by a good array of notes, selected references and a name and subject index.—Joseph F. Coughlin.

16mm. Service Group Formed

The National Catholic Film Service has begun functioning at 10 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, headed by Dr. Eugene Colligan, former president of Hunter College, New York, and Joseph Durkin, former New York newspaperman.

To Classify Films

The Service will preview all new 16mm. films, beginning Monday; examine all current 16mm. films, publishing the listings, and will offer to various Catholic schools and other institutions specially selected programs in that field. The organization, in effect, will function like the Motion Picture Bureau of the Young Men's Christian Association, in supplying film, and will exercise a scrutiny of 16mm. films as to suitability for the particular audiences, Mr. Durkin pointed out last Monday.

Mr. Durkin is president of the Catholic Writers Guild of America. He has worked on the New York Times, and the old New York Evening World; served for 15 years with the Hearst New York newspapers; was secretary in the New York County District Attorney's office in the regime of Thomas Crain, and recently has been editor of the New York News End Service. Dr. Colligan, in addition to his educational posts, has written several books on education.

Jurisdiction of Court Affirmed In ASCAP Case

The American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers won another legal victory in its long campaign to have the anti-ASCAP legislation in the state of Washington declared unconstitutional when Archie E. Blair, special master, last weekend issued his long awaited report finding that the federal statutory court in Tacoma has jurisdiction in the ASCAP case.

Initiated Three Years Ago

The initial action was tried before a three judge statutory court three years ago this month on the issue of the state law's constitutionality. The federal court waited a year before handing down a finding that it did not have jurisdiction in the case because, the court claimed, ASCAP had not shown that the required jurisdictional amount of a minimum of $3,000 was involved in the case.

The Society appealed to the U. S. supreme court on the jurisdictional issue and the high court directed the statutory court in Tacoma to hear testimony on the jurisdictional question. The court assigned Special Master Blair to hear this testimony.

His report found that there was no question that the required $3,000 jurisdictional amount was involved in the case through ASCAP's business done within the state. The Society may now ask the statutory court for a final ruling on the question of constitutionality on the basis of testimony already taken and without further hearings.

A delay in the case may result, however, from the fact that Judge Cushman, a member of the statutory court which heard the case originally, has since retired and his successor has not been appointed yet.

New ASCAP Contract

Radio broadcasting officials in New York were reluctant to discuss the new ASCAP contract this week except to point out that the fight with the Society had not taken any new turn as a result of the issuance of the text of the contract, which was mailed Wednesday, June 19th, to owners and operators of broadcasting stations and agencies. The contract becomes effective January 1, 1941, for a period of five years. The rates are reduced for individual stations but increased for the networks.

Network officials claim that ASCAP music has been eliminated from about 75 per cent of sustaining programs originating in the studios and they are preparing a set of figures to prove it.

BMI Expansion Approved

Approval of the expansion plans of Broadcast Music, Inc., to set up a national music catalogue in competition to ASCAP, was voted Friday, June 21st, at a joint meeting in New York of the executive boards of National Association of Broadcasters, Independent Radio Network Affiliates, BMI and representatives of National Independent Broadcasters. Methods of financing the plans were left to the discretion of the BMI board.

NEWSREELS, TELEVISION, RADIO AND PRESS COVER REPUBLICAN SESSION

Convention First News Event To Be Covered by Four Services; Television Signals Wired to N. Y. Transmitter

The Republicans' presidential convention of the Grand Old Party, at Convention Hall in Philadelphia this week, brought the first real four-cornered spot-news coverage contest of an important news event in the making to be recorded simultaneously by the press and radio, newsreel and television.

Newswise, the convention assumed double significance, because of its possible relation in November, and in the interim, to the state of the world and Mars.

Tons of Equipment

On the printed pages of the nation's press, the convention had to share headlines with the momentous events transpiring in Europe. Radio carted exactly 110 microphones, for the three national networks—NBC, CBS, MBS—into the huge arena of Republican delegates, observers, candidates and behind-the-scene politicians and manipulators of policy, procedure and platform. Television brought out its latest equipment to cover its first national political, presidential convention, NBC "piping" its telecasts over the telephone company's coaxial cable from Philadelphia to New York. The newsreels were there in scores, to give to the country a far more complete pictorial record of the daily happenings than any of the other pictorial media.

Arrangements to bring the story of the Republican convention to all the people of the country included, in addition to 800 seats for the press, six glass-enclosed cubicles perched over the seats behind the speaker's stand for the radio coverage. Additional "roosts" for the newsreel cameramen and press photographers were scattered about the hall. Television had its own special booth.

Although the various services—newsreels, newspapers, radio and television—were competing with one another for the best coverage of the convention, a certain amount of cooperation was necessary. All the networks, the newsreels and television shared use of public address system microphones set up for each of the delegations.

No Pooling

The five newsreels were at the conclave. In several cases almost the entire available staff was sent to Philadelphia. There was no pooling of material. The companies were represented, on the average by about 17 men each and a total of from 10,000 to 15,000 feet of film were shot each day.

Cameras were set up in front and behind the speaker's stand and roving cameramen covered the whole floor taking informal shots. Special studios were set up for interviews and each company has a special dark room to load and unload magazines on the spot. Telephone connections between the main camera stands and the home offices in New York were established.

The newsreels used about 30 cameras, half sound and half silent, to cover every phase of the Republican meeting.

The Movietone News staff at the convention was headed by Tony Muto, in charge of the Washington bureau. The New York office said practically every available man on the staff was in Philadelphia, with five sound camera crews and three silent camera crews there.

Universal Newsreel likewise said only a skeleton staff had been kept in New York with most of the force from the home office, as well as all the men in Philadelphia and Washington assigned to the convention. Equipment included one sound camera crew, six silent cameras and a variety of hand cameras for "on the spot" work.

Paramount News reported it had "about the same as everyone else" at the convention and pointed out that after all it is "not what equipment you have but what results you get." The special platforms gave all the newsreels an equal opportunity and each of them had equipment at the key points. Paramount News' force in Philadelphia included two sound and two silent crews. William P. Montague, assignment editor, headed the convention delegation.

News of the Day had about five sound crews and two silent crews plus two contact men.

Pathe News was covered by a sound and a silent crew.

No Decision on Extras

Events at the convention would determine whether a special newsreel issue would be made. All the newsreels prepare their issues on Mondays and Wednesdays but with prospects that the convention would run until the end of the week it was thought that special issues would be sent out to the theatres after the candidate was nominated. No special plans were made in advance because the length of the meeting was indefinite. The type of man selected also, it was said, will determine to a degree the kind of special newsreel material that can be released.

The lighting of Convention Hall for newsreels, stills and television was handled by Charles Ross, Inc., motion picture lighting company and eastern representative for Mole-Richardson equipment, according to announcement of Allyn Butterfield, Republican newsreel contact man. Special equipment included 14 5,000 watt lamps; 7,500 feet of cable and about 50 other lighting units requiring individual operators.

In the Philadelphia area Philco and Mutual, working together, presented television programs of the convention. Plans were made by General Electric to pick up NBC's television signals and rebroadcast them in the Schenectady territory, if the Republican meeting ran until the week-end.

The television "service area" for the convention was a large part of the eastern section of the country. NBC's station, W2XBS, in New York has an effective range of about 70 miles which includes southern New York, Connecticut, a part of Massachusetts and New Jersey. Philco's station covers part of New Jersey and part of Pennsylvania. The General Electric station's signals can be received within 25 miles or so of Schenectady.

Sixty television receivers were set up by Philco in South Museum, adjoining Convention Hall. Spectators not able to get into the hall were able to see part of the proceedings by television.

All the NBC television programs for the whole week have been given over to the Philadelphia convention. About 25 hours of programs were relayed directly from the hall. In addition to television activities on the floor of the convention, special interviews were telecast from a special studio and from the lobby and sidewalk. Altogether a total of four cameras were used.

NBC's crew covering the convention included Thomas H. Hutchinson, manager of television programs; Burke Crotty, director of outside telecasts, Roy Meredith; Ray Forrest, announcer and Harold P. See, television field supervisor.

New Lenses Used

The three Iconoscope cameras and the special sensitive Orthicon camera are provided with lens systems treated with magnesium fluoride which gives them a reported gain of about 30 per cent in the transmission of light. The treatment was developed by Dr. C. Holley Cartwright of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Philco and the Mutual Broadcasting System combined facilities for the Philadelphia television coverage. Receivers were installed in the National Republican Headquarters in the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel and the Union League Club. The television operations were supervised by David Grimes, Philco's chief engineer who collaborated with J. R. Poppele, chief engineer for WOR-Mutual. The main Philco-Mutual television controls were located in the WOR-Mutual network control room overlooking the speaker's stand.

The General Electric television station in the Helderberg hills Southeast of Schenectady received the convention television programs direct from New York. The station's signals have been received near Lake Placid in Northern New York.

Radio Record Set

A total of 110 microphones for the three networks have been assembled at Convention Hall, according to Henry Grossman, chief engineer of the Columbia Broadcasting System's special convention staff. About half the microphones were scattered throughout the Hall and the others in the special booths.

The networks made an effort to combine maximum coverage of the convention with a minimum of disturbance to their commercial broadcasts. Special brief news bulletins and flashes from the convention were carried. In the evening an hour was regularly given to the principal speakers. When radio time was not fetching such high prices from commercial sponsors radio stations frequently covered the convention for almost every minute that it was in session.

WOR-Mutual network used a special microphone shaped like a miniature elephant, 15 inches high and 14 inches wide. After the convention it will be presented to the Republican National Chairman for election campaigning.

The convention was the first such event to be carried by FM radio.

PHILADELPHIA GUIDE ISSUED BY WARNERS

An amusement guide, a giveaway booklet, was issued by Warner Brothers theatres in Philadelphia during the sessions of the Republican convention. Listing theatre attractions and other items of interest in the city the booklet was distributed through the hotels and at Convention Hall.

There is a possibility that such a guide, similar to those issued by metropolitan hotels, may become a permanent promotion during the summer to help offset competition. In addition to the season of outdoor concerts by members of the Philadelphia Orchestra at Robin Hood Dell, which started last week, the city inaugurates free outdoor dancing at the center-city Parkway next Thursday.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

Columbia

BLONDIE ON A BUDGET: Larry Simms, "Daisy," Arthur Lake, Penny Singleton—Just another good comedy from Columbia. This picture fell down thirty per cent compared to the last "Blondie" we played but still did a nice business mid-week. Running time, 70 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

BLONDIE ON A BUDGET: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms, "Daisy," Rita Hayworth—Here is another of the "Blondie" series that is establishing an excellent reputation and showing at the box office. This "Blondie" is the best so far and it deserves the proper presentation on any theatre program. It has everything for mass appeal. Running time, 73 minutes. Played June 9-11.—M. A. Kirkhart, Vogue Theatre, Lincoln, Ill. General patronage.

HIS GIRL FRIDAY: Cary Grant, Rosalind Russell, Ralph Bellamy—Now here is just what we are looking for during these depressed and gloomy days. This couple keeps you in constant eagerness to catch every word they utter. Dialogue is fast and packs more laughs than any picture I know of. I played this on a holiday and they came for it in groups. This is the kind of stuff people are asking for. Why don't we get more? Running time, 92 minutes. Played May 29-30. —T. Winkel, Piedmont Theatre, Oakland, Calif. General patronage.

ISLAND OF DOOMED MEN: Peter Lorre, Rochelle Hudson—Just fair. I played this one with Monogram's "Tomboy," the latter getting all the praise. Running time, 66 minutes. Played May 31-June 1.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

First National

DR. EHRLICH'S MAGIC BULLET: Edward G. Robinson, Ruth Gordon, Otto Kruger, Donald Crisp—Those who came acclaimed this a marvelous educational achievement. However, from box office angle it didn't respond. Too heavy for children and likewise the masses. Class this picture with "Emile Zola" and "Pasteur." Acting is most commendable and it can truly be recognized as an inspired production. Box office was off 25 per cent. Running time, 103 minutes. Played June 9-12.—T. Winkel, Piedmont Theatre, Oakland, Calif. General patronage.

FOUR WIVES: Lane Sisters, Gale Page, Jeffrey Lynn, Eddie Albert, Claude Rains, Dick Foran, Frank McHugh, May Robson—A good picture but seems to lack the punch of "Four Daughters." Priscilla Lane seems to hold her own wherever you put her. Lynn is also fine in this picture. Running time, 96 minutes. Played May 10-11.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

OKLAHOMA KID: James Cagney, Humphrey Bogart, Rosemary Lane—Traded a new picture for this and got far the best of the deal. This is a dandy picture. If you missed it, you had better pick it up. Good print. Running time, 85 minutes. Played May 17-18.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

THREE CHEERS FOR THE IRISH: Priscilla Lane, Dennis Morgan, Thomas Mitchell—The fact that I am Irish may have influenced me but this is my idea of a swell show. Excellent cast with Priscilla Lane, Thomas Mitchell and Dennis Morgan really going to town and a supporting cast that is tops. Some good Irish music helps a lot. A very entertaining picture that pleased. My patrons want comedy. Running time, 100 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BROADWAY MELODY OF 1940: Eleanor Powell, Fred Astaire, George Murphy, Frank Morgan, Lynne Carver—I have run all the Broadway Melodies and never a poor one. Like all the others, this is simply tops in entertainment. Eleanor has always been my favorite star and what a partner Fred Astaire makes for her. George Murphy is very, very good and Lynne Carver gives an excellent performance and, of course, Frank Morgan is there with the comedy. Dance ensembles, music, story are all up to the standard of this fine series. Struck a Saturday night storm of wind, rain, hail and what have you, so lost out on the country patronage but no fault of the picture. Pleased one hundred per cent. Running time, 100 minutes. Played June 7-9.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

EDISON, THE MAN: Spencer Tracy, Rita Johnson, Gene Lockhart, Lynne Overman, Charles Coburn, Henry Travers—A most excellent picture, and Tracy continues as one of the outstanding film stars of all time and is the key of the entire picture. The supporting cast are all good and very clever in the several characters they represented. The picture, besides being educational, is very entertaining and will please all seeing it and everybody should, if at all possible, do so. Of course, the picture depends on the richness of incident and detail and the expectancy of results obtained by the events, as one after another invention is attempted and a successful conclusion obtained. Both large and small theatres should show this picture, which will please all of their patrons, big, little, old and young. Running time, 107 minutes. Played June 13-19.—William Noble, Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

FOUR GIRLS IN WHITE: Florence Rice, Una Merkel, Ann Rutherford, Mary Howard, Alan Marshal, Kent Taylor—Everybody liked this. We enjoyed real good business but doubt if it would have drawn as well were it not for the fact we played Foto-Nite.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

I TAKE THIS WOMAN: Spencer Tracy, Hedy Lamarr—Very good show. I can't get very enthusiastic over Hedy Lamarr in spite of her beauty. Not up to Tracy's standard but still a very satisfactory production. Running time, 97 minutes. Played May 31-June 2.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

SUSAN AND GOD: Joan Crawford, Fredric March, Rita Quigley, Ruth Hussey, Bruce Cabot, John Carroll —I saw this picture screened and it is certainly not a small town picture. I found it overlong and boresome, with too much talking and not enough action. If you are in a small town, be sure to see it before you play it.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

TWO GIRLS ON BROADWAY: Lana Turner, George Murphy, Joan Blondell—Good picture; good business. Pleased all. Running time, 73 minutes. Played June 9-10.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Monogram

SON OF THE NAVY: Jean Parker, James Dunn, Martin Spellman—Very good for theatres catering to the family trade. Clean, wholesome entertainment. Running time, 71 minutes. Played May 26.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

TOMBOY: Marcia Mae Jones, Jackie Moran—Good for the family trade. Audience reaction "good." Running time, 70 minutes. Played May 31-June 1.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

Paramount

BUCK BENNY RIDES AGAIN: Jack Benny, Eddie "Rochester" Anderson, Ellen Drew, Andy Devine—This picture did par excellence at the box office and played extended time, of which it deserves. It is one of the top box office attractions on the market today. Running time, 82 minutes. Played June 2-6.—M. A. Kirkhart, Vogue Theatre, Lincoln, Ill. General patronage.

MYSTERIOUS RIDER: Russell Hayden, Douglas Dumbrille, Sidney Toler—This was a very slow moving picture for a western. Not up to the usual Zane Grey pictures. Running time, 65 minutes. Played May 24-25.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

SIDEWALKS OF LONDON: Charles Laughton, Vivien Leigh—This picture did more to hurt business than a siege of small pox. 90 per cent walked out on it. The poorest picture I have played in 11 years as an exhibitor. Shame on Paramount. Played June 5-6.—Tom Edwards, Ozark Theatre, Eldon, Mo. Small town and country patronage.

TYPHOON: Dorothy Lamour, Robert Preston, Lynne Overman—Business very good on this picture and it is a natural for small town. Color is beautiful and there is plenty of action. Running time, 71 minutes. Played June 12-13.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Thetare, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Republic

CROOKED ROAD, THE: Edmund Lowe, Irene Hervey, Henry Wilcoxon—Just fair. Can be used as a filler. Running time, 66 minutes. Played June 2.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

GANGS OF CHICAGO: Lloyd Nolan, Lola Lane, Barton MacLane—This is a satisfactory gangster picture which failed to draw. Running time, 66 minutes. Played June 14-15.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

HEROES OF THE SADDLE: Three Mesquiteers (Robert Livingston, Raymond Hatton, Duncan Renaldo)—New characters not as good as old ones. Business only fair.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

JEEPERS CREEPERS: Weaver Brothers and Elviry, Roy Rogers—Good picture for western fans and others alike. Enjoyed by everyone. Give us more of the Weaver Bros. and Elviry. Good business in spite of very rainy weather. Played June 14-15.—Felix H. Tisdale, Ritz Theatre, Brantley, Ala. Small town patronage.

YOUNG BUFFALO BILL: Roy Rogers, George "Gabby" Hayes, Pauline Moore—An excellent Roy Rogers.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

RKO Radio

FLYING DEUCES, THE: Laurel and Hardy, Jean Parker—Okay for those who like that type of thing. No box office. Played May 24-25.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

PRAIRIE LAW: George O'Brien, Virginia Vale—A good western with the usual O'Brien thrills. Running time, 59 minutes. Played June 7-8.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

SWISS FAMILY ROBINSON: Freddie Bartholomew, Thomas Mitchell, Edna Best, Terry Kilburn, Tim Holt—Let the town know you are playing this number. Kids are familiar with the story and will persuade the parents to come. It's a fine picture to tie up with the Scouts or church organizations. They approve of it 100 per cent and will do sufficient advertising to bring the masses. I did it with success. Running time, 94 minutes. Played May 24-25.—T. Winkel, Piedmont Theatre, Oakland, Calif. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

DRUMS ALONG THE MOHAWK: Claudette Colbert, Henry Fonda—This is a beautiful picture and while it seemed to be a little gruesome in parts the crowd seemed to like it very much. Not quite up to some of the top allocated pictures but would be a dandy at one step down the ladder in price. Running time, 100 minutes. Played May 3-4.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

EVERYBODY'S BABY: Jed Prouty, Shirley Deane, Spring Byington, Russell Gleason—Real good for dual billings. Business good for week-end.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

EVERYTHING HAPPENS AT NIGHT: Sonja Henie, Ray Milland, Robert Cummings—This is a honey. Could stand a little more skating but we welcome more as good. Running time, 77 minutes. Played May 31-June 1.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

I WAS AN ADVENTURESS: Zorina, Richard Greene, Peter Lorre, Erich Von Stroheim—Fair picture; small business. No star power and not strong enough for Sunday. Running time, 80 minutes. Played June 11.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

JOHNNY APOLLO: Tyrone Power, Dorothy Lamour, Edward Arnold, Lloyd Nolan—Fox evidently thought they had something in this one, as they set it up for percentage. But, it is just another gangster picture, a little better than some, but still the same old cycle. When in doubt, make a gangster picture and maybe it will get by. Lamour some better than usual but her finger nails curling about an inch beyond her fingers looked like H---.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

PACK UP YOUR TROUBLES: Jane Withers, Ritz Brothers—Jane Withers liked here but people complained there was too much war in the picture. Not a financial success at the Arcade. Played May 31-June 1.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

SWANEE RIVER: Don Ameche, Al Jolson, Andrea Leeds—Who could ask for a finer picture than this one? The color was perfect, the story A-1, and the acting of Ameche, Jolson and Leeds was perfect. The music of the Choir was as always the best. Let's have some more like this one. Played June 14-15.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

SWANEE RIVER: Don Ameche, Andrea Leeds, Al Jolson—Despite the fact that many had seen this elsewhere, it proved a drawing card. Fair at box office, considering the other demands here and lack of money. Everyone liked the picture and some stopped to say that it was the second or third time for them. Played June 5-6.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

20,000 MEN A YEAR: Randolph Scott, Margaret Lindsay, Preston Foster—A very satisfactory picture not up to the expectations of the patrons after the build up. Too much sameness in the airplane pictures. Same stunts; same results. Running time, 84 minutes. Played April 26-27.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

United Artists

CHUMP AT OXFORD: Laurel and Hardy—A very fine Laurel and Hardy comedy slapstick picture and the audience enjoyed it.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

OF MICE AND MEN: Burgess Meredith, Lon Chaney, Jr., Betty Field—Don't make the mistake I did and play it on Sunday. It is as heavy as "Grapes" and will do even less business. Recognize it as a man's picture and pass it up if you can. "N. G." at box office and parents will scold you for showing it to the kids. Running time, 106 minutes. Played May 26-28.—T. Winkel, Piedmont Theatre, Oakland, Calif. General patronage.

REBECCA: Laurence Olivier, Joan Fontaine, George Sanders, Judith Anderson—Here is a picture that just keeps pulling them in. The longer you play it the better it goes and it will rank with the first five in production and box office at the end of the year. That is my opinion. Running time, 130 minutes. Played May 26-30.—M. A. Kirkhart, Vogue Theatre, Lincoln, Ill. General patronage.

ZENOBIA: Oliver Hardy, Harry Langdon, Billie, Burke, Alice Brady, James Ellison, Jean Parker, June Lang—We couldn't get them in to see this one. Just a very mediocre picture. "Zenobia" is the elephant; we were the goats.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Universal

BAD MAN FROM RED BUTTE: Johnny Mack Brown, Bob Baker, Fuzzy Knight—This one is the best to date made by this trio and are gaining considerable popularity with my western fans. Good western. Running time, 58 minutes. Played May 26. —Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

DESTRY RIDES AGAIN: James Stewart, Marlene Dietrich, Charles Winninger, Micha Auer, Brian Donlevy, Una Merkel—A super western that pleased everyone. This failed to draw extra business but all who saw it liked it. The woman fight was worth the admission. Give us more hair pulling. Played June 9-10. —Felix H. Tisdale, Ritz Theatre, Brantley, Ala. Small town patronage.

FOR LOVE OR MONEY: June Lang, Robert Kent —Counter-attraction and bad weather made this a box office flop. Good programmer. Played June 8.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

HOT STEEL: Richard Arlen, Andy Devine—An average Arlen-Devine yarn. Will make a good filler. Running time, 61 minutes. Played June 7-8.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

HOUSE OF SEVEN GABLES: Vincent Price, Margaret Lindsay, Nan Grey, George Sanders, Dick Foran—This is a surprisingly good picture of this old favorite. Both the women principals were good and the reaction of the audience was satisfactory. But, the war drums beating in the Capitol and which I think is unnecessary, is not doing business any good. We are willing to pay for preparedness, that is sure, and we know that the cost is going to be high. Also, the country is pro-Allied. But I don't know why they don't let it go at that and not continuously keep the public in an uproar. If Hitler wins, he will have his country so exhausted, both financially and in man power, that I can't conceive this country in any particular danger for some time to come. And the clamor that is coming out of Washington is hurting business in all lines and, if a recession comes, where are they going to get the money?—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

IT'S A DATE: Deanna Durbin, Walter Pidgeon, Kay Francis—Well, we just don't get it. Here is a swell picture in all respects that was a total flop for us. We never have done anything with Durbin. Where she gets her national rating and what she does for us does not jibe. A good picture but no draw. Running time, 103 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

LITTLE ACCIDENT: Hugh Herbert, Baby Sandy, Florence Rice, Richard Carlson, Joy Hodges—Good program picture. Plenty comedy. The baby was cute. Played on Bank Night and lost my cash gift in its thirteenth week. Quite a little accident. Played June 5.—Felix H. Tisdale, Ritz Theatre, Brantley, Ala. Small town patronage.

RIO: Basil Rathbone, Victor McLaglen, Sigrid Gurie, Robert Cummings, Leo Carrillo—Played on Bank Night to fair business. No bad comment. They liked this gruesome prison life all along. Rathbone was swell in his part. Played June 12.—Felix H. Tisdale, Ritz Theatre, Brantley, Ala. Small town patronage.

Warner Brothers

INVISIBLE STRIPES: George Raft, Jane Bryan, Humphrey Bogart, William Holden—A good gang picture. Raft is quite a favorite here and the Bryan girl is good. Bogart is always the best in his line but we do hope to see him come through alive sometime and perhaps even reformed. Running time, 80 minutes. Played June 7-8.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

VIRGINIA CITY: Errol Flynn, Miriam Hopkins, Randolph Scott, Humphrey Bogart, Alan Hale—On account of local interest in one of Nevada's most famous mining camps, the theatre was packed both nights it was shown. Wish we had more pictures with the same box office appeal. Running time, 115 minutes. Played May 25-26.—S. E. Bower, Desert Theatre, Hawthorne, Nev. Mining, CCC, Marine patronage.

Miscellaneous (Cameo)

LIGHTNING STRIKES WEST: Ken Maynard—This one didn't even stir the kids. Keep it away from your customers. Running time, 55 minutes. Played June 2.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

RKO Radio

Publicists Guild Endorsed by AMPA

The Associated Motion Picture Advertisers at a closed meeting in New York Thursday, June 20th, voted to endorse the Screen Publicists and Advertising Guild, recently formed New York affiliate of the Hollywood Screen Publicists Guild. The action was taken following a mail ballot sent out to AMPA's 120 members five days previously by Leon Bamberger, AMPA president. The response was 34 ballots; 25 for approving the guild and nine against.

It was also decided to cooperate with National Book Week next November. Joe Gould is now working on plans to determine the form and extent of the participation. Under consideration is an award for the best film to be made from a book in the current year.

Membership meetings have been suspended for the summer. The AMPA board, however, will meet July 18th to transact interim business.

16mm DeVRY CHAIN IN 800 PHILIPPINE TOWNS

Organization Follows Setting Up of Circuit in China; Educational Features Stressed

The De Vry Corporation is expanding its 16mm theatre circuit throughout the Far East. The most recent addition is the Philippines where the Chicago motion picture equipment company plans to establish theatres in 800 small towns which previously could not support regular film theatres.

$1,000,000 Invested in China

Six months ago the corporation, headed by Herman A. De Vry, opened offices in Shanghai and began assembling a circuit of 500 16mm theatres throughout China with a basic investment announced as about $1,000,000. Chinese business men cooperated with the De Vry company in the financing and management of the company which is known as De Vry Chang, Inc.

Nat Nathanson, Far Eastern representative of De Vry, said in an interview in Manila that no attempt would be made to compete with the larger theatres in the Philippine Islands. Equipment will be furnished on a cooperative basis to communities too small to support a regular theatre. The 16mm houses are called "economy theatres."

The Philippine branch will handle 16mm films produced by local film men in the native language as well as the company's entertainment and educational pictures. Mr. Nathanson also said the company had plans for the inauguration of a local newsreel service. A newsreel service has also been planned for the Chinese De Vry circuit.

Educational Possibilities Seen

The company also will install equipment in small clubs and restaurants so that customers can see as well as hear bands. This activity is related to the 16mm "nickle-in-the-slot" devices which a number of companies have announced in the United States.

The natives of the Islands are said to be enthusiastic about the educational possibilities of the De Vry 16mm chain. The company not only will show entertainment films in its "economy theatres" but will handle films for "visual education" courses in schools.

De Vry has available through its Philippine office films suitable for advanced students in the arts and sciences as well as material for primary and high school grades. A special rate will be offered to schools and universities to include rental of the 16mm equipment and the "visual education" pictures. The company has some 3,000,000 of educational film, Mr. Nathanson said.

Future expansion in the Far East will probably include Japan, Malaya and India.

Theatre Equips Ambulance

The Lincoln Park Theatre, of the Detroit suburb of that name, has started a Red Cross war relief drive which, it is hoped, will be used by other communities. The theatre donated 50 per cent of its receipts at a show last week; merchants and the City Council contributed the rest; the object was to equip an ambulance which will bear the community and theatre name on its sides.

Hold Columbia Outing

Columbia Pictures' home office personnel held their annual outing at Pine Brook Lodge, Nichols, Conn., Friday, June 21st. It was the third consecutive year that the outing was held at the Pine Brook Lodge. The entire personnel attended, including Jack Cohn, vice-president; A. Schnieder, treasurer; A. Montague, general sales manager; Maurice Bergman, advertising director, and Nate Spingold.

Robbins Planning Record Company

Jack Robbins, head of "The Big 3" music publishing group, is conferring with various New York record executives to feel out the possibilities of his entering the record business in a new manner, similar to the set up of United Artists film company.

It is Mr. Robbins' intention to form his own recording company under the "Lion Record" label. It will not compete, it is said, with existing disk companies in a manufacturing capacity, but, instead, will limit its activities to the recording of sound track "masters," which will be licensed to established record companies for manufacture and distribution.

The "Lion Record" label will deal mainly with original compositions and seek to uncover new talent, both in the orchestra and vocal divisions. Mr. Robbins is planning to leave for Hollywood shortly to discuss the advisability of using film studios for his record creations.

U. S. Agricultural Films Won Four Awards at Rome

One first, two second, and one third awards were won by the United States Department of Agriculture films at the International Exposition of Agricultural Films, held in Rome, May 20-27, under the auspices of the International Institute of Agriculture, according to word just received by the Extension Service from J. Clyde Marquis, American delegate to the Institute.

The first award (6500 lira) went to "Poultry—A Billion Dollar Industry," in the general agricultural propaganda class. It was sponsored by the Department Poultry Committee and produced under the subject matter supervision of H. L. Shrader, Extension Poultryman. It was directed and edited by Don Bennett and photographed by Carl Turvey.

"Clouds," which won a second award in the elementary class (International Institute Medal) is a one reel Weather Bureau picture directed by Raymond Evans and produced by Dr. C. C. Clark. Another second award (University Educational Class) went to "How Animal Life Begins," a school subject made by the Department in cooperation with the American Film Center, Inc. It was produced by Dr. E. I. Evans and photoghaphed by Carl Turvey.

A third award in the professional class (The French Medal) was won by the two reel film "Sugar Cane," jointly sponsored by the Bureau of Plant Industry and the Extension Service of Louisiana. It was directed by Raymond Evans, produced by Dr. E. W. Brandes and photographed by Eugene Tucker.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

"Keep Cool America"; "Chin Up, Chest Out"!

It is evident that theatremen are turning on full pressure in producing a grade of showmanship to alleviate today's ominous war jitters.

Recounted in this issue are the campaigns already underway by the RKO and Loew's Theatres. Decidedly they emphasize the responsibility of motion picture entertainment in lightening the gravity of these troubled times.

The campaign slogans are admirable. RKO's "Keep Cool, America" and Loew's "Chin Up; Chest Out; Cheer Up—Laugh!" are backed with a wealth of intensive promotion to consolidate the theatre's position as a relief from grief.

No less is being done by Round Tablers in clarioning the theme of Americanism. On another page are detailed the highlights of "Flag Day" observances sponsored by theatres in cooperation with civic heads and veteran organizations. In every instance, the showing of patriotic film subjects, the staging of patriotic exercises attracted turnaway audiences. Newspaper editorials and publicity bowed deeply to these efforts.

* * *

The prominence of the theatre in the American scene and the flexibility of theatre operation allow exhibition a rare opportunity now to gain wider favor in the public mind.

Thus, every device of sound showmanship must be employed, every advantage of the theatre's position must be taken to "keep America cool", to bring "chin up and chest out".

WHERE THE SMART MONEY RIDES

Two contributions picked from recent mails will serve as inspiration on "getting to where you're going by not stopping." The subjects happen to be Warnerite Glenn Nelson and Minnesota-man Jimmie Redmond.

For years, Nelson tried to sell his paper on a double-truck. Finally worn down by the Round Tabler's persistence, the editor would only listen to a deal that included a complicated layout of reading matter and display space providing the manager did all the work. Glenn spent weary midnight hours on a setup satisfactory to the paper, then went ahead and sold the ads. Results were mutually gratifying. The editor now is completely won over.

Redmond sends along a page co-op, labelling it the first to be put over locally in a long, long time. Jim remarks, "it is not so very much, but if you knew how difficult it is for us to make a deal, you would understand why we are so proud of it."

In the parlance of hoss-racing, this "book" will always lay six-two and even on the manager who keeps digging and sweating. The smart money usually rides on the lad who never did learn how to take "no" for answer.

THE AWARDS POINT OUT

In the seventh year of the Competitions, much significance is to be attached to the shattering of Quigley Awards records, as noted in this issue's listings of Quarter-Master winners. Never before has there been occasion to honor so many entrants. Never before has there been presented such overwhelming evidence of a universal determination to exploit product to its last possibility.

Results in the Second Quarter of the 1940 Awards should make more obvious that extra grosses are to be had on those pictures which furnish the theatreman with the most exploitation slants. Especially in these days of hard going, this would be a conclusion demanding immediate acceptance from production and distribution.

Round Table In Pictures

Giant American flag for side wall decoration hung above early national emblems and blowup of the mayor's proclamation featured the "Flag Day" celebration observed by Jay Golden at the RKO Palace, Rochester. Reports of other observances will be found on another page.

Huge banner covering practically the entire front of the Fausto Theatre in Havana was erected by Ernesto Smith for date on "Balalaika". In addition, a 20-station broadcast of Eddy-Massey records was held on opening night which was tuned into at the theatre for patron participation.

Promoting a craft for use in his water bally for "Waterloo Bridge" at Loew's Poli, Springfield, Mass., George Freeman bannered it with appropriate copy and had it ply the river during local regatta. WMAS announcer covering event also gave picture plugs.

"Oakie" hut in foyer of the Rena, in Kellogg, Idaho, was the attractor used by Manager Clarence Golder for "Grapes of Wrath". Stove, folding cot, kerosene lamp and other paraphernalia completed the display. Sign at base was planted upside down for extra attention.

With the New York State Convention of Elks holding forth in Rochester during Les Pollock's opening of "Our Town" at Loew's, theatreman secured permission from local authorities for tacking of "Welcome to Our Town" cards on light poles around the city.

Theatremen Fight War Jitters With Laugh Campaigns

Intensive drives directed to the lighter aspects of summer programs and away from the war clouds are now in full force by the RKO theatres in the Greater New York and Westchester area and by the Loew theatres throughout the country.

With the adoption of "Keep Cool America at RKO" as a slogan, the coming programs of laugh pictures are being widely publicised in every possible way, under the direction of John J. O'Connor, vice-president and general manager. Theatres are decorated with flags and buntings. Special lobby hangers, setpieces and displays are also being used. In addition to extensive posting, an attractive red, white and blue herald is being circulated. Headed by the slogan, copy in part reads:

"We have faith in America and its people . . . and we believe that good entertainment is a strong necessity to all people at all times. The show must go on . . . therefore RKO is not holding back. We have gathered several of the year's biggest attractions for showing right now instead of holding them for Fall."

A talking trailer with similar copy is also spotlighted and publicity on the campaign has been planted in the metropolitan press. An exploitation bulletin for the information of RKO theatre managers has been compiled by the publicity department, under the direction of Harry Mandel.

Loew's Sponsor Cheer-Up Weeks

Guided by Oscar A. Doob, circuit ad head, Loew's theatres are also making a determined effort to play up angles other than war. In connection with "Ghost Breakers," in Columbus and Cleveland, for instance, a "Cheer Up Week" was inaugurated. "Chin up; Chest out; Cheer up—Laugh" is the slogan used. Ads emphasized the all-fun, all-laugh programs. "The Silly Season Is On," says one caption. Short subjects are advertised as "more laughs." Where the second feature is also a comedy, an "all-laugh show" is advertised.

The cheer-up theme was followed through in all publicity and advertising. In Cleveland, a radio station was tied in to find the town's cheeriest, happiest, most contagious laughter. Newspapers ran contests to find the happiest smiles among shoppers. The silliest of street ballyhoos were purposely stressed. The Mayor was asked to proclaim "Cheer Up Week" so that the city could lead a national movement to laugh away war worries.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Schultz's "West Wall" Tiein

Since Major George Fielding Eliot, noted military expert and radio commentator, was in Sharon, Pa., on a lecture date during the engagement of Round Tabler John R. Schultz' short, "West Wall," at the Columbia Theatre, the theatreman hopped on the attendant publicity bandwagon by receiving prominent mention in ads, etc., since the Major had also done the job of narration.

Educators Cooperate with Stein For Series of Student Shows

With plans already in work for elaboration of the project next season, Manager Louis Stein recently brought to a close his successful series of eight special students' shows, put on during the year at Warner's Roosevelt, Newark, N. J., with the cooperation of local school heads. Each program of selected feature and accompanying shorts was presented at one showing only on a designated week day, starting at three-thirty, after school, and ending at six. As an indication of how the idea took hold, for the final showing, featuring "Young Tom Edison," Stein reported a turnaway house of nearly 2000 admissions at the 10 cent student price.

In the beginning, the theatreman contacted school principals in his area and proposed the following three-point plan:

To offer a selected program of screen entertainments to educate, amuse and develop a sense of evaluation among the younger patrons; to enable the theatre to make a real cultural contribution to the life of the community; to establish amicable, cooperative relationships between theatre and school.

The plan accepted, individual programs were organized with the cooperation of the educators. Tickets detailing each showing were printed by the manager and distributed among the schools to be passed out by individual teachers who were invited to the presentations. Since it was found impossible to have programs suitable for all ages, children of the first three grades were not included. For the rest, the shows were varied, some directed at high schools, others at grade schools, with four of the eight planned to include both.

In addition to the feature, five short subjects, including a cartoon, were shown. As an instance, with the "Edison" feature, were presented Diamond Dust, Mechanix Illustrated, in color, Angel of Mercy, Frozen Fish and Monroe Doctrine. The newspapers assisted in announcing the project, Stein also carrying the shows in his regular advertising and in a special 40 by 60 lobby announcement.

Local Doctor Honored On "Kildare" Campaign

To compete with the activities of Memorial Day, on which "Dr. Kildare's Strange Case" opened at the Mayfair, Bridgton, Me., Manager Elmore H. Rhines conceived the idea of dedicating the opening night to a local doctor who had practiced in the sector for over 50 years and was widely known. With this in mind, and with the cooperation of his newspaper editor, Rhines arranged for an engraved plaque to the venerable medico, invited other physicians to be guests at the ceremony held on the stage, and promoted the town band for a concert as part of the proceedings.

In addition to the local publicity which ran to two and three-column feature stories and art, notice of the occasion was carried in the Portland and Boston papers. As a result, the boxoffice was stimulated and as important, says Rhines, the theatre's local stock took quite a jump in valuable prestige.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Storm Copy Aids "Typhoon" Dates

As to be expected, storm warning copy was gagged up a bit by theatremen in campaigns for their "Typhoon" dates, Ken Prickett at the Texas Theatre, in Bay City, Texas, for instance distributing cards carrying storm signals, copy advising that "Typhoon" would hit the city at a certain time, the time of course being the theatre dates; same copy was carried across top of front page of his daily paper. Copy on cards read: "Center of disturbance will be at the Texas Theatre. Those most affected will be Dorothy Lamour (in her sarong) and Robert Preston (Star of Union Pacific). Better be there. It will sweep you off your feet."

For his engagement at Schine's Athena, in Athens, Ohio, Frank Nolan took out "Typhoon" insurance, blowing up the policy on a 40 by 60 for lobby display. For follow up, insurance agent also took a tap ad. Nolan headed his newspaper campaign with warning copy, had boys on the street with posters in the same direction. Effective also were posters hanging on merchants' doors Saturday night after store closings reading: "Closed! Typhoon coming. To Schine's Athena Theatre Sunday and Monday."

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Saunders Promotes Baker For "Our Town" Full Page

That specialist in full-page coop ad promotion, Matt Saunders, clicks again, this time on behalf of "Our Town" at Loew's Poli, Bridgeport, the space taken by a leading baker. Topped with a five-column shot of the business section, tiein copy read, "Home Pride Is Civic Pride. Like All Bridgeporters, We Are Proud of Our Town," etc. Together with other shots of the baker's activities, the layout included a giant cut from the picture with theatre and picture credits.

For the same attraction at the State, Waterville, Me., Ed Harrison, city manager, Gordon Theatres, sends in a double truck based on the press book layout and put over by Manager Lawrence Libby. In all, some 17 ads were sold, all mentioning the title in addition to the two mastheads supported by star closeups and action shots.

CIVIC HEADS AND VETERAN GROUPS TIED TO "FLAG DAY" OBSERVANCES

Community Respects Paid at Theatre in Conjunction with Showings of Patriotic Shorts; High and Grade Schools Aid

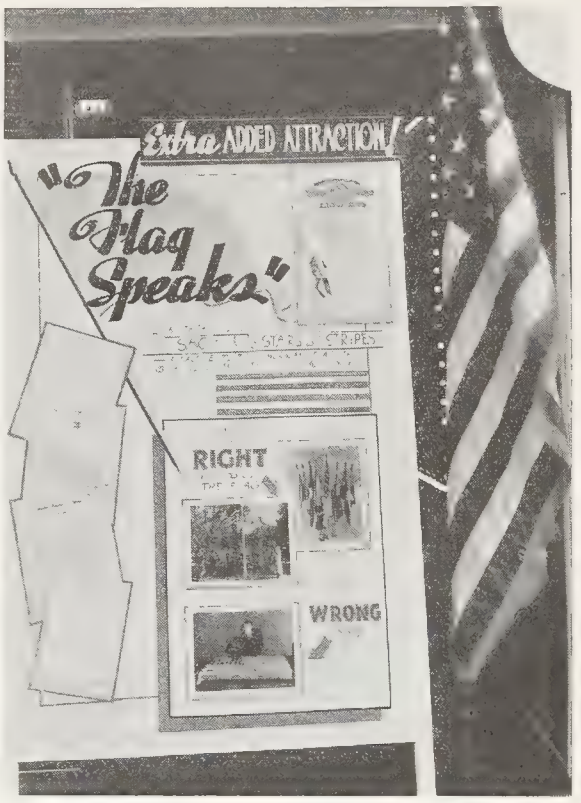
Projected more emphatically this year because of the European situation and availability of patriotic short subjects, "Flag Day" observances in the theatre celebrating the national event on June 14 are numerously reported, particularly in conjunction with M-G-M's technicolor short, "The Flag Speaks."

Campaigns were put on with the endorsement and cooperation of civic bodies and patriotic organizations. Parades were held and newspapers contributed prominently to the significance of the engagement.

In Madison, Wis., Manager Ed Benjii, at the Capitol, worked out an elaborate promotion that obtained official approval of the state with a written endorsement on the showing from Secretary of State Zimmerman. Similar support was received from the Mayor of Madison, Commanders of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and American Legion, and the National Director of the American Patriots. These documents were displayed on a special easel in the lobby a week ahead and out front during the engagement. In addition, the proper use of the American flag was also pictured (see reproduction in column to right). On the marquee was placed a specially constructed flag, four and a half by six feet, animated by flasher lights to produce a waving effect.

Elks Benefit Aids Kid Camp

The school heads assisted the showing by allowing Benjii to post announcements on all bulletin boards in the public schools. The newspapers, daily and weekly, carried stories on the date for three days ahead and during the run. Extra advertising was taken by the theatre to plug the showing.



Main organizational tiein effected by the Round Tabler was made with the Elks' lodge on behalf of the Capital Times kid camp. Special tickets sold at evening prices and featuring the short were distributed by the lodge, the Elks receiving a percentage for the camp. Letters were sent to all members and a vigorous campaign followed.

On the afternoon of the opening day, bugle corps of the V. of F. W., in full uniform, paraded the downtown section to the theatre. Banners exploiting the short were carried by Boy Scouts.

Editorial Builds Short Showing

For his showing of "The Flag Speaks" at the Paramount, Jackson, Tenn., Manager J. R. "Mac" MacEachron enlisted the support of the American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars, the attraction being announced at regular meetings in advance and stressed in members bulletins. Flags of both organizations were borrowed by the Round Tabler for lobby decoration.

Outstanding in the campaign arranged by Round Tabler Pat Notaro for the date, at Warners' Columbia, Sharon, Pa., was what the manager announces as a "first-time" editorial locally for a theatre attraction. Importance of the short was given as the reason for the editorial departure.

The war organizations in Hibbing, Minn., were also called upon for aid on his date by Manager Billy McCreary at the State, both American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars appointing "Flag Speaks" committees. Week ahead the Legion Commander addressed local Elks Lodge and recommended that they see the picture, the same announcement being made in the American Legion and V.F.W. weekly meetings. Newspapers carried several stories combining local Flag Day exercises with the showing of the picture, and proclamations in ad form were run and paid for by cooperating organizations. Since 35 locals were made citizens on that day, they were invited to the theatre as guests of the management, this also being good for important publicity in the papers. The American Legion post mailed postcards to the entire membership urging that every Legionnaire see the picture.

Borough Heads Work With Loews

The campaign for the Loew theatres in the Brooklyn area was arranged by Eddie Dowden of Oscar Doob's ad forces who with Manager Ben Simon of Loew's Metropolitan Theatre held a special breakfast screening of "Flag Speaks" at which promoted doughnuts and coffee were served. Screening was attended by members of the American Legion who presented a "grouping of colors," all posts assembled for the occasion, and entire proceedings being covered with stories and art by the Brooklyn Eagle. The same campaign was put on for the Bronx Loew theatres, Borough President Cashmore issuing the Flag Week proclamation in Brooklyn and Borough President James Lyons doing the same for the Bronx contingent.

Henry Organizes Two-Day Tribute for Flag Honors

Under the appealing title of "All-American Show," Manager Ken Henry arranged "Flag Week" exercises at Skouras' Embassy, in Port Chester, N. Y. A stage and screen program, put on for two days with the cooperation of local civic and patriotic units plus the heads and students of all public and high schools in the community.

The screen units were repeats, the feature, "Wings of the Navy," followed by short subjects, The City, Peace on Earth, The Man Without a Country, Yankee Doodle Comes to Town, The Story that Couldn't Be Printed, and a patriotic song reel. Children's after-school shows were held allowing youngsters under 12 a special admission price of five cents. For this purpose, tickets were printed and widely distributed. With the night performances, the various patriotic organizations, high school bands, etc., staged activities in keeping.

Mayor Proclaims Occasion

The celebration was officially opened with a proclamation from the Mayor who also appeared on the stage on the first night to pay tribute to the flag. A huge parade composed of patriotic societies, uniformed soldier organizations, Red Cross, police and fire departments, made the downtown area arriving at the theatre at 8:15, where a 30-minute stage program in honor of the flag was conducted by the American Legion, including the pledge of allegiance. Prominent ministers were on the program. Boy and Girl Scouts also took part, trumpet squads from each opening each evening's exercises.

Featuring the second night showings, called "High School Nite" was a concert rendered by the 75-piece high school band. Students were invited to take advantage of the special admissions for the pupils arranged with the school heads by the Round Tabler, the cards distributed in all high schools in the area. Broadcast of the event was made at the schools to all classes through the public address system.

Imprints Merchant's Envelopes

Neat tieup made with local utilities company was effected by J. R. MacEachron at the Paramount Theatre, in Jackson, Tenn., whereby the backs of all their envelopes are imprinted with the theatre's weekly program. Entire cost to Mac is two fifty each week for printing job and depending on the message he has to sell, theatreman determines whether it shall be printed lengthwise or crosswise on the envelopes.

SECOND QUARTER VOTING BREAKS AWARDS RECORD

Recognition Given Fortnighters Chosen from Among Winners in Quarter Preliminaries; Listings Include Newcomers

by A-MIKE VOGEL

The greatest burst of activity in the history of the Quigley Awards is signalized in the results of the Second Quarter-Master judging, as a record-breaking total of 79 names is listed for the Plaque, Medal and Citation honors. Whether it be an anxiety to chase the war jitters, or just an old-time ambition to tear things loose, the fact remains that at no time in the background of the Competitions has there been displayed such an intensity among theatremen to display their wares.

The eight Quarter-Master Plaques and Medal honors in the Second Quarter are shared by nine entrants, the added distinction going to the Schiner Syracuse team of Gus Lampe and Harry Unterfort. Of the Plaque winners, the Quarter is distinguished by the second consecutive win of E. V. Callow, Warner Philadelphia ad head, and J. R. Wheeler, now promoted to the Roxy, LaPorte, Ind., from the Lex, Chicago. Loew-man Ed Fitzpatrick, of Meriden, in Harry Shaw's division, is a first-timer this year for these honors, thus adding to his score of a Citation in the first Quarter. The greatest number of Second Quarter Medal winners are also "firsters," in most instances having scored previously for Quarter-Master mentions.

Half-Way Mark Reached

The 68 Citations are shared by 70 entrants, the extra two accounted for by the teams of Charlie Bierbauer, and Nick Todorov, in Allentown, and George French and Bill Morton, in Providence, also prominents in the battle for recognition. The rest, according to situation, are solo workers and among these are to be found a smart scattering of newcomers to the honors as well as the veterans who score their hits regularly as the Competitions go on.

With the listing of the winners on this page, the 1940 Awards turn the half-way mark and point directly to the end of the year. Regardless of standing, entrants who have scored in one Quarter or both, may look forward to an excellent opportunity of being up there when the race is run, depending of course upon how consistent their participation can be counted upon in the Fortnight periods.

Of these, the Third Quarter numbers seven, and as usual managers are invited to send in their outstanding single ideas or promotions put on in each of these two-week periods. Since the Judging Committee of the Second Quarter gave first consideration to entrants represented most often in the Fortnights, it is expected the same procedure will hold in all other quarterly selections.

EXPLOITATION BRIEFS FROM A-FIELD

Ahead of his opening of "Little Accident" at the Strand, in Griswold, Iowa, Manager Gordon P. Held, purchased enough white banner cloth to make 14 squares, diaper size. On each of these one letter of the title was painted, the aggregation being hung on line out front, spelling out name of picture.

Lad dressed as a farmer led a cow about town as part of Jack Fretwell's advance on "Farmer's Daughter" at the State, in Harrisonburg, Va. Farmer carried a suitcase on either side of which was copy reading: "Goin' to see the farmer's daughter at the State Theatre."

Up Calgary way, Pete Egan, manager, and publicist George Shafer at the Palace Theatre run a half hour stage show each Wednesday night, featuring a local dance band and local artists. Weekly in addition to their ads, an item is run containing the names of the artists to appear on the program that night. Not satisfied with this, Shafer hit upon the idea of running a small gossip column called "Party Patter," which contains news about his shows and behind-the-scene happenings.

To the first son born of Harrisburg, Pa., parents on the day Bill Elder opened with "My Son, My Son" at Loew's Regent, a five dollar bank account was started with the compliments of the management. Through this tieup plugs were received daily for a period of four days and a final plug when the winner was announced and presentation made. Neat stunt was the four-column, 14-inch co-op ad sold to local portrait studio using head of Madeleine Carroll. Cards were used on all city light poles tying in with the local safety campaign and as classified ad contest held in cooperating paper, first 10 people phoning in ads on used cars receiving tickets.

Ahead of "Magic Bullet" at the Regent Theatre, in Cedar Falls, Iowa, Merle Blair planted cards at curb in front of theatre, each carrying a letter of the title for attractor. Doctors, nurses, heads of women's clubs, hospitals, etc., were circularized with a letter heralding the opening, and for lobby stunt, 1,000 small capsules were placed in a large sealed jar, with guest tickets going to those coming closest to guessing correct number contained.

Novel stunt was put over by Bernard Peterson, Falls Theatre, Little Falls, Minn., in connection with his showing of "Edison, the Man," through tieup arranged with local power company whereby the face of all envelopes sent out were imprinted with a cut of a large bulb inside which were theatre and playdate credits.

E. H. Crouch of the Auburn Theatre, Auburn, N. Y., ran a lobby contest in connection with his showing of "Waterloo Bridge." Displaying a number of photos of bridges, theatreman asked patrons to guess correct names for passes.

GIVES HANDKERCHIEFS, BUT NOT FOR CRYING

To spotlight the picture at the Avon, Utica, N. Y., and also the new styles suggested by "Irene", Arnold Stoltz promoted the local store handling the fashion line for an advance distribution of imprinted women's handkerchiefs, decoratively colored.

In addition to the theatre credits, tiein copy read: "Hear Anna Neagle sing Alice Blue Gown. Everything for the June bride from a handkerchief to an Alice Blue Gown."

Advance teaser used by Bill Yeakle at the Kentucky, in Danville, Ky., consisted of small card on which was clipped a burned out match, copy at right reading "This was a light that failed, but Ronald Colman will not fail you with his performance of Rudyard Kipling's," etc., etc.

COLORING LETTERS BUILD NEW EFFECTS

Unique marquee color combinations at the Million Dollar, Los Angeles, are noted by Manager Ralph G. Pollock, with the application of red, green and other colors to the marquee letters, which for the summer will be dipped in a cool, refreshing green.

Little expense is attached, according to Pollock, who recommends that managers a bit timid about the idea might first experiment with water color, as effective and easily removed if returns are not up to expectations.

IN COURTS

"Fifth Column" Title Suit Filed

A motion to restrain the Film Alliance of the United States from distributing in this country, and the Midtown Theatre Corporation, operator of the Rialto theatre, New York, from exhibiting an English film under the title "The Fifth Column Squad," was filed in New York supreme court Friday, June 21st, by Ernest Hemingway, author, and Benjamin Glazer, adapter, of the play "The Fifth Column," and the Theatre Guild, producers of the play. The action, filed by Maurice J. Speiser, attorney, charged that the defendants had changed the original title of the picture, "Spies in the Air," to capitalize on the reputation of Mr. Hemingway's play.

Mr. Speiser said he had negotiated with several motion picture companies for the sale of the film rights of the play, the value of which was estimated as between $100,000 and $150,000, and that release of the English film with "Fifth Column" in its title would harm the negotiations, and also the scheduled fall and winter performances of the play. The play, which opened March 6th at the Alvin theatre, New York, has closed for the summer.

Affidavits filed in support of Mr. Speiser's claims revealed that Mr. Hemingway's book, "The Fifth Column and the First Forty-nine," had sold 11,171 copies in the United States and Canada since its publication in October, 1938, and that the Guild's production of the play had netted $197,586 since its first performance in New Haven on January 26th.

Guthrie McClintic has filed suit in New York supreme court for 50 per cent of the $167,000 damage award recently won by Edward Sheldon and Margaret Ayer Barnes, author, from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in the "Letty Lynton" infringement suit. The authors' play, "Dishonored Lady," on which the infringement was based, was produced on Broadway by Mr. McClintic and he claims that he is entitled to half of the amount paid for film rights, which he says in this case, is the amount awarded on the infringement charges. Louis Nizer, attorney, represents Mr. McClintic, in what is said to be the first case of its kind on record.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger (†) symbol indicates picture is of the 1939-40 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

AREN'T THOSE COLOR SCENES Beautiful JOHN!

● I never saw anything more realistic in any theatre. In fact, all the pictures in this theatre are so much better than they used to be. Am I imagining things?

No, Mary, Mr. Robinson, the Manager of this theatre, is a friend of mine and he told me that they have recently installed a new type of projection light known as the "One Kilowatt" High Intensity arc. This new light is designed especially for the small theatres. It is a snow white light like daylight and there is half again as much light on the screen as they had formerly. That's why the pictures are so natural and easy to look at.

All I can say, John, is that it's wonderful and believe me I am going to tell my friends about it. Mr. Robinson is to be congratulated for his progressiveness.

IS YOUR Light Source ADEQUATE?

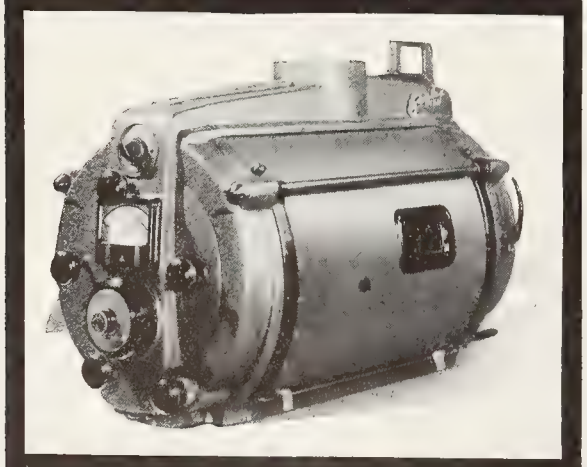
IF your theatre is of moderate capacity, has a fair-sized screen, and uses low intensity lamps, the answer is "No!"



Recent developments in projection equipment, the density of today's films, and the colored pictures, have made it so.

WHAT TO DO?

Install high intensity lamps. Although heretofore you may have been restricted to the use of low intensity lamps, with their dim yellow light, because the operating cost of high intensities has been prohibitive, this barrier has now been removed with

New Projects Reported Total 298 at Mid-Year

WITH THE WAR and various minor conflicts here and and there about the planet, and an imminent presidential election, all contributing their effect upon business in general, construction of new theatres in the United States was not expected to maintain in 1940 the pace set during the past few years. Nevertheless, the first half of the year not only held that pace but materially bettered it, according to projects reports received by BETTER THEATRES' Projects Bulletin Service. A total of 298 building projects were reported up to June 15, against only 168 for the first half of 1939. New theatres reported as being planned during 1939 totalled 542.

Not only were more theatres planned during the last six months, but they were planned more expensively than in the same period last year. The average cost per theatre, according to the data, is $66,490, as compared with $50,500 for the first half of 1939, and an average of $60,000 for the whole of that year.

Despite this increase in cost per theatre, capacities reported tended to run smaller. The average was 647, against 698 for the first six months of 1939, and a 790-seat average for the whole of last year.

The most active construction, as in 1939, was in the East North Central area comprising the states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin. However, that section's showing last year was almost as good as in 1940. The drastic upswing was reported from New England, with more projects in the past six months than during the whole of 1939; The Middle Atlantic States, East South Central States (Alabama, Kentucky, Mississippi, Tennessee), the Pacific slope, and the West South Central States, also were up. Poorest showing was made by the Mountain States, which failed to maintain last year's pace, and by the South Atlantic and West North Central States, also somewhat behind their averages for 1939.

California showed the greatest activity among individual states, with 27 new projects. Those concerning which details were reported, showed an average of only 742 seats, but an average cost of $117,500. Ohio came next with 19 new projects, a seating average of 775, and a cost average of $82,000. Texas followed closely with 18 projects reported, with an average of 800 seats and a $58,660 cost. Other states in order of activity were: New York, 16 projects; Georgia, 15; Illinois, 14; Iowa, 13; Michigan and Alabama tied at 10 each.

Seating averages above 1,000 per theatre were reported only from Michigan, New York and New Jersey, and figures tapered down toward the 500 mark in more westerly regions. Cost averages ranged from $200,000 for the Middle Atlantic area, to $10,000 in the Mountain region.

Materials Values

The selection of materials for the interior finishing of auditoriums purely on a basis of the decorative character of the materials themselves, is seen by Ben Schlanger, New York theatre architect, as a practice which overlooks other important factors, such as acoustics, lighting, labor costs, and so on. His comment came in the course of a discussion of his use of one of the modern hardboards in the Academy theatre now under construction at Liberty, N. Y., where the material is bent to specified architectural forms right on the job.

"Not only acoustics and lighting and such functional matters are involved," he

Speaking of Seating, Mr. Ellis Staggers Lovers in the Middle Bank

GEORGE S. ELLIS

MR. ELLIS puts it this way, "My experience has taught me that many young people, and others, too, for that matter, are inclined to hold hands and even 'cuddle up' while watching a picture. They are probably going to do this whether I like it or not. And," he adds, "I like it."

Mr. Ellis is George S. Ellis, who recently opened his new Park theatre in North Canton, Ohio. The theatre seats 750, and cost $50,000, he says, to build. And Mr. Ellis is only 31 years old.

The seats that he calls "love seats," and even prefers to have regarded as such, are of course merely double-width chairs used to effect a staggered seating plan in the middle bank. To preserve an even aisle line, the extra-wide chairs are alternated with normal chairs at the ends of the rows. Use of such chairs, where they are installed in staggered plans, for cuddling, is probably not confined to Mr. Ellis's Park. But perhaps the practice has seldom had such serious sponsorship. Mr. Ellis thinks it pays.

"The young folks like it," he points out, and observes, "it's better than having the cuddling scattered all over the theatre, often to the annoyance of other patrons. Patrons that don't like it can steer clear of my 'love seats'."

Just to show how well these seats serve a double purpose, two of North Canton's younger set pose convincingly at right.

observed, "but durability and ease of maintenance as well.

"These requirements indicate a preference for comparatively dense and hard material. (Recent work has proved that soft plasters, fabrics, etc., are not always necessary when auditorium forms are basically designed for sound control.) Under the classification of hard materials there are two basic possibilities, the first being the wet process troweled-in-place plaster, and the other the pre-fabricated material put up in large but comparatively thin sections allowing for a dry, rapid installation.

"This latter classification is further subdivided into the combustible and fire-retarding types of material. Although the wet plaster job could produce excellent results, being a very flexible medium, its disadvantage lies in the fact that proper execution incorporating desirable basic shaping of broad surfaces and detailed textures becomes an expensive process. The lengthy working process and drying period also proves disadvantageous in this instance.

"Pre-fabricated sheets are made of asbestos and cement, compressed vegetable fibre and shavings, and plastics. The plastic type would be most desirable but as yet has proved too costly. With the exception of certain wall boards and tiles having sound-absorption characteristics, there are at this time no pre-fabricated sheets being made specifically for use in theatre buildings. The sheets which are available are adaptable only if used with special care in their application to the acoustical problem.

"The ideal pre-fabricated sheet is fire-retarding, not too large to handle, yet large enough to minimize the number of joints to be concealed; it must also lend itself to ease in methods of attachment, and lastly but of great importance, it must be pressed or extruded so that the exposed surface will have the desirable texture, grooving, corrugation, or surface breakup required for sound and light control. It also should be a durable surface, easy to keep clean."

Equipment on Parade

While the plans and policies of the Government, the policies and practices of the Big Interests of the motion picture industry, all drew major time and attention from the exhibitor-delegates to the Allied States convention in Chicago in June, there was plenty of occasion to turn to some of the simpler, but none the less important, affairs of the theatre business. Few exhibitor conventions have had equipment exhibits so comprehensive. More than thirty displays were arranged at the Morrison Hotel, where the convention sessions were held.

Official recognition was also given this phase of the gathering. At the banquet which brought the three-day convention to a close, Joe Goldberg, Chicago equipment dealer, was awarded a loving cup for having arranged the most impressive exhibit. His display included Brenkert projectors and lamps, RCA sound equipment, Brenwood-Linze rectifiers and Ideal auditorium chairs. Among other displays were those of:

The Development of Auditorium Chairs For Today's Theatres

¶ How two young industries joined to raise theatre seating standards — and what they jointly have ultimately produced

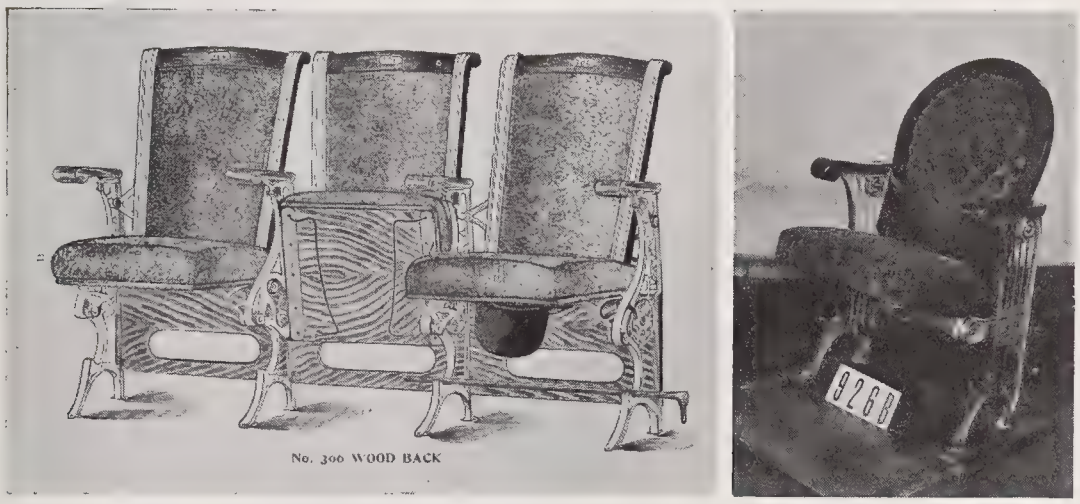
By GEORGE SCHUTZ
and PETER F. MASUCCI

TO APPRECIATE the practical significance of modern auditorium chair design, one must first of all get rid of any notion that today's theatre seating is merely a refinement of an old, familiar implement. It isn't. As an industry, public seating is not much older than the motion picture itself; as a science, it is considerably younger—while the motion picture theatre auditorium chair produced in the United States today may be said to have brought assembly seating to full development only now.

The more recent predecessors of today's chair provided a high degree of comfort, particularly in terms of "softness"; they also reduced hazards to person and were sturdier than chairs of earlier design. Today's chair, however, applies the findings of posture studies to the entire design in order to provide body support as well as uniform resilience, eliminates personal hazard altogether, and reduces maintenance to that minimum which any comparable piece of equipment must have—at a cost substantially below that at which luxury-seating was previously obtainable.

In short, the seating industry has placed the results of its anatomical studies and material tests, and the economies of today's industrial methods, into the creation of superior luxury-seating for practically all theatres. In seating, as well as in other elements of the motion picture theatre, the distinction between "deluxe" and average theatres is essentially a thing of the past.

Film Theatre Influence Begins



The evolution of this new auditorium chair really began with the establishment of the motion picture as the dominant medium of theatrical entertainment. It represents the culmination of years of investigation and industrial effort to meet the developing needs of the film theatre. The design features of today's chair are not matters of caprice; each has a practical, theatre-man's reason for its existence, supplied by the evolution of exhibition itself.

At the outset, of course, the motion picture theatre merely took over for its use the assembly chairs which had been developed during the late 19th century for lodge and school auditoriums, and for stage theatres. The patrons of the nickelodeons asked for little more than that the pictures move; they got slatted folding chairs, fixed into groups by a cross-bar, to sit on, or at best, an all-veneer chair screwed to the wooden floor, which commonly was flat. The other theatres showing motion pictures were really vaudeville houses, the more pretentious of which were equipped with the "opera chair" of the large city "legitimate" theatre.

Both general types of auditorium chairs persisted as seating for motion picture theatres well into the period which saw the cinema accepted as the popular theatre, with "Quo Vadis," "The Birth of a Nation," and a growing number of relatively large, ostentatiously appointed motion picture theatres to persuade the public that a new art had definitely been born. But as new capital came into the business, alert to the financial advantages of mechanically produced drama, the motion picture, erstwhile carnival jerk, was given domicile in splendor that equaled, and sometimes excelled, the elegance of the most opulent of "legitimate" theatres. With the latter's "opera chair" as developed at that stage, the evolution of the motion picture theatre chair directly begins.

What Was Inherited

The points of most practical interest in the chair of today, still frequently called an opera chair, become clearer upon an examination of its immediate predecessors. The typical upholstered chair of that day had a thick plywood back, ¾-inch or heavier, with a cut-out fabric-covered panel of varying shape set into the face. The back was made up of seven sheets of veneers, glued and pressed into a deep curve, and the edges and top were cut out to the desired shape, while the wood back and frame were stained and varnished a dark walnut or (Continued on page 10)

Theatre luxury of another day. The trio in the sketch is from a catalog of the Grand Rapids School Furniture Company of 1893, which says of these models: "We consider No. 306 one of the most luxurious and complete opera chairs ever designed." The other, featured by the Grand Rapids School Furniture Works was really something, with its embossed plush covering, in 1907.

The cushion was of squab (shallow box-like frame filled with moss or tow covered with muslin or burlap) or box-spring type, with leatherette (some of the earliest chairs were covered with real leather) or plush. The end standards were, at the beginning of this period, open-work iron castings, often highly ornamental, with scrolls and angles forming a fancy pattern, but painted black.

Much was made of the fact that the hinges were "completely ball bearing, strong and absolutely noiseless," but on comparison with today's chairs, their hinges were crude, cumbersome, a bit wheezy under stress, and capable of taking hard usage provided there was a breathing spell now and then, and a repair man handy.

At about this time steel began to be used for center standards, hinge arms and back fastenings, bringing greater strength with less weight to the assembly of chairs.

New Exhibitor Demands

The demand of exhibitors, eager to make the most of the film's new position, was constantly for a chair of greater comfort, richer appearance, longer life; the seating industry responded with padded backs, spring-edge seats and some general refinements of design. Backs were built up from a plywood base over which was laid cotton or moss, with the padding and the upholstery fabric extending over the entire front face of the back and secured indirectly to the standards by means of exposed wings. The rear of the back was then covered with a three- or five-ply veneer.

Cushions also began to be built up on a plywood base with the springs laced to the burlap cover, the padding covered with leatherette, plush or mohair, and the seat bottom finished in plywood.

End standards were changed at this stage principally by the addition of red and blue, silver and gold paint to make them "more elegant."

But the showmen, particularly those who were forming circuits and seeking to make each new property more "grand" than the last, kept demanding more comfort, more gorgeous effects. They got it—thick-padded backs, sometimes spring-filled; thicker, springier seats; heavier-looking, more colorful end standards.

Through these latter changes, however, basic construction had remained essentially the same. But as circuit operation extended, increasing the economic significance of each theatre unit and bringing some method into management, basic design was given more study. Hours of operation were increasing also, and this soon revealed the need for seating that could take extraordinary abuse uncomplainingly. The problem was discussed with leading figures of the seating industry and their engineers; the result was several important changes.

A Finer Chair Emerges

Best design now called for built-up veneer backs that were strengthened and given better form by means of reeds or solid wood-framed edges to add support to the unit; additionally, the backs were covered at the rear with a steel panel instead of plywood. The steel panel not only contributed to strength; the circuits, especially, had been impressed by the personal liability factor, and the metal back plates more or less eliminated the hazard of splinters. Another change concealed the wings which hold the backs to the legs between the plywood base and the steel outer panel, with the bolts housed into steel-threaded bushings sunk into the panel and locked in place to insure a permanent, rigid fastening.

For greater life of the cushions, as well as more uniform response to body pressure, the better spring seats were designed with complete spring assembly units having a larger number of coils, which were secured to the unit with chain ties and spring-steel border wires, instead of being stitched to the burlap "bag" enclosing the springs. Padding over the springs was also by the use of sisal and by adopting methods that had been introduced into home furniture fabrication. And as in the case of the back, the seat bottom became a steel plate.

Improvements Continue

The use of concrete auditorium floors, and greater variation in seating plans to meet the visual restrictions of the screen performance, now became reflected in hinge design, allowing more delicate adaptation to plan radius.

Wasn't this enough? It seemed so at the time. Here was a chair for a king, even a modern one; it was durable, adaptable, colorful. It resembled Grandpapa Opera Chair about as much as the ugly duckling did the hen who adopted it. Nevertheless, this was only the beginning.

Came the Roxy theatre and its kind—thick spring-filled backs, super-hyper-deluxe Marshall springs, fine mohair covering, seats rounded at the front corner to coddle the calves! Such extremes were realized only in loge seating, but they showed what could be attained if comfort in seating was merely a matter of "softness."

But there is more to sitting comfort (Continued on page 20)

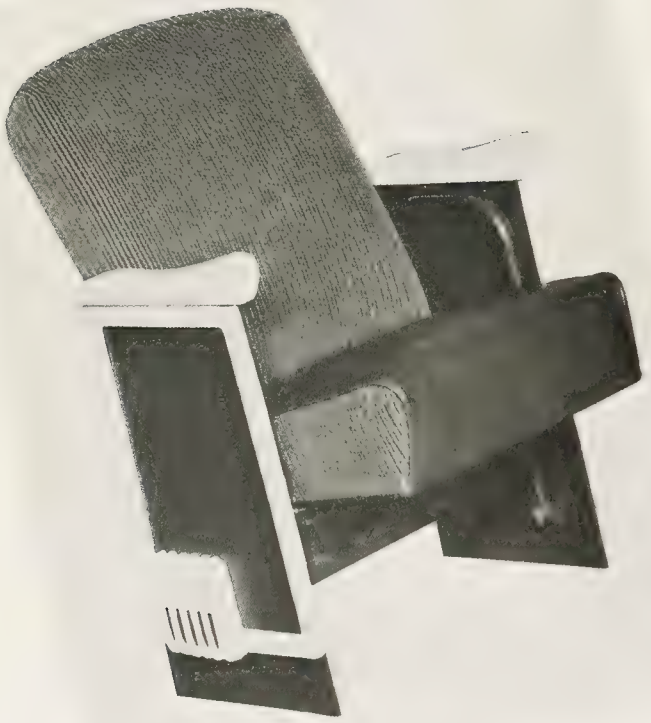
four pages picturing representative models of leading manufacturers



■ The two latest types of the American Seating Company—the "Bodiform" (shown with two end-standard designs in the upper reproductions), and (at right) the "Avion," both of which employ the spring arch method of spring construction (incidentally, the chair used for photographing in the picture at upper right was equipped with a foamed latex seat cushion, with Cavalon leatherette applied directly over it). The Avion belongs to a lower price group but, like the Bodiform, has cast iron end standards and fabric attached by the groove-inset method instead of tacks.

■ The three upper chairs represent three groups in the new line of the International Seat Corporation. That at extreme left is of the Challenger group, which has an inserted panel back. At immediate left is shown a chair from the regular line, in a model having a fully upholstered padded back. Above are shown models of the International posture type, also with fully upholstered back. All three groups are of steel construction throughout, with 20-coil spring seats, concealed bolts and nuts, and this manufacturer's hingeless mounting of the seat.

■ Two representative models from the current line of the Kroehler Manufacturing Company. Of steel construction throughout, the designs incorporate the Kroehler retracting seat.

■ New this month to the line of the Heywood-Wakefield Company are the chairs pictured in the three upper views. Styled by Leo Jiranek, noted New York furniture designer, they are in the modern streamline manner throughout and present certain new features, such as plastic (synthetic material of the kind popularly associated with "bakelite") arm rests and finish in a composition enamel containing wax and having a plastic base, which type of finish has been employed to provide durable luster. Construction is entirely of steel, and the bottom plate is beveled and shaped to increase surrounding space. Center standards are tubular for purposes of strength, and hinge arms are concealed. The back, which is screwless and boltless, may be adjusted for tilt. Padding over the seat coils, which are spring-wire-tied, includes a top layer of sisal which has been impregnated with foamed latex to provide a uniformly smooth surface beneath the fabric. . . . The chairs at right are representative models of the regular Heywood-Wakefield line, in a somewhat higher price group than the Cameo.

FOR PATRON COMFORT TODAY

■ Each of the chairs pictured on this page represents a distinct group of models in the line of the Ideal Seating Company. At top is shown one of the "Mercury" group, with a steel back panel having a top flange for protection of the fabric. Hinges are entirely ball-bearing and compensating, with the bearings packed in grease at the factory and fully enclosed. . . . Above is pictured a model of the "Aristocrat" group, which has backs with rolled edges and shaped and full-finished seat pan completing the streamline pattern. The steel back panel extends below the seat level for protection of seat fabric when seat is raised. The seat is self-faising, and the hinges have outside adjustment of spring tension of the raising device. . . . The chair at left belongs to the "Challenger" group, designed for the medium-price market. Backs have protective flange, and hinges are ball-bearing and compensating.

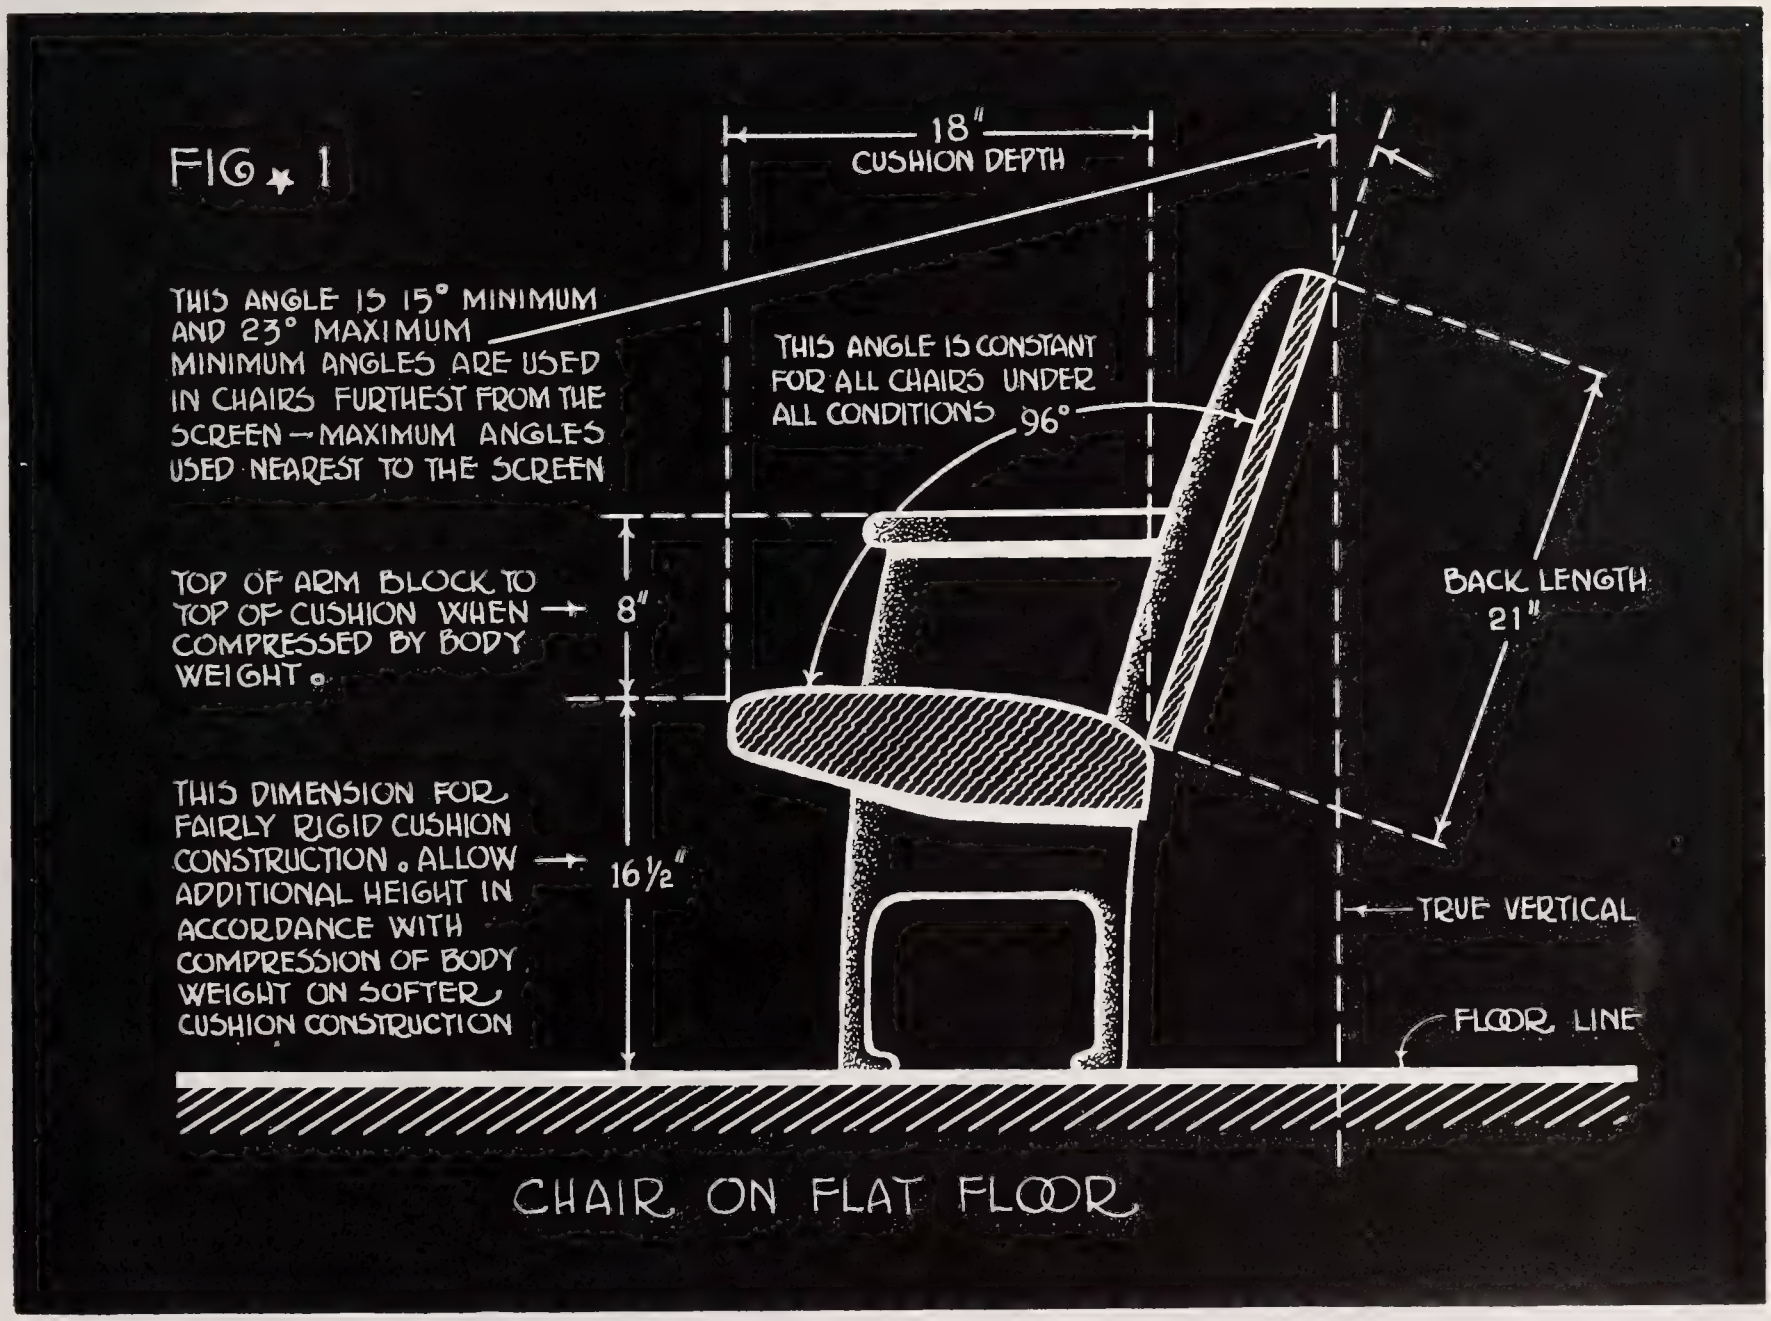
CHAIR SIZE AND FORM

¶ Presenting studies in the relationship of the auditorium chair itself to the seating plan

By BEN SCHLANGER

EXHIBITORS are likely to think in terms of chair width and back-to-back spacing only when they are concerned with an actual, specific seating plan. They would be aided in handling those problems by knowledge of the detail dimensions and angles found in the construction of the theatre chair. At the same time that the materials of construction play an important part in providing comfort for the patron, the shape and detail dimensions of the chair must conform to the needs of comfortable sitting posture.



Some day the important theatre chair manufacturers may see fit to form a research association to sponsor plans for standardization of "comfort dimensions"; in the meantime, each chair buyer should be able to specify the desired dimensions and angles of chairs in the purchase contract.

In purchasing chairs, the exhibitor must realize that he is buying more than just the chairs themselves. With the chairs must come experienced chair engineering service which will insure the buyer that the chairs will be custom-fit to the floor conditions of the theatre. The drawings on this and the next page show the dimensions and angles which must be constant and maintained for all chairs regardless of the particular position of the chair or the character of the floor slope at the particular chair position.

Variations in dimensions and angles of the chairs are generally not desirable in so far as the need for a simplified installation is concerned, but these variations can be avoided in upper tier seating only where the chair back angle and seat cushion angle can be constant. A 17° angle for the chair back of all upper level seating, is to be recommended.

In the main floor seating, a change in chair back angle is to be recommended at about every fourth row of seats. Starting with the first row of seats nearest the screen and using a chair back angle of 23°, the angle should be reduced by one degree for every change at four row intervals. At distances farthest from the screen, the patron is able to see the upper area of the screen without leaning backward or raising his head, therefore these positions warrant the lesser inclines in the chair back.

Other drawings show the effect of chair design in influencing back-to-back row spacing when seats are placed on stepped platforms, and the posture problem as affected by the concentric arc (radial) or straight line formation of seating rows.

Checking Up on Seating Values

Some notes on the exhibitor's role in the business of seating the auditorium

THERE ARE at least four points of view concerning theatre chairs and chair arrangements.

From the owner's or theatre manager's point of view:

The number of seats in a theatre is a measure of the potential box office grosses.

The architect: The number of seats generally required by the owner limits the architect until he is forced to base, to an important degree, his designs and arrangements on the economic desirability of getting a certain number of seats into a given area.

The seller of seats: Seats last too long and they sell at too low a price. The competition is too keen and too many theatre managers don't appreciate how much good seats mean to the theatre in terms of audience satisfaction.

The theatre patron: Two or three hours is a long time to stay sitting down, and seats should be comfortable—soft, yet giving support to the body in a natural posture.

All of these points of view are important; none can be discarded. Balance and proportion must have weight in arriving at a proper seating scheme for any given theatre.

In brief, a seat so set or located that the occupant cannot easily view the screen and be reasonably comfortable while doing so, is valueless.

This means that the architect must not plan such a seat and that the owner must not insist upon such a seat. A salesman should not sell such a seat because the theatre's customer does not want to sit in such a seat.

Determining "Use Factor"

The theatre operator, however, has entertainment to sell, and the number of seats is important because the number of seats represents his greatest possible capacity for doing business.

Recently a man made a survey of neighborhood theatres and concluded that they had a use factor of 60%. From my experience, I cannot accept this. His findings showed that total seating capacity, multiplied by number of shows per day, multiplied by 60%, was the average daily business done by the theatre. If this were a fact, I believe a lot of theatre managers would be mighty happy. I believe, however, that this use factor will be more nearly 30% than 60%. At any rate the formula is a good one, and a "use factor" certainly has something to do with seats.

Importance of Chair Angles

other things that have a direct bearing on theatre chair comfort. For instance, the angle that the seat bottom makes with the incline of the floor and the horizontal, also the angle of the seat bottom in relation to the back, and the angle of the seat back to the vertical. I am sure all these are given thought by the designers of seats, but very little thought seems to be given them by some installers of seating and by theatre managers themselves. The accompanying sketch illustrates this point.

All angles (shown) in relation to the floor pitch and the vertical angle of sight (not shown) have a definite bearing on "Chair Comfort"

The "Reverse Slope"

It is my opinion that the seat manufacturers and installers of seats have done more to bring the so-called "reverse floor" (combination upward and downward pitch) into disfavor with some operators than any one other thing. Architects and owners who want to use the reverse pitch floor for economic reasons have every right to expect more attention to seating with this type of floor from the seating companies.

Development of Auditorium Chairs

than feather-bed "softness"—and more to theatre seating than sitting comfort. Part of the comfort problem lies in the sphere of seating plan; yet another part lies in the relationship of the chair itself to the plan. [For a graphic treatment of this relationship, the reader is referred to pages 17 and 18.—ED.] So far as fundamental factors were concerned, perhaps the principal change in the late '20's was that affecting row spacing rather than the chair.

The aim of pleasing the public more and more finally suggested to many exhibitors that there should be greater space between rows. This ultimately had its effect, however, upon the chair itself; traffic between rows was damaging the upper edges of the upholstered backs, so the steel panel was raised to a point flush with, or slightly higher than, the top edge of the chair back, while later on the back upholstery was thinned out to gain a little more passage space, and metal edges, of enameled steel, chrome or aluminum, were introduced as shields for the back fabric.

A significant detail of cushion design was also introduced at about this time: The top was extended out, and the front edge tilted back to enable the patron's lower legs and feet to be drawn back conveniently to allow another patron to pass down the row.

Approaching the Limit

Model by model, improvement of details went on, most of them dictated by the practical conditions of motion picture theatre operation. For example, the need for greater protection of fabric occasioned by the continuous performance, with patrons passing in and out of rows, suggested turning up the steel bottom panel of the seat at the front edge, while hazards to the clothing and the person of patrons presented by sharp edges and obtrusions, gradually resulted in their substantial elimination.

At the same time, a growing refinement of taste in theatre styling, rejecting the gaudy carnival spirit of earlier vogue, was expressed in simpler end standards with more conservative patterns and colors relatively subdued (there were models with all but the legs of the end standards in richly-grained wood).

Already posture studies were asserting themselves in chair design. The seat was lowered and the back shaped and more exactly related to the seat to effect conditions more suitable to the average person's natural sitting position. And in manufacturing, special devices were improved and added to for determining exactly the specific adaptability of metals and fabrics to the seating demands of the film theatre.

Structural strength test. The cylinder, part of the American Seating Company's elaborate testing equipment, automatically rises and drops on seat.

The Limit Reached

Yet the chair of even that later day, relatively but a few years ago, was not the chair of today. The situation has not been more authoritatively described than it was in a brochure by Dr. Bennett of the American Seating Company a year or so ago.

"As with the designing of the theatres themselves," he wrote, "and as with the composing of plays and operas and the staging of them, elaboration and refinement seemed to have progressed to the farthest bounds of practical limitations within traditional ideals. End standards could carry no more ornamentation or more striking color effects. Covering materials could be no more vivid or bizarre. No further deepening of spring construction could achieve a greater softness. Like an over-fatted porker, the most luxurious theatre chairs were getting very much in their own way as well as in the way of those who used them.

"Detail after detail had been improved and refined under the impetus of complaint, criticism, suggestion and competitive activity, until the ultimate limitations were apparently reached. Researchers and engineers were conscious of ideals unattained, but there seemed nothing to be done about it. With the most luxurious seats already

A FELLA isn't accountable for his actions during tense moments in the movies... even to the tearing apart of the upholstery with his fingernails! That's one reason why it pays to make sure your seats are covered with CAVALON.

CAVALON is the result of years of Du Pont research. It resists general abrasive wear, edge wear, cracking and peeling. It has sufficient strength to prevent tearing and puncturing. The surface coating of CAVALON is treated with a patented "case-hardening" process that makes this rugged material unusually resistant to flexing and wear, yet does not harm its leather-like characteristics and pliability.

CAVALON is available in many good-looking colors that are highly resistant to crocking, bleeding and fading. The American Seating Company uses CAVALON on their American Bodiform Chairs. a foot thick and backs getting ever thicker, how could still greater comfort be reconciled with the demand for more seats in the same space, more room for passing, and the inelastic limits of price? How could still greater customer comfort and contentment be reconciled with yet greater box office returns and operating economy? The ideal was not yet attained, but apparently the practical limitations were. It was not perfection, but saturation of refinements that had been attained."

Industry Goes Modern

So it seemed, because the original "opera chair" pattern, remote though it now had become, still persisted as a guide to theatre chair evaluation. About this time, however, industrial design in general was undergoing radical change. With faster trains established to compete with air transport, locomotives were made handsome as well—functionally beautiful, expressing speed. Automobiles, flatirons, typewriters—hundreds of machines, implements and articles of business, home and pleasure, were being brought to the industrial designer usually after technologists had completed basic improvements in functional characteristics as a result of manifold developments in chemistry, metallurgy, mechanics, etc. And the industrial designer followed the modern principle of design—to attain, not superficial, extraneous prettiness, but a beautiful interpretation of function. This has happened to the theatre chair.

Today's Theatre Chair

That the "opera chair" pattern has been at last discarded is demonstrated in the representative models of today's chairs pictured elsewhere in this issue (Pages 11, 12, 13 and 14). Backs are streamlined, form fitting, gracefully curved, providing new comfort on a scientific posture basis, and dynamically expressing comfort. Center standards have the same flowing lines of the end standards, making a row of chairs an optical unit. New beauty, this, but founded on practical engineering: The backs, through their shaping, provide more comfort in less space, and their streamlined unity with the rest of the chair is associated with their being fastened directly to the center standards to eliminate insecure joinings; because of their shape, the center standards contribute to a design which pulls the lower rear of the chair inward, providing more passage space.

Hinges are wholly or partly concealed, and they exhibit for the first time substantial grounds for calling them noiseless.

Springs are better constructed and tied, employing spring wire tempered by new methods.

Foamed latex (popularly referred to as "rubber") is available, following several years of usage in the transportation field, for theatre chair cushions.

Rubberized hair may be specified for padded backs, while a combination of rubber materials, hair and sisal may be specified for cushions to enhance comfort and to assure it for a longer period of time.

All these advances and others, many of general application, some peculiar to certain models and makes, realize at last a

New Fine-Grained Antique Finish in Standard Colors

A NEW GROUP of antique finishes, called "Plastic Moorish," has been developed by the du Pont company for their Cavalon simulated leather for theatre seat covering. The new finishes, which are available in all standard colors, are characterized by a fine grain effect with darker veining, in which, at random intervals, tiny, clustered curves appear, almost white and very enlivening. "Case-hardening" produces a soft dry surface that is tough.

Cavalon belongs to the rubber-ground leather class of leatherettes. The coating is a composition which resembles the structure of genuine leather in consisting of a fibrous material held in a suitable binder. The finishing process applied to this composition gives it the grain and appearance of leather and greatly increases its strength. The colors are not surface coatings, but extend throughout the composition.

In Cavalon designed for seating use, a special flexing test is employed to duplicate actual conditions of use. A completed seat cushion, upholstered in Cavalon, is placed in a machine which causes a large, heavy block to "sit" on the seat and rise again 100 times per minute. The springs are compressed, and the upholstery material flexed, exactly as in actual use.

Here's one leatherette upholstery that's made for the "long pull." Not just modest first cost, but years of upkeep savings.

Naugahyde is a wear-defying combination—ground GENUINE LEATHER for toughness, rubber for non-cracking pliancy. Permanently pliant because there's nothing to dry out and cause cracking and peeling. And lastingly resistant to abrasion because the exclusive "U. S." tempering process replaces perishable "finishing" coats.

Naugahyde's "springy" rubber content keeps it smooth — even over deep cushioning. It doesn't bag or grow permanently out of shape.

These columns are regular features of Better Theatres dealing with methods by which the theatre may be planned as efficiently as possible for the exhibition of motion pictures. Both Mr. Schlanger and Mr. Potwin are consultants to Better Theatres. All inquiries concerning planning should be addressed to Better Theatres Service Department.

STAGE EFFECTS . . . FLOORS

FOOTLIGHTS BUILT into the front of the platform at the screen in a motion picture theatre are used only for the purpose of lighting the curtain, or of light color-tinting the picture at the beginning of a feature presentation. This method dates back to the stage theatre when they were used for many other stage lighting purposes. More economical curtain lighting schemes can be used for the motion picture theatre, such as a few spots or floods hidden in the ceiling or the side walls near the screen. Use of reflector type lamps with color caps and flexible sockets are recommended.

Floor Simplification

Boweled or saucer-shaped floors can be avoided in certain instances, and by so doing the cost of the floor construction and finishing can be reduced. When the saucer shape floor is not used, the rows of seats form straight lines across the width of the auditorium, instead of curved concentric lines. This straight line formation should be used only when the number of seats across the width of the auditorium amount to 18 or less. If straight line rows are used for greater widths, those sitting to the extreme sides will not face the screen unless they sit in a very uncomfortable position, due to the twist in position that has to be made to face the screen.

It must be noted, however, that straight line row seating becomes less desirable when seats are placed close to the screen, therefore the first row of seat should be away from the screen a distance equal to, or more than, the picture width.

The straight line row formation greatly simplifies the construction when the seating floor has to be built up on structural framing due to the necessary existence of a space below the seating level.

Checking of Plans

In this column in the last issue, comment was made on handling construction. It was said (Item 4) that it is satisfactory for a single individual or company to agree to furnish plans and specifications and construct the entire work in accordance with these plans. This should be modified, however, to say that in my opinion this method is satisfactory provided that the exhibitor submits these plans and specifications to a reliable architect for checking, and provided that the exhibitor is able to obtain competitive estimates based on these plans and specifications.

Rear Wall Curve Following Seating

IN these columns and in associated articles, emphasis is continually being placed upon the importance of eliminating curvatures which follow the curve of the seating banks, when planning the fundamental shape of the rear wall. In several cases where this recommendation has been made in connection with a new design, the question has risen, "Why is it necessary to eliminate the curvature if we cover the rear wall completely with acoustical material? The answer depends on the material; many acoustical materials do not have a sufficiently high absorption value throughout the frequency range to overcome the effects of the curvature.

What Can Happen

The writer was recently "called in" to determine the nature and source of acoustical difficulty in two theatres, both having curved rear walls which were fully covered with absorbing material. Listening tests indicated no concentration of sound at the high frequencies because, fortunately, the material used on the rear wall was absorptive enough to reduce the intensity of the first reflection at these frequencies. However, in the entire center bank of seats toward the front, there was a "hang-over" of sound at the low frequencies, similar to a "boomy" effect. This effect was not encountered at the rear of the seating area.

The material used on the rear wall in both of these theatres was a type of acoustical tile which had a high sound absorption value at the middle and upper range of frequencies, but very little absorption at the low frequencies. As a result, the low-frequency wave was being returned to the front seats at a high intensity, concentrated and reinforced by the curvature. The number of seats affected was even greater than would have been affected by a high-frequency concentration of sound.

Avoid Focal Reflection

For these reasons, it is not wise, nor practical, to design the rear wall in the form of a concave curve and hope to rely upon the acoustical material to overcome its effect on sound.—C. C. P.

AVOIDING "DEAD" SOUND

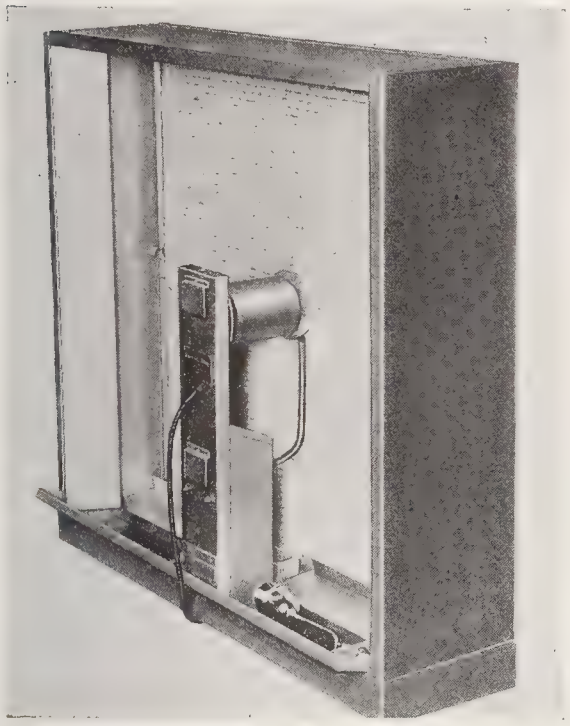
A COMMON PRACTICE in planning acoustical treatment for modern theatres is to cover the walls or ceiling either completely or almost completely with sound absorbing materials. No doubt decorative techniques are responsible, in a large measure, for this practice. A surface of uniform texture may be desired for the side walls or ceiling, and it may seem that covering an entire surface with the acoustical material offers the easiest solution to the problem. In following this practice, one should be sure, however, that the result is not to make the sound seem "dead" or lifeless.

An Example—

Taking, as an example, a typical theatre auditorium where treatment is required, the acoustical analysis may show that in addition to the normal absorption of seats, carpet, probable average audiences, and plain plaster surfaces, about 850 sabines of acoustical material are needed to provide the best hearing conditions for reproduced speech and music. If an efficient tile having a sound absorption value of 70% is selected, about 1,200 square feet of this material will be required. The rear wall in our example may take about 400 square feet (it is the one surface in the motion picture theatre which properly may be completely covered for sound absorption). This leaves 800 square feet to work with on the side walls or the ceiling.

As previously stated in these columns, ceiling treatment is not usually necessary except in very large houses, because with upholstered seats and with an audience, a high degree of absorption of sound is already present in the up and down direction. Therefore the remaining amount of material required will prove most efficient if used on the side walls.

Side Wall Treatment



The total side wall area above a 4-foot wainscot, in our example, is slightly greater than 2,000 square feet, yet to fulfill the acoustical requirements we should cover only 800 square feet. Some ingenuity is of course required in planning this amount of side wall treatment for maximum efficiency and pleasing decorative effect.

The mistake so frequently made is to proceed with the idea that coverage of the entire surface will do no harm acoustically and that the finished wall will look much better if the treatment is so installed.

MARKET NOTES:

Air Washer Uses Evaporative Pad

THE AIR washer which the U. S. Air-Conditioning Corporation of Minneapolis, is now marketing, employs the evaporative pad principle. Instead of the air being passed through a spray chamber, it is drawn through a fibre pad which is kept saturated with cool water from a well or other source.

The water in the tank is constantly recirculated by means of centrifugal pump and motor assembly. The pump equipment and the spray outlet, which is of rotary type, are designed as a single unit to require a minimum amount of supply water for reduction of the air temperature.

Because of the unit construction and the number of parts eliminated by use of the evaporative pad, installation has been simplified. The cooling chamber is adapted to installation with existing blower equipment (if the blower is of sufficient capacity). Available in capacities from 5,000 to 20,000 cubic feet per minute, these units may be installed in series to provide a multiple plant for evaporative cooling.

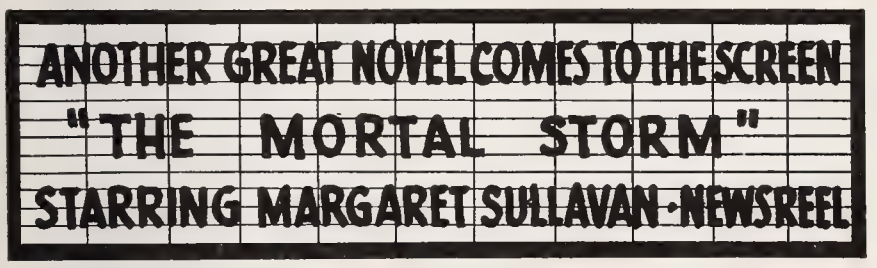
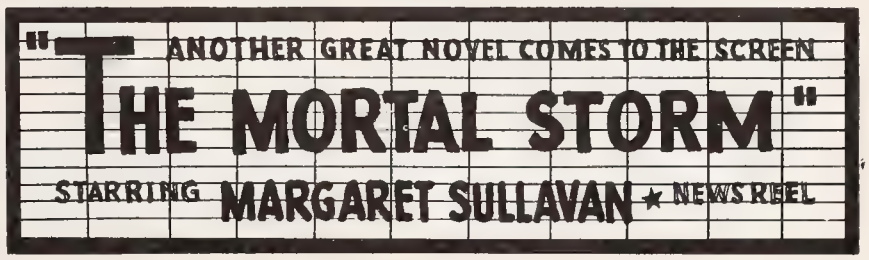
The Modern Way of Marquee Display



A graphic representation of the advantages of the new attraction equipment



The sketch immediately above is a fair representation of the conventional marquee attraction panel, characteristic of such equipment, even after the introduction of silhouette letters, until quite recently. Copy consists in mere "labels," crowded into uniform lines, therefore illegible, and altogether monotonous. Then——the following program (immediately above)—a new feature, new players, a new show to sell, but with the marquee copy looking exactly the same, as that for the preceding program.

The sketch above indicates the use of today's multiple-line frame for interchangeable letters, but (continue to the next column)— compare the latter display of "The Mortal Storm" copy with that above. The former is an example of failure to take full advantage of the multiple-line frame by using a combination of letter sizes in typographical arrangement. Legibility may be gained because of the availability of white space, but monotony is not overcome. The value of using letters of several sizes in "typographical" arrangement, applying the principles of printed advertising, is clearly demonstrated in the above sketch. In this display we find emphasis where it is wanted—a selling line, or slogan—attractive form—life! The same qualities are preserved in advertising the next program, but (as is indicated in the sketch below) instead of physical sameness, the succeeding display may be readily varied so as to announce, at a glance, that the program has changed. To attractiveness and full legibility and selling punch is added variation, through the showmanlike use of the new marquee display equipment with several sizes.

A STRIKING EXAMPLE OF MARQUEE DISPLAY MODERNIZATION

The Nemo theatre. Skouras house on upper Broadway, New York, shown (above, left) before the recent modernization of its marquee display equipment, and after Wagner multiple-line, silhouette-letter equipment was installed. Five sizes of letters are used: 8-, 10-, 16- and 24-inch, plus 4-inch letters.

Keeping Daily Check on Cooling System Operation

• Concluding a discussion begun in the June 1st issue on air-conditioning plant maintenance procedure, offering a simplified operating log sheet

By J. T. KNIGHT, Jr.

WITH THE PROCEDURE that has been described, and the instruments indicated, the theatre operator or his manager can be pretty sure of trouble-free operation of his air-conditioning plant, if he keeps proper records. Before discussing these, however, just a word about expansion valve leaks.

Sight glasses on the liquid line to each expansion valve are well worth the cost of installing and worth risking the possible hazard of adding another connection or a joint where a leak can occur. With the aid of a flash light one can actually see the liquid in the sight glass and tell with a great degree of accuracy whether the expansion valve is functioning properly. This also aids in determining whether the system has an adequate charge of Freon. These sight glasses have covers to be screwed over them. Most types of glasses are fitted with a small gasket in the cover. Be sure, when replacing these covers that the gasket is there, because the cover properly screwed on gives needed protection against leaks.

¶ Signposts of Trouble

Sight glasses, in combination with gauges and thermometers will aid you, your engineer or your service man in diagnosing any troubles that might occur. Even a layman can ask questions about a system and possibly in that way detect or anticipate trouble if he checks readings of the same instruments each day. Therefore, I am including with this article a form of abbreviated log sheet (much simpler than a real operating log) that tells quite a complete story to the engineer, while it can forewarn the manager of possible trouble.

Please note that the log calls for both pressure and temperature readings. This is a definite check on your instruments, because following the law of perfect gases, Freon, at a given temperature, is always at the same pressure; and vice versa, Freon at a given pressure always has the same temperature. Following are excerpts from a table of properties of Freon.

FOR AVERAGE LOW PRESSURE SIDE

TEMPERATURE DEGREES FAHRENHEIT	GAUGE PRESSURE POUNDS PER SQUARE INCH
26	25.37
28	26.89
30	28.46
32	30.07
34	31.72
36	33.43
38	35.18
40	36.98
42	38.81
44	40.70

FOR AVERAGE HIGH PRESSURE SIDE

TEMPERATURE DEGREES FAHRENHEIT	GAUGE PRESSURE POUNDS PER SQUARE INCH
94	106.3
96	109.8
98	113.3
100	116.9
102	120.6
104	124.3
106	128.1
108	132.1
110	136.0
112	140.1

EXAMPLE: Suppose your log showed that the suction temperature of your com-pressor was 40°, and on the same log, at the same time, it gave the gauge pressure as 40 pounds. By reference to the table, a temperature of 40° corresponds to 36.98 pounds, or a pressure of 40 pounds corresponds to a temperature of 44°.

Something must be wrong. Perhaps it was a human error in reading the instruments. Go down to the compressors yourself and take a reading. If your readings

Also please note on this suggested log sheet the identification of instruments. "T" means thermometer and "P" means pressure gauge. The instruments are actually logged with aluminum tags stamped with that code identification. For example: T-96 is the thermometer in the gas line going into the No. 1 condenser; P-4W is the pressure gauge reading on the discharge side of the water pump.

check, then it is likely that the engineer made a careless mistake in the entry in the log. If your readings do not check, then examine the thermometer. If it is not broken and it is properly in contact, then you are justified in concluding that the gauge is in error and needs calibrating. It should be removed from the system and sent to the manufacturers for checking and calibration or repair.

The various columns on the right and at the top down to and including T-5, are for temperature readings in the theatre. The actual number of each reading should be designated by the manager. For the purpose of appraising the operation of the plant, readings near the peak of temperature outside, or of occupancy inside, or both, are of greatest value. This form can easily be made up on a typewriter.

for the moderate sized theatre using a screen up to 18 feet in width; where high intensity projection has been heretofore denied by prohibitive operating cost.

To secure the desired screen brilliancy with the present dense black and white and the colored films, twice as much light is required as is possible to project by any low intensity lamp.

This necessary doubling in light over the low intensity has been made possible at an increased combined current and carbon cost of less than 2c per hour.

Taking Advantage of the Advancement in Accessories

• Improvements in projection equipment of the last year or two have not been confined to the major items; the service implements have been modernized as well, for greater efficiency and also to reduce overhead

By J. J. SEFING

LIKE ANY part of your theatre, the projection room should be checked occasionally and an inventory made of the equipment and miscellaneous accessories. This will give you a definite idea as to the operating condition of the various materials and their efficiency. The motion picture industry is constantly turning out better, and often less expensive equipment, which will save you time and money in the operation of your theatre.

It's a bad habit with all of us to let things "ride" along as they are without stopping to think if improvements can be made. Showmanship is a highly competitive business, which means we all have to be on our toes constantly or be left by the wayside. It seems, in many cases, that the projection room is a woefully neglected part of the theatre. As long as the projectors are throwing a picture on the screen, the main interest is concentrated on other parts of the theatre with little thought of the projection room. There is no doubt that the projection room is the "heart" of your theatre, and if a breakdown occurs there, the entire show breaks down.

The most delicate and precision-made equipment is housed there, and where even the smallest accessory has a direct bearing on the show, if this equipment is installed and maintained properly and the various accessories purchased to suit the needs of modern projection, you will have a trouble-free and patronage-building performance. The projectionist is a very busy person once the show starts and all of his moves are timed. Anything that throws him off this timing will surely affect the precision, therefore the quality.

CHANGEOVERS

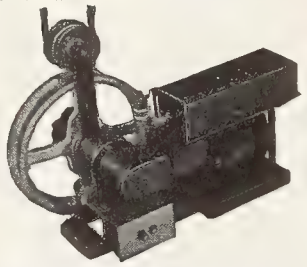
However, every miscue in the projection room cannot be blamed on the projectionist. For instance, if he has to operate a home-made changeover device, it is almost impossible for him to make a perfect changeover. When about three such changeovers are made every hour, the abrupt break in the smoothness of the picture will be noticed by the patrons, at least in time. To put up with this condition day in and day out is not necessary when an efficient, positive and up-to-date changeover devise can be purchased at a relatively small price. An automatic changeover device permits the simplest installation both in mounting and wiring. One can be obtained to fit any type of mechanism—Super-Simplex, Simplex E-7, with or without rear shutter mount, and Motiograph rear shutter mount; for example, a device consisting of an opening and closing coil mounted on the tip of each mechanism at rear with a metal shutter to cut off the projected light beam. These coils can be operated by a foot switch mounted in front of each projector base, or by hand, with the switch in the unit housing the coils. Such an electric, automatic changeover device will assure every performance complete smoothness.

Another thing that handicaps the projectionist and ruins film is the use of old reels having sides bent and burned, and the slots in the hub few and small, making threading hard. For a few dollars, modern reels can be had that have sides which cannot come apart and will always run true. They have six slots for easy threading with finger holes and all edges smooth that cannot cut the fingers or the film. They are of cast aluminum and not the old black-enameled reel of thin sheet metal. They will please the projectionist because of their easy handling, and the owner because of their economy and long wear under rough usage.

Another complaint that is very often made is that the mechanisms are improperly oiled, and in many cases they bind up as a result. If the projectionist has to oil the machine with an old-fashioned oil can, it is almost impossible for him to oil all parts properly. A few pennies invested in a new mechanical forced feed oil can with proper spout, will easily and cheaply solve the problem of inadequate lubrication, which is usually very expensive.

LENSES

An occasional checkup should be made of the lenses to see if there are any pit marks or "stars" on the surface. When the light on the screen is not uniform, it may be caused by badly fitted lenses instead of the projector. A lot of time is lost checking the projector, lamphouse assembly and d.c. source of supply to find the fault, with not a thought given to the condition of the lens.



SPLICERS

A very important feature that is quite often overlooked is how efficiently and safely the projectionist can handle film. Film improperly handled or stored can be very dangerous to life and property. However, with modern film accessories this danger can be practically eliminated. First, the inspection and splicing of film should be done with modern, up-to-date accessories which are clean, time-saving and a real departure from the old two-handed methods. A good splicer will, with one stroke, accurately turn the film or both frame line and stub end, with no white or black line showing between frames; only three sprocket holes are cut, which prevents a misframe. The film is held in perfect alignment on the cutting block so that no improperly matched sprocket holes or rough edges are made. A modern emulsion makes a firmer splice with ease and perfection not possible with the old-fashioned razor-blade or square-edged scraper. A good grade of film cement should be used, and a few pennies be invested in a patented film applicator set, which will save in cement the money spent.

REWINDERS

Every up-to-date projection room should have a set of first-class hand rewinders, but for safety and speed in rewinding, an automatic totally-enclosed rewind machine is a good investment if your budget allows. It is smooth and quiet in operation, will not start until the door is closed and will stop automatically if the film breaks inside. A better type has a viewing-glass on top for watching the film as it rewinds.

WASTE CANS

At least two self-closing metal waste cans should be installed, one for the rewind room, the other for the projection room, to hold scrap film, waste rags or any other inflammable material. Such a waste can has no springs, as it opens with a press of the foot and closes automatically, leaving both hands free. It reduces fire hazard to the minimum.

A modern metal rewind table with at least one drawer and rack for film cabinet should be part of the projection layout. This table is safer and more efficient than any home made table as it permits the projectionist to work freely and with speed. It has permanent clamping blocks for the accommodations of all types of rewinders.

FILM CABINETS

An approved fireproof sectional film cabinet for 2,000-foot reels should be in every rewind room. It is constructed with 1½-inch double wall throughout, of heavy gauge steel, filled between with approved plastic fire-proofing compound that hardens like concrete. It can be had in 5-, 6- 8-, 10- or 12-reel units. Where the local code regulations call for a vented cabinet, with sprinkler head inside, this type of film cabinet should be installed, since it will bring a decided reduction in your insurance charges.

CARBON CABINET

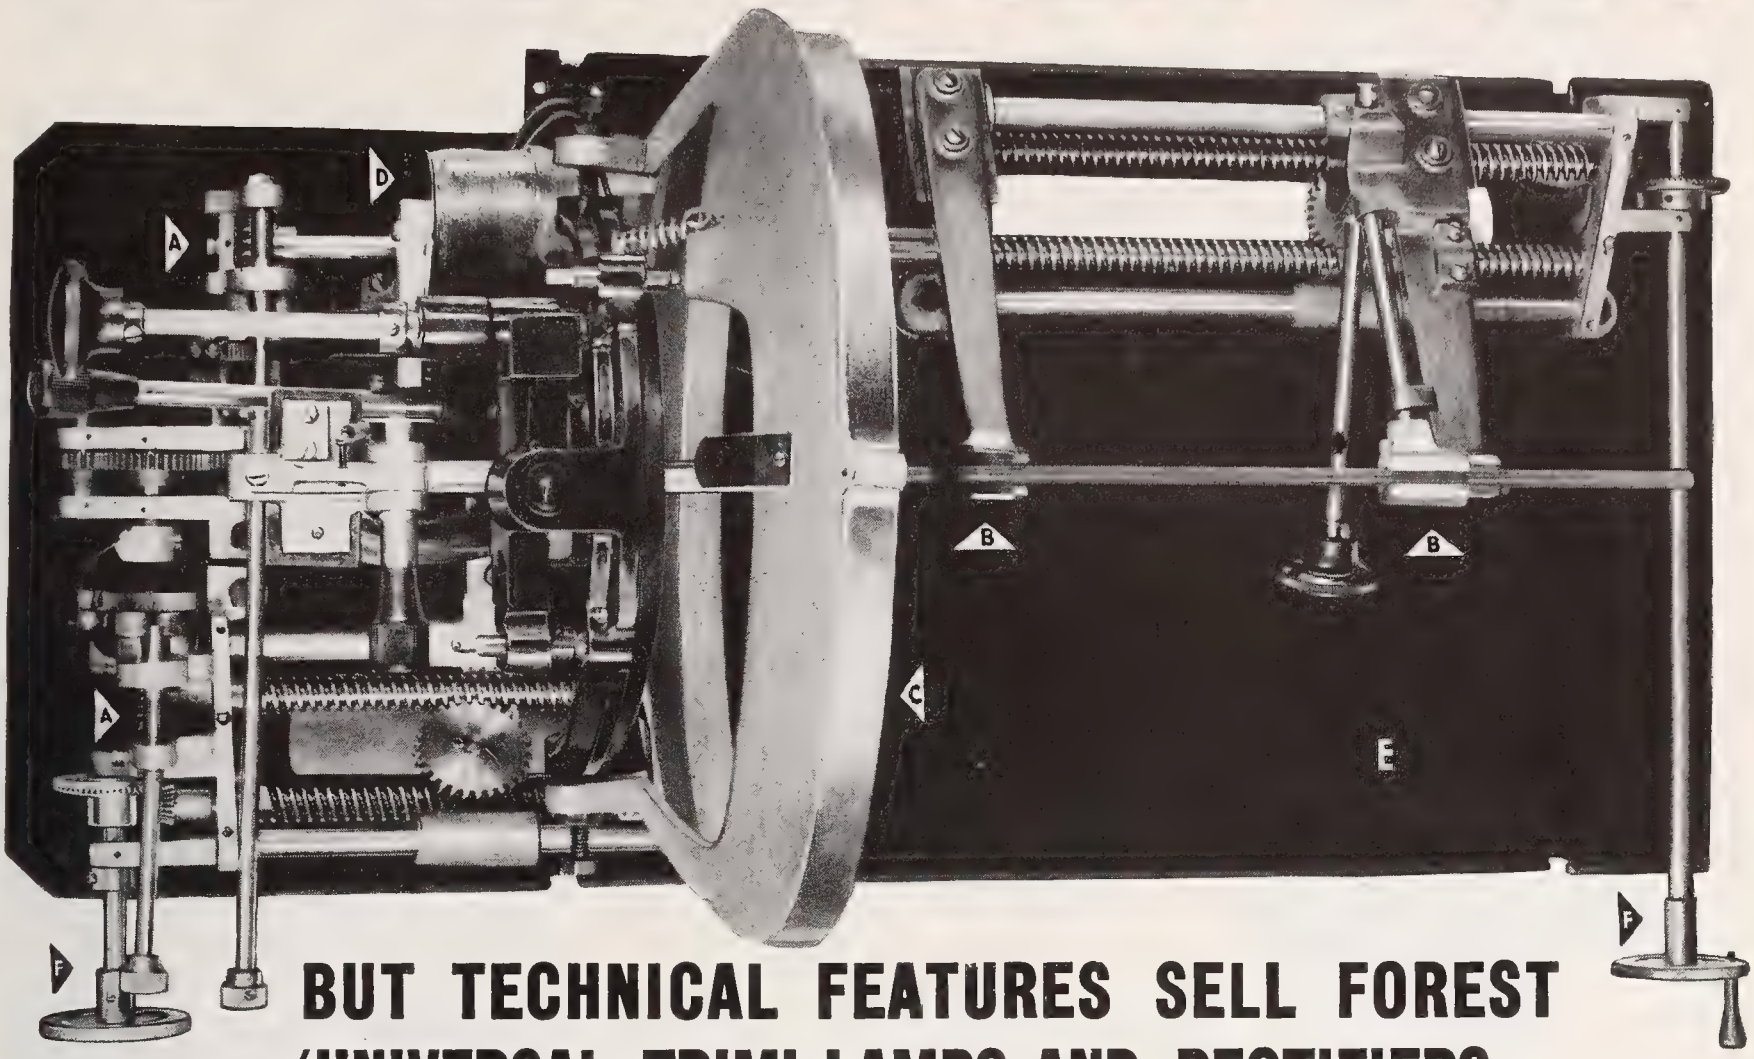
Another important item which may seem unnecessary at first glance, is a carbon cabinet. A carbon cabinet will hold about six hundred 6-mm. x 9-inch carbons, and three hundred 7-mm. x 14-inch carbons, with additional utility compartment for holding pliers, screw drivers, etc. In many projection rooms, for the lack of this cabinet, the carbons are either suspended by wire at the rear of the projector over the arc switch, or laid loosely on top of the switch. This is done for convenience in trimming the arcs and drying out the carbons; however, many carbons are broken when in a hurry to trim—they slip out or are accidentally pushed out. This cabinet will pay for itself in a short time by preventing the accidental breakage of carbons.

Another saving can be made by buying lamp guards for trouble lights, wall and ceiling lights. A lamp guard costs a few pennies, but the replacement of lamps accidentally broken will cost much more in the long run, and there is always a possibility of fire when a trouble lamp is broken near inflammable material.

CURRENT SUPPLY

Attention is due here also to the new low-voltage arc lamps for use in the smaller theatres. The d.c. power can be supplied by a tube-type rectifier, or a new type low-voltage motor-generator set.

The rectifier has four 15-ampere tubes making available 60 amperes, but as the arc burns at only 40 amperes and 27 volts, the tubes are never overloaded and last longer. However, extreme care must be taken in operation of this rectifier and arc lamp because of its sensitive low-voltage characteristic; any slight power "un-balance" will show itself on the screen, in dim and tinted light.



First, the arc gap must be constantly kept at the required amount as shown on the arc image screen on top of the lamphouse, and the tubes in the rectifier must be of the proper type and make. When the tubes are of different make they will not fit the socket properly in the rectifier and, as a result, will make a poor connection. On two occasions it was found that lead solder was placed by someone in the theatre on the base of the tubes to make them fit tight in the socket. When the rectifier was in use the heat fused the base of the tubes with the base of the sockets and it was impossible to remove any of the tubes whole for replacement. All of this trouble could have been avoided by making sure that the tubes were of the proper type and make to fit the rectifiers.

The motor-generator for use with this low-voltage arc is smaller in appearance than other sets and has a capacity of 40 to 80 amperes and 33 volts d.c. It has great operating stability, causes minimum damage to carbon tips when the arc is struck, and it can compensate for difference in line drop to the lamps. A new type of ballast rheostat is used with this set, having the resistors for the two lamps in one unit. The voltage drop through this ballast rheostat is only 5 volts.

The care of this type of motor-generator should be even more thorough than of other types. The commutator must be kept clean at all times by using only coarse canvas or cheesecloth held against it while running—never use emery or sandpaper on the commutator. Install this generator at least 12 inches from the floor so as not to pick up fine particles of dust and dirt which otherwise would be sucked into the commutator and brushes. Always replace old brushes with the grade recommended by the manufacturer of the generator in order to save yourself an expensive job of turning down or re-slotting the commutator.

If the generator is set on an insulated base of concrete, sand, cork and wood, make sure that the sand is completely covered by either the cork or wood. The rapid turning of the commutator on the

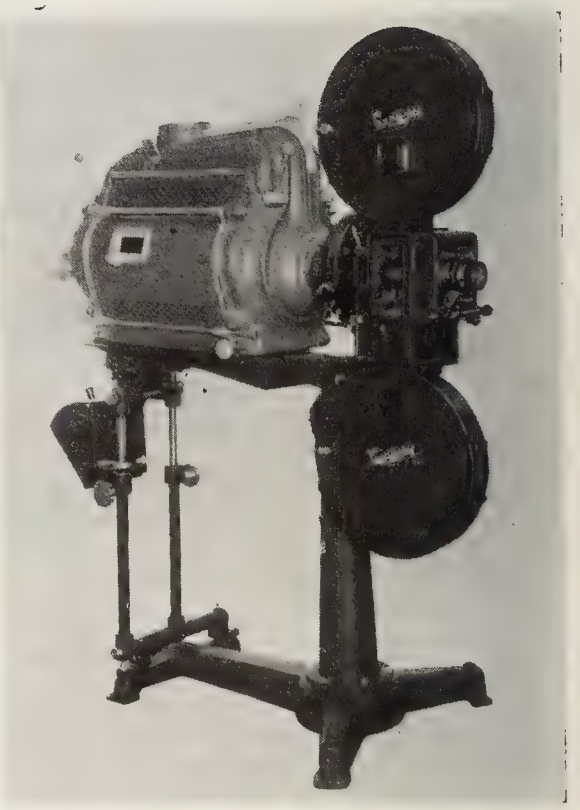
RECEIVING EQUIPMENT

Another thing that is frequently overlooked is proper preparation to receive the equipment at the theatre. Generally, the equipment lays around, especially in theatres under construction, for days, exposed to all kinds of abrasive dirt. After a while it is installed with only a half-hearted effort to remove the dirt. The life of a generator or projector mechanism is reduced by months under those circumstances. It is hard to realize that a projector mechanism is built "like a watch" and that it has to magnify about four hundred times an image only about four-fifths of an inch wide, and that some of the working parts are finished to an accuracy of 1/10,000 part of an inch. These little things, that seem unimportant, often cost the theatre owner a lot of money when neglected or overlooked.

He has long specialized in theatre equipment specifications and maintenance, and has been associated with both equipment companies and theatre designers as an expert in this field.*—THE EDITOR.]



Simplification and Convenience Mark Design of New Projector

A NEW THEATRE projector, designed for heavy duty and incorporating modern structural and operating features, has been brought out by Century Projector Corporation of New York City. It is known as Model C and is adaptable to all existing types of soundheads.

Throughout the design, ball bearings and "oil-less" bearings are employed to provide quiet operation and long life. Ball races are hermetically sealed in high temperature lubricating grease, consequently they never need oiling and are permanently protected against dirt. Low speed shafts rotate in oil-less bearings of porous composition, each equipped with an oil reservoir. Lubricating oil reaches the shaft through the pores of the bearing material, which serves as a filter, preventing dirt from reaching the shaft.

The projector main frame is a one-piece casting, providing rigid support to the operating parts. Doors are one-piece aluminum castings made full width to give the greatest possible accessibility. The interior of the mechanism housing is enamelled in white for maximum visibility, and to encourage cleanliness.

The main drive shaft, vertical shaft and shutter shaft are removable as integral units. Hunting tooth gears, steel against fibre, are used throughout. There are no gears inside the intermittent movement, which is of direct drive design and readily removable. Four bearings are provided inside the intermittent casing to assure permanently accurate alignment of star wheel and cam. These bearings are not of the porous type, but are lubricated automatically from the intermittent reservoir.

The intermittent is oiled, and removed when necessary, from the operating side of the projector. Its oil-well is one of the only threee points on the mechanism requiring lubrication.

A 90° single shutter is supplied as standard equipment, a double shutter attachment being available at slight additional cost.

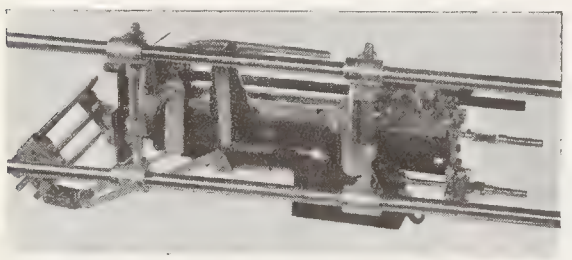
square inches. The small upper end is located near the positive contact and from it a strong current of air flows through the vanes provided on the positive contact, resulting in markedly cooler operation.



The carbons, copper-coated negative and cerium-cored positive, are mounted at the usual high intensity angle of 45° with reference to each other, and produce a rated light intensity of 740 candlepower per square millimeter of crater surface when operated at a current of 120 amperes. Currents as low as 85, and as high as 200 amperes, may be used, at from 55 to 90 volts.

The positive carbon is rotated by a wholly-enclosed mechanism which is readily removable. This mechanism is rack-fed, eliminating worm gears. The negative feed is independently adjustable. A single control knob, however, regulates the feeding of both carbons, functioning somewhat like a gear-shift to govern either positive or negative carbon according to the position to which it is shifted. Other controls commonly found on lamphouses for purposes of alignment are eliminated in the General company's GL-4 by reason of the permanent, locked alignment provided in the construction.

The flame shield is of two-piece construction, one of its elements being replaceable. It is made of nichrome metal, the same that is used for the coils of electric heaters, and is therefore capable of enduring high temperatures. Other alloys, specially developed for particular purposes, are used throughout the lamp, and roller bearings and ball bearings are provided for important moving parts. The positive carbon holder is self-gripping, no screwdriver being required for tightening the carbon.

Trimmed with a 120-ampere carbon 13.6-mm in diameter, rated light output per square mm of crater surface, is as follows:

90 amperes	425 cp.
100 amperes	520 "
110 amperes	630 "
120 amperes	740 "
130 amperes	900 "

It is also claimed that increasing current through the carbons increases the intensity of crater illumination without enlarging crater area, thus assuring that all of the additional light resulting from the increase in current consumption will remain focussed on the projector aperture.

The A. C. Arc as A Source of White Projection Light

[The significance of the newer developments in projection light sources has suggested reviewing them, particularly from the point of view of practical experience since their introduction. In the following discussion, C. S. Ashcraft, head of the C. S. Ashcraft Manufacturing Company, deals with the alternating current arc lamp which he has developed.—THE EDITOR.]

THERE ARE undoubtedly many questions which confront the exhibitor, when selecting new projection equipment, which are quite baffling; however, an explanation, in non-technical language, of these questions should be of aid in allowing him to understand his individual requirements. The main points, which interest all exhibitors, in the sequence of importance, perhaps are:

1. Excellence of projection produced by various types of equipment.
2. The cost of operation, plus the cost of replacement parts.
3. Dependability or freedom from breakdown which might cause a shut-down.
4. Length of life of the equipment, or rate of depreciation.

Since the introduction of the Cyclex alternating current arc light source in 1939, actual field experience has enabled the manufacturers to be in position to advise the exhibitor accurately regarding these matters. The Cyclex method is, of course, distinctly different from all other systems of light projection. Briefly it consists of supplying the arc with current of stepped-up frequency in order to produce a (1) light of high intrinsic brilliancy (2) light of great steadiness (3) white light of high intensity quality, and (4) the desired amount of light economically. This method is primarily adapted to theatres of under 1,000 seats which usually have screens less than 18 feet in width.

Projection Today Demands White Light

White light only is today suitable for projection—perfect projection cannot be obtained with yellow light. The exhibitor may ask, "How am I to know when I have a sufficient intensity of light of the proper color?" This is simple—the supply dealer who is upon his toes will have instruments to show, not only the intensity, but the color value of your present light and that which you should have in your theatre.

The minimum quantity of light permissible for projection is between 8 and 10 foot-candles, as measured by a color-corrected foot-candle meter. This value will be the quantity of light in the center of the screen and will taper off to 6 or 7 foot-candles at the sides. Not only is the quantity important, but also the color as measured by a color temperature meter. Light for good projection will have a value of from 5,200 to 6,000 degrees Kelvin, which indicates a light of great whiteness and excellent balance between the reds, greens, and blues.

Actual theatre installations show that Cyclex will produce from 12 to 14 foot-candles of light on a motion picture screen over 17 feet in width, with a color temperature of about 5,700 Kelvin. This most certainly is excellent projection. Previous to a certain installation of Cyclex, the theatre operated low-intensity lamps with a light of only 7 foot-candles at a color temperature of about 3,700 K. The increase in light and change in color from yellow to white, needless to say, was most gratifying to the exhibitor. Had this exhibitor found it necessary to pay for this light in proportion to the improvement he might not have been as pleased, but the fact was that in getting better light than he had had, he saved a considerable amount. Whereas the power bill previous to the installation of Cyclex was about $26.86 a month, he reported that the following month's power bill had dropped to $10.94. It is a rare case where something may be obtained for nothing, but it is more rare when it pays dividends as well.

The Cyclex arc of course results in an absence of rectifying tubes or elements, and the elimination of commutators as used in ordinary current converting equipment.

The Cyclex power unit and control units are in reality transformers—the first rotary, the latter static. Such power and control units will outlast, in the writer's opinion, the theatre in which they are installed.—C. S. Ashcraft.

F. H. RICHARDSON'S COMMENT

The Need for Timely Repair and Replacement

LET US CONSIDER a subject that we have discussed many times in the past years, but which is in need of further consideration. I refer to the loss incurred by a large percentage of theatres through using equipment parts long, and often very long, after their efficiency is past.

Theatres are operated to provide entertainment. The more perfectly effective this entertainment, the greater will be the box office harvest. The less the waste, particularly in electric power, the greater will be the percentage of profit.

Considering the screen image first, surely it will be conceded by all that effectiveness demands complete absence of travel ghost and visible flicker. This cannot be attained, even by the most expert projectionist, using carbon contacts that have roughened or pitted contact surfaces, or that have been in use too long a time under severe heat conditions. Rough or pitted contact surfaces cause arcing, and arcing means waste of electric power.

High temperatures over an extended period of time raise the resistance of metals, which means waste of electric power. Waste under that condition is inevitable, hence if either condition exists, one of two things must happen: Either there is waste of power registered upon the meter, or there is less light produced, per watt of power consumed, than would be the case were the parts in perfect condition. A great many such parts are retained in use until the waste in electric power caused by excessive resistance amounts to a dozen times the cost of replacing the parts.

The trouble is, the loss is insidious. One can't put his finger on it, but when it is reasoned out, one knows it must be and is there. Moreover, exactly the same thing applies to wires inside the lamphouse. Never retain a wire in use after it has lost its resilience—after it bends too readily. It then has reached the point where it offers high resistance. If you doubt this, ask any competent electrician. All of which applies to all theatres, of course, but the loss is progressively greater for those using high-priced electric power.

Then there is the mistaken policy of obliging projectionists to keep mirrors and collector condensing lenses in use until thorough pitting causes the surface to look like a nutmeg grater. A pit mark or other abrasion of a mirror or condensing lens surface obviously wastes light. Plainly it presents a diffusive surface, hence scatters light widely.

Proof? All right, paint the entire surface of a pitted mirror or lens with opaque

Theatre Planning Service

¶ Better Theatres is glad to answer the questions of exhibitors concerning theatre planning. Better Theatres' Service Department annually deals with hundreds of inquiries regarding planning problems, equipment, furnishings, etc. This is strictly a service to readers, without charge.

¶ In order that questions may be dealt with effectively, they should be specific, and all conditions bearing upon them should be clearly given. Often a rough sketch is helpful. It is of course understood that this service is in no way intended to supplant that of a theatre architect. Better Theatres cannot supply working plans, design sketches, etc., which must be procured from a licensed architect.

¶ Although Better Theatres' Service Department has leading specialists regularly available for consultation when and as an inquiry may advise this, all inquiries are answered by this department and should be addressed to it, as follows:

(black) water color, except one or two pit marks. Project white light through those marks, blow smoke in front of the mirror or lens and watch what happens to the light passing through the pit mark. You must, however, use heavy black water color, since the resultant light will be widely diffused, hence its visibility is rather low, even in a dark room. However, once you have seen it I think you will promptly discard pitted mirrors or lenses.

They waste light, hence electric power, and power costs money. In fact if you retain such mirrors or lenses in use you pay for new ones in increased electric bills or in lowered screen illumination, yet still have the pitted surfaces and waste.

Intermittent Movement

Then there is the projector mechanism. You want a rock-steady screen image, don't you? Do you imagine one can be had with intermittent sprocket teeth badly worn? Also, you cannot have a steady image if you permit an intermittent movement to remain in service until its star or cam becomes too badly worn. Modern intermittent movements function in tolerances between 1/10,000 and 1/20,000 of an inch, and parts, working under heavy strain (considering the rapidity of their movement and their size) cannot reasonably be expected to last too long. If you try to make them do so, the performance suffers, and few exhibitors can afford that.

But these parts are rather costly, so not asking you to accept my unsupported word, I consulted the highest authority I know—a man who has observed the performance of many thousands of intermittent movements. I asked him this question:

"About how long should the intermittent movements now being turned out by leading projector manufacturers be expected to function perfectly without replacement of parts." I requested him to dictate his reply, which follows.

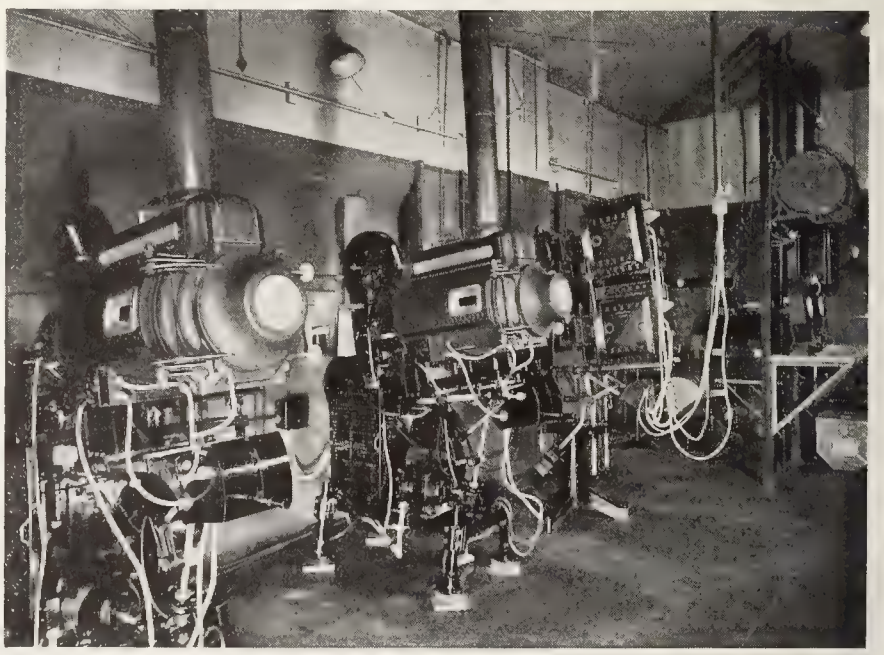
"An intermittent movement that has been properly lubricated with a suitable lubricant and kept in proper adjustment, with no appreciable excess gate tension applied, should function entirely satisfactorily for at least two years in a theatre having two projectors and operating, say twelve hours a day.

"This of course does not include the intermittent sprocket which, since in such a theatre it must handle close to 200 million frames of film per year, accomplishes a tremendous amount of work. It cannot be expected that the very limited amount of tooth surface contacting the edge of the fim sprocket hole and working against aperture tension, can or will last for any such length of time. For excellence in service it may be necessary to replace intermittent sprockets once, or possibly two times in the above named period."

Then, too, there is the gear train. When it is sufficiently worn that the rim of the intermittent movement flywheel of 3½-inch diameter can be rotated in excess of 5/16th of an inch, with the rotating shutter held stationary, one of two damaging faults will appear on the screen. The rotating shutter will have back-lash sufficient to set up travel ghost, which will blur every horizontal line in the picture to some extent. This, while possibly not consciously visible to observers, nevertheless is very trying to the eyes. It may be eliminated by adding width to the shutter master-blade, but that in turn causes the shutter to be out of optical balance, adds to light loss and tends to induce visible flicker.

Such a condition calls for a general overhauling of the whole mechanism, since a portion of the wear will be in the gear teeth, a portion in the shaft bearings, and probably some portion in the intermittent movement itself.

This covers the more essential points of the projector mechanism, neglect of any one of which, viewed over an extended period of time, will be costly—an example of wasting a dollar to save a penny.



Rectification Equipment

Too many exhibitors lose heavily by failure to maintain the current rectifying equipment (especially if it be a motor-generator) in a high state of perfect repair. Weakened brush springs, a dirty or roughened or too badly worn commutator, bearings so badly worn so that the armature is thrown out of center, all tend to lower the efficiency of motor-generator sets, which not infrequently reaches a point where almost half the power is wasted. In the case of tube rectifiers, using bulbs too long lowers the efficiency of the type of rectifier using them.

To sound equipments much the same argument applies. Take the exciter lamp, for example! Many projectionists are refused replacement lamps until they either burn out or their filament is very badly sagged. It is essential that the filament of an exciter lamp be perfectly straight. It must be so if the slit is to be evenly illuminated throughout its length. Any sag whatever means damage to sound reproduction, though a very slight one may be

PROJECTION: 1920

PROJECTION: 1940

WHEN, recently, Waukesha Theatres opened the new Pix theatre in Waukesha, Wis., L. F. Thurwachter, alert to an opportunity, dug out of the archives a photograph that had been made of the projection room of the company's Park theatre shortly after that house opened on the last day of 1920. With this he contrasted a photograph of the Park projection room today, on a page of the Pix theatre souvenir program. We here repeat their story. When the Park was built, says Mr. Thurwachter, the projection room had the liberal dimensions of 15x15 x12 feet; nevertheless, it later was widened to 30 feet! The period represented in the photographs of course included the revolution of sound; however, the Park sound system has been brought up to date three times since 1928. The original projectors were Powers 6B; the present ones are Simplex E-7's, which are equipped with Peerless Magnarc lamps supplied by a Hertner 80-80 motor-generator (plus a Roth 50-50 auxiliary). The present equipment also includes a Brenkert effect projector, while all accessory equipment is of the latest type. Sound is W. E.

tolerated, since the harm is not serious. But it must be very slight only. If the sag be of any appreciable amount (or the lamp not properly adjusted) the slit, and therefore the sound track, will not be evenly illuminated, under which condition not only will volume be lowered, but there will be distortion of the sound.

In short, motion picture projection has advanced to a point where it is a work of high perfection and precision, hence adequate results demand that equipment be in an essentially perfect state of repair.

Can Poor Projection Alter Film Artistry?

D. L. GLENNY of Huntsville, Mo., writes, "In an argument recently it was asserted that the projectionist could do little or nothing to alter the 'artistry' inherent in any motion picture print. Will you please give us your opinion on this point? Also, under proper treatment, how long should an intermittent movement run without need for overhauling?"

To say that the projectionist cannot, by carelessness, by lack of proper knowledge, or because of improper co-operation of the theatre management in supplying needed repair parts, injure the artistry a properly projected print would display, is not to see the matter clearly. If a print carry those finer touches in acting and in photography, and a projectionist permits travel ghost to exist, or his sharpness of focus is at fault, or his screen illumination not sufficient, or his picture more or less unsteady, the effect cannot help impair the acting and photography, considered objectively.

As to the second question, it has been answered in the preceding discussion of repair and replacement.

Sound System Output And Seating Capacity

AN ALABAMA exhibitor who requests that neither his name nor location be published, writes, "Some while since I installed a new sound system. I was advised I should put in a 48-watt system, which I did. However, I have since thought this system is more powerful than necessary. I therefore ask you whether it is or is not."

Since the seating capacity of the theatre is not given, I am unable to say; however, the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Pictures Arts & Sciences, has just issued a bulletin which gives the proper power for sound systems serving theatres of various seating capacities from 400 to 600. It says the theatre of 400 seats or less requires a 10-watt system, whereas a house seating 6,000 needs an output of 132 watts. According to these specifications, a 48-watt system is suitable for a theatre seating from 2,001 to 2,250, whereas a seating capacity of 1,750 to 2,000 requires 43 watts of power. A 2,000-seat theatre is a whopper these days—I imagine you have greater output than you need.

Bausch & Lomb now offers the f:2 Super Cinephor which actually delivers 25% more light on the screen. Light lost in previous lenses by surface reflection (4-6% at each air to glass surface) is made to do useful work. A new process of treating lens surfaces minimizes reflections and makes this f:2 lens have a light efficiency that hitherto would have been possible only at f:1.79.

Not only is there 25% more light on the screen, but also a gain in contrast and crispness. Shadow detail is not diluted by distributed light. Color films, too, have greater purity and brilliance.

■ New offices for a new partnership, with the partnership joining father and son. Here are John Eberson, long and prominently identified with theatre design, and his son Drew, who recently became associated with his father under the firm name of John and Drew Eberson. They are shown in their new offices atop No. 2 West 47th Street in New York, where they now have about twelve theatres on the boards. "This is perhaps a bit better than one may expect in times like these," the elder Mr. Eberson commented in giving this information. "One hopeful sign for our business, however, is the apparent willingness of the government to try to find an amicable settlement of its differences with the film industry. The government will find no group more helpful in its defense program than the picture business. Additionally, it is in times like these that the people need the kind of entertainment that motion pictures provide. Instead of harassment, there should be governmental encouragement of an industry that means much to morale.
